There are numerous instances recorded of the exercise of the right of search, and of the imposition of fines for improper work; from this period for the ensuing 60 or 70 years, after which the practice seems to have ceased, owing no doubt to the difficulty of dealing with a trade which had become extended far beyond its original limits, and the impossibility of keeping out foreign competition, the company having been advised by counsel as early as 1637 that they could not seize girdles imported from France, nor prevent their importation.

The subsequent disuse of the girdle, which was formerly an important article of costume, has in fact made the trade obsolete as a separate craft for the last two centuries.

The company appears to have at all times admitted to its membership, as authorised by its charter, those who did not exercise the trade of Girdlers. Sutton, the founder of the Charterhouse, who was a great merchant, and subsequently held high offices of State under Queen Elizabeth, was a girdler, and it has been from the voluntary payments of such as he that the company has derived a considerable part of its revenues.

The trades which appear to have been originally subject to the Companies of Pinners and Wyerworkers were subsequent to their union with the Girdlers under the charter of Elizabeth so subdivided into several distinct trades, as for instance, wyerworkers, needlemakers, hook and eye makers, and tin plate workers, stock card and wool card makers, and lanthorn makers and others, that it became impossible for this company to exercise control over so many separate trades gradually extended beyond the limits of the City.

Return G.—The charter of Elizabeth gives the company power to hold all lands, messuages, and hereditaments which they were then seized of, possessed, used, or enjoyed, and further power to purchase like land and hereditaments to the value of 40*l.* per annum.

Return H.—The only rights vested in the company with reference to the trades with which it is connected are conferred on it by charters only, and further defined by the acts and ordinances referred to in the foregoing Return E.

Other than the right of condemning fraudulent work, and preventing the exercise of the trade by others than members of the company, and that of restricting competition in the trade by limiting the number of apprentices, there are no rights or duties vested in the company for the encouragement of the said trades or otherwise.

RETURN I.—A list of the Charities, eleemosynary, educational, or otherwise, which are under the management of the Company, stating in each case the name of the founder, the date and nature of the benefaction, its original and its present value, and the purposes to which the funds have been applied for each of the last preceding ten years.

Thomas Watkins	Thomas Watkins, a member of the court of assistants of this company, gave and conveyed to the company a piece of land, part of the garden belonging to his freehold residence in Choumert Road, Rye Lane, Peckham, upon which to rebuild the six almshouses, and they were built there accordingly. The site of the old almshouses in Bath St., St. Lukes, was let on building leases, and the rents derived therefrom were expended in augmenting the pensions of the almsmen. Prior to 1666, to provide the endowment fund for these almshouses, a piece of land was purchased in Sherborne Lane, King William Street. This was also let on building leases, and houses have been built thereon, and the rents received from these houses form the present endowment fund of the above almshouses.		15 & 17, Sherborne Lane, E.C.	235 0 0	"	—	—

Richard Andrewes	In 1631 Richard Andrewes paid to the company 100*l.*, to be excused filling the offices of the three wardens for three years. Mr. Richard Andrewes stipulated that such sum of 100*l.* should be employed during the three years which he ought so to have served the offices of warden for the benefit of the general stock of the company, after which it was to be expended in the purchase of land the yearly income of which should be for ever distributed as the gift of Richard Andrewes to such and so many poor brothers of the company as the court of assistants should appoint. In August 1637 the said Mr. Andrewes paid 30*l.* more to the company on being excused from serving the office of master. By indenture enrolled in Chancery, dated 10th October 1637, a parcel of meadow land of four acres at West Marsh, Hackney, was conveyed to said R. Andrewes and two other citizens and girdlers in trust for the company. Such land from 1814 down to Lady Day 1878 produced from 15*l.* to 18*l.* per annum. From Lady Day 1878 it was let on an agreement for building for a term of 80 years. From Lady-Day 1878 to Lady-Day 1880 at 100*l.* per annum, and from Lady-Day 1880 for the remainder of the term at 150*l.* per annum. Cuthbert Beeston -	Bequeathed to the company by will, dated 5th January 1530, the cage and seven tenements in St. Olaves, Southwark, the rents to be applied:—48*l.* to officers of the Girdlers' Company, and the remainder to be a stock for ever, to be freely lent on security for one year to the poorest members of the company. The houses were sold to make the approach to London Bridge in 1826. The money received was paid into the Court of Chancery, and, there being a failure of the original intention of the donor, the company proposed to build and endow almshouses. Part of the money was so applied in building under the order of that court, and the remainder invested in 3,140*l.* 0*s.* 10*d.* 3% Consols, which is still in the Court of Chancery. PART II.—Constitution and Privileges of Membership.

Return A.—Governing Body.

1. State the present constitution of the governing body of the company, whether such constitution is according to the charter, and if not, in what respects such constitution varies therefrom, and when and how such alteration was made.
2. State the qualifications for membership of the governing body of the company, the time and periods of election, and the qualifications of the voters at elections to the governing body.
3. State the functions of the governing body, and of the different members of the same respectively, and whether the members of the governing body pay any, and what, fees or fines on admission thereto, and whether they are paid any, and what, salaries or amounts in respect of their services respectively.
4. State the nature of the business which comes before the governing body of the company, the method adopted in transacting it, the times at which the governing body meets for business purposes, the way in which the opinions of the members are taken, and whether the resolutions and decisions of the governing body are published, or are otherwise accessible to any or all, and which, of the members the company.
5. State whether the members of the governing body are liable to suspension, or removal, on any and what grounds, and by what method such suspension or removal is effected.
6. Has the company any bye-laws sanctioned by the Courts of Law or Chancery, or by the Courts of Aldermen or of Common Council, or otherwise? State the effect of such byelaws.

Return A.—1 and 2.—The constitution of the governing body is now and always has been according to the charters, rules, and ordinances, consisting of 24 members, of which the master and wardens form part.

The members of the court are all liverymen who have served at least seven years as liverymen before becoming eligible to the court.

When there are vacancies in the court which require to be filled each member of the court is at liberty to nominate a liveryman of seven years standing as a candidate. The number of nominations generally greatly exceeds the number of vacancies, and the election decided by the majority of votes of the court taken by ballot. All liverymen of seven years' standing so nominated are equally eligible.

The master and wardens are annually elected by the livery. The master must have previously served the office of upper warden, and the upper and middle wardens must have served the junior offices before being eligible. The master, practically, though not necessarily, goes by seniority, but occasionally the master and wardens are re-elected. The livery, however, are at liberty to elect as master or warden any liveryman who is qualified by having served the previous offices.

3.—The functions of the governing body are the general management of the company's affairs, including the charities. The master and wardens take the initiative in all matters, but all questions come before the court, in which all members are equal. Committees are from time to time appointed to assist the master and wardens. See Return A., Part II.

All liverymen on admission to the livery pay, in addition to the fees on taking up freedom (which amount to 5*l.* by patrimony or servitude, and 15*l.* by redemption) a sum of 35*l.*; they subsequently pay the steward's fine of 20*l.*, and on admission to the court a further sum of 26*l.* 5*s.* The master on election pays 4*l.*, and each warden pays 4*l.* per annum during the three years he holds office.

No salary is paid to the master, wardens, or any member of the court or livery, but each member of the court present at the commencement of and during the entire sitting (but not otherwise) receives a fee of 40*s.*

Each member is liable to serve on committees, meetings of which are frequent, and for which the members do not receive any remuneration. See also Return A. 4, Part II.

4.—The business which comes before the governing body comprises all the company's affairs of every kind, including the management of all charitable trusts, and the disposition of their funds. The governing body or court of assistants meet regularly eight times during the year. The opinions of the court are taken generally by show of hands, or in case of a contested election to any office by ballot. The resolutions of the court are entered in a minute book and read over at the following court, by which their correctness is verified.

These minutes are not published, but information would not be withheld from any liveryman making a proper application to the court. Matters requiring further consideration or investigation are generally referred to a committee to act with the master and wardens, and such committee reports the result to the court, such report being then embodied in the minutes, and confirmed, varied, or otherwise, as the court may decide. Meetings of such committees have been frequent during the last few years, owing to the numerous important matters with reference to the properties of the company, and of the charities which have had to be dealt with. No fee is received by members serving on such committees, and all charitable trusts are managed without charge or cost of any kind to the charity estates, except the small annual fee payable to the clerk of the company for keeping their accounts as given by the founder of such charities respectively, or sanctioned by the schemes of the Court of Chancery or Charity Commissioners.

5. The members of the court are liable to suspension or removal, and such power was formerly exercised, but there is no instance of its exercise for a long period of time.

6. The Rules and Ordinances of 34 Charles 2nd, sanctioned by the Lord Chancellor and Lord Chief Justices, are the only bye-laws of the company. See Return B., Part I.

PART II.—B.

RETURN B.—Admission to membership.

1. State the qualifications for membership of the company, the several grades of membership of the company, and whether women are admitted to membership.
2. State the several modes in which the freedom of the company may be obtained, the circumstances entitling an applicant to admission under each mode respectively, and the fees payable in respect of admission under each mode respectively.
3. State whether persons exercising any particular trade are required by statute or otherwise to become free of the company. Is there any process by which members of such trade can become members of the company; and is there any process for compelling such persons to procure admission; and are such processes enforced, and to what extent? Is the freedom of the City of London in any and what way a condition precedent or subsequent to membership? Are there any members who are not free of the City of London? Do persons exercising any particular trade commonly become members of the company? If so, how many members of such trade are at present members of the company? What is the number of the members of the trade (if any), the name of which is borne by the company, who are members of the company?
4. Are freemen liable to disfranchisement, and if so, for what reasons, and what is the mode of disfranchisement?
5. Is the livery of the company limited or unlimited in number? What are the qualifications for election to the livery, who are the electors thereto, and how do the elections thereto take place, and what fees are payable on election? Are liverymen liable to removal from the livery, and for what reasons?

Return B. 1.—The qualifications for membership are service, patrimony, or election by the court of assistants, and payment of fees.

The several grades of membership are freeman, liveryman, steward, assistant, warden, master.

Women are admitted to membership.

Return B. 2.—The freedom of the company may be obtained by—

1. Service of seven years' apprenticeship to a member of the company, upon production of a certificate of due service and of the indenture. The apprentice can demand admission to the freedom. Fees 5*l.*
2. Patrimony. Sons of freemen, on proof of birth and of having attained majority, may demand admission to the freedom.
3. Redemption. Candidates approved by the court may purchase freedom. Fees 15*l.*

Return B. 3.—Pinners and wireworkers are, by the charter of Elizabeth, required to become members of the company, and formerly did so in one of the modes above indicated. The power of compelling members of the trades to become members of the company exists under charter, but the exercise of this power has, however, fallen into desuetude. There is no trade known as girdlers', but the amalgamated trades exist, and some are members of the company, but their number is unknown, and cannot be ascertained, as it is not known whether they are living or dead.

Freedom of the City of London is not a condition precedent or subsequent to membership, nor does the company in any way know or inquire whether its members have or have not taken up their freedom.

Return B. 4.—No record has hitherto been found of any freeman having been disfranchised.

Return B. 5.—The number of the livery of the company is unlimited. A candidate for the livery must be proposed by a member of the court, seconded by another, and approved by the majority at a court meeting. The elections take place at any court meeting. Fees 35*l.*, plus those payable for freedom. No record has hitherto been found of any liveryman having been removed from the livery.

PART II.—C.

RETURN C.—Number of members.

State (1) the present number of freemen, (2) the present number of the livery, (3) the present number of other members, (4) the number of admissions to the freedom by each mode respectively, and (5) the number of calls to the livery which have respectively taken place during each of the last preceding ten years.

1. From 1841 to 1880, 40 years, 163 freemen were admitted, but the present number it is impossible to say, as no notice of death is lodged with the company.
2. Present number of livery (May 1881), 91.
3. No other members.

PART II.—E.

RETURN E.—Profits and Privileges.

1. State with fullness what are the advantages, pecuniary or otherwise, incident to the position of a member of the company in each grade of membership, as (1) a freeman, (2) a liveryman, (3) master, warden, or otherwise a member of the governing body.
2. State the sums paid on an average annually for the preceding 10 years by the company to the members according to the grades of membership mentioned above, and of what such sums consisted, whether (1) fees, and of what nature, (2) pensions, or (3) other payments, specifying the nature of the same respectively.
3. What circumstances are in practice held to constitute a claim to a pension or donation? State the number of present pensioners and donees respectively, and the amounts paid to them as such respectively. How many pensioners and donees are connected with the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the company?
4. (1) What is the average standing of a member when he becomes a member of the governing body, and (2) what is the average time for which a member continues on the governing body?
5. Does the company carry on any and what trade or manufacture with which its title is directly or indirectly connected? If so, what is the capital, and from what sources is it derived, and how are the profits (if any) divided or dealt with?

Return E.—1. Freeman. Eligibility as a candidate for the almshouses and pensions under wills of Palyn and Beeston, and for general charity in the shape of donations and pensions.

2. Liveryman or steward.—In addition to above, members of these grades can be present at the two livery dinners which take place in each year, and they are eligible for election to the court.

Liverymen pay quarterage, 4*s.* per annum.

The two stewards each pay 20*l.* on election.

3. Assistant warden or master.—Members of these grades enjoy the privileges of liverymen. For each attendance at court meetings they receive 40*s.*

There is no payment for attendance on committees, with the exception of the audit committee, each member of which receives 21*s.*

Master and wardens pay fees, 4*l.* each, at annual election.

The associated London companies advanced 60,000*l.* for plantation and improvements, and in respect of this money certain lands were granted to the Irish Society by the Crown. These lands were divided into 12 parts, which were ballotted for by the 12 principal companies, and the before-mentioned estate fell to the Skinners' Company. Of the 5,000*l.* (the Skinners' Company's share of the advance), 570*l.* 16*s.* was contributed by the Girdlers' Company, which takes its proportion (viz., 137/1200) of the net receipts. The returns as to holdings, &c., will be made by the Skinners' Company, who hold all records.

1. The silver plate consists of three old cups, a rose-water dish, and jug, all presented to the company by deceased members; a few spoons and forks. If sold would not realise more than 100*l.*

Plated spoons, forks, fish, and dessert knives, and various other plated articles, estimated 20*l.*

2. Pictures two, presented by members, not by any artist of note, of little value.

3. Furniture and other property, say 700*l.*

PART IV.—RETURN C.

RETURN C. (1).—A list of any properties of which the company is trustee, with the names of the cestui que trust in each instance, the nature of the trust, the nature and description of the property, and a statement of the sums received by the company in respect of the same, and of the manner in which such sums have been expended or disposed of during each of the last 10 years.

RETURN C (2).—A list of any properties of which the company is cestui que trust, with the names of the trustees in each instance, the nature of the trust, the nature and description of the property, and a statement of the sums received by the company in respect of the same during each of the last 10 years.

Return C. (1).—Andrewe Hunt bequeathed to the company by will dated 24th January 1431 (10th year of King Henry V.) the ground on which the hall stands, the yard, and the entry, on condition (1) that certain religious offices (such as the burning before the image of Saint Laurence twice a year for ever of five wax candles, a pound each in weight, &c.) were performed; the vicar of St. Laurence, Old Jewry, was joined in the trust in order to see these directions carried out; (2) that two decayed members of the company (one of whom was to receive 7*d.* per week) should have lodging on the hall premises.

30*l.* pensions have been paid to two of the livery up to the present year, when one of the persons died. Two pensions of 10*l.* a year are also paid to two widows belonging to the company.

George Davison bequeathed to the company by will dated 24th March 1541 (33rd year of King Henry VIII.) land in Saint Katherine Colman's, Fenchurch Street, on condition that an anniversary of the day of the testator's death should be kept at St. Bride's, Fleet Street, at which is to be spent each year 6*s.* 8*d.*

Return F. 1.—Only three leases fall in during the next 10 years. The first is that of the farm at Aylesbury. This will probably decrease in value, as, beyond the rack-rent, the present tenant pays 4 per cent. on the cost of buildings erected, and this will very likely not be again obtained, having in view the depreciation in value of farm property, consequent on agricultural depression.

The other two leases, which are for houses, will be replaced by building leases. It is probable that the ground rent will be less than the rent now obtained.

The Irish property is expected to decrease in value on account of the disturbed condition of Ireland.

Return F. 2.—The leases which fall in during the present century are seven in number. These are for houses, and upon expiry will be replaced by building leases. It is probable that the ground rent will be less than the house rent now obtained.

The remainder of the English property is let on building leases, and when these fall in an increase in the value of the property may be expected; but, as the greater number extend beyond the middle of the next century, it is impossible to estimate what that increase will be.

Part IV.—Return G.

Return G.—The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them—

1. What is the system of management of the company's estates and property?
2. In what way, and by whom, the several receipts and payments are taken and made, and under what control?
3. In what way the company's accounts are audited?
4. Whether the company's accounts are published, or are accessible to all or any, and which, of the members of the company.

1. The whole of the financial arrangements of the company are laid before the court, meetings of which are held about eight times in the year. The court consists of 24 members; a master and three wardens (elected yearly from among the members) and 18 assistants. Vacancies are filled up by the court from the general body of liverymen. One of the wardens is responsible for the cash transactions, and enters into a bond not to make payments without the authority of the court. The whole of the property in England is let on lease, principally for building purposes. All leases are prepared by the clerk of the company with the assistance of the surveyor, and are sanctioned by the court. The Irish estates are managed by the Skinners' Company, who render cash accounts of receipts and payments, and pay to the Girdlers' Company their proportion of the net revenues.

2. The rents, &c., are all received by the clerk of the company on behalf of the renter-warden, and his cash book is laid before the court.

A list of all payments to be made is placed upon the agenda at the court meetings, and cheques for all amounts other than for petty disbursements are signed by the master and one warden at such meeting. The cheques are countersigned by the clerk.

3. The accounts of the company are audited yearly at Michaelmas by a committee consisting of three or more past masters and the master and wardens for the year. The past masters are elected at a meeting of the court in August. The committee makes an examination in detail of vouchers, postings of cash, and rents, to the various ledger accounts, &c.

4. The accounts of the company are not published, but are accessible to all the members of the company.

Part IV.—Return H.

Return H.—A detailed statement of the income from all sources of the company during each of the preceding 10 years, a detailed statement of the company's expenditure during each of such 10 years, and a detailed statement of the assets and liabilities of the company at the end of each of the last 10 years.

PART IV.—RETURN K.

RETURN K.—Position in relation to Universities.

Has the company any relations with the universities, or with any of the colleges in them? State the nature and extent of such relations. Has the company any scholarships or exhibitions tenable at any of the universities in its gift? Give a list of such scholarships or exhibitions, with their respective values, and the periods for which they are respectively tenable; and state how the same are awarded, whether the competition is limited to relations of members, or whether persons so related have any preference.

Nil.

PART IV.—RETURN L.

RETURN L.—Church Patronage.

1. Are there any ecclesiastical benefices in the gift of the company?
2. Give a list of such benefices, stating—
   a. The county where situated.
   b. The name of the parish or place.
   c. The net annual value of such benefice so near as it can be given, together with any other particulars affecting the value present or prospective of such benefice.
3. Has the company granted during the last 10 years any augmentations of income to the incumbents of such benefices; and, if so, to what extent, and out of what funds? Has the company, during such 10 years, built or contributed, and to what extent, to the building of any, and what, churches or chapels, and where situated?

Nil.

PART IV.—RETURN M.

RETURN M.—General and Technical Education.

A statement as to whether the company does anything to subsidize or encourage education, whether general or technical, and a return of the means (if any) so employed, and of the amount expended on such objects during each of the last preceding ten years.

Nil.

PART V.—REFORM.

PART V.—Reform.

The Commissioners, being bound to report to Her Majesty "what measures (if any) are in their judg- "ment expedient and necessary for improving or altering the constitution of the companies, or the "appropriation or administration of the property or revenues thereof," respectfully invite the attention of the officers of the companies to this part of the Commission.

The Commissioners will be very glad to receive and consider any suggestions respecting this part of the Commission with which the officers of the companies may do the Commissioners the honour of favouring them.

RETURN.—The governing body has endeavoured to give full and correct answers to the various questions of the Commissioners, there being nothing in the origin, history, administration, or proceedings of the Girdlers' Company which the members of the court have any desire or interest to withold from inquiry.

The company has already made a full disclosure to the Charity Commissioners of all property or funds held by the company, subject to any charitable trust, and has periodically accounted to such Charity Commissioners in respect of all such charities, and has satisfied them of the proper application of the revenues thereof in accordance with the original trusts under which such charitable properties and funds are held, with such variations as the schemes settled by the Court of Chancery or the said Charity Commissioners, at the request of the company, have directed with reference to such charities respectively.

With the exception of such properties as have been already accounted for to the Charity Commissioners this company is not possessed of any property clothed with any trust whatever, either express or implied, other than the general benefit of the company through its members for the time being, nor have such properties been derived either from the State or any other source in which the general public can have or claim an interest, but solely either from the free gift of members of the company or from the accumulations of voluntary payments made by such members on taking up their freedom or livery.

Having thus been established and supported during a period of six centuries solely by its own members, the Girdlers' Company claims to hold its possessions on the same terms as any private society or individual, and cannot suggest or concur in any scheme for appropriating its property to any purposes other than those to which the company itself may from time to time think fit to apply the same.

During the 18th century, and until a very recent period, the company's means were very small, scarcely more than sufficed for the bare maintenance of the hall and establishment, but the rise in the value of property during the present century has somewhat improved the company's position and would have placed it in comparative independence but for the large sums required for rebuilding their offices and repairing their hall, to meet which expenses the company has been compelled recently to borrow money (to the extent of 6,000*l.*, which still remains due), and has consequently considerably restricted its hospitalities and foregone much of its ordinary expenditure.

Under these circumstances the company has not yet had to consider in what mode it should dispose of any surplus revenues, if ever such should arise, but whilst it desires to express its loyalty to the Crown and its respect for a Commission acting in the name and under the authority of Her Majesty, it desires also to record its protest against the suggestion contained in the requisition of the Commissioners, No. 5, that the property or revenues of the company should be appropriated by any authority other than the company itself, which has preserved and honourably managed its own property during many centuries, and has also faithfully discharged the charitable trusts committed to its care without any charge to the charities.

The company desires, nevertheless, to state that, should such surplus income arise, it would be ready and desirous to devote it to the encouragement of the useful arts and manufactures either under the company's own supervision or in some other mode in which the company might still retain a control over the application of its own contributions.

APPENDIX A.

This Company gave no information to the Municipal Commissioners appointed in 1834.

GLASS SELLERS' COMPANY.

The Returns of this Company were made under protest.

PART I.—FOUNDATION AND OBJECT.

Returns A to H, both inclusive.

RETURN A.—A statement of the date, ascertained or probable, of the foundation of the company, and of the circumstances, so far as they can be discovered from its documents of foundation or archives, in which the company had its origin.

RETURN B.—A list of the charters, charters of inspeximus, and other instruments of a similar nature, whether originals or copies, which have been at any time in the possession of the company, together with an abstract of the purport of each, regard being specially had to any evidence which it may contain as to th object of the foundation of the company.

RETURN C.—A list of any trust deeds "founding, regulating, or affecting" the company, with the date of each, the names of the parties thereto, and an abstract of the purport of each.

RETURN D.—A list, with dates, of any "decrees of court," whether of the Courts of Common Law or of Chancery, or of any acts of the Court of Aldermen or of the Court of Common Council, "regulating or affecting" the company, with a statement of the effect of each decision.

RETURN E.—A list of any other documents, not included in the descriptions in the preceding returns, which "found, regulate, or affect" the company, with dates and an abstract of the effect of each.

RETURN F.—A concise history of the company from the time of its foundation to the present day, with special reference to the inquiry contained in the commission as to "the objects for which the company was founded," and "how far those objects are now being carried into effect."

RETURN G.—Has the company a licence in mortmain? When was such licence granted (referring to the document by description)? What is its extent, and to what extent is it now unexhausted?

RETURN H.—Is there vested in the company, and how, whether by charter, statute, order of the Court of Aldermen, act of Common Council, or otherwise, any right of exercising superintendence over, or any duty or discretion to encourage in any way, any and what art, trade, or business? State the nature and local limits of such control. In what manner and to what extent is such control now exercised? If such control is not now exercised, state the circumstances under which its exercise has fallen into desuetude.

THE CHARTER.

Charles the Second, by the Grace of God, King of England, Scotland, France, and Ireland, Defender of the Faith, &c. To all to whom these presents shall come greeting. Whereas we have been humbly petitioned by our well-beloved subjects the glass sellers and looking glass makers within our City of London, and the parts near adjacent, that for the better ordering and government of themselves and others using that trade in London, and within seven miles thereof, being now encreased to a great number, and for the better reforming and suppressing the falsities and deceipts now commonly used and practised in the wards and manufactures belonging to these trades, which are made false and counterfeit to the common abuse and damage of our subjects. We would be gratiously pleased to incorporate them into one body politic, and invest and enable them with power accordingly, whereby both they and their trade might be better regulated and the abuses therein prevented, and for the time to come reformed. Know ye, therefore, that we being always gratiously inclined to the humble suits of our subjects, and especially to those things that may tend to the common good and benefit of them, of our especial grace, certain knowledge, and mere motion have willed, ordained, constituted, and granted, and by these presents for us, our heirs, and successors do will, and ordain, constitute, and grant that all and singular the said glass sellers and looking glass makers, as well free as foreign, within the said City of London and the liberties thereof, and within seven miles thereof, for ever hereafter be and shall be by virtue of these presents one body corporate and politic in deed and in name, and shall have continuance for ever by the name of master, wardens, assistants, and commonalty of Glass Sellers of London; and them by the name of master, wardens, assistants, and commonalty of Glass Sellers of London, we do by these presents, for us, our heirs, and successors, really and fully create, erect, make, ordain, constitute, and declare one body corporate and politic in deed and in name to have continuance for ever, to them and their successors, and that by the same name they may and shall have perpetual succession. And that they, by the name of master, wardens, assistants, and commonalty of Glass Sellers of London, shall be for ever hereafter persons all and capable in law to purchase, have, and enjoy all manors, messuages, lands, tenements, liberties, priveleges, jurisdictions, franchises, and other hereditaments whatsoever, of what kind, nature, or quality soever they be, to them and their successors in fee, perpetuity, or for term of year or years, or otherwise, in what sort soever; and also all manner of goods, chattels, and things whatsoever, of what name, nature, or quality soever they be; and also to give, grant, lett, alien, assign, sett over, and dispose of any manors, messuages, lands, tenements, and other hereditaments, goods, or chattels, and likewise to do and execute all and singular other act and acts whatsoever by the name aforesaid. And that by the name of master, wardens, assistants, and commonalty of Glass Sellers of London they and their successors shall and may be able to plead and be impleaded to answer and be answered unto, defend and be defended in what court or courts soever, and before any judge or justice, or other persons and officers of us, our heirs, and successors whatsoever, in all and singular actions, pleas, suits, plaints, matters, and demands of what kind, quality, or sort they shall be, in the same and in as ample manner and form as any other of our loving people and subjects of this our realm of England, being persons able and capable in the law or any other body corporate and politic within this our realm of England, can or may have, purchase, receive, possess, enjoy, retain, give, grant, lett, alien, dispose, and assign, implead, or be impleaded, answer, and be answered unto, defend, and be defended, do, perform, or execute; and that the said master, wardens, assistants, and commonalty of Glass Sellers of London and their successors shall and may for ever hereafter have a common seal to serve for the causes and businesses of them and their successors, and it shall be lawful for them and their successors to alter and make new the said seal from time to time at their wills and pleasures as they shall think fit. And further, we will and ordain, and by these presents for us, our heirs, and successors, do give and grant unto the said master, wardens, assistants, and commonalty of Glass Sellers of London and their successors full power and authority to assemble themselves and meet together from time to time in some convenient place within the said City of London or suburbs thereof, where they shall think most meet, and then and there shall and may elect and choose one of the said society in manner and form hereafter in these presents mentioned, which shall be called the master of the said Company of Glass Sellers of London; and that likewise, then and there, they shall and may elect and choose two of the said Company of Glass Sellers in manner and form hereafter mentioned, which shall be, and shall be called, the wardens of the said Company of Glass Sellers of London; and also that there shall be twelve assistants of the said commonalty of Glass Sellers of London, in manner and form hereafter in these presents expressed to be nominated and chosen, which shall be, and shall be called, the assistants of the said commonalty of Glass Sellers, who from time to time shall be aiding, helping, councelling, and assisting to the said master and wardens of the said commonalty for the time being in all causes, matters, things, and businesses touching or concerning the said commonalty. And further, we do grant, for us, our heirs, and successors, by these presents, that the said master, wardens, and assistants of Glass Sellers of London for the time being, or the greater part of them, whereof the master and one of the wardens aforesaid for the time being to be two, shall and may have full power and authority by virtue of these presents to make, ordain, constitute, appoint, and set down, from time to time, such reasonable laws, statutes, decrees, ordinances, and constitutions in writing whatsoever, which to them, or the greater part of them, whereof the master and one of the wardens as aforesaid for the time being to be two, shall seem good, wholesome, profitable, honest, and necessary according to their discretions, as well for and concerning such oaths as shall be fit to be administered to the master, wardens, and assistants, or any other of the said commonalty. And for touching and concerning the trade, art, or mystery of grinding, polishing, casing, foyling, and finishing of looking glasses, and in selling of glasses and looking glasses within the said City of London or suburbs thereof, and within seven miles thereof. As also for the punishment and reformation of such abuses, deceits, and other wrongful courses from time to time practised or to be practised, either in uttering unmerchantable, bad, and deceiptfull wares, of the natures or kinds aforesaid, whereby our loving subjects may be wronged or abused, or any other wrong, cozenage, deceit, or abuse, offered at any time whatsoever within the said City liberties and suburbs thereof, or in any other place or places within seven miles thereof, touching or concerning the premises, and also for the good rule and government of the master, wardens, assistants, and commonalty of Glass Sellers of London and their successors. And all and singular persons using and exercising the arts, trades, or mysteries aforesaid, and every of them within the said City, suburbs, and liberties, or within seven miles compass thereof, in all matters and things touching or in any ways concerning the same, and for declaration after what manner, order, and form, the said master, wardens, assistants, and commonalty, and their successors, and all and every other person and persons using and exercising the said trades, arts, and mysteries within the places aforesaid, shall behave, demean, carry, and use themselves in the said arts, trades, and mysteries for the public good and common profit, as well of other subjects in general as of the said master, wardens, assistants, and commonalty of Glass Sellers of London and their successors; and for all other matters, things, or causes touching the said arts, trades, or mysteries by any manner of means. And whatsoever the said master, wardens, and assistants for the time being, or the greater part of them, whereof the master and one of the wardens for the time being to be two, do make, ordain, constitute, and establish such laws, ordinances, decrees, orders, and constitutions, to provide and limit such pains, penalties, and punishments, either by fines, amerciaments, or any other lawful ways or means whatsoever, upon all offenders or breakers of such laws, ordinances, decrees, orders, and constitutions, or any of them, as to them or the greater part of them, whereof the master and one of the wardens for the time being to be two, shall seem fit, necessary, and convenient to be made, sett, imposed, limitted, and provided for the keeping of the said laws, orders, and constitutions. And that then, or at any time after, the said master, wardens, and assistants of Glass Sellers of London and their successors shall and may, by virtue hereof, have and levy the said fines and amerciaments to their own use without the lett or hindrance of us, our heirs, or successors. All which laws, ordinances, statutes, decrees, and constitutions, so as aforesaid to be made, we will to be observed and kept under the pains and penalties therein to be contained, so as always such laws, ordinances, constitutions, ffines, and amerciaments be reasonable, and not repugnant or contrary to the laws or statutes of this realm of England, nor to the laws, customs, or usage of our City of London; and for the better executing of this our grant in that behalf, we have assigned, named, constituted, appointed, and made, and by these presents for us, our heirs, and successors, do assign, create, constitute, appoint, and make our well-beloved subject William Carter to be the first and present master of the said commonalty of Glass Sellers of London, and to continue in the said office from the date of these presents untill the ffeast of Saint Michael the Archangel, which shall be in the year of our Lord one thousand six hundred sixty-four, if he shall so long live, and from thenceforth until one other shall be chosen and named into the said office of master of the said Glass Sellers in due manner according to the ordinances and provisions hereafter in these presents mentioned and expressed. He, the said William Carter, taking his corporal oath before the wardens and assistants for the time being, or the greater part of them, for the due and faithful execution of the said office or place of master. To which said wardens and assistants for the time being, or the greater part of them, we do hereby, for us, our heirs, and successors, give power and authority to administer and give the said oath, as well to the said William Carter, the now master, as to every such person and persons at any time hereafter shall be elected and chosen to the said place of master of the said commonalty according to the tenor and meaning of these presents. And also we have assigned, named, and constituted, and by these presents for us, our heirs, and successors, do assign, ordain, constitute, and make our well-beloved subjects John Steward and Major Humphrey Kilby to be the first and present wardens of the said commonalty of Glass Sellers of London, and that they and either of them respectively to continue in the said office from the date of these presents until the said feast of Saint Michael the Archangel, which will be in the year of our Lord one thousand six hundred sixty and four, if the said John Steward and Humphrey Kilby or either of them respectively shall so long live, and from thence until two others be chosen unto the said office of wardens of the said commonalty of Glass Sellers of London according to the ordinances and provisions of these presents expressed and declared. The said John Steward and Humphrey Kilby taking their corporal oaths before the master and assistants for the time being, or the greater part of them, whom we do authorize to administer the said oaths as aforesaid. And we likewise have assigned, named, constituted, made, and appointed, and by these presents for us, our heirs, and successors, do assign, name, constitute, make, and appoint our well-beloved subjects Robert Westbrooke, Daniell Citty, John Kempster, Robert Ward, William Goodman, John Stracy, Richard Sadler, Michael Measey, John Hudgebout, John Green, Hugh Bolter, and William Sadler to be the first and present assistants of the said commonalty of Glass Sellers of London, and to continue in the said office of assistants during their natural lives, unless they or any of them respectively shall fortune to be removed for misbehaving him or themselves in their said office, or for some other reasonable cause, they taking their corporal oaths before the said master and wardens before named for the faithfull execution of the said places of assistants, whom we do hereby authorize to administer the same oaths accordingly. And we will, and by these presents for us, our heirs, and successors, do grant unto the said master, wardens, assistants, and commonalty of the said Glass Sellers of London, and their successors, that the master, wardens, and assistants of the said commonalty for the time being, or the greater part of them, whereof we will that the master and one of the wardens for the time being to be two, from time to time for ever hereafter shall have full power and authority yearly, and every year, at or upon the Thursday next before the feast of Saint Michael the Archangel, to elect and nominate one of the wardens or assistants for the time being to be master of the said commonalty for one whole year from thence next ensuing, and from thence until one other of the said wardens or assistants shall be elected and chosen according to the ordinances and provisions in these presents expressed and declared. And that he which shall be chosen and named into the said office of master of the said commonalty of Glass Sellers, before he be admitted to execute his said office, shall take his corporal oath before the last master, wardens, and assistants of the said commonalty for the time being, or the greater part of them, to whom we give power by these presents to administer the same oath, well and truly to execute the said office of master of the said art or mistery in all things belonging to the said office. And that after the said oath, so as aforesaid to be taken, he shall have and exercise the said office of master for one whole year from thence next ensuing, and from thence until one other be chosen and sworn into the said office in form aforesaid. And likewise, that at the same time of electing the said master as aforesaid they may also elect, choose, and nominate two other of the assistants of the said commonalty of Glass Sellers of London, which shall be wardens of the said commonalty for one whole year from thence next ensuing, and from thence until two other of the said assistants be chosen into the said office of wardens of the said commonalty of Glass Sellers as aforesaid, according to the ordinances and provisions in these presents expressed and declared, and that they which shall be so chosen and named to the office of wardens of the said commonalty of Glass Sellers of London, before they be admitted to execute the said office of wardens shall likewise take their corporal oaths before the said master, and last wardens, and assistants of the said commonalty, their immediate predecessors, or the greater part of them, to whom we give power by these presents to minister the said oath, well and truly to execute the said office of wardens in and by all things touching and concerning the said office. And that after such oaths so as aforesaid taken, they shall and may execute the said office for one whole year then next ensuing, and from thence until two other be chosen and sworn in form aforesaid into the said office of wardens of the Glass Sellers in manner and form before in these presents expressed and declared. And further, by these presents, for us, our heirs, and successors, we will and grant unto the said master, wardens, assistants, and commonalty of Glass Sellers of London, and their successors, that if it happen the master and wardens of the said commonalty for the time being, or any of them, at any time within one year after that they or any of them be chosen into his or their said office or offices, to die or to be removed from his or their said office or offices, which said master and wardens for just and reasonable cause, we will shall be from time to time removable, that then and so often it shall and may be lawful to and for such and so many of the said master, wardens, and assistants, which shall be then living or remaining, or the greater part of them, at their pleasure to choose, make, and swear one other or others of the said assistants for the time being, to be master, warden, or wardens of the said commonalty, according to the orders and provisions before in these presents expressed and declared, to execute and exercise the said office of master or of warden or wardens of the said commonalty, until the said feast of Saint Michael the Archangel, and from thence untill some other shall be elected and chosen into the same offices, he or they first taking his or their corporal oath or oaths in form aforesaid, and as often as cause shall require. And further, we will and by these presents for us, our heirs and successors, do grant unto the said master, wardens, assistants, and commonalty of Glass Sellers of London and their successors, that whensoever it shall happen any of the said assistants of the said commonalty for the time being to die, or be removed from his or their office or offices, which assistants, and every or any of them, we will shall be removeable, and be removed by the greater part of the said master, wardens, and assistants of Glass Sellers for the time being, whereof the master and one of the wardens for the time being to be two, for evil government or misbehaviour, or for any other just and reasonable cause, that then and so often it shall and may be lawful to and for the said master and wardens, and so many of the assistants for the time being, which shall then survive or remain, or the greater part of them, whereof the master and one of the wardens as aforesaid for the time being to be two, at their wills and pleasures from time to time choose and name one other or more of the said commonalty as aforesaid to be assistant or assistants of the said commonalty in his or their place or stead, which shall so happen to die or be removed as aforesaid, and that he or they after that they shall be so chosen or named to be assistant or assistants of the said commonalty as aforesaid, before that he or they, or any of them, be admitted to his or their execution of the said office of assistant or assistants, shall take his or their corporal oath or oaths before the master, wardens, and assistants of the said commonalty, or the greater part of them, to whom by these presents we give power to administer the said oath, well and truly to execute the said office or offices, and so as often as cause shall require. And forasmuch as we are informed that great deceit and fraud is daily used, committed, and done by divers of the said looking glass grinders, and polishers thereof, within this our realm of England and dominion of Wales, who for the most part do make their wares very slightly, insufficiently, and deceiptfull, and also divers others, as well Englishmen as strangers, do daily purport and put to sale great quantities of glasses and stone pots or bottles, made and wrought beyond the seas, being very falsely, insufficiently, and deceiptfully made, and wrought to the great loss and hindrance of our subjects, especially those of the poorer sort who have most use thereof, we therefore, intending the speedy reformation of the said deceits and abuses do further will, and by these presents, for us, our heirs and successors, grant to the said master, wardens, assistants, and commonalty of Glass Sellers of London, and to their successors, for ever, that the said master, wardens, and assistants for the time being, or any two or more of them, shall for ever hereafter by themselves, or by their sufficient deputy, have the full search, view, triall, and oversight, in all fit and convenient manner within our City of London, and suberbs and liberties thereof, and within seven miles of the said City, of and for all and all manner of glasses, looking glasses, hour glasses, and stone potts, or bottles, from time to time that shall be imported or brought from any the parts beyond the seas into this realm of England or dominion of Wales, and which shall be sold or offered to be put to sale within London, the suberbs and liberties, or within seven miles of the same, to the end that the parties offending in making, importing, or selling of such false and deceiptful ware of that kind as aforesaid, may be duly punished according to the laws and statutes of this our realm. And that the said master, wardens, and assistants, or any two or more of them, by themselves or their sufficient deputies, shall and may lawfully at all convenient time and times, and in lawful, peaceable, and convenient manner, having the Lord Chief Justice's warrant for the time being, and taking with them a constable or other lawfull officer, and giving notice to the owner or possessor, or to his or their servants, of their purpose in that behalf, to the end they may accompany them, enter into all and all manner of shops, cellars, workhouses, storehouses, and other rooms and places whatsoever, within our City of London, suburbs, and liberties, and seven miles thereof, where glasses, looking glasses, hour glasses, and stone potts, or bottles, shall be made, kept, shewed, offered, or put to sale, to the end that the said master, wardens, and assistants, or any two or more of them, or their said deputies, may the better discover and find out such manufactories and wares of the natures aforesaid as are deceiptfully and insufficiently made and wrought or brought from beyond the seas as aforesaid, that so the offenders therein may be condignly punished for the same. And our further will and pleasure is, and we do hereby straightly charge and command, that no person or persons whatsoever, which by the statute made in the first year of the reign of our late Royall grand father King James, or any other law or statute of this our realm, are prohibitted to carry glasses or earthern wares to sell, do at any time presume to wander up and down to sell glasses or earthen ware, or to act or do any thing in derogation of the said statute or contrary thereunto upon the pains and penalties therein declared, and such further punishment as can or may be inflicted upon such offenders according to their demerits and the laws and statutes of this our realm; and we will and command that the said master, wardens, assistants, and commonalty of Glass Sellers of London, do take care that from time to time the said statutes be put in due and full execution upon all such as do presume to wander up and down the said City of London, or any place or places within seven miles thereof, contrary to the purport and intent of the same statutes or any of them. And further, we will, and by these presents for us, our heirs and successors, do straightly charge and command all and singular mayors, sheriffs, justices of the peace, bailiffs, constables, comptrollers, searchers, waiters, and other the officers and ministers of us, our heirs and successors whatsoever, in all and every place and places whatsoever, as well exempt as not exempt, within our said City of London, and the suburbs and liberties of the same, and within seven miles thereof, that they and every of them at all time and times hereafter, and from time to time upon reasonable request to them or any of them to be made in that behalf, be furthering, helping, aiding, and assisting to the said master, wardens, and assistants for the time being, and their deputy and deputies for the doing, executing, and performing of all and singular the premisses. And further, we will, and by these presents for us, our heirs and successors, do grant unto the said master, wardens, assistants, and commonalty of Glass Sellers of London, and their successors, that they shall and may have one honest and discreet person in manner and form hereafter in these presents expressed to be chosen and named, which shall and may be called the clerk of the said commonalty of Glass Sellers of London. And we have assigned, nominated, and constituted, and by these presents for us our heirs and successors do assign, nominate, and constitute our trusty and well-beloved subject Thomas Knightley, gentleman, to be the present clerk of the said commonalty, and to hold and enjoy that office during such time and so long as he the said Thomas Knightley shall well demean himself therein, and to be exercised by himself or his sufficient deputy or deputies in that behalf, and that from time to time, and at all times after the death or removal for misdemeanor of the said Thomas Knightley, the master, wardens, and assistants of the said commonalty for the time being, or the greater part of them as aforesaid, shall and may choose, name, and make one other discreet person to be clerk of the said commonalty, and that he that shall be so chosen and made clerk of the said commonalty, shall and may exercise and enjoy the said office of clerk of the said commonalty during the good will and pleasure of the said master, wardens, and assistants for the time being, or the greater part of them, the said clerk hereinbefore mentioned or his deputy, and every such other person and persons as shall be elected and chosen to the said office or place of clerk of the said commonalty aforesaid, first taking his and their corporal oath and oaths before the master, wardens, and assistants for the time being, or the greater part of them, to whom by these presents we give power to administer the said oath well and truly to execute the said office of clerk of the said commonalty in and by all things appertaining to the office according to his best skill and knowledge, and according to the tenor and true meaning of these presents. Nevertheless, our intent and meaning is, and we do hereby for us, our heirs and successors, declare our royall will and pleasure to be, and the said master, wardens, assistants, and commonalty of Glass Sellers for them and their successors do covenant, promise, and grant to and with us, our heirs and successors, by these presents that they the said master, wardens, assistants, and commonalty of Glass Sellers of London, and their successors, and the several members thereof, shall and will from time to time utter, vend, and sell to the subjects of this our realm of England good and merchantable manufactures and wares of the several natures and kinds hereinbefore mentioned, and the same at reasonable and moderate rates and prices. And also, we will and by these presents for us, our heirs and successors, do ordain and firmly command that the said master, wardens, and assistants of the said Company of Glass Sellers, and all other officers of the said company now being or that hereafter by virtue of these presents, or of any other letters patents shall be elected or constituted before they or any of them respectively act or meddle in the execution of their several and respective offices or places, do and shall take the oaths of allegiance and supremacy on the Holy Evangelists before the Lord Mayor and Chamberlain, of our said City of London for the time being, or either of them, whom we do hereby authorize to administer the same accordingly. Provided always, and we do hereby will and declare our intent and meaning to be that this our grant to the said master, wardens, assistants, and commonalty of Glass Sellers, nor anything therein contained, shall any ways extend or be construed or taken to extend to any the letters patents, licences, powers or priveleges, heretofore made or granted by us unto Thomas Tilson of London, merchant, for the sole making of christall glasses and looking glass plates of all sorts of glass whatsoever, except as therein is excepted as good if not better than any comes from Venice, nor to any the matters or things therein mentioned, nor that the said corporation shall or may by colour or virtue of these presents have exercise or claim any jurisdiction, inspection or government of or over the said Tilson or his assigns in or concerning his said art in our said letters patents mentioned, nor that they the said master, wardens, assistants, and commonalty, by occasion or pretence of any thing herein contained, shall or may do any thing to the prejudice or hindrance thereof, or of any thing by the said last mentioned letters patents granted to the said Tilson, these presents or any thing herein contained to the contrary thereof in any wise notwithstanding. In witness whereof we have caused these our letters to be made patents. Witness ourself at Westminster the five and twentieth day of July, in the sixteenth year of our reign.

Martis xx° die Septembr: 1664 Annoq. RR^s Caroli Secundi Angl. Dec. Sexto.

BATEMAN, Mayor.—This day, Sir Richard Ford, Sir Richard Ryves, Kn^ts and Aldren., Mr. Alderman Waterman, and Mr. Alderman Hanson, committees formerly appointed to peruse and consider His Majesties Letters Patents, lately granted to the Glass Sellers of London for their incorporation, did deliver into this court a report in writing under their hands how they find the same and their opinions, the tenor whereof is as followeth, viz^t:—

To the Right Honble. the Lord Mayor and Court of Aldermen.—The committee appointed by the order of this court of the sixth of September instant, to consider and peruse the Letters Patents granted by His Majesty to the Company of Glass Sellers, Doe humbly certify that we have deliberately perused and considered the said Letters Patents and the powers thereby granted to the said company, and upon the whole are of opinion, That the said charter may be inrolled and they owned as a company of this City, without any prejudice or damage to the State thereof, or any private company of the same; the conditions hereunder written being observed, viz^t:—That noe member of any of the companyes of this City following the Glass Sellers' Trade shall be exempt from bearing office in or paying dutyes to the companyes of which they are free, and shall, notwithstanding the Letters Patents of the Glass Sellers, be continued to the said companyes of which they are now free. That the said Company of Glass Sellers shall, from time to time hereafter as they have occasion, meet in some convenient place within this City and liberties, and not in the suburbs or any other place without the liberties.

All which, nevertheless, we humbly submit to the further consideration of this honourable court this xx^th day of September 1664.

The which report being here openly read, was allowed of and ordered to be entred into the Repertory, and to be in all things accordingly performed; and Mr. Town Clerk is hereby ordered to inroll the charter of the said company, and Mr. Chamberlain to take notice of the said company as hereby made a free company of this City, by the name of Citizens and Glass Sellers of London, and so inroll and make free their apprentices, and translate their members as is used in other companyes of this City.

REVIVAL AND ESTABLISHMENT OF THE LIVERY.

Read and entred at a Court of Assistants held on 22^d March 1710.

To the Right Honble. the Lord Mayor and Court of Aldermen.—The representation and petition of the Master, Wardens, and Court of Assistants of the Company of Glass Sellers, London,

Humbly sheweth, that the said company being incorporated by Letters Patents under the Great Seal of England, bearing date the twenty-fifth of July in the 16th year of the Raigne of the late King Charles the Second, with power to make byelaws, &c., did by petition of 24th August then following, obtaine a confirmation of their byelaws by the Right Honourable the then Lord Chancellour and Lords Chief Justices of the King's Bench and Common Pleas, under their hands and seales bearing date the 19th of November 1664, pursuant to an Act of Parliament made in the 19th year of the raigne of King Henry the Seaventh, amongst which bye-lawes or orders, the first is of the tenor and in the words following, viz^t:—

Now, for the better order, rule, and government of the said company, and of the several members thereof, it is hereby ordained, that they of the said society, company, or fellowship, so incorporated by His Majestie's said Letters

Patents as aforesaid, shall and may of and amongst themselves make choice and have a livery for the better service of His Majesty, and of the said City and company, and that every person chosen into the said livery shall take such oath as by their ordinances shall be appointed for him, upon like pain as shall be imposed upon such persons as being chosen into the assistants of the said company shall refuse the oath hereby appointed for them.

Which was 10*l.* and the fine for coming on the livery is 5*l.*, as by the said bye-laws may more at large appear.

That upon the said company's petition to this Honourable Court to be admitted a free company, and to have their charter inrolled after the usage and custom of this City, it was by an order of this court of 6th September, 1664, referred to Sir Richard Ford, Sir Richard Ryves, Kn^ts^ and Aldermen, Mr. Alderman Waterman, and Mr. Alderman Hanson, or any two of them, to peruse the said charter, and consider if any damage or inconvenience might ensue to the state of this City by granting the petitioners' desires, and to certifie to this court how they found the same, and their opinions; who did the 20th of the same moneth deliver into the said court a report in writing how they found the same, and their opinions, that the said charter might be inrolled and they owned as a free company of this City, which was ordered and done accordingly.

Whereupon the court of assistants of the said company did afterwards, from time to time, for about 20 yeares, choose liverymen, being members of the same company, who were admitted and sworne, and did vote and poll in elections for members to serve in Parliament and magistrates of this City, until about the time the franchises of the City were seized into the hands of the late King Charles, and all elections suspended.

And whereas, when the charter of this company was first obtained, most, if not all, the members were incorporated into other companies and obliged to pay duties and serve officers therein, and many of them have since been chosen into the liveries of such companies, and have voted and polled as such; by reason whereof the livery of this company hath been neglected and decayed, and very few of those liverymen who were formerly chosen are now living, and those are now liverymen in other companies.

And whereas the glass manufactory is of late years much improved, especially in flint and looking glasses, beyond what is done in any known part of the world to the greater honour and benefit of this City and Kingdome.

And whereas the said company being much increased in the number and quality of the members thereof, and are desirous to have their livery revived for the honour of this City and encouragement of persons to become bound and to take up their freedom in this company.

For which cause the court of assistants of the said company did, in the year 1707, examine their bye-laws and the usage of the liverymen of this company heretofore chosen, and enquired into the ancient custom and usage of the City of London in the constitution of liveries in the companies of this City; and, having taken advice of councill upon the same, did, on or about the 18th of March 1707, revive the said livery, by calling twenty persons, members of the said company, upon the same, who, with others called formerly and since, have voted in all elections for the City, without any objection until the late election for members of Parliament.

Wherefore, to prevent all questions and contests that may hereafter arise touching the livery of this company,

Your petitioners crave leave to lay these matters before this honourable court, humbly praying that if there were any former defect in the constitution of their livery (which your petitioners are not apprised of) that the same may now be rectifyed by this court, and that they may be owned and summoned upon elections as a free livery company of this City.

And your petitioners shall ever pray, &c.

℔ Order of the master, wardens, and court of assistants,

Here follows a copy of the order of the Court of Aldermen on the above-said representation and petition.

Martis xx^o^ die Martij, 1710, Annoq. RR^me^ Annæ, Heathcote, Mayor. Magnæ Britanniæ, &c., Decimo.

The representation and petition of the Master, Wardens, and Court of Assistants of the Company of Glass Sellers, setting forth their pretensions to be a livery company, and praying that if there were any former defect in the constitution of their livery, the same may be rectifyed and they owned and summoned upon elections as a livery company of this City, is by this court referred to the consideration of Sir Samuel Garrard, Baronet, Sir Robert Beachcroft, Sir Samuel Stanier, Sir Charles Peers, Sir James Bateman, Knights and Aldermen, and Mr. Alderman Eyles, or any three of them, who are desired to examine the matter thereof and report the same with their opinions to this court, and Edward Sorrell to warne and attend them.

Afterwards, Sir Robert Beachcroft being Lord Mayor, and so not properly of the committee, by an order dated the 11th March 1711, Sir Thomas Abney, Kn^t^. was appointed thereto in his room.

Jovis xiij May 1712, Annoq. RR^me^. Annæ, Beachcroft, Mayor. Magnæ Britæ. &c., Undecimo.

This day the committee formerly appointed to consider the representation and petition of the master, wardens, and court of assistants of the Company of Glass Sellers, did deliver into this court a report in writing under their hands touching the same, the tenor whereof is as followeth, that is to say:—

To the Right Honourable the Lord Mayor and Court of Aldermen.—In obedience to an order of this honourable court of the twentieth of March one thousand seven hundred and ten, we, whose names are subscribed, being appointed (amongst others) to consider the representation and petition of the master, wardens, and court of assistants of the Company of Glass Sellers, setting forth their pretensions to be a livery company, and praying, that if there were any former defect in the constitution of their livery the same may be rectifyed and they owned and summoned upon elections as a livery company of this City, do humbly certifie that we have severall times met and heard the petitioners and examined the matter of their representation and petition, and do find that the said company was incorporated by Letters Patents under the Great Seale of England, bearing date the twenty-fifth day of July in the sixteenth yeare of the raigne of the late King Charles the Second, with power to make bye laws which they afterwards made, and the same were confirmed the nineteenth day of November one thousand six hundred sixty and four, under the hands and seales of the then Lord Chancellor and Lords Chief Justices of the King's Bench and Common Pleas, pursuant to an Act of Parliament in that case made, amongst which bye laws there is one to this effect. That they of the said company should and might of and amongst themselves make choice and have a livery for the better service of His Majesty and of the said City and company.

Which charter we find was by order of this court of the twentieth of September one thousand six hundred sixty and four inrolled amongst the records of this City, and the said company owned as a free company; but their said bye laws not being confirmed till after the inrollment of their charter, were never brought to this court for their approbation. Yet, notwithstanding (as several of the company did affirm to us) the court of assistants of the said company did afterwards from time to time for many years choose liverymen, being members of the same company, who were admitted and sworn and did vote and poll in elections untill about the time the franchises of the City were seized into the hands of the late King Charles, and all elections suspended.

We have examined into the method and manner of making of liveries, and are of opinion that the sole power of appointing and granting liveries to the companies of this City is vested in this court, as by divers late instances thereof appeared to us, particularly the distillers, the glovers, and the coach and coach harness makers, who all of them had liveries granted to them by this court. But as to this Company of Glass Sellers, we do not find, nor do they pretend, that they ever had any grant of a livery from this court, nor ever had any precept sent to them to come to the publick elections, as all other livery companies have, nor were ever owned as a livery company, and therefore we cannot but conclude what they have hitherto done in choosing liverymen and erecting themselves into a livery company, by virtue of their said bye law, to be contrary to the custom of this City, and consequently irregular and void.

Yet, for as much as we are fully satisfied that their proceedings herein were through inadvertency, and not with design to contest the authority of this court in granting liveries, and that we are credibly informed there are divers eminent and worthy citizens of this City that are only free of that company and no other, and are a sufficient number to make up a competent livery, we are humbly of opinion that it will conduce much as well to the state and government of this City as to the encouragement of the glass manufactory, which of late yeares is much improved, especially in flint and looking glasses, beyond what is done in any known part of the world, many of the said manufacturers being free of the said company. That a livery be granted to them under the qualifications and conditions following, vizt.:—

That no member of that company that is of the clothing of any other company of this City, shall be of the livery of that company before he be translated from such other company openly in this court, according to the ancient custom of this City, and that they be enjoyned to a constant attendance upon the Lord Mayor upon all public solemnities, and that they compell no member of their company that was before a freeman of any other company to be of their livery, without the voluntary and free consent of such member. And lastly, that their livery shall not at any time exceed sixty in number; all which, notwithstanding, we humbly submit to the great wisdom of this honourable court this twenty-ninth day of April 1712.

THO. ABNEY.
SAM. STANIER.
CHA. PEERS.

The which report being openly read, was well liked and approved by this court, and ordered to be entered into the repertory, and accordingly performed. And it is further ordered, that the attorneys in the outer court do take care that hereafter precepts be sent to the said Company of Glass Sellers upon all occasions as to other livery companys of this City.

GIBSON.

Whereupon, it having been thought fit and necessary to new choose and sweare all the liverymen of this company who were formerly chosen and sworne, and paid their fines, upon the question put they were new chosen and sworne, and such of them as were then present at the court of assistants, held on Wednesday, the 4th day of June, 1712, for that purpose, were sworne, and the rest of the liverymen of this company were sworne at subsequent courts; and upon this establishment and revival the said livery have ever since and do now subsist.

To the Right Honorable the Lord Mayor and Court of Aldermen of the City of London.

The humble petition of the Master, Warden, Assistants, and Comonalty of Glass Sellers of London.

Sheweth, that your petitioners were incorporated by charter of His late Majesty Charles the 2nd, and writ of Privy Seal, bearing date at Westminster the 25th day of July, in the sixteenth year of His said Majesty's reign, whereby it was, among other things, granted that they by the name of "The Master, Wardens, Assistants, and Comonalty of Glass Sellers of London," should, for ever thereafter, be capable in Law to purchase and hold lands and goods, and grant, let, and assign the same, have a common seal, hold meetings within the City of London or suburbs thereof, elect a master, two wardens, and twelve assistants, with power for them or the greater part of them to make bye laws to levy fines under amercements to their own use, and have a clerk to hold during their pleasure as by the said charter appears.

That, by an order of your honorable court, made on Tuesday the sixth day of September, 1664, Bateman, mayor, upon the petition of the master, wardens, and commonalty of the said company, the said charter was ordered to be inrolled by the town clerk, and the chamberlain of this City was ordered to take notice of the said company, as thereby made a free company of this city, of the name of Citizens and Glass Sellers of London as by the said Order appears.

That this honorable court was, on the eighth day of May, 1712, pleased to grant unto this company a livery, not exceeding sixty in number, under and subject to certain qualifications and conditions, and to direct that the attornies of the outer court should take care that thereafter precepts be sent to the said Company of Glass Sellers upon all occasions as to other livery companies of this City.

That, in pursuance of the said grant and order, all the livery men of this company have been ever since and are still chosen and sworn.

That the said company have of late years increased in the number and quality of its members to upwards of one hundred, and that the number of the livery thereof now amounts to its full complement of sixty.

That your petitioners have received applications from several of their members who are desirous of taking up the cloathing thereof, but your petitioners cannot admit them by reason of the restriction of their number to sixty, as above set forth.

That your petitioners humbly conceive that if the number to which their livery is thus limited were encreased, it would greatly conduce to the service, benefit, and encouragement of many persons who have served their appreticeship to members of the said company, and have become or would become freemen and livery men thereof, to others who have come into the said company by patrimony and by purchase, and also to the welfare and honors of this City in the promotion, as well as its representation in Parliament, as of its prosperity in trade and commerce.

Your petitioners therefore humbly pray—

That your honorable court would take the premises into their serious consideration, and would be pleased to order that the number of the said livery should be encreased, and that this honorable court would be pleased in their wisdom to make such order in the premises as to this court shall think fit.

And your petitioners shall ever pray, &c.

Garratt, Mayor.—Tuesday the first day of February, 1825, and in the sixth of the reign of George the Fourth, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith.

The Committee of Privileges did this day deliver into this court a report in writing under their hands, on considering the petition of the Company of Glass Sellers for an increase of livery to the said company, which report was read in these words.

To the Right Honorable the Lord Mayor and Court of Aldermen.

In obedience to an order of this honorable court of the 30th day of November last, we, whose names are hereunto subscribed, being appointed (amongst others) to examine the allegations of the petition of the master, wardens, and court of assistants of the Company of Glass Sellers of the City of London, praying for an increase to the number of their livery, and to report our opinion thereon, do humbly certify that we have accordingly met and have examined into the allegations, and do find that this honorable court on the 8th day of May, 1712, upon a report of a committee appointed to consider the petition of the said company, did grant a livery to them, and order that no member of that company that is of the clothing of any other company of this City, shall be of the livery of that company before he be translated from such other company openly in this court, according to the ancient custom of this City. That they be enjoined to a constant attendance upon the Lord Mayor upon all public solemnities. That they compel no member of their company, that was before a freeman of any other company, to be of their livery without the voluntary and free consent of such member; and lastly that their livery should not at any time exceed sixty in number.

It further appears to your committee that the said company is increasing in respectability, and that many members thereof are desirous of being admitted to the livery, whom they cannot accept by reason of the above limitation. Your committee therefore, after duly considering thereof, are of opinion that the complying with the prayer of their petition will be beneficial to the said company, by encouraging and promoting the increase of their members, and that the number of their livery should be increased to one hundred and twenty, and should not at any time exceed the same; that the fine should be twenty pounds, together with thirteen shillings and four pence to the clerk, and six shillings and eight pence to the beadle; and the master and wardens of the said Company of Glass Sellers for the time being do return annually, on or before the 24th day of December to the town clerk's office, a list of their livery, with their places of abode, and subject to the several rules and orders contained in the former grant of 8th May, 1712. All which we submit to this honorable court this first day of February, 1825.

(Signed) R. C. GLYN,
JAS. SHAW,
MW. WOOD.

Which report was well liked and approved of by this court, and it is hereby ordered—

The Byelaws.

To all Christian people to whom these presents shall come, Edward, Earl of Clarendon, Lord High Chancellor of England, Sir Robert Hide, Knight, Lord Chief Justice of His Majesty's Court of King's Bench, and Sir Orlando Bridgeman, Knight and Baronet, Chief Justice of His Highness' Court of Common Pleas, send greeting, in our Lord God everlasting. Whereas, in and by an Act of Parliament holden at Westminster the five and twentieth day of January, in the nineteenth year of the reign of the late King Henry the Seventh, It was amongst other things, ordained, established, and enacted, That no master, wardens, and fellowships of crafts or misteries, nor any of them, nor any rulers of guilds or fraternities, take upon them to make any Act or Ordinances, ne to execute any Act or Ordinances by them heretofore made in disheritance or diminution of the prerogative of the King, nor of other, nor against the common profits of the people. Except the same Act and Ordinances be examined, approved, and admitted by the Chancellor, the Treasurer of England, or Chief Justices of either Benches, or three of them, or before both the Justices of Assize in their circuits or progress in the shires where such Acts and Ordinances be made upon pain of forfeiture of forty pounds for every time that they do contrary as by the said Act of Parliament doth and may appear. Know ye, That the master, wardens, assistants, and commonalty of Glass Sellers of London, being desirous that the said Act of Parliament in all and everything be duly observed and kept, have to that end and purpose the four and twentieth day of August, in the sixteenth year of the reign of our Sovereign Lord Charles the Second, by the Grace, of England, Scotland, France, and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith, &c., exhibited and presented their petition unto us, with a book containing divers statutes, Acts, and Ordinances, heretofore, with the consent of that whole society or body politic, and the several members thereof, devised, ordained, and made for the better rule and government of the said Company or Fellowship of Glass Sellers, and the several members thereof, and of their successors, and of all others that now are or hereafter shall be of the said society or fellowship, and for the common weal and conservation of the good estate of the same, and thereupon have instantly desired us that we would examine and approve all and every of the said Acts and Ordinances. Whereupon, in pursuance of the said Act of Parliament, we have perused the said Acts and Ordinances, the tenor whereof hereafter ensue and be these, vizt. :—

First,

Whereas there have been of long time a great number of glass sellers, looking-glass makers, and grinders, foylers, polishers, finishers, and casers of looking-glasses within the City of London, the suburbs, and within seven miles thereof, who have used the said several arts and misteries; And whereas it hath pleased his Royal Majesty of his special grace, by His Highness' Letters Patents under the Great Seal of England, bearing date at Westminster the five and twentieth day of July last past, to make them a body corporate, and to consist of a master, two wardens, twelve assistants, and commonalty, with power to make choice from time to time of a master, wardens, and assistants, in such sort as in the said Letters Patents are expressed:

Now, for the better order, rule, and government of the said company and of the several members thereof,

It is hereby ordained—

That they of the said society, company, or fellowship, so incorporated by His Majesty's said Letters Patents as aforesaid, shall and may, of and amongst themselves, make choice and have a livery for the better service of His Majesty, and of the said City and company, and that every person chosen into the said livery shall take such oath as by these ordinances shall be appointed for him, upon like pain as shall be ymposed upon such persons as being chosen into the assistants of the said company shall refuse the oath hereby appointed for them.

Item.—It is ordained that upon the first and third Thursday of every month shall be the usuall and ordinary court days for the master, wardens, and assistants of the said corporation, and that upon every of the said days a court to be held at the hall of the said company, or other certain appointed place; and if occasion shall at any time hereafter so require, then such court or assembly to be adjourned or oftner kept, and at such times as by the master and wardens of the said company shall be thought fit and cause to be summoned. And also, that there shall be an assembly or general court or courts for the livery and general fellowship of the said company, the same general court or courts to be kept from time to time when and as often as the master and wardens shall summon and appoint the same. And further, that there shall be yearly four general courts of the said whole fellowship, which shall be called quarter days, the same to be held yearly on these days following, that is to say, upon every Thursday next before the Feast of Saint Thomas the Apostle shall be yearly held one quarter court day, and upon every Thursday next before the Annunciation of Our Blessed Lady Saint Mary the Virgin shall be yearly held one other quarter court day, and upon every Thursday next and immediately before the Feast of the Nativity of Saint John Baptist shall be yearly held one other quarter court day, and upon every Thursday next and immediately before the ffeast of Saint Michael the Archangel shall be yearly held and kept one other quarter court day. All the said courts to be kept at or in the common hall of the said company, to be in or near the said City of London or suburbs thereof, called or to be called Glass Sellers' Hall, or in such other certain place as shall be by the said master and wardens for the time being appointed for the same.

Item.—That on every of the said quarter days or quarter courts, every person of the said society, fellowship, and company shall then and there satisfy and pay for quarteridge sixpence in money every quarter to the master or one of the wardens of the said company for the time being for the use of the said fellowship.

Item.—That every person of the said fellowship making default of appearance after reasonable summons or warning to him or them given, or to be left at his or their house or houses by the beadle or other officer of the said company, to be at the said courts or meetings at any time, shall forfeit as ensueth, vizt., The master and either of the wardens not appearing there by the hour appointed, having no lawful excuse, twelvepence, and not coming at all to the said court or courts, having no lawful excuse, or departing without licence before the court be ended, two shillings and sixpence. Every other member of the said company or fellowship, or person under their government as aforesaid, so summoned or warned according to the nature of the courts or meetings, and not appearing there by the hour appointed, except he can show some lawful impediment such as the master, wardens and assistants of the said court or the most of them shall allow, shall forfeit sixpence, and not coming at all to the said courts or meetings, having no such lawful excuse, or departing thence without licence before the court be ended, shall forfeit twelvepence. And if the master, or either of the wardens, or any of the assistants or livery shall repair to any the said courts or meetings without his gown, he shall forfeit twelvepence for every such time. And every person denying, refusing, or neglecting to pay the same several fines and forfeitures shall lose and forfeit double the sum he ought to have paid for every such default, except the same be moderated or dispensed with by a court of assistants of the same company. All the said forfeitures to be to the use of the said company.

Item.—That if any person or persons, members of the same company, shall, by the master, wardens, and assistants, or the greater part of them, whereof the master and one of the wardens for the time being to be two, be chosen and elected into the livery of the said Company of Glass Sellers, and shall refuse to be of the said livery, or not take the same upon him, or shall not within the space of three months next after notice given to him of such election prepare himself with habit and livery and garment fitting thereunto, as he shall be appointed by the master, wardens, and assistants, such person and persons shall forfeit for such his offence twenty shillings, and so forwards for every month after the said three months ten shillings monthly, untill hē shall obediently conform himself and take the said livery upon him, and prepare himself according to such order as shall be so appointed by the said master, wardens, and assistants.

Item.—That if request at any time shall be made to the master and wardens of the said company to have the livery of the said company to accompany to the grave, within the said city of London, the liberties and suburbs thereof, the dead corpse of any of the livery deceased, or of his wife, at the time of the ffuneral, then the master and wardens, if they shall think fit, shall cause a warning to the whole livery to be given accordingly, and every of the said livery shall, upon reasonable warning, attend with his livery, at the time and place appointed, upon pain and forfeiture of three shillings and fourpence by every particular person of the said livery who shall make default upon any such warning, except he shall have reasonable excuse for his absence, and that it be allowed by and at a court of assistants of the said company.

Item.—That at such yearly court of assistants which shall be held for the choice of the new master and wardens for the year next ensuing, there shall be chosen at that court before the election of the new master and wardens three other fit persons of the said assistants to take bond of the said master and wardens, who at that court shall be so newly chosen, and that none nominated or agreed upon to be the new master or any of the new wardens for the year following shall be admitted, although elected or established in his place, or take upon him the execution thereof, until he shall have entered into bond of the penal sum of one hundred pounds respectively unto the said three assistants so chosen, with two sufficient sureties, who shall then be none of the said company, with condition to the effect following:—That the master and wardens employ and dispose of all and every and any such sum and sums of money, rents, plate, and other things which he or they shall receive or be possessed of, or shall any ways come to his or their hands or custody, of the said company's during the time of his or their being master and warden, as shall be ordered, directed, and appointed by the court of assistants from time to time, and not otherwise, and that after the expiration of his mastership or wardenship he shall make and deliver unto the assistants of the said company, at their next court of assistants, a full, perfect, and true accompt of all things delivered or committed, or which otherwise have come to his hands or custody as aforesaid, or of any other matters, questions, or things touching and concerning the good and benefit of the said corporation or body politic; and after such accompt so made, what remainder shall be found in his or their hands or custody belonging to the said company, he shall, without diminution, covin, or delay, deliver over the same at such time and place, and to such person and persons to the use of the said company, as by the said court of assistants shall be appointed; and after such accompt and delivery made and approved of by the said court of assistants, the said bond to be re-delivered unto them that shall be so bound respectively to be cancelled.

Item.—It is further ordered, that if any person, freeman of the said company, which shall be as aforesaid chosen master or warden of the said company, shall, upon notice thereof, deny, refuse, or neglect to take the same upon him, or to enter into bond as aforesaid, or to take such corporal oath as by these ordinances is appointed, approved, and allowed, then he shall forfeit the sum of thirteen pounds six shillings and eightpence of lawful money of England to the use of the said company; and then after such denial, refusal, or neglect there shall be a new nomination and choice of any other in his place, that shall so deny, refuse, or neglect in like sort, as shall be done when any master or warden shall decease in the time of his said office, or as if such person had never been elected and chosen. And that every person and persons of the said society, duly chosen to be one of the said assistants, which shall refuse and not take upon him to be one of the said assistants after he is so chosen, or to take such oath as by these ordinances or any other hereafter shall be appointed, approved, and allowed, shall forfeit the sum of ten pounds, and thenafter there shall be such new election as aforesaid.

Item.—That if for service of the King's Majesty, his heirs or successors, or of the City of London, or of the proper affairs of this company, or for any other reasonable and just considerations, any taxations or assessment shall be by the said master and wardens for the time being, or any two of them, whereof the master to be one, and the assistants of the said company, or the greater part of them, reasonably assessed, imposed, or rated upon any particular person or persons, members of the said corporation, then the same shall be in all things obeyed and performed according to such orders as shall be by them sett down for the collection of the same; and that every person refusing, denying, or omitting to satisfy or pay such or so much of the said assessments or taxations as shall so at any time be rated and assessed upon him, shall forfeit and pay such reasonable fine, amerciaments, or penalty for such denial or refusal as shall be set and imposed on him or them by the said master, wardens, and assistants, or the greater part of them. The said fines, amerciaments, or penalties to go and be to the use of the said company.

Item.—That no person, member of the said company or fellowship, shall at any time revile, assault, or give any blows, approbrious or unseemly speeches or words, or do any other unlawful or unseemly act to, of, or toward the master, or any of the wardens, or other person member of the said ffellowship, whereby the King's peace or brotherly love may be broken or impaired; and if, upon complaint of any such misbehaviour, any such person shall, at a court of assistants of the said company or fellowship, be found to have so offended, he shall obey, undergo, and perform such reasonable order and sentence as by the said court shall be sett down concerning the same; and if he shall refuse or neglect so to do then he shall forfeit the sum of ffive marks to the use aforesaid.

Item.—For the avoiding of confusion and disorder in the said Society, and several arts and misteries belonging to the said corporation which may grow and arise by taking of multitudes of apprentices, every one taking and entertaining so many as they please, whereby in future time to endanger a great inconveniency in the said corporation and the particular members thereof, and to the end that journeymen freemen of the said several arts and misteries, having well and truly served forth their times of apprenticeships, may the better be employed and provided for:

It is ordered, that no person or persons of this society, other than the master, wardens, and assistants, and such as shall hereafter be of the livery of the said company, shall take or keep any more than one apprentice at a time; and that the said master, wardens, and assistants, and such of the livery as aforesaid, shall not at any time hereafter take or keep more than two apprentices at any one time, upon pain that every person offending contrary to this ordinance shall forfeit, lose, and pay for every month that he shall offend therein the sum of forty shillings to and for the use aforesaid.

Item.—That no glass seller, looking glass maker, grinder, or polisher of looking glasses shall at any time or times hereafter make, or cause to be made, or put to sale any small looking glasses under the size of ten inches, unless the same be of the number and of the length and breadth hereafter mentioned, that is to say, number eight to be ten inches in length and eight in breadth; number seven to be nine inches in length and seven in breadth; number six to be seven inches in length and five inches and a half in breadth; number five to be six inches in length and five inches in breadth; number four to be five inches in length and four inches in breadth; number three to be four inches and half a quarter in length and three inches a quarter and half a quarter of an inch in breadth; number two to be three inches and three quarters in length and two inches and three quarters in breadth; number one to be three inches and a quarter in length and two inches and a half in breadth. And that all person or persons of the said trade that shall make, or cause to be made, or put to sale any such several looking glasses contrary to the proportions or sizes in length and breadth above mentioned, shall, for every his offence, forfeit and pay to the use of the said company the sum of forty shillings.

Item.—For the better avoiding of all deceits and fraud to be used and practised in the several arts, trades, and misteries aforesaid, it is ordered and ordained, that no person or persons whatsoever hereafter using any of the said several arts, trades, or misteries, shall make, or put, or offer to put to sale any glasses, looking glasses, hour glasses, stone potts, or earthen bottles, or any other white or galley ware deceitfull made, and if it shall happen that any person or persons of the said society, by themselves or their servants, shall make or offer to put to sale any such deceitfull wares, he or they so offending shall forfeit to the said master, wardens, and society such sum and sums of lawfull money of England as by the next court of assistants after such offence committed shall be adjudged and set down, to be well and truly paid to them the said master and wardens, to and for the use aforesaid, by the person and persons so offending within 14 days next after the same shall be so adjudged and set down; and that every person and persons refusing to pay the same shall forfeit, lose, and pay the sum of five marks for every such refusal, to the use of the said society; and that it shall be lawful for the said master and wardens and six of the assistants, or any four of them, whereof the master and one of the wardens to be two, at all times convenient to enter into the houses, shops, warehouses, and other places of all and every person and persons of the said society, within the said City, suburbs, and within seven miles thereof, and there to search and view the wares of all and every person and persons of the said society, and all such wares as shall be there found to be deceitfully made, and not fit to be put to sale, to break and destroy. Provided always, that in all searches, judgments, and trialls touching looking glasses, two or more of the said assistants shall be looking glass makers, assistants of the said society.

Item.—Whereas there are and have been, as in many years past so at the time present, divers persons such as never served at all to any the said several arts, trades, or misteries, or else but a short space, whereby the said several arts and trades are much and apparently wronged, and prejudiced to the discredit, and detriment, and much injury to them who have served their full times of apprenticeship to the particular arts, trades, and misteries aforesaid, it is therefore hereby ordered and ordained, that no person or persons whatsoever shall at any time hereafter set up, practise, or use within the said City of London, suburbs, or within seven miles thereof, the trade of a glass seller, or anything thereunto belonging, before that he or they have first truly and lawfully served an apprentice the full term and time of seven years at the least, to one or more approved master or masters of the said society using the art and trade of buying and selling of glasses, looking glasses, and other earthen wares, and be approved of by and at a full court of assistants of the said society; and it is also hereby ordered and ordained, that no person or persons whatsoever shall at any time hereafter set up, practise, or use within the said City or suburbs, or within seven miles thereof, the art, ffeat, or mistery of a maker, grinder, or foyler, or caser of looking glasses, other than such as have first truly served an apprenticeship of seven years at the least to one or more approved master or masters of the said society, using the art, feat, mistery, or trade of looking glass making, and be approved of by and at a full court of assistants of the said society, upon pain of forfeiture of five marks to the use of the said company for every month that he or they shall use or exercise any such art, trade, or mistery contrary to this ordinance or any branch thereof.

Item.—That no person, member of this corporation or fellowship, or under the government thereof, by virtue of His Majesty's aforesaid Letters Patents, or using any of the aforesaid several arts, trades, or misteries before mentioned, within the said City of London and suburbs, and within seven miles compass thereof, limitted by His Majesty's said Letters Patents, shall take or entertain to be his apprentice any person or persons but in such sort and manner as hereafter followeth, vizt.:—That he shall first make tryall of such person by the space of thirty days next after the receiving of him, and, finding him fit for his employment to be an apprentice, shall present him for his apprentice at the next court of assistants of the said society, and being there allowed by the master, wardens, and assistants, shall cause and have the indentures of apprenticeship to be made by the clerk of the said company, and shall pay for and at the admittance and allowance of the said apprentice to the use of the said fellowship two shillings and sixpence; and for the clerk of the said company, for making the said indenture, two shillings and sixpence; and for the entrance of the said presentment as aforesaid twelvepence; and to the beadle of the said society sixpence. And if any person shall offend in anything contrary to the true meaning of this article, he shall forfeit for every month wherein he shall have or use any person as an apprentice, or keep him in his service or trade, not being so presented and bound as aforesaid, the sum of fforty shillings.

Item.—Every person being free, or a member of this society, shall from time to time, and at all times, use and employ his utmost care and endeavour to find out and discover all such person and persons as shall travel or wander up and down the City of London and seven miles thereof to sell any sort of glasses, or earthen, or galley wares; and when and as often as he shall discover or have any knowledge of any such person or persons to travel or wander abroad to sell glasses or earthenware, he shall give notice thereof to the next constable or other lawful officer, or to the clerk or beadle of the said corporation, to the intent that every such person and persons may be forthwith apprehended and brought to such punishment as is appointed to be inflicted upon such offenders by the Statute of the thirty-ninth of Queen Elizabeth, or the first of King James, or of any other statute of this realm made and provided for the punishment of pedlars and petty chapmen that shall wander abroad to sell glasses, or earthen, or other wares; and whosoever of the said corporation shall at any time discover or have knowledge of any person or persons to offend contrary to the said Statutes, and shall wittingly or willingly neglect to give such notice thereof as aforesaid for the apprehending and punishment of such offenders, shall, for every such his neglect, forfeit the sum of five shillings to the use of the said company.

Item.—That if any apprentice shall misbehave himself towards his master or mistress, or that he shall be of so rude behaviour that the persuasion or lawful correction of his master or mistress shall not cause him to reform his misbehaviour; if he shall be any drunkard, haunter of taverns, alehouses, bowling allies, or other lewd or suspected places of evil company, gamester, dicer, or runner away, or shall lie out of his master's or mistress' house without his or her privity, or shall be any inticer of other men's servants to any unlawful act or acts, or the like, and shall be brought to the hall of the said company by his said master or mistress, and there these or such-like notorious faults shall be justly proved against him before a court of assistants, the party so offending shall, for the first offence, be stripped from the middle upwards, and be there whipped by persons to be appointed for that purpose in the presence of the master, or one of the wardens, and six of the assistants of the said corporation at the least, and for any his second offence or offences being proved as aforesaid he shall be punished in the like sort as aforesaid. And it shall be and rest in the power of the master, wardens, and assistants to order and publish him disabled, and if they shall publish him disabled he shall from thenceforth stand disabled and barred to demand, enjoy, or have his freedom of this corporation and society until such time as upon humble submission and suit by him made his offence shall be remitted and he restored by the master, wardens, and assistants of the said company, or the greater number of them, to his former estate or condition. And if any journeyman or hired servant shall offend in any the kinds or degrees aforesaid, and the same be proved against him at a court of assistants as aforesaid, he shall undergo and satisfy such reasonable pecuniary penalties as by the court of assistants shall be imposed upon him, not exceeding the sum of six shillings eightpence; and if he shall refuse or omit to satisfy the same, he shall be, and stand, if by the court of assistants he shall be so ordered, for ever dismissed and expelled out of the said company, and disabled from being a freeman or member thereof. And if any person, brother of the said society, or any other having notice of his said dismission as aforesaid, shall, contrary to the true intent and meaning of this ordinance, set any such person on work in any of the trades or misteries of the said company, then he that shall so sett him on work shall forfeit forty shillings for every month that he shall entertain such servant so disabled.

Item.—That if the master and wardens, or one of the wardens, together with the assistants of the said company, or the most part of them, shall yearly, at the quarter court day held or to be holden on Thursday next before the Feast of the Nativity of Saint John Baptist, nominate and publish two of the livery or others of the said company to be and take the place and be called stewards for the assistants' dinner for this fellowship, to be kept on the feast day aforesaid at the costs and charges of the said stewards, at which dinner, for the maintenance of brotherly love and familiarity in the said society, the master and assistants, and all or any of their wives, may be present; and if the persons so nominated and appointed to be stewards shall refuse or omit to perform the same in convenient, seemly, and decent sort, then the person or persons so refusing shall forfeit the sum of five pounds of lawful money of England; and if the master, wardens, and assistants shall so think fitting he shall be dismissed of and from his said place of livery of the said fellowship, and none shall be taken to be assistants of the said fellowship except he have first been one of the stewards of the assistants' dinner or paid their fine. But it is provided, and the true meaning of these articles are, that they shall not therein extend to any person already nominated and in place of master, wardens, or assistants of the said society by the King's Majesty's Letters Patents of incorporation; and no one man shall be twice called or assigned to the charge of stewardship.

Item.—That every person that shall be called into the livery of this fellowship, shall, before he take his place of or in the said livery, give and deliver unto the said master and one of the wardens, to and for the use of the said fellowship, the sum of five pounds, and for the clerk five shillings, and for the beadle two shillings; and that every person to be admitted or made free of this society shall, before he be admitted brother or freeman of this society, give and deliver also unto the master or one of the wardens of the said society, to and for the use aforesaid, ten shillings, to the clerk three shillings, and to the beadle twelvepence.

Item.—That all sums of money limitted, seized, or appointed to be paid by these ordinances, or by virtue and force of these ordinances, by way of forfeitures, fines, or penalties, any time or times hereafter, for any offences or transgressions contrary to any of these ordinances or any ordinances hereafter to be made by this society, and which shall be approved and confirmed according to the laws and statutes of this realm, shall be and continue for ever to the use of the said fellowship, and be employed to the relief of the poor of this fellowship, and to be paid to the master and wardens, or one of the wardens, from time to time.

Item.—That for the better obedience and observance of these ordinances, to the end that all fforfeitures and penalties, or pecuniary sums so taxed, assessed, or appointed as aforesaid by these ordinances, may be levied and obtained to the use aforesaid, it shall and may be lawful and justifiable to and for the master and wardens of the said society, or any of them for the time being, to take a sufficient distress of the goods and chattels of every person so delinquent and offending as aforesaid, who shall refuse or neglect to pay the same upon reasonable demands thereof made for all and every or any the penalties, forfeitures, fines, and sums of money taxed, assessed or appointed to be paid by or upon him or them for any of his or their offences, the distress or distresses so from time to time to take, lead, drive, carry, and bear away, and the same to keep and detain until the said penalties, forfeitures, fines, or sums of money for which such distresses shall be taken shall be fully satisfied and paid. And it is further ordered, that every person that shall be admitted to be of the said company, or that shall subject themselves to be under the government of the said company, shall make his submission in writing under his hand or mark, without paying anything therefore, in such form and to such effect as followeth, that is to say:—

That he doth fully and wholly to submit himself, and doth promise sincerely to observe, perform, fufill, and keep all the good and lawful ordinances which are made or hereafter shall be made by the master, wardens, and Company of Glass Sellers of London, and their successors, as aforesaid; and shall well and truly satisfy and pay, and willingly undergo all such punishment, duties, pains, and forfeitures which shall be due or payable or ought to be undergone by him by force of any such ordinance made or to be made according to the true intent and meaning of the charter of the said company granted by His Majesty.

Item.—To the end, that it shall appear what oath and oaths every person and persons which shall become master, or wardens, or of the assistants or livery, or a freeman of this company, fellowship, or fraternity, or the clerk or beadle of this fellowship, and every person at any time to be allowed to work as servants to any of the said society, or within their government, shall take or enter into.

It is ordered and ordained, that they shall severally and respectively take the several oaths here ensuing, viz., every of them severally the oath of allegiance to and of the King's Majesty, his heirs and successors, according to the laws of this realm, as they now be or hereafter shall be provided.

Item.—Every master and warden agreed upon in such sort as aforesaid, to be master and wardens for the succeeding year, to take oath before the ancient master, and one of the wardens and court of assistants, in these words following, viz^{t}.:—You shall swear, that you shall be true and faithful to our Sovereign Lord the King, his heirs and successors. You shall endeavour yourselves the best you can whilst you continue in this office whereunto you are now chosen justly, indifferently, and truly to execute and cause to be executed your office in every respect so near as you can, and to put in due execution all the good and lawful laws and ordinances in this Book of Orders expressed and contained, without assessing or punishing any person for envy, hatred, or malice, or sparing any person or persons for reward, need, dread, favor, or affection. And of all and every such goods, plate, jewells, sums of money, or any other thing or things whatsoever belonging to this company that by reason of your said office shall come to your hands, charge, or custody, you shall, according to the ordinance made touching the same, yield and make a good, true, and plain accompt within convenient time after you shall be thereunto required by the master and wardens of this Company and Fellowship of Glass Sellers for the time being, or else you shall pay your fines for not holding your said office, according to the sum and sums agreed upon by the ordinances made or to be made by this said corporation. So help you God.

Item.—The oath of every one chosen from time to time to be assistant or assistants of the said society or commonalty, to be taken before the master and one or both of the wardens and court of assistants of Glass Sellers aforesaid, shall be in these words following, viz^{t}.:—You shall swear to be true and faithfull to our Sovereign Lord the King, his heirs and successors. You shall assist the master and wardens of this Society and Fellowship of Glass Sellers of London for the time being in their oversight, rule, and government of the said fellowship, so long as you shall continue one of the said assistants, with your best and soundest advice; you shall endeavour yourself to the utmost of your skill, and justly and indifferently, to execute your said place and office in every respect, and to put in due execution all the good and lawful ordinances of this society in the charter or book of ordinances expressed and contained, without punishing or assessing of any for envy, hatred, or malice, or sparing any person for love, dread, favor, or affection, or for hope, or promise, or reward. So help you God.

Item.—The oath of every one of the livery in the said society to be taken in such sort as aforesaid, and according to these words, viz^{t}.:—You shall swear to be true and faithful to our Sovereign Lord the King, his heirs and successors, and that you shall perform and obey all that to you appertaineth to be done by the true meaning of the charter and book of ordinances of this society being honest for you to perform, and approved or warranted by the laws of this realm. So help you God.

PART IV.—K.

RETURN K.—POSITION IN RELATION TO UNIVERSITIES.

Has the company any relations with the Universities, or with any of the colleges in them? State the nature and extent of such relations. Has the company any scholarships or exhibitions tenable at any of the Universities in its gift? Give a list of such scholarships or exhibitions, with their respective values, and the periods for which they are respectively tenable; and state how the same are awarded, whether the competition is limited to relations of members, or whether persons so related have any preference.

In December 1875, Mr. John Abbott, then master of the company, desirous that the company during his year of office should be distinguished by some permanent and useful act, gave to the company one thousand pounds, Madras guaranteed 5*l.* per cent. railway stock, the interest thereof to be applied towards founding a scholarship at the City of London School in perpetuity, to be called, "The Abbott Scholarship," in honour of the head master the Rev. E. A. Abbott, D.D., of the City of London School, tenable for four years at either of the Universities of Oxford or Cambridge cæteris paribus, sons of freemen of the Glass Sellers' Company in the said school to have the preference. The first and present holder, Mr. Hope, is no relation or connexion of any member of the company.

PART IV.—L.

RETURN L.—CHURCH PATRONAGE.

1. Are there any ecclesiastical benefices in the gift of the company?
2. Give a list of such benefices, stating—
   a. The county were situated.
   b. The name of the parish or place.
   c. The net annual value of such benefice so near as it can be given, together with any other particulars affecting the value present or prospective of such benefice.
3. Has the company granted during the last 10 years any augmentations of income to the incumbents of such benefices; and if so, to what extent, and out of what funds? Has the company during such 10 years built or contributed, and to what extent, to the building of any, and what, churches or chapels, and where situated?

None.

Part IV.—M.

Return M.—General and Technical Education.

A statement as to whether the company does anything to subsidize or encourage education, whether general or technical, and a return of the means (if any) so employed, and of the amount expended on such objects during each of the last preceding 10 years.

The company held an exhibition of glass at the Alexandra Palace, 1876, at which medals, money prizes, and certificates were awarded, at a cost to the company of upwards of 400*l.*

APPENDIX A.

The Company gave considerable information to the Municipal Commissioners appointed in 1834. The income of the Company was then on an average 40*l.* a year.

APPENDIX B.

City of London Livery Companies Commission,
2, Victoria Street, Westminster, S.W.,
18th July 1882.

Sir,

Referring to the Circular sent by the Commissioners to the Worshipful Company of Glass Sellers, dated the 15th February, I have respectfully to ask the Court (1) what was the actual amount of interest arising from the Hayes bequest and its augmentations for the year 1879 (see Return, Part IV. C.), (2) whether this sum is included in the return of expenditure for that year with which the Court has favoured the Commissioners.

I am, &c.,
H. D. Warr,
Secretary.

R. H. Evans, Esq.,
Clerk to the Glass Sellers' Company.

Worshipful Company of Glass Sellers,
58, Gracechurch Street, E.C.,
21st July 1882.

Sir,

In reply to your inquiry of the 18th inst., I am directed to inform you that the dividends on the Charity Fund in 1879 were in May 11*l.* 15*s.* and in October 11*l.* 15*s.* The Charity Fund is not included in the General Expenditure.

I am, &c.,
R. H. Evans,
Clerk.

H. D. Warr, Esq.,

GLAZIERS' COMPANY.

The Returns of this Company were made under protest.

PART I.—FOUNDATION AND OBJECT.

Returns A to H, both inclusive, and also I.

RETURN A.—A statement of the date, ascertained or probable, of the foundation of the company, and of the circumstances, so far as they can be discovered from its documents of foundation or archives, in which the company had its origin.

RETURN B.—A list of the charters, charters of inspeximus, and other instruments of a similar nature, whether originals or copies, which have been at any time in the possession of the company, together with an abstract of the purport of each, regard being specially had to any evidence which it may contain as to the object of the foundation of the company.

RETURN C.—A list of any trust deeds "founding, regulating, or affecting" the company, with the date of each, the names of the parties thereto, and an abstract of the purport of each.

RETURN D.—A list with dates of any "decrees of court," whether of the Courts of Common Law or of Chancery, or of any acts of the Court of Aldermen or of the Court of Common Council, "regulating or affecting" the company, with a statement of the effect of each decision.

RETURN E.—A list of any other documents, not included in the descriptions in the preceding returns, which "found, regulate, or affect" the company, with dates and an abstract of the effect of each.

RETURN F.—A concise history of the company, from the time of its foundation to the present day, with special reference to the inquiry contained in the commission as to "the objects for which the company "was founded," and "how far those objects are now being carried into effect."

RETURN G.—Has the company a licence in mortmain? When was such licence granted (referring to the document by description)? What is its extent, and to what extent is it now exhausted?

RETURN H.—Is there vested in the company and how, whether by charter, statute, order of the Court of Aldermen, act of Common Council, or otherwise, any right of exercising superintendence over, or any duty or discretion to encourage in any way, any and what art, trade or business? State the nature and local limits of such control. In what manner and to what extent is such control now exercised? If such control is not now exercised, state the circumstances under which its exercise has fallen into desuetude.

RETURN I.—A list of the charities, eleemosynary, educational, or otherwise, which are under the management of the company, stating in each case the name of the founder, the date and nature of the benefaction, its original and its present value, and the purposes to which the funds have been applied for each of the last preceding 10 years.

A.—By Royal Charter of King Charles I., dated the 6th November, in the 13th year of his reign, after stating that the ancient fraternity of the mystery or art of Glaziers, London, had theretofore made many good orders for the regulating themselves and their trade which had from time to time been improved and enlarged in the reigns of several princes, but that they were not sufficiently incorporated: The said charter incorporated the then present freemen of that trade within the City of London and five miles compassing the same, into one body corporate or politic by the name of the wardens and commonalty of the mystery or art of Glaziers and Painters of Glass, with power to make rules and orders for the good government of their society, and to impose punishment by fine, or otherwise, upon offenders.

The foregoing charter appears to have been surrendered in the first year of the reign of King James II., and thereupon a new charter was issued for the same purpose.

B.—The originals of the two before recited charters.

A copy of the acts, ordinances, byelaws, orders, and constitutions, made by the master, wardens, and assistants of the art or mystery of Glaziers of the City of London, at a court of assistants by them held at Loriners' Hall, London, on the 19th day of February, in the 23rd year of the reign of our sovereign lord George II., in the year 1749, in pursuance of the powers given them by the charter of incorporation granted to the Company of Glaziers of the said city, and approved by the then Lord Chancellor and Lord Chief Justices of the Courts of Queen's Bench and Common Pleas.

C.—None.

D.—None.

E.—None.

F.—It appears by the accounts of the company that for a great many years the company exercised a salutary and controlling influence over the trade of Glaziers by defining the quality of materials to be used and the prices to be charged for them, but since workmen have been permitted to call themselves Glaziers without supplying any evidence of having served their apprenticeship the salutary influence has considerably diminished. The company has no difficulty in keeping up its constitution by suitable masters, wardens, and court of assistants. Of late years the number of freemen by redemption has increased, and those by servitude have diminished.

G.—No.

H.—The reply to Return F supplies all the information the court can give on the subject.

I.—Abraham Wall's Charity.—Founded by his will, 12th September 1638. Forty shillings yearly to be distributed unto four aged poor women of the company; 2*s.* 6*d.* each quarterly, obtained by a rentcharge on hereditaments in Ironmonger Lane, in the City of London, belonging to the Mercers' Company, payable yearly at Michaelmas.

This rentcharge is received without addition, but with a deduction of 4*s.* per annum for land tax, and is distributed to eight decayed freemen of the company, or their widows, who receive 8*l.* annually.

Robert Taynton's Charity.—Founded by his will, 24th April 1679. Five pounds per annum for the relief of so many poor widows or decayed freemen of the company as they should think fit, and not to be employed for other purposes. The charity is derived from a rentcharge on a messuage, No. 334, St. Margaret's Hill, Southwark, belonging to Mr. Cleggett, who occupies the same. The annuity is payable yearly at Michaelmas, and does not increase but is diminished by 12*s.* 5*d.* deducted for land tax. The balance, 4*l.* 7*s.* 7*d.*, is distributed in manner aforesaid.

John Oliver's Charity.—Founded by his will, 19th March 1699; 3*l.* per annum by half yearly payments to be distributed to three poor widows of the company, derivable from a rentcharge on messuage No. 90, Queen Street, Cheapside, belonging to one W. W. Browne. This sum is paid without addition or deduction, and is distributed in manner aforesaid.

Vollett and Knight's Charity.

Vollett's Charity.—Founded by his will, 6th March 1724; 3*l.* per annum by half yearly payments, for the use of the poor of the company, derivable from a rent charge on a messuage devised to his daughter, Elizabeth Knight, being in Crown Court, near Holliwell Court, Shoreditch.

This charity is merged into—

Elizabeth Knight's Charity.—Founded by her will, 28th January 1729, when she devised the whole of the aforesaid Crown Court premises to the company, and the rents of same were to be divided among such poor freemen or their widows as said company should think fit, each of such to be paid 10*s.* The rent of the said house, amounting to 19*l.* 11*s.* 8*d.*, after deducting property tax, was disbursed in the manner aforesaid up to June 1873, when they were sold to the Metropolitan Board of Works for the net sum of 915*l.* 4*s.* 1*d.*, which was invested in consols by order of the High Court of Justice, producing an annual income of 27*l.* 4*s.* 6*d.*, which was duly disbursed as before. On 19th March 1879, under an order of Vice-Chancellor Hall, dated 6th December 1878, upon a petition of the company, 892*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*, part of aforesaid consols, producing on sale 869*l.* 4*s.* 8*d.*, was invested by the said company in purchase of freehold ground rents, viz., a profit rental of 37*l.* 16*s.* per annum, secured in equal rentals of 6*l.* 6*s.* each upon six messuages, Nos. 43, 45, 47, 49, Evershot Road, and Nos. 27, 29, Marriott Road, Tollington Park, Islington. The balance of said consols was partly absorbed by payment of the extra costs of said company, incurred by them on said sale above costs allowed on taxation, and the small residue was carried to the general account of said company. The present income is 37*l.* 0*s.* 4*d.*, after deducting 15*s.* 8*d.* property tax, which is disbursed as aforesaid.

The total annual receipts of the company for charitable purposes is :—

PART II.—A.

Constitution and Privileges of Membership.

Return A.—Governing Body.

1. State the present constitution of the governing body of the company, whether such constitution is according to the charter, and if not, in what respects such constitution varies therefrom, and when and how such alteration was made.
2. State the qualifications for membership of the governing body of the company, the time and periods of election, and the qualifications of the voters at elections to the governing body.
3. State the functions of the governing body, and of the different members of the same respectively, and whether the members of the governing body pay any, and what fees or fines on admission thereto, and whether they are paid any, and what salaries or amounts in respect of their services respectively.
4. State the nature of the business which comes before the governing body of the company, the method adopted in transacting it, the times at which the governing body meets for business purposes, the way in which the opinions of the members are taken, and whether the resolutions and decisions of the governing body are published, or are otherwise accessible to any or all, and which of, the members of the company.
5. State whether the members of the governing body are liable to suspension, or removal, on any, and what grounds, and by what method such suspension or removal is effected.
6. Has the company any byelaws sanctioned by the Courts of Law or Chancery, or by the Courts of Aldermen or Common Council, or otherwise. State the effect of such byelaws.

1. By the aforesaid charter of James II. it is enacted "That from henceforth for ever there may and shall be "one of the commonalty of the art or mystery aforesaid, "in manner as hereafter in these presents is mentioned, to be chosen, who shall be and shall be named "master of the said art or mystery of glaziers. And "also that likewise there may and shall be two of the "commonalty of the art and mystery aforesaid, in "manner as hereafter in these presents is mentioned, "to be chosen, which shall be and shall be named "wardens of the art or mystery of glaziers of the city "of London aforesaid. And also that there may and "shall be eighteen or more of the commonalty of the "art or mystery aforesaid, to be chosen in form here-"after in these presents mentioned, which shall be and "shall be named assistants of the art or mystery of "glaziers of the city of London aforesaid, and from "time to time they shall be assistants and helpers to "the said master and wardens for the time being in all "cases, businesses, and matters touching the said com-"monalty of the art or mystery of glaziers." And our further pleasure is that the said company and their successors from henceforth for ever shall have one honest and discreet person to be clerk to the said master, wardens, and commonalty, and a proviso is added that no person shall be elected master, wardens, assistants, or clerk of the said company, who doth not hold communion with the Church of England by law established, and who shall not within six months have received the Sacrament accordingly, and that they shall respectively take the oaths prescribed. The present constitution of the company is in conformity with the charter, except only that the number of assistants does not always amount to 18, and that the requirements respecting communion with the Church of England are not enforced.

2. The only qualification for membership is that the candidate must be a liveryman of the company.

The times for election of master and wardens is on St. Matthew's day; assistants may be elected by the court at any of their meetings.

The qualification for voters is that they must be assistants.

3. The functions of the governing body of the company consist of the election, when necessary, of the various officers and servants of the company; to admit to the freedom and livery of the company any fresh member; to discuss, and if decided upon, order the change of any investment of the company, or any fresh investments, &c.; to receive and approve the accounts of the renter warden; to elect and pay pensioners in conformity with the charitable bequests of the company. The master presides over all meetings of the court, with the assistance of the wardens, and the finances of the company are managed entirely by the renter warden. The fee payable on becoming an assistant is 10*l.* 10*s.*, and on becoming renter warden of the company is 9*l.* 18*s.* 4*d.*

They receive no salaries.

4. This has been already described in No. 3.

The courts meet on the feast of the Conversion of St. Paul, on St. Mark's day, St. Peter's day, St. Matthew's day, St. Andrew's day, and on Lord Mayor's day.

The court votes by show of hands.

The resolutions of the court are not published, except when they direct the election of pensioners; and no application for inspection of their minutes has been made to the present clerk, who has held office for upwards of 40 years.

5. The assistants may be removed for non-appearance for a period of 18 calendar months at the court when summoned, or for departing without leave, not having a good reason. Also, for evil government, misbehaviour, or for any other just and reasonable cause.

6. The following is an epitome of the byelaws of the company :—

1. Court of assistants appointed.
   How to be summoned.
   How often to be held.
2. Master and wardens to take an oath of office.

32. Repeal of former byelaws, and how fines, penalties, &c., to be recovered.

Part II.—B.

Return B.—Admission to membership.

1. State the qualification for membership of the Company, the several grades of membership of the Company, and whether women are admitted to membership.
2. State the several modes in which the freedom of the Company may be obtained, the circumstances entitling an applicant to admission under each mode respectively, and the fees payable in respect of admission under each mode respectively.
3. State whether persons exercising any particular trade are required by statute or otherwise to become free of the Company. Is there any process by which members of such trade can become members of the Company, and is there any process for compelling such persons to procure admission, and are such processes enforced, and to what extent? Is the freedom of the City of London in any and what way a condition precedent or subsequent to membership? Are there any members who are not free of the City of London? Do persons exercising any particular trade commonly become members of the Company? If so, how many members of such trade are at present members of the Company? What is the number of the members of the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the Company, who are members of the Company?
4. Are freemen liable to disfranchisement, and if so, for what reasons, and what is the mode of disfranchisement?
5. Is the livery of the Company limited or unlimited in number? What are the qualifications for election to the livery, who are the electors thereto, and how do the elections thereto take place, and what fees are payable on election? Are liverymen liable to removal from the livery, and for what reasons?

1.—Adult males may become freemen, liverymen, assistants, wardens, and master. Women are not admitted.

2.—Sons of freemen, apprentices to freemen who have served seven years, and such other persons as the court may approve are eligible as freemen of the company. The fees payable are on :—

II. On freedom by patrimony or servitude	2	3	6
III. On freedom by redemption	15	15	0
IV. On taking up livery	8	0	0
V. Liverymen, before becoming assistants, have to pay a steward's fee of	6	0	0

3.—The byelaws of the company, which have been before abstracted, set out all requirements as to practising trades and enforcing obedience. These byelaws have not been enforced for many years.

4.—No freeman of this company has ever been disfranchised.

5.—The livery of the company is unlimited, and all freemen are entitled to take up their livery on payment of the before-mentioned fines. None have ever been removed.

6.—None.

7.—(Called on this Form, Return D.) No.

Part II.—C.

Return C.—Number of members.

State (1) the present number of freemen, (2) the present number of the livery, (3) the present number of other members, (4) the number of admissions to the freedom by each mode respectively, and (5) the number of calls to the livery which have respectively taken place during each of the last preceding 10 years.

1. The present number of freemen is 15.

PART II.—E.

RETURN E.—Profits and privileges.

1. State with fulness what are the advantages, pecuniary or otherwise, incident to the position of a member of the company in each grade of membership, as (1) a freeman, (2) a liveryman, (3) master, warden, or otherwise a member of the governing body.
2. State the sums paid on an average annually for the preceding 10 years by the company to the members according to the grades of membership mentioned above, and of what such sums consisted, whether (1) fees, and of what nature, (2) pensions, or (3) other payments, specifying the nature of the same respectively.
3. What circumstances are in practice held to constitute a claim to a pension or donation? State the number of present pensioners and donees respectively, and the amounts paid to them as such respectively. How many pensioners and donees are connected with the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the company?
4. (1) What is the average standing of a member when he becomes a member of the governing body, and (2) what is the average time for which a member continues on the governing body?
5. Does the company carry on any and what trade or manufacture with which its title is directly or indirectly connected? If so, what is the capital and from what sources is it derived, and how are the profits (if any) divided or dealt with?

1. The municipal and political advantages of the members of the company are regulated by public and general statutes.

No pecuniary or other advantage is incident to the position of a member of the company except a small fee of 10*s.* paid to the members of the court of assistants at each meeting at which they are present.

2. See ante.

3. If more than one applicant for a pension their cases are decided according to the urgency of their necessity. There are at present eight pensioners of 8*l.* per annum each, two men and six women.

4. This has varied so greatly that no average can be fairly struck. The probability is for present members of the company an average of 10 to 15 years.

5. No.

PART III.—OFFICERS AND SERVANTS.

Part IV.—Return F.

Return F.—(1.) The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them what has been the amount of the increase or decrease, from year to year, of the company's income during the last 10 years, and whether there is reason to expect any increase or decrease during the next 10 years, together with a statement of the reasons for such expectation.

Return F.—(2.) The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them whether there is reason to expect any permanent increase or decrease in value in any of the estates or properties of the company, and if so, to what extent, together with a statement for the reasons for such expectation.

1. The Return H. shows all particulars of income and the varieties thereof. The difference arises exclusively from the varying numbers of admissions to the company, and there is no possibility of anticipating the future, which may be seriously affected by the result of the Commission.

2. The company has no estates which will vary in value for the next 80 years.

Part IV.—Return G.

Return G.—The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them—

1. What is the system of management of the company's estates and property ?
2. In what way, and by whom, the several receipts and payments are taken and made, and under what control ?
3. In what way the company's accounts are audited ?
4. Whether the company's accounts are published, or are accessible to all or any, and which of the members of the company ?

1. There are no estates to manage.

2. The renter warden of the company for the time being has the entire management of the accounts.

3. By three auditors elected from the court each year.

4. The company's accounts are not published, but are accessible to all members of the court.

Part IV.—Return H.

Return H.—A detailed statement of the income from all sources of the company during each of the preceding 10 years, a detailed statement of the company's expenditure during each of such 10 years, and a detailed statement of the assets and liabilities of the company at the end of each of the last 10 years.

The following is a detailed statement of the income from all sources of the company for the last 10 years, and also of the expenditure of the company for the like period.

PART V.—REFORM.

Reform.

The Commissioners, being bound to report to Her Majesty "What measures (if any) are, in their "judgment, expedient and necessary for improving or altering the constitution of the companies, or the "appropriation or administration of the property or revenues thereof," respectfully invite the attention of the officers of the company to this part of the Commission.

The Commissioners will be very glad to receive and consider any suggestions respecting this part of the Commission with which the officers of the companies may do the Commissioners the honour of favouring them.

The court can only suggest that a carefully considered system of apprenticeship should be made compulsory, and that the burden of enforcing the system should be entrusted to the companies.

A system of valuable prizes for technical skill would be desirable where funds exist to sustain such a method of improving the talents of artizans.

APPENDIX A.

This Company sent no returns to the Commissioners appointed in 1834.

GLOVERS' COMPANY.

This Company made no return. The following correspondence passed between the Commission and the Company :—

City of London Livery Companies' Commission,
2, Victoria Street, Westminster, S.W.,
15th February 1882.

SIR,

The Commissioners desire me to request you to draw the attention of the Court of the Worshipful Company of Glovers to the fact that, though about a year and a half has now elapsed since the date at which the Commissioners requested the Court to furnish them with information, the Commissioners have not as yet had the honour to receive any information from the Court.

The Commissioners desire me to add that they regret this delay, and that they must beg that they may be informed definitely within a month from this date whether the Court of the Glovers' Company intends to send in returns, and at what date the Commissioners may expect to receive them.

I am, Sir,
Your obedient servant,
H. D. WARR,
Secretary.

The Clerk of
The Worshipful Company of Glovers.

City of London Livery Companies' Commission,
2, Victoria Street, Westminster, S.W.
85, Gracechurch Street,
9th March 1882.

SIR,

I have to acknowledge your letter of the 15th ulto., and in reply have to refer you to my letter of the 6th September last.*

The funds possessed by the Glovers' Company consist of 2,000*l.* Consols and 1,800*l.* Reduced Stock.

Yours obediently,
(Signed) F. W. THOMAS,
Clerk to the Glovers' Company.

H. D. Warr, Esq.,

GOLD AND SILVER WYRE DRAWERS' COMPANY.

PART I.—FOUNDATION AND OBJECT.

RETURNS A. to H.

RETURN A.—A statement of the date, ascertained or probable, of the foundation of the Company, and of the circumstances, so far as they can be discovered from its documents of foundation or archives, in which the Company had its origin.

RETURN B.—A list of the charters, charters of inspeximus, and other instruments of a similar nature, whether originals or copies, which have been at any time in the possession of the Company, together with an abstract of the purport of each, regard being specially had to any evidence which it may contain as to the object of the foundation of the Company.

RETURN C.—A list of any trust deeds "founding, regulating, or affecting" the Company, with the date of each, the names of the parties thereto, and an abstract of the purport of each.

RETURN D.—A list with dates of any "decrees of Court," whether of the Courts of Common Law or of Chancery, or of any acts of the Court of Aldermen or of the Court of Common Council, "regulating or affecting" the Company, with a statement of the effect of each decision.

RETURN E.—A list of any other documents, not included in the descriptions in the preceding returns, which "found, regulate, or affect" the Company, with dates and an abstract of the effect of each.

RETURN F.—A concise history of the Company, from the time of its foundation to the present day, with special reference to the inquiry contained in the commission as to "the objects for which the Company was founded," and "how far those objects are now being carried into effect."

RETURN G.—Has the Company a licence in mortmain? When was such licence granted (referring to the document by description)? What is its extent, and to what extent is it now unexhausted?

RETURN H.—Is there vested in the Company, and how, whether by charter, statute, order of the Court of Aldermen, act of Common Council, or otherwise, any right of exercising superintendence over, or any duty or discretion to encourage in any way, any and what art, trade, or business? State the nature and local limits of such control. In what manner and to what extent is such control now exercised? If such control is not now exercised, state the circumstances under which its exercise has fallen into desuetude.

A.—The art or trade of Gold and Silver Wyre Drawers is one of antiquity and importance.

It appears that in the reign of James I., in consequence of a patent granted by the king, the Gold and Silver Wyre Drawers of that day attempted to bring over from France artizans to work the trade. The goldsmiths, however, rose in arms, declaring the king was not doing what was conducive to the best interests of the kingdom, and the Lord Mayor and aldermen were called upon to act in the matter, and in the end the king withdrew the patent, and the trade continued undisturbed.

The charter under which the Company now exists was granted by 5 William and Mary, 1693, for the better regulation, encouragement, and improvement of the said trade, and was the result of a petition by the persons using the trade in and about the City of London, and who were freemen of the said trade.

B.—16th June, 5 William and Mary, 1693. By charter of this date it is granted that the freemen of the trade, art, and mystery of Gold and Silver Wyre Drawers, and all others exercising, or who should thereafter exercise the trade, art, or mystery of drawing and flatting of gold and silver wyre, and making and spinning of gold and silver thread and stuff within the Cities of London and Westminster, the borough of Southwark, and all other places within three miles distant from the same, should be from thenceforth a body politic and corporate by the beforementioned style.

The charter directs that all persons using the trade, art, and mystery of gold and silver wyre drawing within the said limits shall become members of the Company, and ample powers are given for the management of the trade.

C.—There are none.

D.—17th October 1700. The orders, acts, and ordinances made by the Master, Wardens, and Assistants of the Company at a full court of assistants held on the 19th January 1699 were allowed by the Lord Keeper and Chief Justices of the Common Pleas.

The byelaws direct the election of the Master, Wardens, and Assistants in manner prescribed by the charter, but in addition give the master or senior warden a double or casting vote.

18th July 1780. The Court of Aldermen granted a livery to the Company. By the grant it is enacted that the Company shall be subject to the several orders of the Court of Aldermen, and it was further enacted that the charter and byelaws of the Company should be enrolled amongst the records of the city.

E.—There are no other documents beyond those already mentioned, except the byelaws of the Company, made at the meeting of the Court of Assistants according to power given by charter in that behalf.

F.—By charter of 5 William and Mary (the charter under which the Company now exists) it was granted that the freemen of the art and mystery of drawing and flatting of gold and silver wyre, and making and spinning of gold and silver thread and stuff within the cities of London and Westminster, the borough of Southwark, and all other places within 30 miles distant from the same should from thenceforth for ever be one body corporate and politic in deed, fact, and name, by the above style. Powers are given by the charter to control the said trade within the above limits, and also for the reformation and punishment of abuses; also to make rules for the goodness of wares, and to search for defective wares.

The orders, acts, and ordinances of the Company made on 19th January 1699 were allowed by the Lord Keeper and the Chief Justices on the 17th October 1700.

At a Court of Assistants held on the 12th November 1761 a byelaw was made enlarging the number of apprentices to be had at any one time by employers.

The livery was granted by the Court of Aldermen on the 18th July 1780 on the recommendation of the committee appointed to consider the petition of the Company in that behalf.

The objects for which the Company was founded were up to very recent years rigorously enforced. Latterly, however, owing to the increase of population and the alterations in the habits of society since the charter was granted, it is not deemed expedient to enforce the rights of the Company, although at the same time the Company has not abandoned any part of its controlling, searching, or other powers.

G.—The Company has a licence in mortmain which was granted to them under their charter.

The licence is not limited in its extent.

The Company do not at the present time hold anything under the said licence.

H.—By the charter (5 William and Mary) there is vested in the Company power to control the art and mystery of drawing and flatting of gold and silver wyre, and making and spinning of gold and silver thread and stuff in the cities of London and Westminster, the borough of Southwark, and within 30 miles distant therefrom.

The nature of the power is large, the Company having the right not to allow any person to act in the trade but those duly qualified, to punish and reform abuses and deceits in the trade, to search and seize defective wares, &c.

The Company do not now, for reasons already stated, think it expedient to enforce the power given them, although they have not abandoned any part thereof.

The Company still takes a lively interest in the trade, as will be seen from the fact that they have for some time past had under their consideration the subject of holding an exhibition of the work of the trade for the purpose of assisting technical education in connexion therewith.

PART I.—Charities.

Return I.—A list of the charities, eleemosynary, educational or otherwise, which are under the management of the Company, stating in each case the name of the founder, the date and nature of the benefaction, its original and its present value, and the purposes to which the funds have been applied for each of the last preceding 10 years.

The Company has only one charity in which it is in any way interested.

Christian Russell, by her will dated 20th September 1723, gave to trustees the sum of 100*l.* upon trust with directions that the interest of the said money should be yearly paid to five poor widows of deceased freemen of the Company.

This money has been invested in 3 per cent. reduced annuities, and the proceeds paid yearly to such poor widows as are entitled to receive it.

At present there are only three applicants for the money, but if two more poor widows of freemen applied they would of course be allowed to participate in accordance with the terms of the will.

PART II.—A.—Constitution and Privileges of Membership.

Return A.—Governing Body.

1. State the present constitution of the Governing Body of the Company, whether such constitution is according to the charter, and if not, in what respects such constitution varies therefrom, and when and how such alteration was made.
2. State the qualifications for membership of the Governing Body of the Company, the time and periods of election, and the qualifications of the voters at elections to the Governing Body.
3. State the functions of the Governing Body, and of the different members of the same respectively, and whether the members of the Governing Body pay any, and what fees or fines on admission thereto, and whether they are paid any, and what salaries or amounts in respect of their services respectively.
4. State the nature of the business which comes before the Governing Body of the Company, the method adopted in transacting it, the times at which the Governing Body meets for business purposes, the way in which the opinions of the members are taken, and whether the resolutions and decisions of the Governing Body are published, or are otherwise accessible to any or all, and which of, the members of the Company.
5. State whether the members of the Governing Body are liable to suspension, or removal, on any, and what grounds, and by what method such suspension or removal is effected.
6. Has the Company any bye-laws sanctioned by the Courts of Law or Chancery, or by the Courts of Aldermen or of Common Council, or otherwise? State the effect of such bye-laws.

A. 1.—The Governing Body consists at present of a master, four wardens and 32 assistants. This is in accordance with the charter, which provides for a master, four wardens, and not more than 36 assistants.

A. 2.—No one is eligible for membership of the Governing Body unless he be free of the Company and has served or fined for steward.

New assistants are elected at meetings of the Court of the Governing Body.

Assistants are elected for life.

All members of the Governing Body (having made the declarations and paid the fees) are qualified to vote at elections to the Governing Body. The master has a casting vote in addition to his ordinary vote.

A. 3.—The master is chosen annually, presides at all meetings of the Company, and is head of the Company for the time being. The master pays to the Company the sum of 14 guineas on his election. He receives no salary or emoluments in respect of his services.

The wardens act as assistants to the master, and with him meet occasionally to settle various matters of detail in connexion with the Company. Each warden on his election pays to the Company the sum of 7*l.* 7*s.* Neither of them receive any salary or emolument in respect of their services.

The assistants (together with the master and wardens) have to attend all courts of the Company and take into consideration the various matters arising from time to time. The fee payable by each assistant on his election is 51*l.* 1*s.* Neither of the assistants receive any salary or emoluments in respect of their services. Fines are imposed for non-attendance of assistants at the meetings of the court.

A. 4.—The business which comes before the Governing Body is such as relates generally to the Company in all respects. The method adopted in transacting the business of the Company is that usually adopted amongst public bodies. A notice convening the meeting is sent to each member of the court together with an agenda of business to be transacted. Each member is allowed to speak and vote on all subjects. By the charter, power is given to the Company to meet from time to time to consider the affairs of the Company, and by the bye-laws it is ordained that the Company shall meet on specified quarter court days, and power is also given to hold special courts whenever occasion requires. The resolutions and minutes of the meetings of the Governing Body are all written up in the minute book and read for confirmation at the following court. The minute books are kept at the clerk's office, and are accessible to every member of the Governing Body.

A. 5.—The members of the Governing Body are elected for life, and are not liable to suspension or removal, except for just and reasonable cause. A member may, however, resign his seat if he so wishes.

A. 6.—There are no bye-laws except those referred to in Part I., Returns D. and E.

PART II.—B.

RETURN B.—Admission to Membership.

1. State the qualifications for membership of the Company, the several grades of membership of the Company, and whether women are admitted to membership.
2. State the several modes in which the freedom of the Company may be obtained, the circumstances entitling an applicant to admission under each mode respectively, and the fees payable in respect of admission under each mode respectively.
3. State whether persons exercising any particular trade are required by statute or otherwise to become free of the Company. Is there any process by which members of such trade can become members of the Company, and is there any process for compelling such persons to procure admission, and are such processes enforced, and to what extent? Is the freedom of the City of London in any and what way a condition precedent or subsequent to membership? Are there any members who are not free of the City of London? Do persons exercising any particular trade commonly become members of the Company? If so, how many members of such trade are at present members of the Company? What is the number of the members of the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the Company, who are members of the Company?
4. Are freemen liable to disfranchisement, and if so, for what reasons, and what is the mode of disfranchisement?
5. Is the livery of the Company limited or unlimited in number? What are the qualifications for election to the livery, who are the electors thereto, and how do the elections thereto take place, and what fees are payable on election? Are liverymen liable to removal from the livery, and for what reasons?

B. 1.—The qualifications for membership of the Company are apprenticeship, patrimony, and respectability.

The several grades of membership are—

Freedom.	Assistant.
Livery.	Warden.
Steward.	Master.

Apprentices are also, in a sense, members of the Company.

Women (widows of deceased freemen of the Company) may and have been admitted to membership, although at the present time there are no women members of the Company.

B. 2.—The several modes are — 1. Apprenticeship. Apprentices are admitted to the freedom on production of indentures and a certificate or personal assurance of the master that the apprentice has served faithfully according to the custom of the City of London. The fees payable by an apprentice on his admission to the freedom amount to 2*l.* 17*s.*

2. Patrimony.—A son of a freeman (born after the father's admission to the Company) can claim to be admitted by right of patrimony. The fees payable by a person joining by patrimony amount to 2*l.* 17*s.*

3. Redemption or Purchase.—All respectable applicants for admission to the Company who have not served apprenticeship or have claim to patrimony are (at the discretion of the Company) admitted to the freedom by redemption. The fees payable in this case amount to 5*l.* 5*s.*

4. Widowhood.—Widows of deceased freemen may become free of the Company. The fee is 6*s.* 10*d.*

B. 3.—Persons exercising the trade, art, or mystery of gold and silver wyre drawers in its various branches are, by Statute, required to enter into and become free of the Company.

All persons using the said trade can become free of the Company, and the Company have power to levy fines on persons using the said trade without becoming members of the Company. No process has, however, been enforced for some time past.

The freedom of the City of London is not a condition either precedent or subsequent to membership of the Company. Most persons, however, take up the freedom of the City as soon as they are admitted to the freedom of the Company. It is believed that all members of the Company are free of the City. Persons exercising the trade of the Company usually become free of the Company.

The trade is not carried on by a very large number of persons, but the majority of those who do exercise the trade are members of the Company.

B. 4.—It is not considered that a freeman of the Company can be disfranchised after once being admitted to the Company. No instance is known to have occurred of a freeman being so disfranchised.

B. 5.—The livery of the Company is limited to 100 members.

The qualifications are—

1. Freedom of the Company.
2. Admission to the City freedom.

The assistants have the right of electing members to the livery. A freeman of the Company is considered as having right to admission to the livery on production of his City freedom; provided, however, that he is not on the livery of another Company, in which case he must be translated. The livery fine, as fixed by the grant, is 15*l.* 7*s.* 6*d.*

It is not considered that liverymen are liable to removal.

PART II.—C.

RETURN C.—Number of members.

State (1) the present number of freemen, (2) the present number of the livery, (3) the present number of other members, (4) the number of admissions to the freedom by each mode respectively, and (5) the number of calls to the livery which have respectively taken place during each of the last preceding ten years.

GOLD AND SILVER WYRE DRAWERS' COMPANY—continued.

PART II.—D.

RETURN D.—(1) State the number of apprentices bound at the Company's Hall, or otherwise under the auspices of the Company, during each of the last ten years. (2) State how many have been bound during each of the last ten years to members, following the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the Company. (3) In what cases and to what extent have the fees or premiums of such apprentice been paid by the Company?

Of these one has been apprenticed to a Member following the trade.

The fees have in no case been paid by the Company.

PART II.—E.

RETURN E.—Profits and privileges.

1. State with fulness what are the advantages, pecuniary or otherwise, incident to the position of a member of the Company in each grade of membership, as (1) a freeman, (2) a liveryman, (3) Master, Warden, or otherwise a member of the Governing Body.
2. State the sums paid on an average annually for the preceding 10 years by the Company to the members according to the grades of membership mentioned above, and of what such sums consisted, whether (1) fees, and of what nature, (2) pensions, or (3) other payments, specifying the nature of the same respectively.
3. What circumstances are in practice held to constitute a claim to a pension or donation? State the number of present pensioners and donees respectively, and the amounts paid to them as such respectively. How many pensioners and donees are connected with the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the Company?
4. (1) What is the average standing of a member when he becomes a member of the Governing Body, and (2) what is the average time for which a member continues on the Governing Body?
5. Does the Company carry on any and what trade or manufacture with which its title is directly or indirectly connected? If so, what is the capital and from what sources is it derived, and how are the profits (if any) divided or dealt with?

E. 1.—The advantages incident to a position of a member of the Company are social, charitable, municipal, and Parliamentary.

There are no pecuniary advantages to members of the Company.

E. 2.—There are no fees whatever paid to any member of the Company.

E. 3.—Pensions are granted to poor widows of deceased freemen on application to the Company. The present number of such pensioners is three, and the donations paid them one guinea each per annum.

E. 4.—(1) Gentlemen when made members of the Governing Body are always of good social or business standing.

2. A member of the Governing Body usually remains on the court for life. The oldest member of the court has been an assistant for nearly forty years.

E. 5.—The Company does not itself carry on any trade.

PART III.—

RETURN A.—A list of the Officers of the Company, with a statement of the duties of each, the amount of his salary and emoluments, and whether or not he is a member of the Company.

RETURN B.—A list of the servants of the Company, with a statement of the duties of each, and of the amounts of their wages and other emoluments.

RETURN C.—A statement as to the mode in which the officers and servants of the Company are respectively appointed.

A.—There is only one officer of the Company, viz., a clerk.

The clerk's duties are—

To convene all courts, committees, and other meetings of the Company, and to prepare for and attend the same.

To keep a record of all business done at the meetings of the courts and committees, and to write up same in the minute book of the Company for confirmation at the next meeting.

To administer the declarations to members on joining the Freedom Court, &c.

To bind apprentices to the Company.

To see that the stamp duty on admission is paid at Somerset House.

To keep the cash and other books of the Company.

To convene the livery to attend the Common Hall.

To keep lists of the various members of the Company.

To attend the Registration Court annually held at Guildhall before the Revising Barrister.

To generally act as secretary and legal adviser to the Company.

The clerk receives no salary. The only emoluments he receives are fees from members on joining, &c. The amount received during the present year is about 5*l.*

The clerk is not a member of the Company.

B.—There is only one servant of the Company, viz., a beadle.

The beadle's duties are—

To attend the meetings of the court, to attend common halls, and generally to act under the instructions of the Company. He is not paid a fixed salary, but fees for services rendered.

C.—The assistants have the appointing of the officers and servants of the Company.

PART IV.—RETURN A.

List, &c.—None.

PART IV.—RETURN B.

Return B 1.—List of Moneys belonging to the Gold and Silver Wyre Drawers' Company, invested in Government or other Stocks, Shares, Funds or Securities.

Amount of Stock, &c.	Description of Stock.	Source from whence arising, e.g., Gift with Name of Donor, Bequest with Name of Testator, Sale of Lands and which, &c.	In what Name standing, e.g., Company, Chancery Division of High Court of Justice, &c.	To what account belonging, e.g., any particular Fund or Trust Account.	Net Annual Receipt.	Remarks.
£ 950	New 3 per Cent. Annuities.	The money (except 100*l.* received under the will of Mrs. Russell, as above stated) has accumulated from fees, &c. paid by persons on joining the Company, &c.	In the name of the Company.	—	£ s. d. 28 10 0	—

PART IV.—B.

B. 2.—A return of the balance of moneys in the hands of the Company unappropriated in their accounts on the 31st December in each of the last preceding ten years.

B. 3.—A return of the estimated value of the plate, pictures, furniture, and other property, at present on the premises of the Company, or in their possession elsewhere.

1877	3	8	0
1878	0	4	0

The above amounts are the cash balances in the hands of the Company at the end of the respective years, and do not include the stock and property of the Company.

B. 3.—The property of the Company (other than the actual cash balance and the 3 per cent. annuities) is not put as an asset in the accounts of the Company, but the various articles (many of which are gifts to the Company) are enumerated at the end of the accounts for inspection by the auditors. The Company are therefore unable to give an estimate of the value of such property, but it is not large, consisting of—

A loving cup.
A tankard.
A salver.
A snuff box.
Beadle's mace.
Banneret of the Company's arms, &c.

PART IV.—C.

PART IV.—F.

RETURN F.—(1.) The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them what has been the amount of the increase or decrease, from year to year, of the Company's income during the last 10 years, and whether there is reason to expect any increase or decrease during the next 10 years, together with a statement of the reasons for such expectation.

RETURN F.—(2.) The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them whether there is reason to expect any permanent increase or decrease in value in any of the estates or properties of the Company, and if so, to what extent, together with a statement for the reasons for such expectation.

F. 1.—From the year 1870 to 1878 the income of the Company did not materially increase or decrease; but since 1878 there has been a considerable increase in the income, owing to the admission of several new members. The latter part of this question the Company are unable to answer.

F. 2.—The Company has no estate or properties within the meaning of this question.

PART IV.

RETURN G.—The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them—

1. What is the system of management of the Company's estates and property?
2. In what way, and by whom, the several receipts and payments are taken and made, and under what control?
3. In what way the Company's accounts are audited?
4. Whether the Company's accounts are published, or are accessible to all or any, and which of the members of the Company?

1.—The Company has no estates and property within the meaning of this question.

2.—The ordinary receipts and payments are taken and made on behalf of the Company by the clerk, who keeps a cash and other books. The clerk acts under the control of the assistants.

3.—The accounts are audited annually by two members of the Governing body deputed to go through them in the ordinary way.

4.—The accounts are not printed and published, but are kept at the clerk's office, and are accessible to any members of the court of assistants.

PART IV.

RETURN H.—A detailed statement of the income from all sources of the Company during each of the preceding 10 years, a detailed statement of the Company's expenditure during each of such 10 years, and a detailed statement of the assets and liabilities of the Company at the end of each of the last 10 years.

H.—With reference to income, see Part IV., Return E.

PART IV.

Position in relation to Universities.

RETURN K.—Has the Company any relations with the Universities, or with any of the colleges in them? State the nature and extent of such relations. Has the Company any scholarships or exhibitions tenable at any of the Universities in its gift? Give a list of such scholarships or exhibitions, with their respective values, and the periods for which they are respectively tenable; and state how the same are awarded, whether the competition is limited to relations of members, or whether persons so related have any preference.

The Company has no relation to the Universities.

PART IV.

Church Patronage.

RETURN L.

1. Are there any ecclesiastical benefices in the gift of the Company?
2. Give a list of such benefices, stating—
   a. The county where situated.
   b. The name of the parish or place.
   c. The net annual value of such benefice so near as it can be given, together with any other particulars affecting the value present or prospective of such benefice.
3. Has the Company granted during the last 10 years any augmentations of income to the incumbents of such benefices; and, if so, to what extent, and out of what funds? Has the Company during such 10 years built or contributed, and to what extent, to the building of any, and what, churches or chapels, and where situated?

There are none in the gift of the Company.

PART IV.—M.

General and Technical Education.

Return M.—A statement as to whether the Company does anything to subsidize or encourage education, whether general or technical, and a return of the means (if any) so employed, and of the amount expended on such objects during each of the last preceding 10 years.

With a view of encouraging education in the particular industry with which the Company is connected, the Company for some time past had under its consideration the subject of a competitive exhibition of modern works manufactured in Great Britain and Ireland in the goldsmiths', silversmiths', and jewellers' trades in which gold and silver wyre is used in any form, either as personal ornaments, works of art for sideboard or table, or articles of domestic use, gold and silver wyre as used for embroidery, lace, army accoutrements, &c.

PART V.—REFORM.

The Commissioners being bound to report to Her Majesty "what measures (if any) are, in their judgment, "expedient and necessary for improving or altering the constitution of the Companies, or the appro- "priation or administration of the property or revenues thereof," respectfully invite the attention of the officers of the Companies to this part of the Commission.

The Commissioners will be very glad to receive and consider any suggestions respecting this part of the Commission with which the officers of the Companies may do the Commissioners the honour of favouring them.

The Company made no suggestion.

APPENDIX A.

This Company gave full information to the Commission of 1834. At that time its only property consisted of 775*l.* 4 per cent. Bank Annuities arising from accumulations of fines.

GUNMAKERS' COMPANY.

The Returns of the Company were delivered under protest.

PART I.—FOUNDATION AND OBJECT.

Returns A to H, both inclusive.

RETURN A.—A statement of the date, ascertained or probable, of the foundation of the company, and of the circumstances, so far as they can be discovered from its documents of foundation or archives, in which the company had its origin.

RETURN B.—A list of the charters, charters of inspeximus, and other instruments of a similar nature, whether originals or copies, which have been at any time in the possession of the company, together with an abstract of the purport of each, regard being specially had to any evidence which it may contain as to the object of the foundation of the company.

RETURN C.—A list of any trust deeds "founding, regulating, or affecting" the company, with the date of each the names of the parties thereto, and an abstract of the purport of each.

RETURN D.—A list with dates of any "decrees of Court," whether of the Courts of Common Law or of Chancery, or of any acts of the Court of Aldermen or of the Court of Common Council, "regulating or affecting" the company, with a statement of the effect of each decision.

RETURN E.—A list of any other documents, not included in the descriptions in the preceding returns, which "found, regulate or affect" the company, with dates and an abstract of the effect of each.

RETURN F.—A concise history of the company, from the time of its foundation to the present day, with special reference to the inquiry contained in the commission as to "the objects for which the company was founded," and "how far those objects are now being carried into effect."

RETURN G.—Has the company a licence in mortmain? When was such licence granted (referring to the document by description)? What is its extent, and to what extent is it now unexhausted.

RETURN H.—Is there vested in the company and how, whether by charter, statute, order of the Court of Aldermen, act of Common Council, or otherwise, any right of exercising superintendence over, or any duty or discretion to encourage in any way, any and what art, trade or business? State the nature and local limits of such control. In what manner and to what extent is such control now exercised? If such control is not now exercised, state the circumstances under which its exercise has fallen into desuetude.

A.—The Gunmakers' Company was founded in the 13th year of the reign of King Charles the 1st, and in the year 1637.

The circumstances under which the company had its origin may be gathered from the preamble of the company's charter, which recites "That divers blacksmiths and others "inexpert in the art of gunmaking had taken upon them "to make, try, and prove guns after their unskilful way, "whereby the trade was not only much damnified, but "much harm and danger through such unskilfulness had "happened to His Majesty's subjects" and for the reformation of which evils the charter of incorporation was applied for and granted.

13th Charles 1st, March 14th, 1637.

Charter of this date by Letters Patent under the Privy Seal.

Recites that for many years then past the Gunmakers in and about the city of London having lawfully practised and upheld the manufacture of making all sorts of hand-guns, as well for the special service of the Crown in supplying its stores with the ammunition, as for the frequent occasion of His Majesty's subjects in their exercises and musters both for horse and foot, both which they (the Gunmakers) were able fully to furnish: And that they having of late years attained more exquisite skill in that mystery than in former times, that at that time divers blacksmiths and others inexpert in the art of gunmaking had taken upon them to make, try, and prove guns after their unskilful way, whereby said gunmakers of London were not only much damnified in their particular trade and livelihood, but much harm and danger through such unskilfulness in that mystery had happened to sundry of His Majesty's loyal subjects, for reformation of which said evils and abuses then commonly practised in that trade, and for better upholding the said art within the kingdom, said gunmakers had humbly besought that they might be incorporated into a body politic, and be invested with such grants, privileges, and powers as might be meet for the same.

And reciting that His Majesty, having taken into consideration said humble request of the Gunmakers, and of how great use and consequence the sort of arms was then both for defence and offence upon all occasions, and being willing to continue and uphold the said art within the kingdom, and to advance it if it might be to more perfection by reducing it in the hands of skilful artists alone that might train up others in the same for the serving and supply of His Majesty and his subjects.

And reciting that as said Gunmakers were then dispersed amongst divers companies of London and elsewhere, and therefore had not the form of Government which was necessary for the well-ordering of the said trade.

And reciting that the Gunmakers in and about London, were the most expert in His Majesty's kingdom in that art; and that they might be the better enabled at all times to furnish His Majesty and His subjects with good and serviceable hand-guns for military service and otherwise, and to settle a better form of regulation and government of the said art and mistery amongst them for the good of His Majesty's service and subjects for the time to come. His Majesty willed, ordained, constituted, and granted for himself his heirs and successors that Henry Rowland, gunmaker, and 62 other persons therein named, all freemen of London, and all and singular others using or that should thereafter use the art of gunmaking within the City of London and the liberties thereof, and within four miles compass thereof, and all such others as should be accepted and admitted as was therein-after expressed, be, by virtue of now reciting charter, one body corporate and politic in deed and in name; and to have continuance for ever by the name of Master, Wardens, and Society of the Mistery of Gunmakers of the City of London, and by the same name have perpetual succession.

Power by the name of Master, Wardens, and Society of Gunmakers of the City of London,

To purchase, have, and enjoy manors, messuages, lands, tenements, and other hereditaments in fee or for terms of years or otherwise.

And also all manner of goods, chattels, &c. of every nature and quality.

To let, alien, grant, assign, and dispose of any manors, messuages, lands, tenements, &c., goods, and chattels.

And do and execute all other acts whatsoever by the name aforesaid.

And by same name plead and be impleaded and defend all actions, &c.

To have a common seal.

And to alter and make new the same from time to time.

To meet and assemble from time to time in some convenient place in London, and elect a master in manner after mentioned.

And then and there to elect two wardens as after mentioned.

That there should be ten or more assistants of the said company as after mentioned to assist said master and wardens in all matters affecting said company.

That two or more of the company be yearly chosen to assist in view and proof and removed and others elected, and such persons chosen to be sworn by master and wardens.

Power to the master, wardens, and assistants for the time being or the majority (the master and one of the wardens for the time being to be two),

To make ordinances in writing,

As well for and concerning such oaths as should be fit to be administered to the master, wardens, and assistants, or any other of said society,

As for and concerning said art, trade, and mistery of gun-making, and the well-ordering and government thereof within the said city, and within four miles thereof.

Also for the punishment of abuses in manufacture of guns or any other wrong or abuse,

Also for the support, rule, and government of the said master, wardens, and society, and their successors, and all others exercising the trade within the limits aforesaid,

And as to the order and manner in which gunmakers carry on their business for the public good, and the good of the company,

And for all other matters touching said art and mystery.

Power by such ordinances to provide and limit pains, penalties, and punishments by fines and other lawful means upon all offenders of such ordinances as the master and one of the wardens shall think necessary to be imposed for the keeping of said ordinances and orders.

To levy such fines and penalties to their own use without accounting.

All which ordinances it was thereby willed should be observed and kept under the pains and penalties to be therein contained; so as always such ordinances be reasonable and not repugnant to the law or the customs of London.

Appointment of Henry Rowland as the first master of the company; to continue in office until the first Thursday after the Feast of Saint Bartholomew, and thenceforth until another master be chosen according to the ordinances and provisions thereinafter contained, the said Henry Rowland taking his oath of office before the wardens and assistants for the due execution of his office.

Appointment of Thomas Addis and John Watson as the first wardens of the company, also to continue in office till the said first Thursday after the Feast of Saint Bartholomew next; and from thence until two others be chosen to said office according to the ordinances, the said Addis and Watson taking their oaths of office before the master and assistants.

Appointment of ten persons therein named as the first assistants of the company to continue in office during their natural lives unless removed for misbehaviour in their office, or other reasonable cause, they taking their oaths of office before the master and wardens.

Power to the master, wardens, and assistants, or greater part of them (quorum master and one warden) upon the said first Thursday after the Feast of Saint Bartholomew, yearly to elect one of the wardens or assistants for the time being, to be master for one year thence next ensuing; and before admission to take oath before the master, wardens, and assistants well and truly to execute the office of master. The master so sworn to hold office for one year thence ensuing until another master be chosen.

And at same time also to elect two other of the assistants to be wardens for one year until two others be elected. And before admission to the office said two wardens to take their oaths before the master and last wardens and the other assistants. The wardens so sworn to hold office for one year thence ensuing until two others be chosen.

In case of death or removal from office of master, or wardens, remaining master wardens and assistants to elect others or another to hold office until next election and thence until others or another be elected.

In case of death or removal from office of any assistant (such assistants to be subject to removal by the majority of master wardens and assistants (quorum, master and one warden) for evil government or misbehaviour or other just cause), the master wardens and assistants to choose another assistant in the place of such assistant so dying or removed as aforesaid.

And reciting that great deceits and abuses were frequently practised and committed by divers inexpert persons using the art and mystery of gunmaking within the City of London and liberties and ten miles thereof who for the most part made the said guns slightly and deceitfully to the great endangering and prejudice of His Majesty's subjects, and that hand guns, dags, and pistols, and parts thereof unartificially and deceitfully made and wrought in foreign and other parts, and imported into said City of London and places adjacent and were then altered and sold to the danger of His Majesty's subjects. To prevent such dangers and abuses—

It was ordained and granted:—

That said master, wardens, and society, or any two or more of them for ever by themselves or deputies should have power,

To search, view, gauge, proof, trial and marking of all manner of hand guns whatsoever great and small dags and pistols, and all and every part and parcel of them as well those made in London, or the suburbs, or within ten miles thereof. And all such others as should from foreign parts, or otherwise, be brought thither to be sold for military service or other employment in any of His Majesty's dominions or foreign parts.

Such proof or trial to be with good and sufficient gunpowder and weight of bullet of lead sizeable to every several gun according to the bore and otherwise as therein mentioned.

All persons using, making or selling guns, dags, pistols, barrels, locks, or other parts thereof at their own costs to bring same to the common hall or other meet place of said society to be duly viewed, tried, stamped, and marked before the same be sold and delivered.

All such guns to be brought within 10 days after making and finishing thereof, and imported guns within 10 days from the arrival thereof within London or 10 miles thereof.

All makers of guns and barrels, dags and pistols, and all merchants and others importing same ordered not to sell any of such guns, barrels, &c., before same viewed, proved, and marked upon pain of loss and forfeiture thereof, and the same being seized by the said master, wardens, and society. And upon such penalties and forfeitures as by the laws and statutes might be inflicted for contempt.

Power to the master, wardens, and society, or any two or more of them, and their deputies, &c., with the assistance of a constable or other lawful officer to enter any house, shop, warehouse, ship, vessel, &c., or any other place as well within as without aforesaid limits to search for all such imported guns, &c., or such as should be made within London or 10 miles thereof, and not duly proved or brought to proof or marked within the space of 10 days and cause same to be carried to their common hall or such place aforesaid, and view, prove, and mark same at the owner's expense.

Also to search for all such guns, &c., as should be put up for sale and delivered before being duly proved and marked as aforesaid. And all such to seize and carry away as forfeited to His Majesty.

All persons using the art and practice of gunmaking within the limits aforesaid to be subject and obedient to all such lawful and reasonable orders and ordinances as should be made and set down by the said master, wardens, and assistants for the time being under the pains and penalties therein to be mentioned and such further penalties as by law ordained.

All persons admitted to the freedom to take oaths before master, &c., for their good demeanour and performance of the orders and ordinances of said society, and power given to master, &c., to administer oaths.

All gunmakers free of said society or otherwise, foreigners within the limits aforesaid, who shall take apprentices to bind said apprentices to some member or freeman of the said society.

The said society and their successors to have stamps with the letters GP crowned to mark therewith all hand-guns, dags, and pistols, or parts thereof, when viewed, and proved, and break up and destroy all improperly made. And no persons to counterfeit such stamps.

That no persons exercise the art of gunmaking but those who have served seven years' apprenticeship to said art, and presented their proof-piece to said master and wardens, and approved by them.

Power to master, wardens, and society, and their successors to purchase and take manors, messuages, lands, tenements, &c., and all other hereditaments within England, or elsewhere, within the Crown dominions, so as the same do not exceed in the whole the clear yearly value of 40*l.* by the year.

And to grant, bequeath, or alien the same within same limit as to yearly value.

These Letters Patent to be enrolled within the common of the City of London.

Power to admit freemen into said society.

Saving the rights of the company of Blacksmiths to bind apprentices and their rights of search and trial under their charter.

The sum of 13*s.* 4*d.* to be paid yearly into the exchequer.

The master, wardens, and society to be subject to the orders of the Privy Council and council of war touching or concerning all manner of hand guns both for horse and foot.

By writ of Privy Seal,
Wolseley.

C.—There are not and never have been any trust deeds founding, regulating, or affecting the Gunmakers' Company.

D.—April 20th, 1857. A judgment of this date of the Court of Common Pleas delivered by the Judges sitting in Banco, by which Judgment the rights of the Gunmakers' Company to affix their own proof marks, both for provisional and definitive proof, were upheld as distinct and apart from the rights of the Birmingham Proof House.

E.—The ordinances of the company founded upon the company's charter, and ratified by then Lord Keeper of the Great Seal and the Chief Justices of the Courts of King's Bench and Common Pleas on the 13th day of July 1670, in the 22nd year of the reign of King Charles the Second.

An abstract of these ordinances is sent herewith. The original ordinances are in the company's possession.

The Gun Barrel Proof Act of 1868 (31 and 32 Vict. c. 113), which repealed several previous Acts of Parliament relating to this company. By this Act, which recognizes the company's charter as still in force, powers are conferred on the Gunmakers' Company and on the guardians of the proof house at Birmingham for enforcing, supervising and regulating the proving and marking of all guns, pistols, and small arms, the right of search and seizure of unproved arms, the prosecution of offenders, and the enforcing the penalties by fine and imprisonment for offences against the Act.

The company is affected by and brought within the provisions of the Explosives Act, 38 Vict. c. 17, so far as regards their proof house and premises in Whitechapel and the proof business carried on there.

Abstract of the Ordinances of the Company of Gunmakers, Ratified by the Judges 13th July 1670, 22nd Charles II.

Recites the Act of Parliament of 25th of January in the 19th year of Henry VII.,

That no master, wardens, or fellowship of crafts or misteries should make any Acts or ordinances without their being first examined, approved, and admitted by the Chancellor and judges.

That accordingly the Company of Gunmakers, on the 25th of September in the 21st year of King Charles II., presented their petition with a book containing divers ordinances for their rule and government for approval.

Recites the granting of Charter.

1. Ordains that the company may have a livery. Every liveryman chosen to take proper oath on pain of forfeiting 6*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* to the master and wardens, and that if any person elected by master and wardens to the livery shall refuse to take the livery, or within three months after notice, prepare himself with habit and livery and garments, such person to forfeit 20*s.* and so forward for every month after said three months, the sum of 10*s.* monthly, until he take up his livery.

2. That the first Thursday of every month be the usual and ordinary Court days for master, wardens, and assistants to assemble, upon every such day a court of assistants to be held at the Hall. If occasion require, court to meet oftener. Also that there should be an assembly or general court for the livery and general society of the said company to be held whenever master and wardens should summon and appoint the same, and that there be yearly four general courts of the whole society which should be called quarter courts, to be held yearly upon the first Thursday after each of the following quarter days, vizt., Michaelmas, Christmas, Lady Day, and Midsummer Days.

All the said courts to be held at their hall, called Gunmakers' Hall.

3. That on every quarter court day every person of the said society and every person carrying on the trade of gunmaking to pay to the master and wardens the sum of sixpence, and every journeyman gunmaker the sum of threepence, and do all such other duties to the company as ought to be done, subject to a forfeit of 10*s.*

4. That every person of said society carrying on the business of gunmaking, making default of appearance at the courts after summons and without lawful excuse, to forfeit and pay as follows:— The master and wardens 2*s.* 6*d.*, assistants 1*s.*, and departing before court ended 2*s.* 6*d.* And every other person under the government of said society 6*d.*, and departing from the court without licence 1*s.*, and that if the master or wardens shall neglect to assemble in common hall on the first Thursday after the Feast of Saint Bartholomew for election of officers, unless lawful cause shown upon oath before a magistrate, to forfeit as follows:—the master 40*s.*, wardens 20*s.*, and assistants 5*s.* apiece, or if either of them come without gown or decently habited 12 pence for either master or wardens, assistants or livery. And any person refusing to pay his quarterage at any of the quarter days, 10*s.* for every default unless dispensed with by a court of assistants.

5. That before any election of new master, wardens, and other officers, three other of the assistants to take bonds of said master and wardens so chosen. And no master or warden to be fully elected as such until he has entered in bond of the penalty of 100*l.* to said three assistants with two sureties, such bond to be in the form therein set forth; and after bond satisfied same to be cancelled. Clerk to have 2*s.* 6*d.* for making such bond and the beadle 6*d.*

6. That any master or warden refusing to take upon himself the office to forfeit 6*l.*, and another to be chosen in his place. The clerk to have 2*s.* 6*d.* and the beadle 6*d.* for every master and warden elected and sworn.

7. That at the quarter court after the Feast of Saint John the Baptist in every year two of the assistants or of the livery to be appointed stewards for the assistants' dinner on the first Thursday after the Feast of Saint Bartholomew, at the cost of the stewards, who are to receive for every person who shall come the sum of 2*s.* 6*d.* In default of such person appointed refusing to perform the service to forfeit the sum of 5*l.* and be liable to dismissal from the livery. None to be appointed assistant until he shall have served the office of steward or paid the fine.

8. That if any person within the City of London or liberties or four miles thereof shall exercise the art of making guns, pistols, &c., locks or barrels thereof, not having served seven years as an apprentice and sworn a freeman of said Company of Gunmakers, he shall forfeit for every month he shall so exercise such art the sum of 20*s.* And any member of the company employing any such person to forfeit for every time he shall so offend the sum of 20*s.*

9. That if any person, whether of the said company or not, shall enter into any contract for making hand guns or any parts thereof, whether for His Majesty's service or for any other persons whatsoever above the number of 150, or divide any contract for that number with intent to defraud, and shall not before such contract give notice thereof to the master and wardens and permit them after such contract to distribute said guns, &c., and appoint skilful artists of said company to make the same within the time agreed for the support of said art and artists, said master and wardens and their deputies may have the view, search, and trial thereof for prevention of such abuses. And any person offending contrary thereto to forfeit for every time 20*l.*

10. That every apprentice who has served his time and has been admitted to the freedom of said company shall serve his master or mistress two years as a journeyman or covenant servant. And if they have no employment for him then he shall serve some other of same company, And on production of a proof-piece to master and wardens at the end of the two years he shall thenceforth be at liberty to set up shop and exercise the art as a master of the same, and shall pay to the company 13*s.* 4*d.*, the clerk 2*s.* 6*d.*, and the beadle 1*s.* And if any such person shall before the expiration of the said two years and allowance of proof-piece set up shop and exercise such art he shall forfeit and pay 6*s.* 8*d.* for every month.

11. That every person using said trade, whether free of this company or of any other, that has taken an apprentice shall, after contract so to do, and before the binding takes place, give notice thereof to the clerk of the company and present such intended apprentice at common hall to said master and wardens and enter the apprentice's name and master to whom apprentice shall be bound with the clerk and also cause the apprentice to be bound to some sworn member of the company, being a freeman thereof, and of said City of London, to the intent that such apprentice may become free of the said City of the same company only. If any person shall have or keep any apprentice otherwise than as aforesaid he shall forfeit for every such apprentice 20*l.*

12. That every person who has served the office of master, or either wardenship, may have two apprentices at one time, and no more (except within one year of expiration of any apprentice's indentures he may have one more apprentice). That any assistant may have one apprentice until the latter has served half his time, when such assistant may take one other apprentice. Every freeman may have one apprentice, and no more, and one other within one year of expiration of apprenticeship of any apprentice. Penalty for any of the above doing contrary hereto, 20 marks.

13. That every person carrying on the trade of gun-making, who shall employ any one in his business, shall present such person employed, and give his name and birthplace, as well also of the employer, into the court of assistants of said company, and give particulars of the retainer, so as to have the name of such person employed entered in the company's books, for which the clerk to have 1*s.* In default of so doing, penalty five marks for every offence.

14. That if any person, either foreign or free, shall make any hand guns, pistols, and locks, and barrels thereof, unless he has first served seven years' apprenticeship to some professed master or workman of the trade, and be approved of by the court of assistants of said company, he shall forfeit for every offence 5*l.*

15. That if any person shall go about from place to place to hawk or offer for sale any manner of hand guns or parts thereof he shall forfeit for every time he shall so offend five marks.

16. That if any of the assistants or livery or others of said company shall be, by the master and wardens, appointed to any reasonable service or attendance in livery by horse or foot to attend His Majesty on his repairing to London shall fail in so doing he shall forfeit the sum of 20*s.* for every such default (unless reasonable cause shown).

17. That if request made to the master and wardens for the livery to accompany to the grave, within the circuit limited by the charter, the corpse of any deceased liveryman, or his wife, every of the livery, upon warning by the master and wardens, shall attend with his livery at the time and place appointed, or in default shall forfeit 10*s.*

18. That if for any reasonable purpose connected with the common good of the company any taxation or assessments be levied by the master, wardens, and assistants upon any particular members of the company, then same in all things to be obeyed and performed according to the rules laid down for collecting same. And if any person, a member of the company, shall refuse payment of such tax or assessment or levy he shall forfeit for every default 5*l.*

19. That if any of the said company shall at any time revile, or give any blows, or use unseemly speech, to the master, wardens, or assistants or other person of the said company, whereby the King's peace should be broken and complaint and proof thereof made to a court of assistants, the party offending to obey and perform such reasonable order and sentence as by said court shall be set down concerning same. And if the offender shall refuse to abide thereby he shall forfeit 40*s.* for every time he shall offend.

20. That if any journeyman or hired servant offend in any of the kinds or degrees aforesaid, and the same be proved against him at a court of assistants as aforesaid, he shall submit unto and satisfy such pecuniary penalty as should be imposed by said court not exceeding 6*s.* 8*d.* for every offence.

21. That from time to time searches be made by the master and wardens, together with four assistants or two sworn deputies, in such places within the aforesaid circuit, when suspicion had or guns harboured or lodged. And if any maker, seller, or importer should oppose or hinder same parties, penalty of 5*l.* to be incurred by him for every time he shall offend. Upon all such searches any master, workman, or shopkeeper using the said art to pay the company 4*d.* per year. And if any member of the company duly summoned shall omit or refuse to attend such search he shall forfeit for every default 10*s.* And the maker of any improved guns not duly marked and stamped to forfeit for every gun or barrel 10*s.*

22. That every person who shall sell or import into London, or within 10 miles thereof any guns, barrels, pistols, &c., and shall not within 10 days after making or importing thereof, or be put up for sale or brought for proof, every maker, seller, or importer thereof to forfeit for every such gun, pistol, barrel, &c. 5*s.*, and pay to the company for proof thereof 10*d.* for every blunderbuss and musquetoon, 8*d.* for every gun and parts thereof and 6*d.* for every pistol and dagg. And every person setting up or finishing any manner of gun or barrel, pistol, &c. before proof and marking thereof, to forfeit 10*s.* for every such gun or barrel, pistol, &c.

23. That if any person within the aforesaid limits shall counterfeit the stamp and mark of the company, and mark any gun or barrel or pistol, &c., or parts thereof, and the finisher or first vendor of any such with a counterfeit stamp and mark, he shall forfeit and lose for every gun or barrel the sum of 6*l.*, and that every person making, setting up, and finishing of hand guns, daggs, or pistols within the limits aforesaid before so doing he shall bring or cause the same and the several parts thereof to be brought to the proof-house and marked with the company's mark; and upon proof thereof, and before taking same away, there shall be paid to the company for the proving thereof as follows:—for every harcubuss, plantierbuss, or blunderbuss, and musquetoon, and parts thereof, 10*d.*; for every musquet, carbine, and fowling-piece, and other gun, and parts thereof, 8*d.*; and for every dagg, pistol, and parts thereof, 6*d.* And if any person shall set up and finish any of such arms before proving same he shall forfeit for every gun or barrel 10*s.*

24. That any person filing or causing to be filed down any gun barrel, otherwise than with a smooth file for polishing, shall forfeit the sum of 10*s.* for every such gun, and the gun to be proved anew.

25. That every maker or finisher of any guns, locks, or barrels thereof, intended for sale in London or within four miles thereof, shall have his own private mark placed thereon before the same respectively are proved. Such stamp to be first approved by the company and an impression thereof made and entered on their copper plate at the proof-house, and on such entry the clerk to have 1*s.*, the beadle 6*d.*, and the proof-master 4*d.* And the maker of every gun or pistol which shall be finished for sale without such mark, to forfeit 1*s.*

26. That every person admitted to the freedom shall pay to the company 13*s.* 4*d.*, the clerk 2*s.* 6*d.*, and the beadle 1*s.* 6*d.* And every person binding an apprentice shall upon such binding pay to the company 3*s.* 6*d.*, to the clerk 2*s.* 6*d.*, and to the beadle 6*d.* That on taking up the livery, to the company 5*l.*, to the clerk 5*s.*, to the beadle 5*s.* Every person on presentment of proof-piece to pay to the company 6*s.* 8*d.*, the clerk 1*s.*, the beadle 6*d.* Every person, on presentment of his private mark, to pay to the company 2*s.* 6*d.*, to the clerk 1*s.*, the proof master 6*d.*, and the beadle 4*d.* Upon election to Court of Assistants, to the company 20 nobles, the clerk 4*s.*, beadle 2*s.* That every newly elected master shall pay to the new wardens the sum of 2*l.* 10*s.*, to be expended in a dinner for the master wardens and assistants, and the master and wardens each to pay the clerk for their oath and entrance 2*s.*, and the beadle 1*s.*

27. That all fines recovered be employed in the relief of the poor of the company. And power to enforce payment of same by action at law, &c.

28. That every person who shall be elected master warden or assistant liveryman, or freeman, clerk, beadle, and proof master to take the oath of allegiance and supremacy of His Majesty, his heirs and assigns, and the oaths following, viz.:

29. Form of oath for master and wardens.

30. Form of oath to be taken by every assistant.

31. The like by liverymen.

32. The like by proof master and assistants in view and proof.

33. Form of oath to be taken by auditors.

34. The like by the clerk.

35. The like by the beadle.

36. The like by a freeman.

37. The master and wardens empowered to appoint deputies respectively who shall respectively take oath of master and wardens.

Ratified and approved,

July 13th, 1670.

F.—The Gunmakers' Company, as one of the Livery Companies of London, has from the year of its foundation (1637) to the present time continued practically to justify its incorporation, inasmuch as the reasons assigned by its Charter for its being granted, namely, the protection of the public against "accidents which arose from the improper "manufacture of firearms," have since that period continued and at the present time exist in as strong force as ever.

In the preamble to the Charter granted to the Gunmakers' Company on the before mentioned year, 1637, it is stated amongst other things, "that for many years "previously to that period the Gunmakers in and about "our City of London having lawfully upheld the manu- "facture of all sorts of hand guns, and having of late "years attained more exquisite skill in that mystery than "in former times, that now divers persons inexpert in the "art of gunmaking had taken upon them to make, try, "and prove guns after their unskilful way, whereby the "said gunmakers are not only much damnified in their "particular trade and livelihood, but much harm and "danger through such unskilfulness in that mystery hath "happened to sundry of our loyal subjects, for reformation "of which evils and abuses then commonly practised in "that trade and for the better upholding of such art in "the Kingdom, and that they might be better able at "times to furnish His Majesty's subjects with good and "serviceable guns," certain gunmakers therein named and all such others as should be accepted and admitted in such manner as was thereinafter expressed should for ever thereafter be one body corporate and should have continuance for ever by the name of "the Master, Wardens, "and Society of the Mystery of Gunmakers in the City of "London."

Certain ordinances under the powers and provisions contained in their Charter were subsequently made by the Gunmakers' Company, which ordinances were duly ratified and confirmed by the then Lord Keeper of the Great Seal and the Chief Justices of the Courts of King's Bench and Common Pleas on the 13th of July in the 22nd year of King Charles II.

Under the Charter the ruling body of the company consists of the master, upper warden, renter warden, and court of assistants, also two assistants in view and proof. The officers of the company are the clerk, proof master, and beadle.

From the earliest period after the granting of the Charter the company has had a proving house for proving gun, pistol, and other barrels, which stood originally on ground known as Goodman's Fields, and now situate on the south side of the Commercial Road, Whitechapel. In these premises the business of viewing, proving, and marking barrels of small arms has ever since been and is now carried on. The general business of the company being also transacted by the master, wardens, and assistants, in buildings adjoining the proof house and in one of which the proof master has his residence.

Under the powers and authorities contained in the Charter power is given to the company "to search, view, "gauge, proof trial, and make all guns and barrels, great "and small daggs and pistols, as well those which should "be made in London or the suburbs, or within 10 miles "thereof, as also all others as should be imported from "foreign parts to be sold or put to sale in any of our "dominions or foreign plantations or to be there used for "recreation before the same hand guns or any of them "shall be sold and delivered."

Power is also given by the Charter and Ordinances to the master, wardens, and assistants, or their deputies, with the assistance of a constable to enter into any house, shop, ship or vessel, or any other place, upon just suspicion, and search for all such guns, &c., within the City of London, and 10 miles thereof, as had not been duly proved or brought to be proved, within 10 days after the making thereof, and compel the same to be viewed and proved at the charge of the owners, and to seize and carry away the same for that purpose.

The powers vested in the company by their charter for the viewing, proving, and marking of all guns, pistols, and barrels were always vigorously exercised, but the growing tendency of the laws in favour of the liberty of the subject interfered to some extent with the powers of search; those powers have, however, since been renewed by Acts of Parliament under certain modifications.

For some years previous to the year 1813 complaints of the irregular manufacture of guns and of accidents happening from the bursting of fire-arms became very frequent, and it became apparent that the powers of the company required to be increased by legislative enactment.

About that time also the Town of Birmingham had risen into consideration from the great quantities of fire-arms manufactured there, which made it expedient to establish a proof house under proper superintendence in or near that town, and several Acts of Parliament were passed in the Reign of George III., which at the same time that they specially confirmed and recognised the charter of the Gunmakers' Company, greatly strengthened and increased the powers of the company, at the same time conferring on the guardians of the proof house, Birmingham, the right of proving barrels at their proof house at Birmingham. These Acts of Parliament provided also for the prosecution of offenders for forging or counterfeiting the companies' marks or infringing the provisions of the Acts referred to.

As time, however, progressed, the inapplicability of the then existing law to modern improvements in small arms became manifest, and in the year 1855 the Gunmakers' Company of London and the Birmingham Company concurred in an application to Parliament, which resulted in the passing of the "Gun Barrel Act, 1855" by which the then existing Acts were repealed. This Act owing to further changes in the manufacture of small arms, especially the introduction of breech-loading arms and revolver pistols also became inadequate for dealing with the new description of arms, and a fresh Act of Parliament was in the year 1868 obtained at the instance of the two companies. This new Act, passed in the 31 and 32 years of Queen Victoria and known as "The Gun Barrel Act, 1868,"* especially saves the rights of the Gunmakers' Company as secured to them by their charter, but confers on that company and the guardians of the Birmingham proof house enlarged powers for enforcing the proof of barrels of all small arms, the control over imported arms, the right of search and seizure of improved arms, and the prosecution of offenders against the Act especially forgers of the proof marks, for the recovery of penalties for selling improved arms and other offences as set out in the Act in question.

The Gunmakers' Company are fully and constantly employed in carrying out the provisions and powers contained in their charter and the Gun Barrel Proof Act of 1868, with the object of rendering the proof of barrels of guns, pistols, and all small arms as efficient as possible, and so affording to the public all possible protection against the sale of unsound fire-arms, and the high estimation in which the proof marks of this company are held by all gun manufacturers and the public, not only in this country but in the colonies and elsewhere abroad, can be pointed to as satisfactory evidence that the company fulfils the objects and intentions of its foundation and incorporation.

G.—The Gunmakers' Company has no licence in mortmain. Sic.—Vide provision in charter for holding land to the value of £40.

H.—There is vested in the company by its charter and by the Gun Barrel Act of 1868, a right of exercising superintendence over the trade or business of gunmaking, in so far as seeing to the soundness of the barrels used in making up guns, pistols, and small arms of every description, and requiring that all such barrels and small arms be brought to the company's proof house to be proved and marked with the company's proof marks.

* The company sent a copy of this Act with their returns.

I.—CHARITIES.

RETURN I.—A list of the charities, eleemosynary, educational, or otherwise, which are under the management of the company, stating in each case the name of the founder, the date and nature of the benefaction, its original and its present value, and the purposes to which the funds have been applied for each of the last preceding ten years.

There are not, and never have been, any charities, eleemosynary, educational, or otherwise, under the management of this company, and no funds either by bequest, endowment, or otherwise, ever devolved on this company for any of those purposes, or for any other purpose.

It may, however, be stated, that in addition to sums which are given in answer to special applications continually being made for charitable purposes, the company distributes at Christmas in every year a considerable sum amongst different charitable institutions in the metropolis.

PART II.—A.

Constitution and Privileges of Membership.

Return A.—Governing Body.

1. State the present constitution of the governing body of the company, whether such constitution is according to the charter, and if not, in what respects such constitution varies therefrom, and when and how such alteration was made.

2. State the qualifications for membership of the governing body of the company, the time and periods of election, and the qualifications of the voters at elections to the governing body.

3. State the functions of the governing body, and of the different members of the same respectively, and whether the members of the governing body pay any, and what fees or fines on admission thereto, and whether they are paid any, and what salaries or amounts in respect of their services respectively.

4. State the nature of the business which comes before the governing body of the company, the method adopted in transacting it, the times at which the governing body meets for business purposes, the way in which the opinions of the members are taken, and whether the resolutions and decisions of the governing body are published, or are otherwise accessible to any or all, and which of the members of the Company.

5. State whether the members of the governing body are liable to suspension, or removal, on any, and what grounds, and by what method such suspension or removal is effected.

6. Has the company any byelaws sanctioned by the Courts of Law or Chancery, or by the Courts of Aldermen or of Common Council, or otherwise. State the effect of such byelaws.

A.—1. The present constitution of the governing body of the company consists of the master, the upper warden, the renter warden, and court of assistants elected according to the charter.

A.—2. The qualification is the being a freeman and and liveryman of the company.

Elections take place at quarterly courts, and are by ballot, except where there is but one candidate, and then by show of hands.

The qualifications of the voters are the being members of the governing body.

A.—3. The functions of the governing body and of the different members of the same are as follows:—

The master presides at all courts and committees of the company, and, in conjunction with the upper and renter warden and the assistants, disposes of all matters brought before the courts as well as superintends the business carried on at the proof house, and the general business of the company.

The renter warden under the authority of the court, collects all proof accounts, and other moneys due to the company, and pays upon the order of the master and court of assistants all the accounts for ammunition and other supplies at the proof house, as well as all other sums due from the company.

Each member of the governing body pays 26*l.* 15*s.* in fees on admission to the court of assistants.

No salaries are paid to the members of the governing body, but there are certain fees paid to them for attendances of several hours' duration at the various courts held during the year for the transaction of the business of the proof house, which fees vary in amount, but may be said to average about 35*l.* a year each.

A.—4. The business which comes before the governing body is as follows:—

They debate upon and consider all matters connected with the business of proving barrels as carried on at the proof house as well as giving orders and directions, preparing notices, and making rules for the transaction and regulation of such business. They also furnish information and directions to the trade respecting the proof. The consideration of all cases of importation of foreign arms, the seizure of unproved arms, and the prosecution of offenders against the laws relating thereto. The registration of foreign proof marks. The regulation of the supplies of ammunition for proving purposes and proper storage of same. The settling of the finance business of the company as relates to the carrying on of the proof business and general purposes. The binding of apprentices, consideration of applications for the freedom and livery, and election of assistants. The examination of bills and accounts, consideration of applications for pensions, gratuities, and charity applications, and other miscellaneous matters.

The method adopted in transacting business is for the master wardens and assistants to meet at the proof house on a summons previously served by the beadle of the company to attend a court or committee of the company. The master and wardens are also at other times frequently consulted by the proof master and the clerk of the company on matters relating to business of the company, especially that connected with the proof house in cases which are not considered of sufficient importance to warrant the summoning of a court or committee.

The opinions of the members at the courts are taken by a show of hands.

The resolutions and decisions of the governing body are not published, but are accessible to the members of the company.

A.—5. The master and wardens are under the terms of the charter removable "for just and reasonable cause," and the assistants for evil government or misbehaviour, or for any other just or reasonable cause.

These removals are effected by a majority of the court and under the terms of the charter. The master and one of the wardens must be present on the occasion of such removal.

A.—6. The company have byelaws and ordinances sanctioned by the Courts of Law.

These are referred to in the reply to Return E. Part I., and an abstract of the byelaws and ordinances accompanies that reply.

PART II.—B.

Return B.—Admission to Membership.

1. State the qualifications for membership of the company, the several grades of membership of the company, and whether women are admitted to membership.

2. State the several modes in which the freedom of the company may be obtained, the circumstances entitling an applicant to admission under each mode respectively, and the fees payable in respect of admission under each mode respectively.

3. State whether persons exercising any particular trade are required by statute or otherwise to become free of the company. Is there any process by which members of such trade can become members of the company, and is there any process for compelling such persons to procure admission, and are such processes enforced, and to what extent? Is the freedom of the City of London in any and what way a condition precedent or subsequent to membership? Are there any members who are not free of the City of London? Do persons exercising any particular trade commonly become members of the company? If so, how many members of such trade are at present members of the company? What is the number of the members of the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the company, who are members of the company?

4. Are freemen liable to disfranchisement, and if so, for what reasons, and what is the mode of disfranchisement.

5. Is the livery of the company limited or unlimited in number? What are the qualifications for election to the livery, who are the electors thereto, and how do the elections thereto take place, and what fees are payable on election? Are liverymen liable to removal from the livery, and for what reasons?

B. 1.—Practically all applicants are qualified for admission as members of the company who are considered respectable, in deciding which the court would exercise a discretion.

The grades of membership are freemen and liverymen.

There are no female members of the company at the present time, and no record of a female having been admitted.

B. 2.—The several modes by which the freedom of the company may be obtained are, patrimony, servitude, and redemption.

Admission by patrimony is granted as of right to the children of all freemen, born subsequent to the period when the parents became free.

Admission by servitude is granted to all persons who have been regularly bound apprentice to a freeman of the company, and have served their apprenticeship term of seven years.

Admission by redemption is granted to such persons as are proposed and seconded by members of the court, and approved by a majority, but freedom by redemption is not granted as of right, and a fine of 5*l.* is charged in such cases in addition to the usual fees.

The fees payable in respect of admission to the freedom under each mode respectively are as follows:—

——	To the Company.	Clerk.	Beadle.
By patrimony and servitude.	2*l.* 4*s.* 8*d.* (including 20*s.* stamp duty.)	15 0	2 6
By redemption - -	4*l.* 4*s.* 8*d.* (including 3*l.* stamp duty.)	15 0	2 6

B. 3.—No persons exercising a particular trade are required to become free of the company.

There is no process for compelling such persons to procure admission, nor any by which they are enabled themselves to procure admission (except as stated in preceding answer No. 2). No attempt is made to enforce any process for such purposes.

The freedom of the City of London is not made a condition either precedent or subsequent of membership of the company. All the liverymen of the company are free of the City of London, and it is believed a majority of the freemen who are not of the livery are free of the City of London, but the exact proportion is not known, as the company do not keep any record of the fact.

Gunmakers frequently become members of the company. The company is styled "The Gunmakers Company," and there are at the present time about 20 members of the trade who are liverymen of the company. A considerable proportion of the freemen are also members of the trade, but the number is uncertain, as the latter do not, except in special instances, keep the company informed of their addresses.

B. 4.—Freemen are not liable to disfranchisement.

B. 5.—The livery is limited by grant from the Court of Aldermen to one hundred.

All freemen of the company are eligible to become liverymen.

Liverymen are elected by the master, wardens, and assistants assembled in court.

The election is by show of hands, the applicant for the livery having been first proposed and seconded by a member of the court.

The fine and fees payable on election to the livery are—

Fine to the company - - -	15 0 0
Fee to the clerk - - -	0 10 0
Ditto to the beadle - -	0 5 0

Liverymen are not liable to removal from the livery.

PART II.—C.

RETURN C.—Number of members.

State (1) the present number of freemen, (2) the present number of the livery, (3) the present number of other members, (4) the number of admissions to the freedom by each mode respectively, and (5) the number of calls to the livery which have respectively taken place during each of the last preceding 10 years.

C. 1.—The number of freemen now on the books of the company is 58, but it is possible some of these may not be living, although no communication of their deaths has been made to the company.

C. 2.—There are 32 liverymen.

C. 3.—There are no other members of the company.

C. 4.—Of the 58 freemen, 18 were admitted by servitude, 21 by patrimony, 18 by redemption, and one by presentation.

C. 5.—The admissions to the livery during the last 10 years have been as follows:—

1871	- 1	1876	- 2
1872	- 0	1877	- 2
1873	- 0	1878	- 0
1874	- 3	1879	- 1

PART II.—D.

RETURN D.—(1) State the number of apprentices bound at the Company's Hall, or otherwise under the auspices of the company during each of the last 10 years. (2) State how many have been bound during each of the last 10 years to members following the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the company. (3) In what cases and to what extent have the fees or premiums of such apprentice been paid by the company?

D. 1.—One apprentice only has been bound during the last 10 years, viz., in the year 1877.

D. 2.—This apprentice was not bound to a member following the trade of a gunmaker.

D. 3.—No case has occurred within the last 10 years of the company paying the fees or premium of an apprentice.

PART II.—E.

RETURN E.—Profits and Privileges.

1. State, with fullness, what are the advantages, pecuniary or otherwise, incident to the position of a member of the company in each grade of membership, as (1) a freemen, (2) a liveryman, (3) master, warden, or otherwise a member of the governing body.
2. State the sums paid on an average annually for the preceding 10 years by the company to the members according to the grades of membership mentioned above, and of what such sums consisted, whether (1) fees, and of what nature, (2) pensions, or (3) other payments, specifying the nature of the same respectively.
3. What circumstances are in practice held to constitute a claim to a pension or donation? State the number of present pensioners and donees respectively, and the amounts paid to them as such respectively. How many pensioners and donees are connected with the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the company?
4. (1) What is the average standing of a member when he becomes a member of the governing body, and (2) what is the average time for which a member continues on the governing body?
5. Does the company carry on any and what trade or manufacture with which its title is directly or indirectly connected? If so, what is the capital and from what sources is it derived, and how are the profits (if any) divided or dealt with?

E. 1.—With the exception after mentioned, there are no advantages, pecuniary or otherwise, incident to the position of a member of the company in either of the grades mentioned, until he becomes a member of the court of assistants, when he receives fees for attending the courts and committees of the company, except that any distressed freeman or liveryman, or member of the governing body, or the widows or relatives of any of them are upon application to the court of assistants relieved in the shape of pension or gratuity, according to the circumstances of the case.

E. 2.—The sums paid on an average annually for the preceding 10 years to the members according to the grades of membership, are as follows:—

Average of Sums paid annually for preceding 10 Years.	Fees.	Pensions.	Gratuities.
Freemen	—	63 0 0	24 0 0
Liverymen	—	108 0 0	—
Master, wardens, and court of assistants.	387 0 0	—	—

E. 3.—Poverty, sickness, or other need.

The present number of regular pensioners is 7.

The pensioners receive annually 84*l.* by quarterly payments.

The pensioners are all females and widows or other relatives of deceased gunmakers.

The present number of donees is 7, of whom 6 are gunmakers or relatives of gunmakers.

The amounts paid to them annually, 40*l.*

E. 4.—1. A member of the court of assistants for an average period of not less than 10 years.

2. For life.

E. 5.—The company carries on the trade of proving small arms under charter and by statute.

The working capital is raised out of the profits of the business and the income of the company's invested funds.

The capital is comprised in the value of the proof house and premises, plant, and such part of the company's income as is necessary in each year to pay all outgoings connected with the business.

There is no separate capital account kept.

The profits of the proof business for the last 10 years, are as follows:—

		£ s. d.
1.	1870	1,117 10 3
2.	1871	859 3 7
3.	1872	871 9 2
4.	1873	1,082 11 5
5.	1874	754 14 1
6.	1875	536 12 6
7.	1876	394 19 5
8.	1877	666 7 9
9.	1878	477 9 11
10.	1879	675 13 4
11.	1880	606 10 4

These profits have been carried into the general account of the company's receipts and payments made up for those years respectively.

PART III.—OFFICERS AND SERVANTS.

RETURN A.—A list of the officers of the company, with a statement of the duties of each, the amount of his salary and emoluments, and whether or not he is a member of the company.

RETURN B.—A list of the servants of the company, with a statement of the duties of each, and of the amounts of their wages and other emoluments.

RETURN C.—A statement as to the mode in which the officers and servants of the company are respectively appointed.

A.—The officers of the company are as follows:—
Two assistants in view and proof.
The clerk.
The proof master, and
The beadle.

The duties of the assistants in view and proof are, when required, to aid and assist the proof master in viewing and proving the barrels of small arms sent to the proof house for proof.

The clerk's duties are to attend all meetings of the court and committees of the company, and take minutes of the proceedings thereat. To register the names of all freemen, liverymen, and apprentices, and perform all the formal acts requisite on the admission of freemen and liverymen. To draw out and enter the accounts of the company for audit, to attend to and enter all notices of importation of foreign arms, and to attend to the concerns of the company generally under the direction of the court, make out the annual lists of the livery for the revising barrister and the summonses for the several courts and committees for service by the beadle.

The proof master proves and examines all gun, pistol, and other barrels sent to the proof house for proof, and marks all such barrels after proof in a sound state with the company's proof marks, according to the Act of Parliament and charter.

The beadle serves all summonses on the members to attend the courts and meetings of the company and also attends such meetings.

The assistants in view and proof receive no salary or emoluments.

The salary of the clerk is 150*l.* per annum exclusive of law business.

The salary of the proof master is 150*l.* per annum.

The salary of the beadle, including fees, averages about 20*l.* per annum.

The assistants in view and proof are members of the company.

The clerk is a member of the company.

The proof master is not a member of the company.

The beadle is not a member of the company.

B.—The staff of workmen employed at the proof house in the proof business of the company at wages varying from 1*l.* 3*s.* to 1*l.* 15*s.* per week each.

C.—The assistants in view and proof, the clerk, the proof master, and the beadle are respectively appointed by the court of assistants for one year, and are proposed for re-election on the first Thursday after the feast of St. Bartholomew in each year.

The servants of the company are engaged by the week, usually by the proof master, but subject to the control of the court of assistants.

PART IV.—RETURN A.

With the exception of their proof house in Whitechapel and the adjoining buildings which are freehold, and the whole of which are occupied by the company for proving small arms and for purposes connected with the proof business, the Gunmakers' Company do not hold directly or indirectly any freehold, copyhold, or leasehold property whatever, either in England, Ireland, or Scotland, or elsewhere.

The company's property in Whitechapel above referred to is rated for Queen's taxes at the annual value of 324*l.*, and for poor rate at 270*l.* per annum.

PART IV.—C.

RETURN C (1).—A list of any properties of which the company is trustee, with the names of cestui que trust in each instance, the nature of the trust, the nature and description of the property, and a statement of the sums received by the company in respect of the same, and of the manner in which such sums have been expended or disposed of during each of the last 10 years.

RETURN C (2).—A list of any properties of which the company is cestui que trust, with the names of the trustees in each instance, the nature of the trust, the nature and description of the property, and a statement of the sums received by the company in respect of the same during each of the last 10 years.

C. 1.—The Gunmakers' Company does not hold and never has held any trust property whatever.

C. 2.—The Gunmakers' Company is not and never has been cestui que trust of any property whatever.

PART IV.—E.

RETURN C.—Internal sources of income.

A list of the annual amounts received in each of the last 10 years in respect of (1) fees paid on admission to the freedom of the company, specifying the amounts paid in respect of each mode of admission thereto; (2) fines or fees paid on admission to the livery of the company; (3) fines or fees paid by members on coming on the court of the company; (4) fines or fees paid on promotion to the offices of warden, &c.; (5) any other internal sources of income, specifying the same.

E.—1, 2, 3, and 4.—Fines and fees received by the company during the last 10 years (including stamp duties).

3. There have been no admissions on the court of the company during the 10 last years.

4. There are no fines or fees paid on promotion to the office of warden, &c.

5. The company have no other internal sources of income.

PART IV.—F.

RETURN F.—(1) The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them what has been the amount of the increase or decrease, from year to year, of the company's income during the last ten years, and whether there is reason to except any increase or decrease during the next 10 years, together with a statement of the reasons for such expectation.

RETURN F.—(2) The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them whether there is reason to expect any permanent increase or decrease in value in any of the estates or properties of the company, and if so, to what extent, together with a statement for the reason for such expectations.

F. 1.—Increase and decrease of the company's income during the last 10 years.

Years.	Increase.	Decrease.

1879-80	177 11 9	—

There is no reason to expect during the next 10 years any increase in the company's income, which is mainly derived from the proof business carried on at their proof house, but rather a decrease.

The depressed condition of the London gun trade during the last 10 years and at the present time with the probability of its never again regaining its former standing and importance within the metropolitan area, prevent the expectation of any increase in the future in the company's income.

F. 2.—There is no reason to expect any permanent increase or decrease in value in the company's freehold proof house and premises in Whitechapel (the only landed estate the company possesses) nor any in their invested funds.

PART IV.—G.

RETURN G.—The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them—

1. What is the system of management of the company's estates and property?
2. In what way, and by whom, the several receipts and payments are taken and made, and under what control?
3. In what way the company's accounts are audited?
4. Whether the company's accounts are published, or are accessible to all or any, and which of the members of the company?

G. 1.—The company's property (consisting as before stated of their proof house and adjoining business premises and invested funds) is under the management of the governing body and officers of the company.

G. 2.—The receipts of the proof house are, as regards ready money, by the proof master, other receipts by the renter warden. Wages and such like payments in connection with the proof business are made by the proof master. All other payments by the renter warden.

All receipts and payments are under the control of a finance committee composed of members of the court of assistants and examined by them at every meeting of the court.

G. 3.—The accounts of the company are audited on oath by all the members of the court, except the renter warden for the year, who is the accounting party.

G. 4.—The accounts of the company are not published, but they are signed, when audited, by all the members of the court, and are accessible to the members of the company.

PART IV.—H.

RETURN H.—A detailed statement of the income from all sources of the company during each of the preceding 10 years, a detailed statement of the company's expenditure during each of such 10 years, and a detailed statement of the assets and liabilities of the company at the end of each of the last ten years.

PART IV.—K.

RETURN K.—Position in relation to Universities.

Has the company any relations with the Universities, or with any of the colleges in them? State the nature and extent of such relations. Has the company any scholarships or exhibitions tenable at any of the Universities in its gift? Give a list of such scholarships or exhibitions, with their respective values, and the periods for which they are respectively tenable; and state how the same are awarded, whether the competition is limited to relations of members, or whether persons so related have any preference.

K.—The company has no relations with the Universities or with any of the colleges, nor any scholarships or exhibitions of any kind in its gift.

PART IV.—L.

RETURN L.—Church Patronage.

1. Are there any ecclesiastical benefices in the gift of the company?
2. Give a list of such benefices, stating—
   a. The county where situated.
   b. The name of the parish or place.
   c. The net annual value of such benefice so near as it can be given, together with any other particulars affecting the value present or prospective of such benefice.
3. Has the company granted during the last 10 years any augmentations of income to the incumbents of such benefices; and if so, to what extent, and out of what funds? Has the company during such 10 years built or contributed, and to what extent, to the building of any, and what, churches or chapels, and where situated?

L. 1.—There are no ecclesiastical benefices in the gift of the company.

L. 3.—In the years 1875 and 1878 the company contributed out of their income towards the building and restoration of churches the sum of 135*l.*

PART IV.—M.

RETURN M.—General and Technical Education.

A statement as to whether the company does anything to subsidize or encourage education, whether general or technical, and a return of the means (if any) so employed, and of the amount expended on such objects during each of the last preceding 10 years.

M.—The company have expended out of their yearly income during the last 10 years 445*l.* in subsidizing general education.

PART V.—REFORM.

PART V.—Reform.

The Commissioners, being bound to report to Her Majesty "what measures (if any) are, in their judgment, expedient and necessary for improving or altering the constitution of the companies, or the appropriation or administration of the property or revenues thereof," respectfully invite the attention of the officers of the companies to this part of the Commission.

The Commissioners will be very glad to receive and consider any suggestions respecting this part of the Commission with which the officers of the companies may do the Commissioners the honour of favouring them.

The officers of the company have duly considered this question, the result being, that having regard to the importance of the duties devolving upon them under their charter and the Acts of Parliament regulating their proof business, and especially having regard to the fact of their having, by the passing of "The Gun Barrel Act, 1868" succeeded in remedying certain admitted evils and deficiencies which had previously existed and had operated as hindrances to the effectual carrying out of the objects for which the company was incorporated, they are not aware of any suggestions which they can offer for improving the company or administering its revenues, believing as they do that its business and affairs are at the present time conducted as efficiently and economically as it is possible for them to be.

APPENDIX A.

The Company gave full information to the Municipal Commissioners appointed in 1834. Their income was then upwards of 1,200*l.* a year.

APPENDIX B.

City of London Livery Companies' Commission,
2, Victoria Street, Westminster, S.W.,
15th February 1882.

SIR,

The Commissioners desire me to thank, on their behalf, the Court of the Worshipful Company of Gunmakers for the information which they have supplied to the Commissioners, but at the same time to state that that information is not in their judgment quite sufficient. I am therefore to draw attention to some points in the returns of the Gunmakers' Company, with regard to which the Commissioners must respectfully ask for further information. The points are mentioned in the Schedule hereto, and the Commissioners will be much obliged to the Court if they will let them have the additional particulars as soon as possible.

I am, Sir,
Your obedient servant,
H. D. WARR,
Secretary.

The Clerk of
The Worshipful Company of Gunmakers.

SCHEDULE.

The Commissioners respectfully ask for further information on the following point:—

Part IV., Circular 14th Aug. 1880.

The return contains no detailed statement of the corporate expenditure of the Company,

City of London Livery Companies Commission,
2, Victoria Street, Westminster, S.W.,
19th June 1882.

SIR,

The Commissioners have received a letter from you, dated the 2nd March, in which it is stated that their circular of the 15th February will be laid before the Court of the Worshipful Company of Gunmakers. I now beg to ask you, on behalf of the Commissioners, whether the circular has been laid before the Court, and what answer the Court are good enough to return.

I am, &c.
(Signed) H. D. WARR,
Secretary.

John Rutherford, Esq.,
Clerk to the Gunmakers' Company.

Gunmakers' Company,
32, Gracechurch Street, E.C.,
26th June 1882.

SIR,

In reply to your letter to me of the 19th instant, I beg to say that the circular of the Commissioners of the 15th February last has been laid before and duly considered by the Court of this Company, the result being that the members of the Court are of opinion that this Company have already furnished to the Commissioners full information on the points to which their attention was directed by the circular, and

I am, Sir,
Your most obedient servant,
JOHN RUTHERFORD,
Clerk to the Gunmakers' Company.

H. D. Warr, Esq., Secretary,
City of London Livery Companies' Commission,
2, Victoria Street, Westminster, S.W.

HORNERS' COMPANY.

The Returns of the Company were made under protest.

PART I.—FOUNDATION AND OBJECT.

A to H.

RETURN A.—A statement of the date, ascertained or probable, of the foundation of the company, and of the circumstances, so far as they can be discovered from its documents of foundation or archives, in which the company had its origin.

RETURN B.—A list of the charters, charters of inspeximus, and other instruments of a similar nature, whether originals or copies, which have been at any time in the possession of the company, together with an abstract of the purport of each, regard being specially had to any evidence which it may contain as to the object of the foundation of the company.

RETURN C.—A list of any trust deeds "founding, regulating, or affecting" the company, with the date of each, the names of the parties thereto, and an abstract of the purport of each.

RETURN D.—A list, with dates, of any "decrees of court," whether of the Courts of Common Law or of Chancery, or of any acts of the Courts of Aldermen or of Common Council, "regulating or affecting" the company, with a statement of the effect of each decision.

RETURN E.—A list of any other documents, not included in the descriptions in the preceding returns, which "found, regulate, or affect" the company, with dates, and an abstract of the effect of each.

RETURN F.—A concise history of the company from the time of its foundation to the present day, with special reference to the inquiry contained in the commission as to "the objects for which the company "was founded," and "how far those objects are now being carried into effect."

RETURN G.—Has the company a licence in mortmain? When was such licence granted (referring to the document by description)? What is its extent, and to what extent is it now unexhausted?

RETURN H.—Is there vested in the company, and how, whether by charter, statute, order of the Court of Aldermen, act of Common Council, or otherwise, any right of exercising superintendence over or any duty or discretion to encourage in any way any, and what art, trade, or business? State the nature and local limits of such control. In what manner and to what extent is such control now exercised? If such control is not now exercised, state the circumstances under which its exercise has fallen into desuetude.

Among the many trades or mysteries which in the early history of our country held a quasi-corporate existence for the protection of native industry, that of horners, or buyers of horns and manufacturers of horn wares, is one of the most ancient. Though there is no special mention of the trade of horners until the reign of King Henry III., in the 53rd year of his reign (A.D. 1268), he granted an annual fair to Charlton, in Kent, for three days, at the eve, the day, and morrow of the Trinity. The time for holding this fair was afterwards changed to St. Luke's Day (October 18th). Philpot, who wrote in 1659, speaks of this fair as kept yearly on that day, and called "horn fair" by reason of the great "plenty of all sorts of winding horns and cups and "other vessels of horn there bought and sold."

In the reign of King Edward III. the horners of the City of London were classed among the 48 mysteries of the city. In the 50th year of that king's reign a controversy arose between the king and the Corporation as to whether the Common Council of the city was to be elected by the wards or the mysteries of the city. This led to an ordinance being made by the city, with the consent of the king, that the election was to be by the mysteries, pursuant to which ordinance 48 mysteries deputed members to the Common Council, the horners ranking in the third class or smaller mysteries, were deputed to send two members.

By statute 4 Edward IV. c. 8, it was enacted that from the feast of Easter in the year 1466 no stranger (i.e., not a freeman of the company) nor alien should buy any English horns unwrought of any tanners, bochers, or other persons within the City of London and 24 miles on every side next adjoining, and that no Englishman or other person should sell any English horns unwrought to any stranger, or cause them to be sent over the sea, so that the said horners would buy the said horns at like price as they were at the time of the making of the Act, upon pain of forfeiture of all such horns so bought, sold, or sent. And the wardens of the said misterie should have full power to search all manner of ware pertaining to their misterie in all places within the City of London and 24 miles adjoining, and within the fairs of Stirbridge and Elie; and if they found any wares that were defective and insufficient they might bring them before the mayor of London, the mayor or bailiffs of the foresaid fairs to be forfeit one half to the king, the other half to the said wardens. But after the horners had taken so many horns as should be needful to their occupation, they and all other persons might sell all the horns refused to any stranger or other person to send beyond the sea or elsewhere. There are two deeds in the possession of the company, one dated March 24th, 1590, 33 Elizabeth, between Nicholas Plasdon and others, citizens and horners of London, and John Cooke and John Escott, wardens of the Company of Horners, whereby the citizens and horners covenanted with the wardens not to buy any horns within the City of London or suburbs, or within the borough of Southwark, or within 24 miles according to the statute, but only for the use of the whole company, equally to be divided between them at the discretion of the wardens, and to provide horns for the use of the company at the equal cost of the whole company. And the wardens enter into a similar covenant with the members of the company.

The other deed is dated the last day of February 1599, 42nd Elizabeth, and is made between William Ellam and others, citizens and horners of London, and John Okes and John Okeley, wardens of the company, on the other part, and is to the same effect as the previously mentioned deed, except that the limit within which private trade was prohibited was extended to 100 miles next in and about the Citie of London, and that the discretion given by the previous deed to the wardens was to be exercised by the wardens and four of the assistants of the company.

In the first year of the reign of James I. an Act (c. 25) was passed which repealed the statute of 4th Edward IV., but in the seventh year of that king's reign the horners presented their petition to Parliament, stating "that by reason of the repeal of prohibition the "company had grown so poor and decayed as in a short "time, if remedy be not provided, they and theirs shall "be utterly undone;" and the Act is thereby revived, except as to the powers of search in Stourbridge and Ely fairs, and the limitation of the price of horns thereby imposed, and a penalty was imposed of double the value of English horns sold unwrought to any stranger or sent over the sea, one moiety of the penalty to the informer and one moiety to the king. Notwithstanding this statute the exportation of horns still continued, and letters patent were granted by King Charles I. in the third year of his reign prohibiting the exportation of horns until the wardens and assistants of the company should first have made choice of the best and most convenient number of the horns to supply the necessary occasions of the realm.

The company obtained from King Charles I. a charter of incorporation dated the 12th January 1638, 13th Charles I. By it the horners, freemen of the City of London and Westminster, and liberties and suburbs of the same are incorporated by the name of "Master, "Warden, Assistants, and Fellowship of the Mistery of "Horners of the City of London," with power to purchase and hold freehold and leasehold estates of every kind, and all manner of goods and chattels, and to grant, alien, and dispose of the same, and by the same name to plead and to be impleaded and to have a common seal. One of the said fellowship is to be chosen the master, two to be chosen wardens, and 10 or more assistants of the fellowship. The master, wardens, and assistants, or the greater part of them, whereof the master and one of the wardens are always to be two, have power to make, and alter, amend, or make new such reasonable laws and constitutions touching the trade act or mistery, and for punishment and reformation of abuses, wrongful practices, and misdemeanours, and for defraying the charges of maintaining and continuing the corporation, and after what order they shall demean themselves in their office, mistery, and work, and to impose such fines, amerciaments, or other lawful punishments upon all offenders as shall seem necessary, such fines, &c. to be raised for their own uses.

Power is given to the master, wardens, assistants, and fellowship to meet in their common hall or other convenient place upon the 2nd of February, if it be not Sunday, and if it be Sunday then upon the next day after to elect a master and two wardens for the ensuing year, and they are to take their oaths of office before the late master and wardens or two of them, and like power of election is given until the next 2nd of February in case of the death or removal for misbehaviour of any master or warden during his term of office, and also in like manner to elect an assistant on the death or removal of any of the assistants appointed by the charter. Power is given of oversight, rule, and search of all persons occupying, importing, exporting, or using the art or mistery of horners within the cities of London and Westminster, and the liberties and precincts thereof, and all manner of wares thereunto appertaining to the intent that all delinquents might be discovered and punished. Power is given to the company to purchase for ever one house or houses within the City of London as their hall for their assemblies, not to exceed the clear yearly value of 40*l.* so as the same be not holden of the king immediately in capite, or by knight's service, or of any other by knight's service, reserving to the king and his successors the annual rent of 20*s.* at the Feast of the Birth of our Lord God only. This rent is not now paid.

The company were to have one honest and discreet person as clerk, and on death his successor was to be appointed to hold office during pleasure.

In the year 1604 the company obtained a lease of a storehouse and sheds in Wentworth Street, Whitechapel, for 1,000 years from Christmas 1604 at the yearly rent of 4*l.*, in which they carried on the trade.

This property has recently been sold for 2,400*l.* to the Metropolitan Board of Works for the purposes of the Artizans' Dwellings Act.

The control given by the charter of Charles I. to the Horners' Company over the trade has never been actually abandoned, but it has ceased to be exercised.

In the year 1846 the company petitioned the Court of Aldermen for a livery, which was granted to them on the 1st of December of that year, the number of liverymen being limited to 60.

PART II.

CONSTITUTION AND PRIVILEGES OF MEMBERSHIP.

RETURN A.—Governing Body.

1. State the present constitution of the governing body of the company, whether such constitution is according to the charter, and if not, in what respects such constitution varies therefrom, and when and where and how such alteration was made.
2. State the qualifications for membership of the governing body of the company, the times and methods of election, and the qualifications of the voters at elections to the governing body.
3. State the functions of the governing body, and of the different members of the same respectively, and whether the members of the governing body pay any, and what fees or fines on admission thereto, and whether they are paid any, and what salaries or amounts in respect of their services respectively.
4. State the nature of the business which comes before the governing body of the company, the method adopted in transacting it, the times at which the governing body meets for business purposes, the way in which the opinions of the members are taken, and whether the resolutions and decisions of the governing body are published, or are otherwise accessible to all or any, and which of the members of the company.
5. State whether the members of the governing body are liable to suspension, or removal, on any and what grounds, and by what method such suspension or removal is effected.
6. Has the company any byelaws sanctioned by the Courts of Law, or by the Courts of Aldermen, or of Common Council, or otherwise? State the effect of such byelaws.

1. The present constitution of the governing body of the company is regulated by the charter, and consists of master, wardens, and assistants.

2. The qualifications for membership of the governing body are, first, freemen; second, liverymen; third, assistants. The master, wardens, and court of assistants are the governing body, and they elect the assistants from whom the master and wardens are chosen annually on the 2nd of February. The election is by open voting.

3. The functions of the governing body are to regulate the affairs of the company; to dispose of the funds. The members thereof until lately paid 4*l.* on admission thereto, which has recently been raised to 10*l.*; each member of the court of assistants receives 1*l.* each general court day, of which there is one yearly, and 10*s.* at each audit court which occurs about once in three years.

4. The nature of the business which comes before the governing body is the election of master and wardens, and of the clerk. The court meet once a year always, and at other times when the master considers it necessary. The opinions of the members of the court are taken by show of hands. The resolutions and decisions of the governing body are not published, but are accessible to the court of assistants. It is not within the memory of the clerk, who has held that office 55 years, that any member not an assistant has ever required to see the record of the resolutions or decisions of the governing body, but it is not believed that access thereto would be denied to any such member.

5. It is apprehended that any member of the court of assistants could be suspended or removed by a vote of the governing body, but no such circumstances has happened within living memory, nor has the clerk ever noticed such in the records of the company.

6. Under the powers conferred by the Act (c. 7), passed in the Parliament held at Westminster 19th Henry VII., which enacted, that no master, wardens, or companies should make any acts or ordinances except such as should be approved by the Chancellor and Treasurer of England, or Chief Justice of either Bench, or three of them. The Company of Horners in the year 1638 made byelaws and ordinances for the government of persons using their art or mystery, which were approved and passed under the hands and seals of Thomas, Lord Coventry, Lord Keeper of the Great Seal, and Chief Justices Sir John Bramston and Sir John Finch. From these byelaws it appears that the company was then a joint stock trading company, the stock being held in shares or half shares.

The freemen of the company were to reside in the City of London, or liberties thereof, or within seven miles, and no freeman should buy or take any manner of rough horns unwrought, or pieces of horns, or tipps for his own use within 24 miles next adjoining to the City of London upon pain of forfeiture of a sum not exceeding 40*s.*, to be imposed by the master, wardens, and assistants of the company, and the freemen were forbidden under penalty of 40*l.* to buy any horns or tipps of any cutler or persons that bought or sold again within the realm of England or Dominion of Wales without the consent of the master, wardens, and assistants of the society.

The byelaws also provide the forms of oath to be taken by the freemen, the master, the wardens, the assistants, and the officers of the company.

The company have no charities eleemosynary, educational, or otherwise.

PART II.—B.

RETURN B.—Admission to Membership.

1. State the qualifications for membership of the company, the several grades of membership of the company, and whether women are admitted to membership.
2. State the several modes in which the freedom of the company may be obtained, the circumstances entitling an applicant to admission under each mode respectively, and the fees payable in respect of admission under each mode respectively.
3. State whether persons exercising any particular trade are required by statute or otherwise to become free of the company. Is there any process for compelling such persons to procure admission, or any process by which such persons are enabled themselves to procure admission, and are such processes enforced respectively, and to what extent? Do persons exercising any particular trade commonly become members of the company? If so, how many members of such trade are at present members of the company? State also (if the company bears the name of any existing trade) how many members of such trade are members of the company?
4. Are freemen liable to disfranchisement, and, if so, for what reasons, and what is the mode of disfranchisement?
5. Is the livery of the company limited or unlimited in number? What are the qualifications for election to the livery, who are the electors thereto, and how do the elections thereto take place, and what fees are payable on election? Are liverymen liable to removal from the livery, and for what reasons?
6. State the number of apprentices bound at the company's hall, or under the auspices of the company, during each of the last 10 years, and state how many of such apprentices have been bound to members following the trade, if any, the name of which is borne by the company? Has the company in any and what cases paid the fees or premiums of such apprentices, and what has been the amount, if any, so expended in each of the last 10 years?
7. Is the freedom of the City of London in any way a condition, precedent or subsequent of membership of the company? Are there any, and how many members of the company, who are not free of the City of London?

1. The first qualification of membership is admission to the freedom of the company. The next is admission to the livery of the company. The third and last is admission on the court of assistants of the company. When the company was a trading company there have been instances of women being admitted to the freedom, but there does not seem to have been such an admission for the last 100 years.

2. The freedom of the company can be obtained by patrimony, by apprenticeship, and by redemption or purchase. In case of patrimony some evidence is required of the fact of the person requiring admission having been the son of a freeman and born after his father had become a freeman. In case of apprenticeship a certificate is required from the master of due and faithful service having been performed. In both these cases a fee of 13*s.* 4*d.* is paid to the company and a stamp duty of 20*s.* In case of redemption a fine of three guineas is payable to the company and a stamp duty of 3*l.* Certain small fees are also payable to the clerk in such case.

3. About a century and a half ago, when the company was a trading company, every person carrying on the trade of a manufacturer of horns in London or within 24 miles was required to be a freeman of the company. Within living memory there were several members of the court who carried on the trade, but at the present time there is scarcely a manufacturer of horns in London, and not one who is a member of this company.

4. It is not known or believed that a freeman of the company is liable to disfranchisement.

5. The livery of the company is limited in number to 60. Any freeman of the company who is also a freeman of London can be elected on the livery. Such election is by the master, wardens, and court of assistants. The election is by show of hands at a court of assistants. The fee payable to the company on the election of a freeman to the livery is 15*l.* It is not known or believed that liverymen are liable to be removed from the livery.

6. There has been no apprentice bound under the auspices of the company during the last 10 years.

7. The freedom of the City of London is a condition precedent to the election of a liveryman of the company. There are no liverymen of the company who are not free of the City of London. Any person can take up his freedom in this company and have all the privileges of a freeman without becoming a freeman of London.

PART II.—C.

RETURN C.—Number of Members.

State (1) the present number of freemen, (2) the present number of other members, (4) the number of admissions to the freedom by each mode respectively, and (5) the number of calls to the livery which have respectively taken place during each of the last preceding 10 years.

(1.) At present there are three freemen only who are not liverymen.
(2.) The present number of the livery is 10.
(3.) There are no other members.

(4 and 5.) The following table shows the number of admissions to the freemen and livery in the years named:—

PART II.—E.

RETURN E.—Profits and Privileges.

1. State with fulness what are the advantages, pecuniary or otherwise, incident to the position of a member of the company in each grade of membership, as (1) a freeman, (2) a liveryman, (3) master, warden, or otherwise a member of the governing body.
2. State the sums paid on an average annually for the preceding 10 years by the company to the members according to the grades of membership mentioned above, and of what such sums consisted, whether, (1) fees, and of what nature, (2) pensions, or (3) other payments, specifying the nature of the same respectively.
3. What circumstances are in practice held to constitute a claim to a pension or donation? State the number of present pensioners and donees respectively, and the amounts paid to them as such respectively, and the number of present pensioners and donees respectively who are members of the trade, if any, the name of which is borne by the company.
4. What is the average standing of a member of the company when he is made a member of the governing body, and (2) for what number of years on an average does a member remain on the governing body?
5. Does the company carry on any and what trade or manufacture with which its title is directly or indirectly connected? In such case state out of what funds the capital is raised, the amount of capital, the profits, if any, for each of the last 10 years, and how such profits, if any, have been divided or otherwise dealt with during each of the last 10 years.

1. There are no pecuniary advantages incident to the position of a freeman of the company. His only privilege is that he is thereby entitled to carry on a retail trade in the City of London.

There is no pecuniary advantage incident to the position of a liveryman of the company. Liverymen if resident within 25 miles from the Royal Exchange are entitled to vote for four members of Parliament for the City of London, and all liverymen are entitled to vote for Lord Mayor and sheriffs of London, and for the chamberlain and bridge-masters of London. Members of the governing body are entitled to receive 20*s.* if they attend the general court of the company, and 10*s.* if they attend the audit court.

2. The sums paid annually on an average for the preceding 10 years to the members of the court of assistants have been 5*l.* 6*s.* These payments consisted in fees mentioned in No. 1 above. They also include a sum of 21*l.* voted to a decayed member of the court who had been a member for 35 years, and who had attained a great age, and who had filled all offices, whose professional services as a surveyor had for many years been gratuitously afforded in looking after the company's property.

3. The court formerly made donations to poor freemen or their widows or children. No applications for such donations have been made for many years.

4. In consequence of the members of the company having been materially reduced by death within the last 10 years, a very short interval has elapsed during such time between the time of a person becoming a liveryman of the company and his election as a member of the governing body. The members of the governing body are elected for life.

5. The company does not carry on any trade or manufacture.

PART III.—OFFICERS AND SERVANTS.

RETURN A.—A list of the officers of the company, with a statement of the duties of each, the amount of his salary, and other emoluments, and whether or not he is a member of the company.

RETURN B.—A list of the servants of the company, with a statement of the duties of each, and of the amounts of their wages, and other emoluments.

RETURN C.—A statement as to the mode in which the officers and servants of the company are respectively appointed.

A.—The only officer of the company is the clerk, whose duty it is to summon all meetings, to attend them, and record their proceedings, to make arrangements for the annual festivals, and to carry on all necessary correspondence with the master and wardens on the business of the company, and also with persons desiring to take up their freedom and livery, and generally to manage all the affairs of the company. The present clerk is a freeman of the company.

B.—Mr. George Henderson is the present clerk of the company, and his salary is three guineas per annum. He has in addition a fee of 11*s.* 8*d.* on the admission of each freeman, of 10*s.* on the admission of each liveryman, and of 6*s.* 8*d.* on the admission of each assistant. The present clerk is a solicitor, and he receives from the company annually his charges for professional duties, which during the last 10 years have averaged about 4*l.* per annum.

C.—The clerk of the company is appointed by the court of assistants.

PART IV.

The company has no landed property, nor estates, or beneficial leases, nor estates at rack-rent, nor houses on beneficial leases, nor houses at rack-rent, nor leases for lives, nor copyholds of inheritance, nor leaseholds, nor tithe, rent-charges, nor underwoods, nor timber, nor mining leases, nor fixed payments.

RETURN B 1.—List of MONEYS belonging to the HORNERS' COMPANY, invested in Government or other Stocks, Shares, Funds, or Securities.

B. 2.—The balance of moneys in the hands of the company unappropriated in their accounts on the 31st December in each of the last preceeding 10 years.

B. 2.—Amounts on an average to 46*l.* 10*s.*

B. 3.—A return of the estimated value of the plate, pictures, furniture, and other property at present on the premises of the company, or in their possession elsewhere.

B. 3.—60*l.*

PART IV.—E.

RETURN E.—Internal Sources of Income.

A list of the annual amounts received in each of the last 10 years in respect of (1) fees paid on admission to the freedom of the company, specifying the amounts paid in respect of such mode of admission thereto; (2) fines or fees paid on admission to the livery of the company; (3) fines or fees paid by members on coming on the court of the company; (4) fines or fees paid on promotion to the offices of warden, &c.; (5) any other internal sources of income, specifying the same.

Year.	(1.) Fines on Admission to Freedom.	(2.) Fines on Admission to Livery.	(3.) Fines on coming upon the Court.	Quarterage.

(5.) The other source of income has been during the last 10 years up to 31st December 1879, 38*l.* per annum less 3*l.* 12*s.* ground rent and income tax, being the rent of the premises sold to the Metropolitan Board of Works as before mentioned.

PART IV.—F.

RETURN F.—(1.) The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them what has been the increase or decrease from year to year of the company's income during the last 10 years, and whether there is reason to expect any and what increase or decrease during the next 10 years, together with a statement of the reasons for such expectation.

RETURN F.—(2.) The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them whether there is reason to expect any permanent increase or decrease in value in any of the estates or properties of the company, and if so, to what extent, together with a statement of the reasons for such expectation.

F. (1.) The income of the property has been almost stationary during the last 10 years, but in consequence of the sale of the company's property as before mentioned, the regular income will be increased by a sum of 33*l.* per annum or thereabouts.

F. (2.) There is reason to expect that there will be a permanent increase in the property of the company of an amount which it is not at present possible to calculate, but it may be considered as 25*l.* per annum, and which will arise from the investment of the sum of stock now in the name of the Paymaster-General of the Chancery Division in the purchase of freehold property.

PART IV.—G.

Return G.—The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them—

1. What is the system of management of the company's estates and property?
2. In what way, and by whom, the several receipts and payments are taken and made, and under what control?
3. In what way the company's accounts are audited?
4. Whether the company's accounts are published, or are accessible to all or any, and which, of the members of the company?

The dividends on the stock in the name of the Paymaster-General of the Chancery Division are, by order of the court, paid to the clerk for the time being, who accounts for them to that member of the court who for the time being acts as treasurer for the company, that member usually being one of the wardens.

1 and 2. The company has now no property, except the sums of stock before mentioned, and the dividends whereon are received as before named.

3. The company's accounts are audited by the governing body.

4. They are not, but would probably be accessible to any member of the company not on the court. The accounts are always open to the governing body.

For many years all the members of the company, with one or two exceptions, have been members of the governing body. The clerk has no recollection for 55 years, during which period he has filled that office, of ever having been asked by any member not one of the governing body for an inspection of the accounts.

PART IV.—H.

Return H.—A detailed statement of the income from all the sources of the company during each of the preceding 10 years, a detailed statement of the company's expenditure during each of such 10 years, and a detailed statement of the assets and liabilities of the company at the end of each of such 10 years.

It is considered that the information previously given renders it unnecessary to give the detailed statement herein required.

PART IV.—K.

Position in relation to the Universities.

Return K.—Has the company any relation with the universities, or with any of the colleges in them? State the nature and extent of such relations. Has the company any scholarships or exhibitions tenable at any of the universities in its gift? Give a list of such scholarships or exhibitions, with their respective values, and the periods for which they are respectively tenable; and state how the same are awarded, whether the competition is limited to relations of members, or whether persons so related have any preference.

The company has no relation with any of the universities.

PART IV.—L.

Church Patronage.

Return L.—Are there any ecclesiastical benefices in the gift of the company?

The company has no church patronage.

PART IV.—M.

General and Technical Education.

Return M.—A statement as to whether the company does anything to subsidise or encourage education, whether general or technical, and a return of the means (if any) so employed, and of the amount expended on such objects during each of the last preceding 10 years.

M.—The small income of the company has hitherto prevented them from doing anything to subsidise or encourage general or technical education, but they are in hopes as their income increases they will be able to take steps for encouraging the manufacture of horns, a trade which from information that has reached the company they have every reason to believe is on the increase.

APPENDIX A.

The company gave full information to the Municipal Commissioners appointed in 1834. They made the following statement as to their property:—

The property of the company consists of the following particulars, viz.:—

(1.) A storehouse, sheds and premises, in Wentworth Street, Whitechapel, held for a term of 1,000 years from Christmas 1604, at the yearly rent of 4*l.*, and now let on lease at 30*l.* per annum. In 1820 it was only let at 20*l.*, but the rent has since been raised.

(2.) One hundred pounds three per cent. Consols standing in the names of four members of the court, and in 1833–4 there was a balance of 51*l.* 4*s.* 4*d.* in the hands of the renter warden, which he had been ordered to invest, in addition thereto.

(3.) The whole income of the company since the year 1820 has been on the average 34*l.* per annum, of which 24*l.* is expended in ground rent, dinners, salaries, charitable donations to poor freemen, and small incidental disbursements. The balance is from time to time invested in Consols, as before mentioned.

INNHOLDERS' COMPANY.

The Innholder's Company sent with their Returns a protest against the legality of the Inquiry.

PART I.—FOUNDATION AND OBJECT.

A to H.

RETURN A.—A statement of the date, ascertained or probable, of the foundation of the company, and of the circumstances, so far as they can be discovered from its documents of foundation or archives, in which the company had its origin.

RETURN B.—A list of the charters, charters of inspeximus, and other instruments of a similar nature, whether originals or copies, which have been at any time in the possession of the company, together with an abstract of the purport of each, regard being specially had to any evidence which it may contain as to the object of the foundation of the company.

RETURN C.—A list of any trust deeds "founding, regulating, or affecting" the company, with the date of each, the names of the parties thereto, and an abstract of the purport of each.

RETURN D.—A list with dates of any "decrees of court," whether of the Courts of Common Law or of Chancery, or of any acts of the Court of Aldermen or of the Court of Common Council, "regulating or affecting" the company, with a statement of the effect of each decision.

RETURN E.—A list of any other documents, not included in the descriptions in the preceding returns, which "found, regulate or affect" the company, with dates and an abstract of the effect of each.

RETURN F.—A concise history of the company, from the time of its foundation to the present day, with special reference to the inquiry contained in the commission as to "the objects for which the company "was founded," and "how far those objects are now being carried into effect."

RETURN G.—Has the company a licence in mortmain? When was such licence granted (referring to the document by description)? What is its extent, and to what extent is it now unexhausted?

RETURN H.—Is there vested in the company and how, whether by charter, statute, order of the Court of Aldermen, act of Common Council, or otherwise, any right of exercising superintendence over, or any duty or discretion to encourage in any way, any and what art, trade, or business? State the nature and local limits of such control. In what manner and to what extent is such control now exercised? If such control is not now exercised, state the circumstances under which its exercise has fallen into desuetude.

A.—From the records of the Company it appears that—

The Company was a Guild or Fraternity by prescription under the name of "Hostillers" before the same was incorporated by Charter. Its earliest known record is a petition preferred on the 12th December, 25 Hen. VI. (1446) by certain "Men of the Mistery of Hostillars of the City," in the chamber at Guildhall before John Colney, Mayor, and the Aldermen of the City praying them to confirm certain ordinances which were ordered to be entered upon the Record and observed in all future times.

Vide records kept in the Town Clerk's Office, Lib. K., fo. 233.

The next record is a petition preferred on 28th October, 13 Edw. IV. (1473) by the wardens and certain men of the Mistery of Hostillers in the chamber of Guildhall, before Mr. Hampton, Mayor, and the Aldermen of the City, stating that the craft or mistery were called hostillers and not innholders as they were indede, by which no diversity was perceived between them in name and their servants being hostellers indede, and praying that they might be called innholders and in no wise hostillers, which was ordained accordingly.

Vide Records of said Lib. L., fo. 95*b*.

On 31st July, 1 Ric. III. (1483) another petition was preferred by the wardens and other men of the mistery of Innholders before Sir Edmund Shaa, Mayor, and the Aldermen of the City, to confirm certain other ordinances which was ordered and in like manner directed to be entered of record and in all future times observed, and the same was entered in the Records in the Town Clerk's Office. (No reference.)

Vide Record.

The Company had also a Livery by prescription before their charter, vide the following entry in the books of the Town Clerk's Office Jor. No. 10, fo. 379*b*:—

Names of the crafts of the City which have liveries and what they are in number in every craft in the time of Sir John Shaa, Knt., Mayor (17 Hen. VII., 1501).

Inter alia—

Innholders	16.

On the 21st February, 1 Hen. VIII., 1509, a petition was presented by certain men of the art or mistery of Innholders before Sir William Capel, Knight, Mayor, and the Aldermen to confirm certain regulations, and which was granted as prayed.

Vide record at Town Clerk's. No reference.

*B. C. D.

By Act of Common Council, Robinson, Mayor:

It was enacted, that every person using the art, mystery, or occupation of an Innholder shall be translated to the Company of Innholders. 3 May 1663.

That if any person shall use or occupy any inn, ostery, or livery stable within the city of London or liberties, not being free of the Company of Innholders, shall not within three months after notice come and appear and be admitted unto the said Company and take the oath, he shall forfeit 4*Cs.* for every month after that he shall offend.

By Royal Charter, of which the Company have the original (after reciting that of 8 Hen. and the above Act of Common Council) after dissolving the existing Company, incorporated certain persons by name and their successors and all other persons then being of the Fraternity of Innholders of St. Julian le Herbeges and all persons who should thereafter hold, keep, or occupy any inn, hostrie, petty hostrie, or livery stable, in the city of London or within three miles of the said city, by the name of "The "Master, Wardens, and Society of the Art and Mistery "of Innholders of the City of London." Who are, amongst other things, declared capable to have, purchase, possess, and enjoy and retain manors, lands, &c., to have a common seal, to choose future masters and wardens, assistants and other officers, to have a common hall, to make laws, &c., and other the powers therein contained. 21 Dec. 15 Car. 2. 1663.

It will have been seen that one of the objects of the last

---

*NOTE.—The documents relating to these sections are placed in chronological order for greater convenience.

By Royal Letters Patent (of which the original is with the Company) the then master and three wardens and others of the same art and mistery and their successors were incorporated. 21 Dec. 6 Hen. 8. 1515.

The Company has a printed translation but of which they cannot vouch the accuracy, and refer to the original in their possession.

NOTE.—As to Return C.—There are no trust deeds such as referred to.

charter was to extend the authority of the Company beyond the limits of the city, but the Company ultimately thought it inexpedient to attempt to enforce this.

28 Feb. 1685. 1 Jas. 2. Another charter, of which the Company have the original, was granted to the Company on the surrender of that granted by Charles II., but this was made void by Act II. William and Mary, 1691, session 1, c. 8, s. 14, "for "reversing the judgment in a quo warranto against the "city of London, and for restoring the city of London to "its ancient rights and privileges," which enacts "That "all and every the several Companies and Corporations "shall from henceforth stand and be incorporated by such "name and names, and in such sort and manner as they "respectively were at the time of the said judgment given, "and every of them are hereby restored to all and every "the lands, tenements, hereditaments, rights, titles, estates, "liberties, powers, privileges, precedences, and immunities "which they lawfully had and enjoyed at the time of "giving the said judgment, and that as well all surrenders "as charters, Letters Patents, and grants for new incor-"porating any of the said Companies, or touching or "concerning any of their liberties, privileges, or franchises "made or granted by the said late King James or by the "said King Charles II. since the giving of the said "judgment shall be void and are hereby declared null and "void to all intents and purposes whatsoever."

And by order of the court of aldermen, Smith, Mayor, 1 Jas. II., 5th May 1685, it was ordered that certain Companies (and amongst others the Innholders) should have a livery or cloathing, and be esteemed and taken to by Livery Companies of the city.

And on the 7th May 1685 the Innholders returned the master, three wardens, 20 assistants, and 24 others to be of their livery who were approved by the court.

Vide Jor. 83, 174*b*.

But the Act of 2 Will. and Mary, s. 16, having restored the rights of the freemen and livery the last-mentioned order became void, and the livery retained their franchise under their ancient right by prescription as restored by the Act.

By another Act of Common Council:

19th May 1727. It was ordered that no person using the occupation of an innholder or keeping any inn, ostery, or livery stable within the city or liberties should be admitted into the freedom of the city by redemption, unless first admitted into the Freedom of the said Company of Innholders.

To be a standing order of the court.

E. There are believed to be no such documents.

F. The Company has no materials to enable them to make this return; but it is submitted that the several documents herein referred to and from which abstracts have been made will substantially answer this requirement. To some extent such a history will be found in the report of the Royal Commission appointed to inquire into Municipal Corporations made in the year 1834, but of which the Company has no copy.

G. The Company claims unlimited right to hold lands in Mortmain (vide charters).

H. Very full control was given to the Company by the charter of Chas. II. over all persons "keeping any inn, "hostry, or livery stable within the city of London "liberties, and within three miles of the liberties," with powers of inspection of their measures and hay and fodder, but these have fallen into desuetude, the Company especially having long since abandoned all attempts at jurisdiction without the city limits.

The Company in this branch of the return have given the best particulars in their power on the points referred to, but they decline to be bound in the case of original documents by such particulars, but refer to the original documents or to copies thereof.

PART I.

RETURN I.—A list of the charities, eleemosynary, educational, or otherwise, which are under the management of the Company, stating in each case the name of the founder, the date and nature of the benefaction, its original and its present value, and the purposes to which the funds have been applied for each of the last preceding 10 years.

PART. II.—A.

CONSTITUTION AND PRIVILEGES OF MEMBERSHIP.

RETURN A.—Governing Body.

1. State the present constitution of the governing body of the company, whether such constitution is according to the charter, and if not, in what respects such constitution varies therefrom, and when and how such alteration was made.
2. State the qualifications for membership of the governing body of the company, the time and periods of election, and the qualifications of the voters at elections to the governing body.
3. State the functions of the governing body, and of the different members of the same respectively, and whether the members of the governing body pay any, and what fees or fines on admission thereto, and whether they are paid any, and what salaries or amounts in respect of their services respectively.
4. State the nature of the business which comes before the governing body of the company, the method adopted in transacting it, the times at which the governing body meets for business purposes, the way in which the opinions of the members are taken, and whether the resolutions and decisions of the governing body are published, or are otherwise accessible to any or all, and which of the members of the company.
5. State whether the members of the governing body are liable to suspension or removal, on any and what grounds, and by what method such suspension or removal is effected.
6. Has the company any byelaws sanctioned by the Courts of Law or Chancery, or by the Courts of Aldermen or of Common Council, or otherwise. State the effect of such byelaws.

1. A master, three wardens, called the upper, middle, and renter wardens, and a court of 20 assistants in accordance with charter. The court is always kept full.

2. There is no special qualification except as stated in No. 3.

The master and wardens are elected annually on the first Tuesday in August, by the court of master wardens and assistants in hall assembled. The master, upper, and middle warden are chosen from the assistants, and they usually move upwards, taking the offices in succession for one year each, after which they fall back on the court. The renter warden and assistants are chosen from the livery. But the renter warden after serving his year falls back upon the livery, not upon the court. The assistants are chosen for life. No attempts have been made to throw open the court, or to alter the present right of sufferage.

When a vacancy occurs in the court it is declared at the first monthly court of master wardens and assistants, after due notice of the decease or resignation of the member has been given, and it is filled up at the next monthly court, a summons having been previously sent to all members to attend, and that the vacancy will then be filled up. No notice is given to the Company at large. The candidate is proposed by one member of the court and seconded by another. There is usually more than one candidate.

The election of master and wardens is by open vote. The election of assistant was by ballot, but is now by open vote. The religious tenets of a candidate are never inquired into, and do not influence his election.

Security for 200*l.* may be required from the renter warden, but it is not usually taken. On a vacancy happening in a court of assistants it is usually supplied from the senior liverymen, that is from such as have previously served as steward and renter warden, or fined in lieu of serving, and allowing for occasional disqualifications arising from age, character, distant residence, &c.; it is the practice to call upon the members to take these offices according to seniority. The charter directs the ruling body to choose four of the more honest discreet men of the society to be master and wardens, and on a vacancy to choose one of the more honest and worthy persons of the society to be an assistant. Having reference to these directions, and to the character and residence of a candidate, the vacancies are filled according to seniority.

The new master and wardens, though elected on the first Tuesday in August, do not assume office until the Court day in October following, when they are sworn in. The clerk and beadle are also elected on the same day. Two liverymen were also chosen as stewards to bear the charge of the ensuing Lord Mayor's Day, but are excusable on paying 12*l.* each; but such choice has latterly been discontinued, the Company bearing the charge, and five to seven assistants are appointed to audit the accounts of the Company for the current year ending in October.

3. The functions of the governing body include the admission of persons to the freedom and freemen to the livery, the general management of the Company and its property and revenues and charities. The function of the third or renter warden was to collect the annual income of the Company; but this has for many years past been altered, leaving such collection with the clerk of the Company. The payments of fines and fees on admission to the governing body appear in the list of fees annexed.

No salary is paid to the governing body or any of its members except a fee of 1*l.* to each member attending a Court of the Company.

4. The nature of the business which comes before the governing body is the general management of the affairs of the company, its property revenues and charities as aforesaid, such business is transacted at courts held on the first Tuesday in each month, 13 out of 24 forming a quorum, and all questions are decided by a majority of the votes of the members present, and the resolutions come to appear in the minute book of the Company, which minutes are submitted to the court at their next meeting for confirmation. The court do not publish their proceedings, which are accessible to each member of the court.

5. The charter authorises removal of a member "for ill government, not well-behaving, or any reasonable cause" by other members to the number of 13, and two instances are known to have occurred, one for bankruptcy, and another for neglect of duty. There are no recent instances in point however.

6. The subsisting byelaws of the Company entitled "The Book of the Ordnances of the Innholders of the "City of London made 1667, by the Master and War-"dens," were shortly afterwards confirmed pursuant to the Act 19 Hen. VII. Edward, Lord Clarendon, being Lord Chancellor of England, Sir Robert Hyde, Lord Chief Justice of the King's Bench, and Sir Orlando Bridgman, Lord Chief Justice of the Common Pleas, in pursuance of the said Act 19 Hen. VII. c. 7, which enacts—

> That no master, wardens, and fellowships of crafts or misteries, nor any rulers of guilds or fraternities do take upon them to make any Acts or Ordinances, nor to execute any Acts or Ordinances by them theretofore made; but that the same be examined and approved by the Chancellor Treasurer of England, or Chief Justices of either Benches, or three of them.

And by virtue of that Act all former byelaws were, on the confirmation above mentioned, null and void and disused.

By these bye-laws, 36 in number, amongst other things provision is made that the first Tuesday in August in every year shall be the election day of the master and wardens. Also for the election according to the charter for supplying vacancies in the court of assistants, for enforcing penalties for refusing office, for the quarterly appearance of the livery and yeomanry, for the election of members into livery, for regulating the inns, hostries, and livery stables within the City and its liberties, and within three miles thereof, for settling various fines and fees, for turning over apprentices, for the binding of apprentices of the members at the Hall, for holding of courts, for the appointment of clerk and beadle, for the accounting by the renter warden. They also prescribe the various oaths to be taken as by reference thereto will appear.

PART II.—B.

ADMISSION TO MEMBERSHIP.

1. State the qualifications for membership of the Company, the several grades of membership of the Company, and whether women are admitted to membership.
2. State the several modes in which the freedom of the Company may be obtained, the circumstances entitling an applicant to admission under each mode respectively, and the fees payable in respect of admission under each mode respectively.
3. State whether persons exercising any particular trade are required by statute or otherwise to become free of the Company. Is there any process by which members of such trade can become members of the Company, and is there any process for compelling such persons to procure admission, and are such processes enforced, and to what extent? Is the freedom of the City of London in any and what way a condition precedent or subsequent to membership? Are there any members who are not free of the City of London? Do persons exercising any particular trade commonly become members of the Company? If so, how many members of such trade are at present members of the Company? What is the number of the members of the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the Company, who are members of the Company?
4. Are freemen liable to disfranchisement, and if so, for what reasons, and what is the mode disfranchisement?
5. Is the livery of the Company limited or unlimited in number? What are the qualifications for election to the livery, who are the electors thereto, and how do the elections thereto take place, and what fees are payable on election? Are liverymen liable to removal from the livery, and for what reasons?

1. There are no qualifications for membership, but such membership is in the discretion of the court, except in the case of applicants being keepers of an inn, hostry, or livery stable, in which case the admission may be claimed as of right. There does not appear to be any restriction against women who are admitted under the charter of Hen. VIII. and by the general usage of the city, but there have been no applications for many years past for such admission.

2. The freedom of the Company may be obtained :—

	£	s.	d.
1. By purchase - - -	6	16	6
2. By patrimony or servitude fee -	7	7	0

See list of fees.

On applications to purchase, all persons of proper character are admitted; the application is stated to the court by the master, and is, as a rule, granted, though in theory it is matter of discretion, except where the applicant is keeper of an inn, hostry, or livery stable, when admission is matter of right. Under Act of Common Council, herein-after noticed, eating-house or beer-shop keepers are not considered as entitled, the test of admission being the receipt and entertainment of travellers. Applications are made through the clerk.

The freedom of the Company has never been conferred by gift.

The process of compelling a person carrying on any of the above trades to enter the Company was by summons requiring him to attend a court of assistants and take up his freedom, when on refusal he was liable to fine, which was recoverable by action, but no such proceedings have recently been resorted to.

Admissions are made in court by the court of master, wardens, and assistants, or by the clerk out of court under authority of the latter, which subsequently confirms such admissions.

On admission by patrimony proof is required that the father was a freeman prior to the applicant's birth either by the Company's books, production of the copy of his freedom of the city as an innholder, and certificate of applicant's baptism or other satisfactory evidence. This is sometimes dispensed with in the case of well-known applicants.

3. By Act of Common Council made 23rd May 1663, it was ordained that all persons of what Company soever they then were who then used or thereafter should use the art, mystery, or occupation of innholders, or should hold, keep, or occupy any common inn, hostry, or livery stable within the city of London or the liberties of the same should be thenceforth translated from any Company of which they were free to the Company of Innholders, or otherwise become free of the same Company. And the charter of Chas. II. confirmed and extended the Act of Common Council to the borough of Southwark, and elsewhere within three miles of the liberties of the city, but which, as has been seen, the Company did not seek to enforce.

The freedom of the city is not a condition precedent or subsequent to membership.

There are members who are not free of the city.

No particular trade is now represented by persons becoming members.

4. Are not aware of any such liability.

5. The Company contend that the number of the livery is unlimited.

The qualification is that the member applying be a freeman of the Company and worth 200*l.* or more.

The electors are the court of assistants, and the fine, &c. payable is 11*l.* 0*s.* 6*d.*

PART II.—C.

RETURN C.—Number of members.

State (1) the present number of freemen, (2) the present number of the livery, (3) the present number of other members, (4) the number of admissions to the freedom by each mode respectively, and (5) the number of calls to the livery which have respectively taken place during each of the last preceding ten years.

(1.) No record is kept beyond that of admission, so as to enable the Company to state the present number of freemen. The Company is unable to trace them owing to death, removals, &c.

(2.) The number of liverymen, December 1880, was 134, so far as was known, for the same reason.

(3.) Except freemen there are no other members.

the admissions to the Freedom by each mode respectively and the Number of Calls to the Livery were in each of the Years 1871 to 1880, as follows :—

PART II.—D.

RETURN D.

(1) State the number of apprentices bound at the Company's Hall, or otherwise under the auspices of the Company, during each of the last ten years. (2) State how many have been bound during each of the last ten years to members following the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the Company. (3) In what case and to what extent have the fees or premiums of such apprentice been paid by the Company?

(1.) Number of Apprentices bound, 1871–1880. Nil.
(3.) The Company has no funds to pay any premiums or fees.

PART II.—E.

RETURN E.—Profits and privileges.

1. State with fullness what are the advantages, pecuniary or otherwise, incident to the position of a member of the company in each grade of membership, as (1) a freeman, (2) a liveryman, (3) master, warden, or otherwise a member of the governing body.
2. State the sums paid on an average annually for the preceding 10 years by the company to the members according to the grades of membership mentioned above, and of what such sums consisted, whether (1) fees, and of what nature, (2) pensions, or (3) other payments, specifying the nature of the same respectively.
3. What circumstances are in practice held to constitute a claim to a pension or donation? State the number of present pensioners and donees respectively, and the amounts paid to them as such respectively. How many pensioners and donees are connected with the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the company?
4. (1) What is the average standing of a member when he becomes a member of the governing body, and (2) what is the average time for which a member continues on the governing body?
5. Does the company carry on any and what trade or manufacture with which its title is directly or indirectly connected? If so, what is the capital and from what sources is it derived, and how are the profits (if any) divided or dealt with?

1. The advantages may be taken to be:—

I. Freemen.—The membership of the Company and the claim to participate in the gifts in the hands of the Company.

II. Liverymen.—The like, and the probability of being elected one of the governing body.

III. The master, wardens, and members,—The being a member of the governing body and the receipt of the fee of 1*l.* for attendance at the monthly courts and of participating at the luncheon or dinner provided on such occasions, with the privilege of inviting in rotation a friend thereto.

2. The only sums paid have been for attendance at the monthly courts; these have averaged 203*l.* per annum during the 10 years 1871–1880 between and amongst the 24 members of the court.

3. The court has no pensioners except on their charity gifts. They distribute, however, occasionally small sums out of the general income to members of the Company or their families in distress.

4. The members are appointed on a vacancy in the court occurring, and the court claim the absolute right of election thereto; subject thereto they usually elect according to seniority of members who have served or fined for all the offices. It is difficult to arrive at any average under such conditions, but the last six members of the court were admitted to their several offices at the following dates, viz.:—

—	Elected on Court.	Took up Freedom.	Took up Livery.
John Gibson - -	January 2nd, 1877 -	1850	1850

OFFICERS AND SERVANTS.

RETURN A.—A list of the officers of the Company, with a statement of the duties of each, the amount of his salary and emoluments, and whether or not he is a member of the Company.

RETURN B.—A list of the servants of the Company, with a statement of the duties of each, and of the amounts of their wages and other emoluments.

RETURN C.—A statement as to the mode in which the officers and servants of the Company are respectively appointed.

A.—The master, Mr. T. B. Wire, Croom's Hill, Blackheath.

Wardens, Mr. T. S. Richardson, 28, Clement's Lane, E.C.; Mr. Henry Gibbon, 32, Great James Street, Bedford Row.

Renter warden, Mr. John Gibson, 6, St. John's Church Road, Upper Homerton, Hackney.

A court of 20 assistants.

The clerk, Mr. A. D. Druce, 10, Billiter Square, E.C.

Beadle, George Harding, Innholders' Hall, College Street, Dowgate Hill.

B.—There are no separate duties of the master, wardens, and members of the court of assistants.

The renter warden has charge of the Company's property, and keeps the keys and receives and makes payment of the Company's money; the latter duty is now performed by the clerk by order of the master, wardens, and assistants, and the distinction between him and the other wardens is more nominal than real.

The duty of the clerk is to attend the courts and record their proceedings, to do the formal acts on admissions of freemen and livery, to keep and enter the accounts to bind apprentices and make turnovers, and generally to manage the Company's concerns under directions of the court. The salary of the clerk is 14*l.* and 6*l.*, but the court usually adds a gratuity of 80*l.*

The duties of the beadle are of the ordinary character He resides at the Hall, and takes charge thereof.

C.—The officers and servants of the Company are appointed by the master, wardens, and court of assistants at a court of assistants of the Company.

PART IV.—C.

RETURN C. (1.)—A list of any properties of which the Company is trustee, with the names of the cestui que trust in each instance, the nature of the trust, the nature and description of the property, and a statement of the sums received by the Company in respect of the same, and of the manner in which such sums have been expended or disposed of during each of the last 10 years.

RETURN C. (2.)—A list of any properties of which the Company is cestui que trust, with the names of the trustees in each instance, the nature of the trust, the nature and description of the property, and a statement of the sums received by the Company in respect of the same during each of the last 10 years.

C 1.—The Company has none, except as otherwise returned.
C 2.—The Company has none such.

PART IV.—D.

RETURN D.—A list of properties of any other description than those included in the preceding classes, together with a statement of the incomes derived therefrom by the Company during each of the preceding 10 years.

The Company's hall, situate in College Street, Dowgate Hill, in the parish of St. Michael's Paternoster, in the City of London, rebuilt after the fire of London on the site of the old hall, conveyed to the Company by the indenture of 15th May 1613, herein-before referred to. Return, Part IV., A. 4.

The two houses 29 and 30 in College Street, formerly 7 and 8 Elbow Lane, hereinbefore referred to, held under lease by the Company from the Merchant Tailors' Company for a term of years expiring Midsummer 2803, at the annual rent of 20*l.* as hereinbefore referred to. Return, Part IV., A. 4.

PART IV.—E.

RETURN E.—Internal sources of income.

A list of the annual amounts received in each of the last 10 years in respect of (1) fees paid on admission to the freedom of the Company, specifying the amounts paid in respect of each mode of admission thereto; (2) fines or fees paid on admission to the livery of the Company; fines or fees paid by members on coming on the court of the Company; (4) fines or fees paid on promotion to the offices of warden, &c.; (5) any other internal sources of income, specifying the same.

—	1. On Admissions to Freedom.		2. On Admission to Livery.	3. On Admission to Court.	4. On Promotion to Office.	5. Other fines in lieu of serving Office of Steward or Renterwarden.

PART IV.—F.

RETURN F.—(1.) The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them what has been the amount of the increase or decrease, from year to year, of the Company's income during the last 10 years, and whether there is reason to expect any increase or decrease during the next 10 years, together with a statement of the reasons for such expectation.

RETURN F.—(2.) The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them whether there is reason to expect any permanent increase or decrease in value in any of the estates or properties of the Company, and if so, to what extent, together with a statement for the reasons for such expectation.

(1.) The total income of the last 10 years has been (omitting charity or trust income):—

	£ s. d.
In 1871 - -	837 16 2
1872 - -	858 14 2
1873 - -	957 4 2
1874 - -	980 13 11
1875 - -	1,024 7 5
1876 - -	1,017 3 9
1877 - -	905 4 3
1878 - -	928 14 9
1879 - -	937 14 10
1880 - -	1,326 13 9

(2.) There is no reason to expect any increase or decrease of the income during the next 10 years, except in so far as the income receivable from fines for non-service of offices may be diminished, owing to the persons becoming less desirous of joining the Company.

The Company's freehold property in Moorgate Street, the leases of which will fall in between 1910 and 1920, will bring a material increase of income, but it is impossible to state the extent, the property being let on building or repairing leases only.

PART IV.—G.

RETURN G.—The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them—

1. What is the system of management of the Company's estates and property?
2. In what way, and by whom, the several receipts and payments are taken and made, and under what control?
3. In what way the Company's accounts are audited?
4. Whether the Company's accounts are published, or are accessible to all or any, and which of the members of the Company?

The Company's property is managed by the court, but the rents and income are received and the outgoings paid by the clerk, and his accounts, and the due receipt by him of all rents and income and his payments, are audited by and vouched before the audit committee appointed by the court (in August in each year) on the first Monday in October in each year; and the report of such committee is presented to the court on the following day.

The accounts are not published, but are presented to and accessible to the members of the court, and would be produced, if required, for any reasonable purpose to members of the Company by leave of the court. Such an application is rarely made. On the one occasion, when made by one of the livery, the accounts were fully submitted to him.

PART IV.—H.

RETURN H.—A detailed statement of the income from all sources of the Company during each of the preceding 10 years, a detailed statement of the Company's expenditure during each of such 10 years, and a detailed statement of the assets and liabilities of the Company at the end o each of the last 10 years.

APPENDIX A.

The Company gave the fullest information to the Municipal Commissioners appointed in 1834.

JOINERS' COMPANY.

PART I.—FOUNDATION AND OBJECT.

Returns A to H, both inclusive.

RETURN A.—A statement of the date, ascertained or probable, of the foundation of the company, and of the circumstances, so far as they can be discovered from its documents of foundation or archives, in which the company had its origin.

RETURN B.—A list of the charters, charters of inspeximus, and other instruments of a similar nature, whether originals or copies, which have been at any time in the possession of the company, together with an abstract of the purport of each, regard being specially had to any evidence which it may contain as to the object of the foundation of the company.

RETURN C.—A list of any trust deeds "founding, regulating, or affecting" the company, with the date of each, the names of the parties thereto, and an abstract of the purport of each.

RETURN D.—A list with dates of any "decrees of court," whether of the Courts of Common Law or of Chancery, or of any acts of the court of aldermen or of the court of common council, "regulating or "affecting" the company, with a statement of the effect of each decision.

RETURN E.—A list of any other documents, not included in the descriptions in the preceding returns, which "found, regulate, or affect" the company, with dates and an abstract of the effect of each."

RETURN F.—A concise history of the company, from the time of its foundation to the present day, with special reference to the inquiry contained in the commission "as to the objects for which the company was "founded," and "how far those objects are now being carried into effect."

RETURN G.—Has the company a licence in mortmain? When was such licence granted (referring to the document by description)? What is its extent, and to what extent is it now unexhausted?

RETURN H.—Is there vested in the company, and how, whether by charter, statute, order of the court of aldermen, act of common council, or otherwise, any right of exercising superintendence over, or any duty or discretion to encourage in any way, any and what art, trade, or business? State the nature and local limits of such control. In what manner and to what extent is such control now exercised? If such control is not now exercised, state the circumstances under which its exercise has fallen into desuetude.

A.—By charter, dated at Westminster the 14th April, in the 13th year of Queen Elizabeth (A.D. 1570), the Joiners and Ceilers were incorporated and made one body and commonalty perpetual.

B.—The charter as above was ratified on the 20th July in the same year 1570. Another charter was granted to the company on the 10th May, in the 1st year of James 2nd.

C.—There are no such deeds.

D., E., F., G., H.—The company gave no answers to these questions. (See Appendix A.)

PART I.—RETURN I.—CHARITIES.

1870–80.

RETURN I.—A list of the charities, eleemosynary, educational or otherwise, which are under the management of the company, stating in each case the name of the founder, the date and nature of the benefaction, its original and its present value, and the purposes to which the funds have been applied for each of the last preceding ten years.

I.—The company has no charities.

PART II.—A.

CONSTITUTION AND PRIVILEGES OF MEMBERSHIP.

RETURN A.—Governing Body.

1. State the present constitution of the governing body of the company, whether such constitution is according to the charter, and if not, in what respects such constitution varies therefrom, and when and how such alteration was made.
2. State the qualifications for membership of the governing body of the company, the time and periods of election, and the qualifications of the voters at elections to the governing body.
3. State the functions of the governing body, and of the different members of the same respectively, and whether the members of the governing body pay any and what fees or fines on admission thereto, and whether they are paid any and what salaries or amounts in respect of their services respectively.
4. State the nature of the business which comes before the governing body of the company, the method adopted in transacting it, the times at which the governing body meets for business purposes, the way in which the opinions of the members are taken, and whether the resolutions and decisions of the governing body are published, or are otherwise accessible to any or all, and which of, the members of the company.
5. State whether the members of the governing body are liable to suspension or removal, on any and what grounds, and by what method such suspension or removal is effected.
6. Has the Company any byelaws sanctioned by the Courts of Law or Chancery, or by the Court of Aldermen or of Common Council, or otherwise? State the effect of such byelaws.

Return A. 1.
Master
Upper warden
Renter warden
12 assistants
And court of livery
} In accordance with the charter.

A. 2. Master elected from livery by ballot. Any liveryman is eligible, but it is usual to elect one who has passed the offices of upper and renter warden.

Upper warden is elected in the same manner as master.

Renter warden is elected in the same manner as master.

Every liveryman is eligible, but it is usual to take them in rotation.

No liveryman is eligible for office who has been a bankrupt or has paid less than 20*s.* in the £.

Twelve assistants are elected for life by ballot. All liverymen are eligible, but it is usual to elect a liveryman who has passed the chair.

Elections for officers take place annually on St. James's Day at a court of livery held for that purpose.

Assistants are elected by the livery, when a vacancy occurs, at a court of livery summoned for that purpose.

No liveryman is eligible who has become a bankrupt or has paid less than 20*s.* in the £.

A. 3. The court of livery holds the chief control; all money must be voted by them with certain exceptions indicated in the byelaws.

The court of assistants carry on the general business of the company, acting upon the votes passed at the court of livery.

Two courts of livery are held during the year, one on March 29th and the other on July 25th, and special courts are called when vacancies occur in the court of assistants.

A fee of 10*s.* 6*d.* is paid to liverymen and members of the court of assistants who attend at the livery meeting.

A fee of 21*s.* is paid to assistants who attend at the court of assistants.

Assistants meet once a month and on the 24th August (audit meeting).

Assistants pay a fine of 10*l.* on coming on the court.

A. 4. Binding apprentices.
Admission of freemen.
Election of liverymen.
Payment of pensioners.
Administration of charitable donations.
Examination of accounts and the general business of the company.

All motions must be moved and seconded, and decided, after due notice, by a majority, by show of hands.

All resolutions are recorded in a minute book and signed by master at subsequent meeting.

The recorded minutes are read at the courts of livery and are accessible to all members of the company.

A. 5. When any of the court of assistants become bankrupt, or remain out of the limits of the city of London for one year, they become liable to be deprived.

6. The byelaws upon which the company act are of the same date as the charter of Elizabeth.

Part II.—B.

Return B.—Admission of membership.

1. State the qualifications for membership of the company, the several grades of membership of the company, and whether women are admitted to membership.
2. State the several modes in which the freedom of the company may be obtained, the circumstances entitling an applicant to admission under each mode respectively, and the fees payable in respect of admission under each mode respectively.
3. State whether persons exercising any particular trade are required by statute or otherwise to become free of the company. Is there any process by which members of such trade can become members of the company, and is there any process for compelling such persons to procure admission, and are such processes enforced, and to what extent? Is the freedom of the City of London in any and what way a condition precedent or subsequent to membership? Are there any members who are not free of the City of London? Do persons exercising any particular trade commonly become members of the company? If so, how many members of such trade are at present members of the company? What is the number of the members of the trade (if any), the name of which is borne by the company, who are members of the company?
4. Are freemen liable to disfranchisement, and if so, for what reasons, and what is the mode of disfranchisement?
5. Is the livery of the company limited or unlimited in number? What are the qualifications for election to the livery, who are the electors thereto, and how do the elections thereto take place, and what fees are payable on election? Are liverymen liable to removal from the livery, and for what reasons?

Return B.—1. Sons of freemen and persons who have served the full term of seven years' apprenticeship to freemen are admitted on the qualifications of patrimony and apprenticeship respectively.

Other persons are admitted by purchase.

The various grades are:—

Apprentices. Freemen. Liverymen.

All liverymen must be elected by the court of assistants.

Freemen can claim their admission by patrimony or servitude, and by election by the court of assistants in case of purchase.

Women have not been admitted to membership.

2. Freedom may be obtained by patrimony, servitude, and purchase.

Fees for the freedom by patrimony	5
Fees for the freedom by servitude	5
Fees for the freedom by purchase	12

3. (1.) No.
(2.) The freedom of the City of London must precede membership of the company.
None.
(3.) No.
(4.) Very often.
(5.) Many of our livery are box-makers, builders, cabinet makers, carvers and gilders.

4. There is no record of such disfranchisement.

5. The company is not limited in number.

Liverymen are elected by the court of assistants from freemen who have served or fined for the office of steward.

The fees on election for steward are—

(1.) 13*l.* in all cases.

(2.) To livery are for—

Freemen by patrimony	20
Freemen by servitude	45
Freemen by purchase	80

These fees have been altered form time to time by the livery.

Return C.—Number of members.

State (1) the present number of freemen, (2) the present number of the livery, (3) the present number of other members, (4) the number of admissions to the freedom by each mode respectively, and (5) the number of calls to the livery which have respectively taken place during each of the last preceding 10 years.

Return C.—1. Freemen now number about 100.

2. Liverymen now number 90.

3. No other members.

Part II.—E.

Return E.—Profits and privileges.

1. State with fullness what are the advantages, pecuniary or otherwise, incident to the position of a member of the company in each grade of membership, as (1) a freeman, (2) a liveryman, (3) master, warden, or otherwise a member of the governing body.

2. State the sums paid on an average annually for the preceding 10 years by the company to the members, according to the grades of membership mentioned above, and of what such sums consisted, whether (1) fees, and of what nature, (2) pensions, or (3) other payments, specifying the nature of the same respectively.

3. What circumstances are in practice held to constitute a claim to a pension or donation? State the number of present pensioners and donees respectively, and the amounts paid to them as such respectively. How many pensioners and donees are connected with the trade (if any), the name of which is borne by the company?

4. (1) What is the average standing of a member when he becomes a member of the governing body, and (2) what is the average time for which a member continues on the governing body?

5. Does the company carry on any and what trade or manufacture with which its title is directly or indirectly connected? If so, what is the capital, and from what source is it derived, and how are the profits (if any) divided or dealt with?

1. Freemen have no particular advantage, except that applications for relief, if in reduced circumstances, are entertained by the company.

The advantages possessed by a liveryman are as follows:—

The franchise of the city.

Social position and social intercourse.

Fees. Each member receives for each attendance at court of livery, 10*s.* 6*d.*

Each member is eligible for a pension of 30*l.* per annum, and so is a member's widow, if above the age of 50.

Masters and wardens have the same privileges as members of the court of assistants for the time being.

2. For attendance.

Paid to liverymen for fees, annual average sum for last 10 years, each 1*l.* 9*s.* 4*d.*

Paid to pensioners, annual average sum for last 10 years, 30*l.*; 25*l.* previous to 1879.

Paid to court of assistants for attendance last 10 years, 14*l.* each.

Donations to various charities, annual average, 10 years, 69*l.*

3. Decayed liverymen and their widows are eligible for pensions.

Decayed freemen are voted small sums of money by the court.

General and Technical Education.

Return M.—A statement as to whether the company does anything to subsidize or encourage education whether general or technical, and a return of the means (if any) so employed, and of the amount expended on such objects during each of the last preceding 10 years.

We have offered prizes to various schools of art, and in other respects have done what we can to benefit our trade.

PART V.—REFORM.

Part V.—Reform.

The Commissioners, being bound to report to Her Majesty "what measures (if any) are, in their judgment, expedient and necessary for improving or altering the constitution of the companies, or the appropriation or administration of the property or revenues thereof," respectfully invite the attention of the officers of the companies to this part of the commission.

The Commissioners will be very glad to receive and consider any suggestions respecting this part of the commission with which the officers of the companies may do the Commissioners the honour of favouring them.

The company has no suggestion to make.

APPENDIX A.

The following is an extract from the Report of the Municipal Commissioners appointed in 1834 :—

A 1. The Joiners and Ceilers appear as one of the ancient fraternities or mysteries of the city, and having presented their petition for a charter to Queen Elizabeth, all and every the freemen of the said mystery or faculty are incorporated as one body or community, by the before-mentioned name or style.

The charter grants that the same body or community may yearly and every year elect and make of that commonalty one master, two wardens, to survey, govern, order, and correct for that year the commonalty aforesaid, and all men, servants, and apprentices of the same in the City of London, and the suburbs of the same, or within two miles in circuit of the same city. It is (amongst other things) further granted that none exercise the said mystery or faculty within the city or suburbs of the same, or within two miles of the same except he should be thereunto admitted by the said master, wardens, or their successors for the time being.

The acts and ordinances made by the master, wardens, and assistants, with the assent of the commonalty of the mystery of Joiners, and of Ceilers or Carvers, were duly allowed by the Lord Keeper and the Chief Justices of the King's Bench and Common Pleas.

In these byelaws it is noticed that there were then 12 assistants of the said mystery or faculty, and it is therefore ordained that at all times thereafter there shall be 12 persons chosen by the body or commonalty of the mystery to be assistants to the master and wardens, and whensoever any of the said 12 assistants shall decease, or be deprived, or depart out of the City of London, or suburbs of the same, to dwell and remain out of the same city and suburbs by the space of one whole year, that then the commonalty or mystery, within 14 days next after every such decease, deprivation, or departure, shall and may elect and choose at their common hall in the City of London one other person as a new assistant, being one of the society of the mystery or faculty in the place of the one so dying, deprived, or departed, so that there may be continually 12 assistants of the mystery or faculty to the master and wardens.

And it is further ordained that on the feast day of St. James the Apostle then next ensuing, and so yearly from thenceforth for ever, the body or commonalty of the mystery, or the more part of them, elect one master and two wardens, to hold office for one year then next ensuing.

Some subsequent byelaws, dated 8th April 2 James I., were confirmed by the Lord Chancellor and the Chief Justices of the King's Bench and Common Pleas; and there is also a book entitled, "Byelaws of the Company of Joiners," made 1740, regulating fines, &c., much of which is obsolete or altered by subsequent regulations.

About the year 1613 great disputes arose in the company touching the mode of electing the officers, it having been urged by those members who were working joiners, that according to the true construction of the charter no one ought to be master or wardens of the company but such as should be working joiners, and for that purpose chosen by the "whole multitude," by which they would have excluded all members belonging to other trades from their places of government in the company.

A suit in Chancery having been instituted arising out of a money payment connected with these transactions, an order was made by the court, dated the 2nd March, 16 James I., whereby the matters in difference were referred to two aldermen, who, upon hearing of the parties, directed that the election of master, wardens, and other officers should be made by the assistants and livery of the company, as it had formerly been, and not otherwise; and that the master and wardens so from time to time elected should be of those which should be of the livery of the company without respect of trade. By consent of all parties this award was adopted as an order or byelaw of the company, and the same having been certified unto the Court of Chancery, it was, on the 25th June, 17 James I., ordered, adjudged, and decreed by the court that the order should be ratified and confirmed, and that the company should be as absolutely bound and concluded thereby as if the same had been judicially heard and decreed upon a solemn hearing of the cause. All such proceedings are exemplified under the Great Seal.

The charter grants that none shall exercise the mystery or faculty of Joiners and Ceilers within the city and suburbs, or within two miles of the same, except he be thereunto admitted by the master and wardens; and also, that they shall have the search, survey, and government of the commonalty of the said mystery, and of the works and merchandise within the before-mentioned limits; and by the byelaws, founded upon the charter of 14th Elizabeth, it is established that the coach-makers, trunk-makers, box-makers, cupboard-makers, foreign joiners, and joiners free of other companies, gunstock-makers, and flask-makers, within two miles circuit of the City of London, shall be subject to the government, &c. of this company.

Various orders of the court of aldermen have also been made for the purposes of enabling the company to exercise those privileges; and an act of common council was also passed, 9th October, 6 William and Mary, for the purpose of compelling all persons exercising the trades of joiners, carvers, box-makers, &c., within the City of London, and two miles circuit of the same, to become free of the company.

Conflicting claims have in former times been preferred by the carpenters, gun-makers, and other companies, and disputes have arisen with them; but these transactions date at a very distant period, upwards of 150 or 200 years ago, and the company do not attempt to enforce their jurisdiction, nor are persons carrying on the trade of a joiner compelled or required to enter the company. Persons of that trade do not prefer the company, and in fact very few belong to it.

The powers given by the charter and act of common council in relation to the "faculty" have been before noticed, but the searches, which the charter authorises, have long been discontinued, and the company no longer exercises any control over persons carrying on the trades which it was originally intended to govern and regulate.

A 2. The income of the company at the date of the Municipal Commissioners' Report was about 700*l.* a year.

LEATHERSELLERS' COMPANY.

THE Returns were made subject to the protest contained in the Return, Part V.

PART I.—FOUNDATION AND OBJECT.

RETURNS A to H., both inclusive.

RETURN A.—A statement of the date, ascertained or probable, of the foundation of the Company, and of the circumstances, so far as they can be discovered from its documents of foundation or archives, in which the Company had its origin.

RETURN B.—A list of the charters, charters of inspeximus, and other instruments of a similar nature, whether originals or copies, which have been at any time in the possession of the Company, together with an abstract of the purport of each, regard being specially had to any evidence which it may contain as to the object of the foundation of the Company.

RETURN C.—A list of any trust-deeds, "founding, regulating, or affecting" the Company, with the date of each, the names of the parties thereto, and an abstract of the purport of each.

RETURN D.—A list with dates of any "decrees of Court," whether of the Courts of Common Law or of Chancery, or of any Acts of the Court of Aldermen or of Court of Common Council, "regulating or affecting" the Company, with a statement of the effect of each decision.

RETURN E.—A list of any other documents, not included in the descriptions in the preceding returns, which "found, regulate, or affect" the Company, with dates and an abstract of the effect of each.

RETURN F.—A concise history of the Company, from the time of its foundation to the present day, with special reference to the inquiry contained in the Commission as to "the objects for which the Company was founded," and "how far those objects are now being carried into effect."

RETURN G.—Has the Company a licence in mortmain? When was such licence granted (referring to the document by description)? What is its extent, and to what extent is it now unexhausted?

RETURN H.—Is there vested in the Company, and how, whether by charter, statute, order of the Court of Aldermen, Act of Common Council, or otherwise, any right of exercising superintendence over, or any duty or discretion to encourage in any way, any and what art, trade, or business? State the nature and local limits of such control. In what manner, and to what extent, is such control now exercised? If such control is not now exercised, state the circumstances under which its exercise has fallen into desuetude.

A.—Dealers in leather are supposed to have existed as a society or corporation in Britain from the time of the Romans.

The "leathersellers," as a company, are first mentioned about A.D. 1372, in Edward III.'s reign, when their "probi homines," or "bons gentz," their wardens or seniors, came before the Court of Aldermen, together with those of the craft of Pursers, afterwards amalgamated with the Leathersellers' Company, and jointly presented a bill or "supplication" desiring some stringent regulations to be made for the prevention of the sale of other than genuine leather, and to prevent fraudulent colouring of leather.

The record, after quoting a former ordinance now lost, but to this effect—That no man of the mistery of pursers should put to sale leather for other than it was, nor should leather of sheep scraped on the back counterfeited to leather of roo by divers colours, stained in deceit of the people, and that no dyer of leather who meddles with staining should receive nor put in colour such manner of leather of sheep so scraped and bruised on the back to any manner of colour so stained on the pain of grievous forfeiture towards the mayor and commonalty; and if such manner of leather of sheep should be afterwards found stained over such scraping and counterfeiture in deceit of the people, that it should be burnt by judgment of the mayor and aldermen. And now many men sell leather of calf in such manner, scraped, counterfeited to leather of roo by divers colours, stained in deceit of the people,—gives the following prayer:—"That it please you to ordain that like prohibition be made of leather of calf counterfeited to leather of roo, and on the same pain as is aforesaid of leather of sheep; and that the same ordinances be holden among leathersellers and all others. And that the dyers of leathers for the said misteries who now are, or for the time to come shall be sworn before you to keep the ordinance before said, on certain pain by you therefore to be ordained, as others of this mistery before this time have been sworn, for common profit of the people. Also that no dyer of leather cause to stain in the brasill, for any leathersellers or purser to him delivered for to stain his leathers, the leathers of any other; nor in the dye which any such dyer shall have sold and ordained to any other of the leathersellers and pursers aforesaid by them from him covenanted; so that everyone have his full dye which belongs to him rightfully, to have for oftentimes part of their leather which is privately withdrawn from them, as well as leather of others of another mistery, are stained in the brasill of the said leathersellers and pursers to their very great damage. And that no such dyer receive to stain, nor cause to stain, any leather in any dye by him made for less than one pound or a half as they use of leather. And that two leathersellers of Chepe and two pursers of the Bridge be chosen and sworn before you every year by assent of the men of the said misteries to oversee the same misteries and (to see) that the points aforesaid be kept in the form aforesaid, and the defaults which thereof they shall find loyally to present to you from time to time."

The Court of Aldermen, by their common consent, ratified the above.

A.D. 1377 to 1399.—The leathersellers were known as a corporation in London, and were governed by ordinances.

A.D. 1444, 22nd Henry VI.—The first charter of incorporation was granted to the Company. It is still in their possession, and, "after reciting the petition of "Thomas Bigge and fourteen others, men of mistery of "leathersellers of the city of London, sets forth an "ordinance made by Richard Whittington, mayor, and "the aldermen of the city, 21 Richard II., A.D. 1398, "that two or four of the better or more approved men of "the mistery should yearly be chosen and sworn to guard "and oversee defaults in the same mistery, and to present, "from time to time, to the mayor and chamber of the "said city aforesaid for the time being; and that none of "the mistery aforesaid, to wit, master or servant, should "be rebellious or contrarious to such men so chosen and

" sworn, duly exercising search in the said mistery, nor " points, or laces, unless they were well and sufficiently " made, nor straps of the leather of sheep or calf, nor " thereof any other work, should falsely or deceitfully be " wrought to the deception of the people under pain of the " heavy punishment upon such cases ordained, and the " payment of 6*s.* 8*d.*; to wit, to the use of the Chamber of " the city aforesaid 40*d.*, and to the use of the said " mistery 40*d.*"

This charter ratifies and confirms the above ordinance of 21 Richard II.

Gives authority to execute the same.

Gives authority for the time of the yearly election of four wardens.

And incorporates the wardens and mistery of leathersellers of London with perpetual succession.

To have a common seal.

To plead and be impleaded—answer and be answered.

Prohibits fraudulent practices in the working of leathers.

Ordains the power of search, not only in the city of London and in the liberty of the same, but also in other cities, vills, boroughs, places, fairs, chepings, and markets through the realm.

Imposes fines for deceitful wares.

Disposes of such fines.

Requires wardens to be presented to the Lord Mayor, and to be sworn to rule the mistery and community.

Gives power to hold assemblies and grant liveries.

Also to make ordinances for the sound governance and rule of the same mistery.

B.—The Company's charters are as follow:—

22nd Henry VI., A.D. 1444, August 19.

An English translation is sent herewith.

[The translation of this charter comprises five brief sheets of manuscript.]

1 Elizabeth, A.D. 1559, June 26.

Confirmation after inspeximus. "The Queen, &c. We " have inspected the letters patent of the Lord Henry, " late King of England the 7th, our grandfather, of " confirmation made in these words, ' Henry by the grace " ' of God, &c., in the 22nd year of our reign. Now we the " ' aforesaid letters and all and singular the things in the " ' same contained holding good and acceptable, them, for " ' us, our heirs, and successors, so much as in us is, do " ' accept and approve, and to our beloved William Allen, " ' alderman of our city of London, aforesaid, now master " ' of the art or mystery aforesaid, Robert Eschington, " ' Richard Pype, and Ralph Manley, now wardens of the " ' same mistery, and to their successors, we ratify and " ' confirm as the letters aforesaid in themselves " ' reasonably testify.' In witness of which thing, &c. " Witness the Queen at Westminster the 26th of June, in " the first year of her reign.

" For 53*s.* 4*d.* paid in the Hanaper."

2 James I., A.D. 1604, July 24th.—A charter was granted with powers similar to those contained in that of Henry VI., and with the right of search, sealing, &c.

An abstract of this charter is as follows:—

24th July 1604, 2 James I.

Reciting, the wardens of the mistery of leathersellers, London, from time whereof memory of man runneth not to the contrary, had had, used, and enjoyed divers liberties, customs, franchises, immunities, and pre-eminences, as well by reason of divers charters and letters patent to them and their predecessors theretofore made and granted, as also by reason of divers prescriptions and customs by them of ancient time used:

And reciting also, our well beloved subjects, the then wardens of the mistery of leathersellers, London, had been humble suitors that, for the better government, ruling, and bettering of the mistery aforesaid, Grace and Munificence Royal in that behalf to them would graciously exhibit and extend; and that the aforesaid wardens of the mistery of leathersellers, London, into one body corporate and politic, by the name of the Wardens and Society of the Mistery or Art of the Leathersellers of the City of London, by letters patent, would vouchsafe newly to ratify, confirm, make, ordain, constitute, erect, and create, with augmentation and addition of certain liberties for the common good of the said mistery or art, as it should best seem expedient.

His said Majesty therefore, graciously affecting the bettering of the said mistery or art, and willing that from thenceforth for ever continually there might be had one certain and undoubted manner of and for the good rule and government of the mistery or art aforesaid, and of all men occupying and exercising the said mistery or art, and hoping that if the wardens of the mistery or art aforesaid, and their successors, might enjoy more ample honors, liberties, and privileges of our grant, that then to the services which they might do and perform to us, our heirs and successors, they might know themselves to be more specially and strongly obliged, of our special grace, and of our certain knowledge and mere motion, as also at the humble suit of the said wardens of the mistery of leathersellers, London, for us, our heirs and successors, did grant and confirm unto the said wardens of the mistery of leathersellers, London, that they, said wardens of the mistery of leathersellers, London, from thenceforth for ever might and should be, by virtue of those presents, one body corporate and politic in deed and in name, by the name of Wardens and Society of the Mistery or Art of the Leathersellers of the City of London; and them, by the name of Wardens and Society of the Mistery or Art of the Leathersellers of the City of London, one body corporate and politic in deed and name, really and fully, for us, our heirs and successors, did erect, make, ordain, constitute, declare, and confirm by those presents; and that by the same name they should have a perpetual succession, and that they, and their successors, by the name of Wardens and Society of the Mistery or Art of the Leathersellers of the City of London, might and should be perpetually, in time to come, persons able and in law capable to have, purchase, receive, and possess messuages, lands, tenements, liberties, privileges, jurisdictions, franchises, and hereditaments, of whatsoever nature kind, or quality they should be, to them and their successors, in fee and perpetuity, or for term of year or years, or otherwise howsoever; and also goods and chattels, and whatsoever other things of what kind, name, nature, quality, or condition the same should be; and also to give, grant, demise, alien, assign, and dispose lands, tenements, and heredits, and all and singular other acts and things to do and execute, by the name aforesaid; and that by the same name of Wardens and Society of the Mistery or Art of the Leathersellers of the City of London they might and should implead and be impleaded, answer and be answered, defend and be defended, in whatsoever courts and places, and before whatsoever judges and justices, and other persons and officers of us, our heirs and successors, in all and singular actions, pleas, suits, complaints, causes, matters, and demands whatsoever, of whatsoever kind, nature, quality, or condition the same be, and should be, in the same manner and form as any other liege people of the realm of England were, persons able and capable in law, or any other body corporate and politic within realm of England, could or might have, purchase, receive, possess, enjoy, retain, give, grant, demise, alien, assign, and dispose, implead and be impleaded, answer and be answered, defend and be defended, do permit, or execute; and that the Wardens and Society of the Mistery or Art of the Leathersellers of the City of London aforesaid, for ever, should have a common seal to serve for the doing of the causes and businesses of them and their successors whatsoever, and that it should be lawful for the said Wardens and Society of the Mistery or Art of the Leathersellers of the City of London aforesaid that seal at their pleasure from time to time to break, change, and to make new as to them it should seem best to be made and done. And further did grant to the foresaid Wardens and Society of the Mistery or Art of the Leathersellers of the City of London, and to their successors, that from thenceforth for ever there should be four of the society aforesaid, in manner as thereafter in those presents is mentioned, to be chosen, which should be and should be named Wardens of the Mistery or Art of the Leathersellers of the City of London aforesaid; and also that likewise there should be four and twenty of the society aforesaid, to be chosen in form thereafter in those presents mentioned which should be named assistants of the mistery or art of the leathersellers of the City of London, and from time to time they should be assistants and helpers to the said wardens for the time being in all causes, businesses, and matters touching or concerning the said society. And further did grant to the foresaid Wardens and Society of the Mistery or Art of the Leathersellers of the City of London, and to their successors, that the wardens and assistants of the mistery or art aforesaid for the time being or the greater part of them (whereof two of the wardens aforesaid for the time being be two), upon public summons therefor to be made being for that purpose met together, should have full power and authority to make, constitute, and ordain from time to time laws, statutes, constitutions, decrees, and ordinances reasonable in writing whatsoever, which to them or the greater part of them (whereof two of the wardens aforesaid for the time being be two) should seem to be good, wholesome, profitable, honest, and necessary, according to their sound discretion, for the good rule and government of the said Wardens and Society of the Mistery or Art aforesaid, and all and singular other persons of the said mistery or art of the leathersellers within the city of London aforesaid, the liberties and precincts of the same exercising and occupying, and for declaration in what manner and order the same wardens and assistants and all and singular officers and ministers of the mistery or art aforesaid, in their offices, functions, ministreys, arts, and businesses within the city aforesaid, and the liberties and precincts of the same, for the time being, should behave, carry, and demean themselves for the further public good, common profit, and good government of the mistery or art aforesaid and government of the same, and for all other matters and causes whatsoever the said mistery or art aforesaid touching or in anywise concerning; and that the said wardens and assistants of the mistery or art aforesaid for the time being, or the greater part of them, whereof two of the wardens of the mistery or art aforesaid for the time being be two, as often as they should make, ordain, or establish such laws, institutions, rights, ordinances, and constitutions in form aforesaid, and such and the like pains, punishments, and penalties, by imprisonment of the body or by fines and amerciaments or by both of them, against and upon all offending against such laws, rights, ordinances, and constitutions, or any of them (which to the said wardens and assistants for the time being, or the greater part of them, whereof two of the wardens of the mistery or art aforesaid for the time being be two, should seem most necessary, fit, and requisite for the observing of the same laws, ordinances, and constitutions, to make, ordain, limit, and provide, and the same fines and amerciaments they should and might levy and have to the use of the said wardens and society, and their successors, without any interruption of us, our heirs or successors, or of any officers or ministers of us, our heirs or successors, or without any account to us, our heirs or successors to be therefore rendered; all and singular which ordinances, rights, and constitutions, so as aforesaid to be made, should be observed, under the pains in the same to be contained, so that such laws, ordinances, constitutions, imprisonments, fines, and amerciaments be reasonable, and not repugnant nor contrary to the laws, statutes, customs, or rights of our realm of England; and, for the better execution of our will and grant in that behalf by those presents, did assign, name, create, constitute, and make our well beloved Thomas Wood, Christopher Robinson, George Hubbersty, and Robert Coller to be the four first and modern wardens of the said mistery or art of the leathersellers of the city of London, to continue in the aforesaid office of wardens of the aforesaid mistery or art from the date of those presents until the 15th day after the feast or day of Corpus Christi next coming, and from hence until four other unto that office of wardens of the mistery or art aforesaid should be elected and preferred, according to the ordinances and provisions in those presents expressed and declared, if the said Thomas Wood, Christopher Robinson, George Hubberstee, and Robert Coller should so long live, unless in the meantime, for their ill government or ill behaving themselves in that behalf, or for any other cause reasonable, they should be removed from the said office, or any of them should be removed; and by those presents did assign, name, constitute, and make our well beloved Radmus Prat, Thomas Perryn, James Chibell, Thomas Fretherne, John Miller, Egidin Duncombe, John Jefferson, Michael Blenco, Thomas Morley, Edward Barkam, William Smith, Thomas Pulford, John Stonehouse, Richard Fox, Martin Burrell, Edward Kemes, Richard Welby, Robert Holmsden, Henry Vincent, Richard Butler, Richard Ironside, Andrew Wyman, John Sudbury, and John Kighley to be the first and modern assistants of the mistery or art of the leathersellers of the city of London aforesaid, to continue in the said offices during their natural lives, unless in the meantime, for ill government or ill behaving themselves in that behalf, or for any other cause reasonable, they should be removed, or any of them should be removed; and that it should be lawful for the said wardens and assistants for the time being, or the greater part of them for the time being, whereof two of the wardens of the mistery or art aforesaid for the time being should be two, at their pleasure, from time to time, after the death or removal of any of the aforesaid modern assistants of the mistery or art aforesaid, or of any other assistants of the same mistery or art which thereafter should be, to choose, nominate, and admit from time to time such and so many of the more ancient and worthiest of the freemen of the same mistery or art as it should seem to be best to them into the assistants of the mistery or art aforesaid, and that he or they, after they are so as aforesaid elected and nominated, should take a corporal oath before the wardens of the mistery or art aforesaid for the time being to execute the said office rightly, well, and honestly in all things touching the said office, so nevertheless that the number of assistants aforesaid did not at any time exceed the number of four and twenty persons, and any one or others of the assistants aforesaid for the time being or which thereafter should be for any cause reasonable to remove, and another or others newly to elect, institute, and admit. And further did grant to the aforesaid wardens and society, and their successors, that the aforesaid wardens and assistants of the mistery or art aforesaid for the time being, or the greater part of them, in time to come, perpetually should and might have power and authority every year for ever in the 15th day next after the feast or day of Corpus Christi, to elect and nominate, and that they might and should choose and nominate, four of the freemen of the society aforesaid, which should be wardens of the mistery or art aforesaid, for one year then next following, and that they which so as aforesaid into the offices of wardens of the mistery or art aforesaid should be elected and preferred, the said office for one whole year then next following they might and should execute, having first taken a corporal oath before the last wardens, their predecessors, or two of them, and so many of the assistants of the mistery or art aforesaid which then should be present, to execute the said office rightly, well, and faithfully in all things concerning the said office, and if it should happen any of the wardens of the mistery or art aforesaid to die, or from the said office to be removed, within one year after that he or they should so as aforesaid be elected and preferred unto the said office (which wardens and every of them for ill government or for any other cause reasonable, by the rest of the four wardens and assistants or the greater part of them, we will should be removed), that then and so often it should and might be lawful to so many of the said wardens and assistants which should then survive or remain, or to the greater part of them, at their pleasure, to elect and prefer one other or more to be warden or wardens of the mistery or art aforesaid, according to the ordinances and provisions above by those presents declared, to execute and exercise the aforesaid office or offices of warden or wardens of the mistery or art aforesaid until the aforesaid 15th day after the feast or day of Corpus Christi then next following, having first taken a corporal oath in form aforesaid, and so so often and whensoever the case should so happen. And further by those presents did give and grant to the aforesaid Wardens and Society of the Mistery or Art of the Leathersellers of the City of London, and to their successors, that the wardens of the mistery or art aforesaid for the time being and their deputies in that behalf lawfully authorized, from thenceforth, from time to time and at all reasonable and convenient times, should have the full oversight, search, and correction of all and singular the several kinds of skins and pelts in English called buff leather, shamoy leather, Spanish leather, staggs leather rough or smooth, bucks leather, calfs leather, sheeps leather, lambs leather, kidds leather frized or grained, dressed or wrought in oil, allum, shoemack, or bark, or tawed, and of all wares and things of the same skins and pelts or of any of them made or wrought within the city of London, the suburbs, liberties, and precincts of the same, or to the said city, suburbs, liberties, or precincts of the same, from time to time to be brought or conveyed to be sold and put to sale by any person or persons whatsoever, before the said skins and pelts aforesaid, or things and wares thereof made and wrought, or any of them, be sold or put to sale to any our subject or subjects whatsoever, be by the foresaid wardens or some of them, or their deputies, searched and overlooked upon pain of forfeiture of the said skins and pelts and wares and things thereof made and wrought, or the value of the said skins and pelts, wares, and things so sold or put to sale. And further did grant and confirm to the foresaid Wardens and Society of the Mistery or Art of the Leathersellers of the City of London, and to their successors, all and all manner of lawful liberties, franchises, immunities, exemptions, freedoms, jurisdictions, lands, tenements, and hereditaments which the wardens and society of the mistery or art aforesaid then had, held, used, and enjoyed, or which any of them or their predecessors by whatsoever name or names or by whatsoever incorporation, or by patent of whatsoever incorporation, heretofore they had had, held, used or enjoyed, or ought by reason or by pretext of any charters or letters patent by any of our progenitors or ancestors by any manner of means heretofore made, confirmed, or granted, or by any other lawful means, right, title, custom, use, or prescription heretofore lawfully used, had, or accustomed.

To have, hold, and enjoy to the said Wardens and Society of the Mistery or Art of the Leathersellers of the City of London aforesaid and to their successors for ever.

Yielding and paying therefor to us, our heirs and successors, so many such and the like yearly rents, sums of money, and demands, as for the same theretofore to us they had been accustomed to yield or pay, or which they ought to yield and pay.

And also granted to the foresaid Wardens and Society of the Mistery or Art of the Leathersellers of the City of London aforesaid, and to their successors, that they should and might fully have, hold, use, and enjoy for ever all liberties, free customs, privileges, authorities, and freedoms aforesaid, according to the tenor and effect of these our letters patent, without the let or hindrance of us, our heirs or successors, whatsoever; and would not that the said Wardens and Society of the Mistery or Art of the Leathersellers of the City of London, by reason of the premises, or any of them, by us, or by our heirs, justices, sheriffs, escheators, or other bailiffs or ministers of us, our heirs or successors, whatsoever theretofore, should be in anywise occasioned, molested, vexed, grieved, or troubled; willing, and by those presents, for us, our heirs and successors, commanding and charging, as well the treasurer, chancellor, and barons of the exchequer of us, our heirs and successors, and other justices of us, our heirs and successors, as also our attorney and solicitor general for the time being, and to every of them and to all other our officers and ministers whatsoever, that neither they, or any of them, any writ or summons of quo warranto or any other our writ, writs, or process whatsoever, against the said wardens and society of the mistery or art aforesaid, or any of them, for any causes or matters, offences, claims, or usurpation, or any of them, by them or any of them due, claimed, attempted, used, had, or usurped, before the day of the making of those presents, should prosecute or continue or do, or cause to be prosecuted or continued. We would also that the wardens and society of the mistery or art aforesaid, or any of them, by any justices, sheriffs, officers, or ministers aforesaid, in or for due use, claim, or abuse of other liberties, franchises, or jurisdictions, before the making of those our letters patent, should not be molested or impeached, or to the same or any of them be compelled to answer. We would also, and by those presents do grant to the foresaid wardens and society of the mistery or art aforesaid, that they might and should have those letters patent under the great seal of England in due manner made and sealed, without fine or fee, great or small, to us, in our hanaper or elsewhere, to our use therefore by any means to be rendered, paid, or done, so as express mention of the true yearly value or of any other value or certainty of the premises, or of any of them, or of any other gifts or grants by us, or by any our ancestors or progenitors, to the said wardens and society of the mistery or art aforesaid, before the time made in these presents be not made, or any statute, act, ordination, provision, proclamation, or restraint to the contrary thereafter theretofore had, made, set forth, ordained, or provided, or any other thing, cause, or matter whatsoever in any wise notwithstanding.

F. A concise History of the Leathersellers' Company:—

The date and method of the first formation of the Company is enveloped in great obscurity; but, as already stated, dealers in leather are supposed to have existed as a society or fellowship long before the time at which they were first regularly incorporated.

It has been already mentioned that the Leathersellers were spoken of as a society or mistery as early as the reign of Edward III. In the charter of confirmation of King James I. they are recited to be an ancient Company, subsisting as well by immemorial prescription as by divers charters and confirmations of former Kings. The charter of Henry VI. confirms, among other privileges, their livery, and alludes to and enlarges the powers they enjoyed in (and by implication previous to) the 21st year of Richard II. It further appears by the remains of certain constitutions of that year that the Company then was of some considerable standing.

Towards the end of Charles II.'s reign a surrender of many of the Company's powers under their latest charter (but not of the charter itself) was extorted from them by the Crown, and a new charter was in 1685 granted to the Company, grounded on that surrender. The livery was partly reconstituted in the same year by King James II.; but in the early part of 1689, after the commencement of the reign of King William III., the surrender was delivered back to the Company by the Lord Chancellor to be disposed of as the Court of Assistants should think fit and was thereupon cancelled. The new charter of King Charles II. was repudiated by the Company as being wholly grounded on an illegal surrender, and the Company has from that time proceeded, to use the words of their own minutes, "according to their antient charter and ordinances."

The objects of the original association, and of the body when at a later period duly incorporated, appear to have been the supervision and control of the leather trade, the prevention and punishment of frauds both in the manufacture of and dealing in leather, the supervision and control of those engaged in the trade and manufacture of leather, the maintenance of the exclusive right of dealing, and the prevention of encroachments, the regulation of the apprentices bound to members of the craft, the conduct of the Company's internal affairs, and also the making provision for such members as might become impoverished.

The Pouchmakers' craft, which up to that time existed as a separate society, was in the year 1517 united to and incorporated with the Leathersellers' Company, as another society or fellowship known as the "glovers-pursers" had previously done.

The powers and duties of the Company were defined at large by the charters of Henry VI. and James I., which conferred, inter alia, a right of search for spurious or defective leather, or, as they are called in one of the charters, "deceiptful wares," and authority to seal articles found to be genuine. These powers are known to have been exercised with more or less activity and stringency up to the year 1679, but no trace of any subsequent exercise of such power is found, nor from that time has the Company, so far as is known, acted in any way in the regulation or supervision of the trade in leather.

Their meetings for business were and are not infrequent, and at every period have usually concluded with a banquet or some gathering of a festive and social character, to certain of which the wives of the livery were to be invited.

The estates and property which the Company hold were acquired to some extent by bequests, but chiefly by purchase, and some considerable purchases have been made in later years. The means of purchase and the funds generally available for the operations of the Company were derived in the first instance from contributions from its members, who appear from a very early date to have made regular annual payments to a common fund, to a considerable extent from fines paid by offenders against honest dealing and trade regulations, but in part also from voluntary donations and bequests.

The Leathersellers' Company, in common with other guilds, were subjected, during the reigns of Elizabeth and her immediate successors, from time to time, to demands for forced loans and requisitions of other kinds from the Sovereign, and again to heavy exactions during the time of the Commonwealth, so much so as to have been reduced at one time to comparative poverty. A good deal of their valuable plate was sold during the reign of Charles I. and the Commonwealth to meet these demands, which were practically irresistible. The improved position of the Company has been the result of self-denial, care, and thrift on the part of the governing body during a century and a half, to the falling-in of building leases in recent times, and to the great increase in the value of property in the City of London and its neighbourhood.

G. The Company has a general licence in mortmain under the charter of James I.

H. Under the ordinances of 11th Charles I., the Company have the right to search for and to destroy bad leather and articles made of bad leather. This right had existed long before the grant of the charter of Henry VI. and was confirmed to them in the charter of James I., and also in the ordinances of 11th Charles I. above referred to.

The Company's right of search under the charter of Henry VI. extended beyond London to cities and towns throughout the kingdom.

Since Bartholomew Fair held in the year 1679 no search for "deceiptful wares" has been made, and the stamping of proper leather with the Company's arms has been discontinued.

PART II.—RETURN A.—CONSTITUTION AND PRIVILEGES OF MEMBERSHIP.

RETURN A.—Governing body.

1.—State the present constitution of the governing body of the Company; whether such constitution is according to the charter, and if not, in what respects such constitution varies therefrom, and when and how such alteration was made.

2.—State the qualifications for membership of the governing body of the Company, the times and methods of election, and the qualifications of the voters at elections to the governing body.

3.—State the functions of the governing body, and of the different members of the same respectively, and whether the members of the governing body pay any, and what, fees or fines on admission thereto, and whether they are paid any, and what, salaries or amounts in respect of their services respectively.

4.—State the nature of the business which comes before the governing body of the Company, the method adopted in transacting it, the times at which the governing body meets for business purposes, the way in which the opinions of the members are taken, and whether the resolutions and decisions of the governing body are published, or are otherwise accessible to all or any, and which, of the members of the Company.

5.—State whether the members of the governing body are liable to suspension or removal, on any and what grounds, and by what method such suspension or removal is effected.

6.—Has the Company any byelaws sanctioned by the Courts of Law, or by the Courts of Aldermen or of Common Council, or otherwise? State the effect of such byelaws.

1.—Four wardens, of whom the master is one, and twenty-four assistants, constitute the governing body.

Such constitution is in accordance with the charter of James I.

2.—Assistants must be freemen of the Company and of the City of London, and are always liverymen.

Each liveryman, to be qualified to become an assistant or one of the governing body, must first have been elected to serve the office of steward for Lord Mayor's Day, or to pay a fine for being excused from serving such office; and he must afterwards have served for one year the office of one of the two junior wardens. Liverymen who have so served are alone eligible for election as assistants.

The master or first warden, the three other wardens, and the assistants present, are the electors of a new assistant; and the election in all cases is by ballot.

Assistants are elected after vacancies in their number have been reported.

3.—The functions of the master, wardens, and Court of Assistants are to hold their quarterly and other courts and meetings, to bind apprentices, to admit freemen, to consider and to decide upon all matters relating to the management of the Company's estates and property, and of the estates under their care vested in them upon charitable trusts, the election of almspeople, and of members of the Court of Assistants and officers of the Company, and generally to superintend and conduct its affairs.

The master presides at all meetings. The wardens support him. In his absence a past master takes the chair.

Each assistant upon his election to the Court pays a contribution of 10*l.*, and upon his election as master another sum of 10*l.*, to a fund called the Benevolent Fund, intended for the relief of any member of the Court who might become necessitous.

The Courts are summoned for an hour named by notice, stating the principal matters to be brought before them, and the chair is taken one hour afterwards.

At the meetings of the Court of the Company, each assistant who inscribes his name in the attendance book before the master takes the chair, and attends during the sitting of the Court to assist in its deliberations until the close of the business, is paid a fee. Much of the business of the Company is, however, prepared for the consideration and decision of the Court by committees, for the attendance upon which no fee is paid.

4.—Before each court the master and wardens hold a meeting for the binding of apprentices to freemen, and to admit freemen by patrimony and by servitude.

Applications for leave to purchase the freedom are first considered at a court of assistants.

At each court the minutes of the proceedings of the last court and also of meetings of committees of the whole Court are read.

Reports are received of the deaths of assistants, liverymen, officers, pensioners, and of almsfolk; and arrangements are made for the election of their successors.

Reports from committees upon estates, finance, and other subjects are received and considered.

All elections are taken by ballot. Other matters are usually decided by a show of hands.

The resolutions and decisions of the Court are entered in the minute book, and are accessible to any of its members.

5.—By the ordinances of 11th Charles I. assistants are liable to dismission by the Court "for ill governance "or ill behaviour in that behalf or for any other reasonable cause."

No expulsion has ever been known to be required.

When the oath of office is administered to a new assistant he is furnished with a printed copy of the two following resolutions:—

Court, 5th day of August, 1806. It was resolved—"That, in future, if any member of the Court of Assistants "shall absent himself from the meetings of the Company "for two successive years, without having given such a "reason for his absence as shall be satisfactory to and "allowed by the Court, his place of an assistant shall be "considered vacant, and another liveryman be chosen in "his room."

Resolved—"That the oath of an assistant be printed "and sent to each member of the Court, with a copy of "the above resolution added thereto; and also be "delivered to every new assistant upon his taking his "seat in the Court."

Court, 8th of June, 1836. It was resolved—"That in "future no liveryman be eligible for election upon the "Court who has not paid 20*s.* in the pound; and that "upon the election of assistants they be not summoned to "be sworn into office until the minutes of their election "have been confirmed."

Court, 1st of November, 1876. It was resolved—"That "no election of any liveryman to the office of an assistant "shall be confirmed until he shall have signed the "following declaration:"

having been this day conditionally elected a member of the Court of Assistants of the Leathersellers' Company, hereby declare, that if I shall at any time hereafter become bankrupt or insolvent, or declare myself unable to meet my engagements, my office or place of an assistant shall be thereupon vacated.

Dated this day of one thousand eight hundred and 6.—The earliest byelaws affecting the regulation of the trade, as before stated, have been sanctioned by the Court of Aldermen.

The byelaws and ordinances of 11th Charles I. were sanctioned by the Lord Keeper of the Great Seal and by the two Chief Justices.

A.D. 1685, May 5, 1 James II.—A byelaw as to the reinstatement of the livery who had surrendered their privileges in the previous reign was sanctioned by the Court of Aldermen.

On 27th March 1778 the Court of Common Council passed an Act requiring leathersellers to be admitted to the freedom of the Company in preference to those of other Companies.

PART II.—RETURN B.—CONSTITUTION AND PRIVILEGES OF MEMBERSHIP.

RETURN B.—Admission to Membership.

1.—State the qualifications for membership of the Company, the several grades of membership of the Company, and whether women are admitted to membership.

2.—State the several modes in which the freedom of the Company may be obtained, the circumstances entitling an applicant to admission under each mode respectively, and the fees payable in respect of admission under each mode respectively.

3.—State whether persons exercising any particular trade are required by statute or otherwise to become free of the Company. Is there any process for compelling such persons to procure admission, or any process by which such persons are enabled themselves to procure admission, and are such processes enforced respectively, and to what extent? Do persons exercising any particular trade commonly become members of the Company? If so, how many members of such trade are at present members of the Company? State also (if the Company bears the name of any existing trade) how many members of such trade are members of the Company.

4.—Are freemen liable to disfranchisement, and if so, for what reasons, and what is the mode of disfranchisement?

5.—Is the livery of the Company limited or unlimited in number? What are the qualifications for election to the livery, who are the electors thereto, and how do the elections thereto take place, and what fees are payable on election? Are liverymen liable to removal from the livery, and for what reasons?

6.—State the number of apprentices bound at the Company's hall or otherwise under the auspices of the Company during each of the last 10 years, and state how many of such apprentices have been bound to members following the trade, if any, the name of which is borne by the Company. Has the Company in any, and what, cases paid the fees or premiums of such apprentices, and what has been the amount, if any, so expended in each of the last 10 years?

7.—Is the freedom of the City of London in any way a condition, precedent or subsequent, of membership of the Company? Are there any, and how many, members of the Company who are not free of the City of London?

1.—Persons are not admitted to membership of the Company until they have completed 21 years of age.

The grades of membership are freedom and livery.

The grade of freedom is obtained by right of birth, service, or purchase.

Women are entitled to the freedom by birth, service, purchase, and by courtesy as the widows of freemen.

Freemen only may be elected to the livery.

From liverymen all subsequent rank is attained by election at the hands of the governing body.

2.—The freedom may be obtained by patrimony, i.e., by right of birth after the admission to the freedom and marriage of the father; by servitude as an apprentice, of 14 years of age, bound to a freeman of the Company for seven years at the least, and by purchase or redemption.

Parties desirous to become free of the Company, who can supply satisfactory references as to their position in life and respectability, may make application for leave to purchase such freedom. The freedom being usually sought to be purchased as a qualification for applying to the Court to be elected upon the livery at a future date, an applicant for the same is allowed by the Court to attend at their next meeting to be admitted to the freedom, and before he attends the court he is given to understand that the fact of his purchase of the freedom does not give any claim to his election upon the livery.

The fees payable for admission to the freedom are—

By servitude or patrimony, including stamp duty, 1*l.* - - - - 2*l.* 11*s.* 0*d.*

3.—By the ordinances all "'foreigners' using any "manual act or occupation within the city of London, and "the suburbs and liberties thereof, should and ought to be "under the search and correction of the wardens of such "Company using the same, and to pay and contribute "towards their common charge as the free brethren of "the same do, and ought to do. And all persons, "'foreigners,' using whithing, staking, tawing, dressing, "washing, dyeing, painting, colouring, cutting, and "working of tawed leather, or making of gloves, vellum, "parchment, or wares thereof, within the city of London "and suburbs, and liberties thereof," are stated to "have "most commonly used to be admitted" to the freedom.

The Act of Common Council 27th March, 1778, as well as the ordinances of 1635, both previously referred to, require leathersellers to be made free of the Company.

There is no process by which a stranger or "foreigner" can compel the Company to admit him to their freedom.

About a century ago leathersellers were called upon to take up their freedom, and afterwards the "better sort" were called to be elected upon the livery.

The Company do not seek to compel "foreigners" to become free.

The trade members of the Company connected with leather are leathersellers, military contractors, harness makers, trunk makers, boot and shoe makers, and dealers in boots and shoes. There are also wholesale furriers. The present master is the head of a large firm of leathersellers in London, and of two firms in country towns.

4.—No freeman has been disfranchised.

5.—By the charter the number of the livery is not limited. The qualifications for election upon the livery are respectability and the possession of means. The Court of Assistants are the electors. The election takes place after the names of the candidates have been published in the summons to the assistants to attend the Court whereat election is appointed to be held, and it is made by ballot from a list of candidates, free of the Company and of the City of London. The livery fine is 100*l.*

Liverymen in adversity sometimes apply for the return of their livery fine; and after such fine has been repaid under an order of the Court, the recipient, though he still continues to be a freeman, ceases to be a liveryman, and his name is no longer printed in the yearly lists of the livery.

6.—Apprentices bound during the last 10 years:—

1875	7
1876	7
1877	10
1878	8
1879	5
1880	9

In all 67.

"Masters" are described in all the indentures as "citizens and leathersellers."

The Company never pay fees or premiums for apprentices or for their taking up their freedom.

7.—Every freeman of the Company is required to become free of the City of London before he exercises his privilege as a freeman of the Company by taking an apprentice or applying for election upon the livery.

One liveryman only, and that through an oversight, is known to be free of the Company and not of the City.

No information can be given as to the number of freemen not free of the City.

PART II.—RETURN C.—CONSTITUTION AND PRIVILEGES OF MEMBERSHIP.

RETURN C.—Number of members.

State (1) the present number of freemen, (2) the present number of the livery, (3) the present number of other members, (4) the number of admissions to the freedom by each mode respectively, and (5) the number of calls to the livery which have respectively taken place during each of the last preceding 10 years.

(1.) About 204 freemen are believed to be alive, including one honorary freeman. There is one freewoman.

(2.) Present number of the livery, 139.

The admissions to the freedom during 10 years ending 1880 have been as under :—

——	Patrimony.	Servitude.	Redemption.	Total.
1871	2	9	—	11
1872	6	4	2	12
1873	3	5	2	10

1875	1	2	1	4
1876	1	2	1	4
1877	2	3	—	5
1878	2	5	3	10
1879	11	3	2	16
1880	3	1	2	6
	36 +	39 +	14 =	89

Freemen desirous of election to livery, so soon as the Court approve of their suit, are inscribed in a list of candidates from which names the ballot is taken at an election. There are no "calls" to the livery.

PART II.—RETURN D.—CONSTITUTION AND PRIVILEGES OF MEMBERSHIP.

RETURN D.—Profits and Privileges.

1.—State with fulness what are the advantages, pecuniary or otherwise, incident to the position of a member of the Company in each grade of membership, as (1) a freeman, (2) a liveryman, (3) master, warden, or otherwise a member of the governing body.

2.—State the sums paid on an average annually for the preceding 10 years by the Company to the members according to the grades of membership mentioned above, and of what such sums consisted, whether (1) fees, and of what nature, (2) pensions, or (3) other payments, specifying the nature of the same respectively.

3.—What circumstances are in practice held to constitute a claim to a pension or donation? State the number of present pensioners and donees respectively, and the amounts paid to them as such respectively, and the number of present pensioners and donees respectively who are members of the trade, if any, the name of which is borne by the Company.

4.—(1) What is the average standing of a member of the Company when he is made a member of the governing body? and (2) for what number of years on an average does a member remain on the governing body?

5.—Does the Company carry on any, and what, trade or manufacture with which its title is directly or indirectly connected? In such case state out of what funds the capital is raised, the amount of capital, the profits, if any, for each of the last 10 years, and how such profits, if any, have been divided or otherwise dealt with during each of the last 10 years.

1. A freeman, being a freeman of the City of London, has the privilege to take from one to three apprentices at one time to be bound to him for seven years; to become an inmate of the city almshouses; and his children may be elected after his death to the Freemen's Orphan School for the City of London.

He is also eligible for the livery.

Young freemen commencing business may have sums of money advanced to them, under charitable foundations, upon loan at 1 and 2½ per cent. interest, under bond with sufficient securities.

Also, in case of adversity, a freeman of the Company is eligible for the gifts of Charles James Coverly, Theophilus Cater, and of other benefactors.

He is also eligible for the almshouses of the Company.

(2.) A liveryman free of the City of London is entitled to the above privileges, and also to vote in common hall for the election of Lord Mayor and Sheriffs, and if living within 25 miles of the Guildhall is entitled to vote for members of Parliament for the City of London.

He is also eligible for the following offices in the Company, viz :—

(1.) Steward.
(2.) Third warden and fourth or renter warden.
(3.) Assistant.
(4.) Second warden.
(5.) First warden or master.

2. The sums paid on an average annually for the 10 years ending 1880, by the Company to the members are :—

(2.) Pensions to widows of freemen, 177*l.* 12*s.*
(3.) Eleven almsmen and 10 almswomen, including sums received under wills of various benefactors, 837*l.* 4*s.* 6*d.*
(4.) Donations to other members, 324*l.* 2*s.* 10*d.*

3. Loss of business, failure of health, and general misfortune, not induced by extravagance, are deemed to constitute a claim for the Court's consideration of each case as it arises.

At Lady-day, 1881, the number of widows free by courtesy, who are pensioners, was 13, viz., 11 at ages ranging from 50 to 70, receiving 8*l.* a year each, amount 88*l.* a year; and two over 70 years of age, receiving 10*l.* a year each, amount 20*l.* a year; making together 108*l.* a year.

To all whom, as well as to other recipients of donations, sums of money are further given on the 30th January in every year.

The almspeople, 21 in number, each occupy separate residences.

The almsmen are poor freemen of the Company admitted by patrimony or servitude. Freemen who have been allowed to purchase their freedom, have sometimes been elected.

The recipients of donations, 30 in number, are either poor freemen, the widows, daughters, or grandchildren of freemen of the Company.

4. The average standing of a member when he is made one of the governing body is 30 years from the date of his election upon the livery, and each assistant, unless for special reasons, continues a member of the Court during his natural life. The average tenure of office by those who have died during the past 10 years is 18½ years.

5. The Company does not carry on any trade or manufacture whatever, and consequently no profits are made.

PART III.—OFFICERS AND SERVANTS.

RETURN A.—A list of the officers of the Company, with a statement of the duties of each, the amount of his salary and other emoluments, and whether or not he is a member of the Company.

RETURN B.—A list of the servants of the Company, with a statement of the duties of each, and of the amounts of their wages and other emoluments.

RETURN C.—A statement as to the mode in which the officers and servants of the Company are respectively appointed.

A. The officers of the Company are:

Clerk, surveyor, and beadle. The duties of the clerk.—The clerk attends to the business of the Company, and of the trust estates, under the direction of the master and wardens and Court of Assistants; attends all meetings; records the proceedings of the Court and committees; keeps the accounts and other books; has the custody of the books and muniments; collects all the rents; issues the summonses for the various meetings, and attends generally to the affairs of the Company.

The clerk is not a member of the Company.

The duties of the surveyor.—To report upon the state, condition, and value of the Company's corporate and trust estates. To see that repairs are carried out by tenants in accordance with the notices to repair. To report the progress of repairs, and of all building operations. To lay out all land suitable for building purposes, and to report upon its value and terms of letting. To obtain estimates for new roads and sewers, and generally to attend to the state and condition of the Company's property, whether trust or corporate.

He is a citizen of London, and a liveryman of the Company.

The duties of the beadle.—To attend all meetings of the Company, either at the hall or elsewhere. To prepare, issue, and deliver all summonses for meetings and livery dinners after having received form of such summonses from the clerk. He also pays all almsfolk at their houses and pensioners on their attendance at the hall, and has to be present at all elections by the livery in the Guildhall. He resides at the hall.

He is not a member of the Company.

B.—The servant of the Company is:

The hall keeper. The duties of the hall keeper.—To keep the hall, and all rooms therein, clean, and well aired. To daily open and shut the hall before and after office hours. To have the rooms occupied by the Court for their meetings properly prepared and all furniture cleaned and dusted. To prepare tea and coffee, with refreshment, for all meetings of the Court, and of the committees. She resides at the Hall.

Appointed 1861; present salary, 130*l.*

Fees 2*l.* 10*s.*

Gratuity to assistant, 52*l.* 10*s.*

C.—The officers of the Company, viz., clerk, surveyor, and beadle, as well as the hall keeper, are appointed by the Court annually.

PART IV.—RETURN C.

RETURN C (1).—A list of any properties of which the Company is trustee, with the names of the cestui que trust in each instance, the nature of the trust, the nature and description of the property, and a statement of the sums received by the Company in respect of the same, and of the manner in which such sums have been expended or disposed of during each of the last 10 years.

RETURN C (2).—A list of any properties of which the Company is cestui que trust, with the names of the trustees in each instance, the nature of the trust, the nature and description of the property, and a statement of the sums received by the Company in respect of the same during each of the preceding 10 years.

C (1).—The Company's trusts are set out in Part I. Return 1, page 6, and the objects of such trusts in schemes for their management in the Appendix.

C (2). Nil.

PART IV.—RETURN C.—APPENDIX.

C 1.—A.D. 1470, November 14.—Robert Ferbras, by his will of this date, gave to the Company two tenements in Allhallows-on-the-Wall, to pay to poor prisoners in London 40*s.*; to the wardens 3*s.* 4*d*; and for sustaining the poor of the Company the residue of the rents.

This property adjoined the land whereon was the first hall of the Company.

A.D. 1713.—By counterpart deed of this date it appears that the estate bequeathed by Ferbras was conveyed to the trustees of the Broad Street Ward schools in consideration of 450*l.* and of a rentcharge of 2*l.* a year to be paid to the Company.

In 1833 an information was filed by the Attorney-General against the Company.

And in 1836 a notice in the Company's minute book gives the result of the suit (which was probably effected by a compromise), viz. :—

That the defendants were to be charged with interest at 4 per cent. per annum upon the 450*l.* from November 1833, and out of such 450*l.* and interest the relator's costs were to be paid.

The payment of relator's costs reduced the capital of the fund to the sum of 430*l.* 3 per cent. consols, lately standing in the corporate name of the Company. Up to 1878 the sum of 12*l.* 18*s.*, the dividend, was annually distributed in January. The rentcharge of 2*l.* a year is still received of the school trustees. Since 1878, under a scheme administered at Mercers' Hall, the amount of 66*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*, part of the 430*l.* stock, was transferred to the Public Trustees of Charities, to satisfy the charge of 2*l.* a year for the relief of discharged prisoners.

A.D. 1531, June 6.—John Scraggs, by his will of this date, reciting a feoffment of lands in Southwark to the Company and another feoffment of lands in Redcross Street to be let, and the rents to be applied to the use of his will, directed the wardens to perform certain superstitious services, and to retain out of the rents yearly 3*l.* 8*s.* 4*d.* for certain purposes, and the residue to the use of the Company.

1 Edward VI., A.D. 1546.—By a certificate under an inquisition for superstitious uses, it appears that the lands charged with the uses in question, and with the above payments, were sold before the time of the inquisition. The Company annually paid up to 1878, 1*l.* 15*s.* The gifts now payable amount to 1*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*, viz. :—

To St. Olave Parish	0	6	8
St. Saviour do.	0	6	8
St. Mary Magdalene, Bermondsey	0	6	8
St. Thomas	0	3	4
St. George	0	3	4

In 1878 stock to produce 6*s.* 8*d.* a year has been transferred to the Official Trustees of Charities for the administration of the prisons scheme at Mercers' Hall. See Charity Commissioners' certificate.

35 Henry VIII., A.D. 1544, January 16th.—John Hasilwood, by his will of this date, bequeathed to the master and wardens of the Leathersellers 300*l.* sterling, a basin and ewer of silver of the value of 20 marks, a standing cup with a cover gilt of the value of 6*l.*, and a sow of lead weighing 11 cwt. 3 qrs. to purchase the estate of the then late monastery of St. Helen's, in London, to make therein a common hall, and "to the intent and purpose that they "and their successors for ever should be bound to me and "my executors by a sufficient writing obligatory, to be "advised by mine executors, to purchase as much land and "tenements or yearly profits for the yearly living and pay"ments to be paid for ever to four bedemen and three "bedewomen or almswomen, that is to say to each of them, "eightpence weekly, and to every one of them two sacks "of coals, every sack containing a quarter, to be delivered to "each of them between Hallowmas and Christmas, over "and besides their dwelling-houses to be provided for "them by the masters and wardens for the said bedemen "and bedewomen, rent free, within the site of the said late "monastery of St. Helen's," and those seven bedemen and bedewomen to be appointed and chosen from time to time, after the founder's decease, by the master and wardens of the said craft of the Leathersellers.

A.D. 1866.—The approaches to the almshouses in Clark's Place being very narrow, and through wooden partitions which, in the absence of any other outlet, would have rendered these dwellings very dangerous to life in case of fire, the Court, shortly after the above danger had been brought to the notice of Mr. Hare, inspector of charities, when he inquired at Leathersellers' Hall, in July 1864, into the charities administered by the Company, resolved to remove the seven almsfolk to new buildings adjoining other almshouses previously erected by the Company at Barnet.

A.D. 1865, Nov.—New almshouses having been erected at Barnet for the reception of the seven inmates of Mr. Hasilwood's almshouses in Clark's Place, the said inmates were removed accordingly.

Notice of the erection of the new almshouses, and of the removal of Clark's Place inmates, was given to the Charity Commissioners, together with a reference to their inspector's report; and the same was duly acknowledged by them.

The annual amounts expended in payment to the seven bedemen and bedewomen of 15*s.* a week each, of coals, and of repairs to their houses, including, in each year, the prescribed 12*l.* 2*s.* 8*d.* supplemented by the Company, have been as under:—

1872	297	0	6
1873	302	9	0
1874	298	15	3

1878	310	9	0

A.D. 1555, November 30.—Elizabeth Grasvenor, by her will of this date "gave certain lands at Shabcombe, "Devonshire, on failure of estates tail, to the Company on "trust to sell the same, and the money thereof coming to "distribute and give away in alms as well towards the "reparation of highways as also for and towards the marriage of certain poor maids, and relieving of the prisoners "and other poor people which shall be in and about the "City of London or elsewhere, as by the discretion of the "said wardens or the more part of the same Company for "the time being, shall be thought meet and convenient, "the said wardens deducting for their pains therein to be "taken so much of the money coming of the said manor "as by the discretion of the same Company or the more "part of them shall be thought meet."

A.D. 1601, September 11.—Robert Rogers, a Leatherseller and Merchant Adventurer, by his will of this date, "gave "400*l.* to the Company to be employed in lands, the best "pennyworth that they can get, and that the house should "have 40*s.* a year for ever, and the rest go to two poor "scholars, students of divinity at Cambridge, and two at "Oxford, to be maintained with the overplus of the same "revenue, to be equally divided betwixt the said scholars; "and he gave 200*l.* to the Company to be lent to four "young men at 6*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* interest, to be paid and to be "thus employed, viz.:

Poor prisoners of the City, in bread -	4	0	0
For coal for almspeople - - -	2	0	0
To the master and wardens, for to make them drink that give the alms -	0	10	0
To the clerk and beadle, 20*d.* a piece -	0	3	4

And he further gave 100*l.* to be lent to five young men, 20*l.* a-piece each, to pay half a 1,000 of good Kentish billets or 7*s.* in money yearly, in August, to the poor almspeople.

A.D. 1565, March 10.—Edward Taylor, formerly a master of this Company, by his will of this date, gave to the Company two messuages in St. Olave Jewry, to distribute amongst the poorest people in the Poultry Compter a kilderkin of beer and 12 pennyworth of bread, and the same to Wood Street Compter, Newgate, the Fleet, King's Bench, and the Marshalsea.

A.D. 1878.—All arrears of these payments, at one guinea per quarter, viz., for a kilderkin of beer 20*s.* and for bread 1*s.*, having been paid to this date, and the full payment to the six prisons being 25*l.* 4*s.* a year, the Company transferred to the Official Trustees of Charities an amount of stock to produce 25*l.* 4*s.* a year, to be administered by the prisons' trustees, at Mercers' Hall. See Charity Commissioners' certificate.

A.D. 1594, May 14.—Hugh Offley, twice master, by his will of this date gave to the Company money to be lent to:—

Two young freemen, at	3	6	8	100	0	0
Two other young freemen, at	0	13	4	20	0	0
Six young freemen of Bowyers' Company - -	0	15	0	30	0	0
Four young freemen of Fletchers' Company - -	0	10	0	20	0	0
In all	5	5	0 (a year interest on)	170	0	0

A.D. 1597, July 22nd.—John Elliott, master of the Company, by his will of this date, gave to the Company to be lent to a young freeman of the Company, also free of the Merchant Adventurers, interest gratis, 50*l.*, and to a poor young or old freeman, a handicraftsman, interest gratis, 10*l.*

A.D. 1612, Aug. 29th.—William Smyth, by his will of this date, gave to this Company, to be lent to two honest poor freemen, interest gratis, each 10*l.*=20*l.*

A.D. 1636, July 27th.—George Goodwynn, by his will of this date gave to the Company, to be lent amongst three young men using the trade of making gloves, interest gratis, to each 20 nobles=20*l.*

A.D. 1695, June 20th.—Samuel Baker, master of the Company, by his will of this date, gave to the Company, to be lent to five honest and industrious freemen of the Company in sums of three 50*l.* and two 25*l.*, at 1*l.* per cent., in all 2*l.* on 200*l.*

The above-named sums, omitting John Elliott's 10*l.*, amount to 460*l.*, and were the subject of one of Daniel Whittle Harvey's informations. Upon its settlement in 1835 a scheme was granted whereby all costs were ordered to be paid out of the 460*l.*, and a sum of 252*l.* 4*s.* 8*d.* is therefore now available to be advanced in certain proportions at interest of 2*l.* 10*s.* per cent. per annum.

A.D. 1605, June 1st.—Ann Elliott, the widow of a Leatherseller, by her will, gave to the Company 200*l.* to purchase lands of 10*l.* a year for the almspeople of the Company; and she also gave 100*l.* to the Company for an exhibition of 5*l.* a year to a poor scholar of Oxford or Cambridge.

A.D. 1617, September 5th.—William Moseley, a Leatherseller and a member of the Court, by his will gave to the Company 200*l.* to purchase lands and tenements, and to deduct from the rents thereof 1*l.* a year for the use of the Company, and to pay:—

Two thirds of the residue for a weekly sermon at Kinver;

One third to the free school at Kinver;

He also gave 100*l.* to purchase lands, and to deduct from the rents 10*s.* a year for the use of the Company, and to pay:—

The residue for some poor scholar at Oxford or Cambridge.

And further gave to the Company a legacy of 100*l.* in trust for Richard Moseley for his life, with remainder to his children, with proviso that in case the said Richard Moseley should die without children living at his decease, or they should die under 21, then he gave the 100*l.* to the Company, that out of the benefit and profit which should arise therefrom they should distribute 5*l.* yearly amongst the most needing and poorest of the Company for ever.

A.D. 1620, December 16th.—John Sudbury, a Leatherseller and a member of the Court, gave to the Company 80*l.*, to purchase land for the relief of poor people of the Company.

A.D. 1627.—An estate at Sydenham, in the parish of Lewisham, in the county of Kent, was purchased with 810*l.*, received as under, viz.:—

Ann Elliott	300
William Moseley	300
John Sudbury	80
The Company	130
	810

The Company received the gift over of the third legacy of William Moseley, on the death without issue of Richard Moseley, the cestui que trust of that legacy, and they retained the 100*l.* in part payment of their advance of 130*l.* made for the above purchase.

A.D. 1630, May 25th.—James Bunce, a Leatherseller, by his will of this date, gave 350*l.* to be invested by the Company in land, to make the following payments, viz.:—

	£	s.	d.
To the church of Otterden, to be paid every 10 years, per annum	1	0	0
To the minister of Otterden	8	0	0
To the poor of Otterden	1	0	0
To the poor of the Company	1	0	0
To the renter warden	1	0	0
To the clerk	0	13	4
To the beadle	0	6	8

A.D. 1634.—The sum of 110*l.*, part of the 350*l.*, was laid out by the Company in the purchase of lands at Sydenham, contiguous to the lands bought in 1627, and belonging to the charities of Elliott, Moseley, and Sudbury.

A.D. 1619, July 20th.—Robert Holmden, a member of the Court of Assistants, by his will of this date, gave to the Company a messuage, called the "George on Horseback," in Great Eastcheap, now No. 63, King William Street, upon conditions that they paid out of the said messuage yearly for ever 12*l.*, to be applied as follows:—

	£	s.	d.
For scholar at Cambridge or Oxford from Seven Oaks or Tunbridge schools	4	0	0
To six aged poor men or women free of the Company and not married into any other Company	6	0	0
To the renter warden for his pains	1	0	0
To the clerk	0	13	4
	12	0	0

A.D. 1625, April 28th.—Roger Daniell, formerly a master and King's printer, gave by his will of this date certain messuages and hereditaments in St. Botolph, Bishopsgate, to trustees, to pay 20*l.* a year to the Company, as follows:—

	£	s.	d.
For certain payments at Hertford	10	0	0
And for a lawful minister at Little All-hallows, London, for 12 sermons	5	0	0
Fifteen of the poorest people of that parish	3	0	0
Master and wardens of the Company	1	0	0
Clerk and beadle, each 5*s.*	0	10	0
Poor prisoners	0	10	0

For many years up to Midsummer 1868 the Grocers' Company paid to the Leathersellers' Company 10*l.* less 2*l.* King's tax, net 8*l.*, and the Company paid to Allhallows parish 8*l.* less 1*l.* 12*s.* King's tax, net 6*l.* 8*s.*

The sum of 336*l.* 18*s.* stock in consols, in the Accountant General's now Paymaster General's office, in the High Court of Chancery, ex parte Great Eastern Railway Company and the Leathersellers' Company, "the account of Roger Daniell's gift," now represents the property of this trust.

To satisfy the gifts of 10*s.* a year in respect of prisoners in the Poultry and Wood Street Compters, the Company transferred to the Official Trustees of Charities stock to produce 10*s.* a year. See Charity Commissioners' certificate.

A.D. 1638, September 28.—George Humble, by his will of this date, gave to the Company a messuage in Gracechurch Street, let at 9*l.* a year, to the intent that they should pay out of the rents for two poor scholars, one at Oxford and the other at Cambridge, 4*l.* a year each. George Humble also bequeathed 500*l.* to be lent out to five young freemen at 1*l.* per cent. interest on sums of 100*l.* each. George Humble also gave 200*l.* to be laid out and bestowed with what convenient speed may be in the purchasing some freehold land and tenements for the release out of Ludgate Prison of three, four, or five poor men debtors, those of the Leathersellers' Company to be preferred before others.

This charity was the subject of one of D. W. Harvey's informations, and in the year 1835 a decree was made by the Master of the Rolls, and in 1836 a scheme was settled whereby the costs of the suit were directed to be paid out of the sum of 500*l.*, and the balance to be lent at 1 per cent. per annum to young freemen upon certain conditions.

The rent of the house in Gracechurch Street was directed to be charged with 8*l.* a year for two exhibitions; the balance of rent, after payment of necessary outgoings, to be paid to poor freemen of the Company.

The sum of 200*l.* never having been invested in freehold property or laid out in any way, the Company were charged with interest at 4*l.* per cent. per annum from the 29th September, 1835.

Such yearly sum of 8*l.* was ordered to be applied in and towards the release of poor men debtors in the Ludgate side of the Whitecross Street Prison, freemen of the Company to be preferred.

In the year 1878 the sum of 266*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* stock was transferred to the Official Trustees of Charities, the dividends on such stock producing 8*l.* a year.

A.D. 1652.—The Rev. A. Colfe's will, dated 1656, prescribes certain trusts and payments that are fully described in the undermentioned scheme, granted in 1857.

[This scheme is set out in a small book sent with this Return, and occupies 20 pages of print.]

A.D. 1699, July 17th.—George Gooday, master 1695–6, by his will of this date, directed that 200*l.* should be paid to the Leathersellers' Company; and an annual rentcharge purchased of the trustees for the sale of fee-farm rents, paid by the Mercers' Company, and amounting to 13*s.* 4*d.* a year, was also bequeathed to the intent that the sixth almsperson in the Rev. A. Colfe's Almshouses, who is appointed by the Leathersellers' Company, should receive 21*d.* per week and every two years a gown.

The Company charges itself with the annual payment, viz., 1*s.* 9*d.* a week for 52 weeks=4*l.* 11*s.*

A.D. 1717, January 24th.—Theophilus Cater, by his will of this date, gave to the Company 1,200*l.* on condition that they should make the following payments:—

	£	s.	d.	£	s.	d.
For a sermon in Saint Andrew-by-the Wardrobe				1	10	0
To the reader				0	5	0
Clerk and sexton, 2*s.* 6*d.* each				0	5	0
Forty poor men, viz.:—	£	s.	d.
Ten freemen of the Company	10	0	0
Twenty-five poor men of Saint Ann, Blackfriars	25	0	0
Five poor men of Saint Andrew by the Wardrobe	5	0	0

1,400*l.* stock in consols, producing 42*l.* a year dividends, is set apart for this trust.

A.D. 1721, January 15th.—Jeremiah Bright, by indenture of this date, gave to the Company the sum of 150*l.* that they should pay to the poor of Ruislip, Middlesex, 5*l.* 10*s.*, and to the vicar, who sees to the distribution thereof, 10*s.* = 6*l.*

The Company charges itself with this annual payment.

A.D. 1725, January 15th.—Sir James Eyton, a master, gave to the Company the sum of 25*l.*, on condition that they should pay to the poor of the parish at Bangor Is-y-Coed, Flintshire, the sum of 1*l.* annually. The Company charges itself with this annual payment.

A.D. 1767, October 4th.—Bartholomew Tayer, by his will of this date, directed the Company to receive the dividends of his money in the stocks, and to pay the interest of 100*l.* stock to six widows in the Lewisham almshouses, the interest of 100*l.* stock to the meeting at Sydenham, the interest of 300*l.* stock to Magdalen Hospital, and the interest of 600*l.* stock to the Foundling Hospital for Boys and Girls.

After a suit in Chancery in 1792 the Company's proportion of 200*l.* stock appears to have been reduced to 155*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* 3 per cent. consols, of the dividends upon which 2*l.* 6*s.* 6*d.* is annually paid to the almspeople at Lewisham.

A.D. 1799, Feb 21.—Thomas Ewer, a liveryman of the Company, by his will of this date, directed the sum of 1,000*l.* consols to be transferred by his executors unto the corporation of the Company, to the intent to pay out of the dividends thereof:—

To the church officers of the parish of Highworth, Wilts, on the 10th February, to be distributed, on the 21st February yearly, to 10 poor men or women of the said parish, who shall not receive alms from the parish, and who shall be thought most deserving, the sum of 20*s.* each -	10	0	0
To the schoolmaster for the time being of the charity school there, on the said 21st February in every year, upon his transmitting the names of 10 boys then instructed by him in such school -	10	0	0
To the trustees for their use, in such manner as they shall think right, as a reward for their trouble which they may have in executing the trusts in his said will in them reposed - - - -	10	0	0

The sum of 20*l.* is annually paid to the parish upon the certificate of the vicar, churchwardens, and schoolmaster.

A.D. 1836, Jan. 15.—Charles James Coverly, a member of the Court of the Weavers' Company and a tenant of the Leathersellers' Company, by his will made several bequests to the Leathersellers' Company. His will was administered in Chancery.

There now stands in the corporate name of the Company for this trust, in three per cent. consols, the sum of 2,400*l.* stock, from the dividends upon which, 72*l.* a year, the following payments are made, viz.:—

Twelve almswomen of the Weavers' Company, 4*l.* a year each - - -	48	0	0
A freeman of the Leathersellers', annually chosen for a single gift - - -	12	0	0
The six almsfolk, inmates of the Lewisham almshouses, 2*l.* a year each - -	12	0	0

[NOTE.—The Company also sent a small printed book containing schemes, as settled by the Court of Chancery, for the future administration of—

1. Mr. Offley's and other gifts, 1835.
2. Mr. Humble's gift, 1836.
3. Mr. Rogers' gift, 1845.
4. Mrs. Grasvenor's gift, 1845.
5. Mrs. Elliott's and other gifts, 1846.]

(3.) Each assistant pays a contribution of 10 pounds to the Benevolent Fund upon his election to the Court, but no fine.

(4.) Each liveryman elected to the office of steward pays the ordinance fine of 12 pounds for a dinner on Lord Mayor's Day, and the further sum of eight pounds as a contribution to the Benevolent Fund.

Each assistant elected to the office of master pays a contribution of 10 pounds to the Benevolent Fund.

Wardens not willing to serve when elected, or wardens elected to the office of master, and not being willing to serve that office, have paid each a fine of 25*l.* for non-service under the ordinances.

During the last 10 years the fines so received have amounted to 125*l.*

(5.) Other sources of income are:—

PART IV.—RETURN F.

RETURN F 1.—The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them what has been the increase or decrease, from year to year, of the Company's income during the last 10 years, and whether there is reason to expect any, and what, increase or decrease during the next 10 years, together with a statement of the reasons for such expectation.

RETURN F 2.—The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them whether there is reason to expect any permanent increase or decrease in value in any of the estates or properties of the Company, and if so, to what extent, together with a statement of the reasons for such expectation.

1, 2. The variations of the Company's income during the last 10 years have been inconsiderable, and there is no expectation of any significant increase or decrease in the income or value of their corporate estates during the next 10 years, except such possible increase as may arise from the letting upon building leases of the property in and near London Wall, known as Leathersellers' Buildings.

PART IV.—RETURN G.

RETURN G.— The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them—

1. What is the system of management of the Company's estates and property?
2. In what way, and by whom, the several receipts and payments are taken and made, and under what control?
3. In what way the Company's accounts are audited?
4. Whether the Company's accounts are published, or are accessible to all or any, and which, of the members of the Company.

1. The system of the management of the Company's estates is that the property should be let to responsible tenants at the highest rents to be obtained by tender or after advertisement. The lessee covenants to pay rent quarterly at the hall, to insure, to pay rates and taxes, to repair, and not to assign or demise without licence from the lessors. The surveyor reports from time to time upon the state of the several estates.

2. The rents are received by the clerk. The payments are made by him under order of the Court.

3. The accounts of the Company, and of their trust estates, are closed at the end of every year, and are audited by the whole Court of Assistants in the month of February.

4. The accounts are not published, but they are accessible to the master, wardens, and all members of the Court of Assistants.

PART IV.—RETURN H.

RETURN H.—A detailed statement of the income from all sources of the Company during each of the preceding 10 years, a detailed statement of the Company's expenditure during each of such 10 years, and a detailed statement of the assets and liabilities of the Company at the end of each of such 10 years.

H.— Receipts for 10 years, ending 31st December each year, 1871 to 1880.

PART IV.—RETURN K.

RETURN K. (Position in relation to Universities.)—Has the Company any relation with the Universities, or with any of the colleges in them? State the nature and extent of such relations. Has the Company any scholarships or exhibitions tenable at any of the Universities in its gift? Give a list of such scholarships or exhibitions, with their respective values and the periods for which they are respectively tenable; and state how the same are awarded, whether the competition is limited to relations of members, or whether persons so related have any preference.

The Company, as trustees, elect to exhibitions at Oxford and Cambridge in respect of the following trusts:—

Mrs. Ann Elliott's, one tenable at either.

Mr. Wm. Mosley's, one tenable at either.

Mr. Robert Rogers's, two students in divinity, Oxford, two ditto Cambridge.

Mr. George Humble, 2, one at each.

Mr. Robert Holmden, one at either.

The elections to exhibitions are held at a court of assistants, after full notice given to the candidates, and to the Vice-chancellors of Oxford and Cambridge.

The candidates are chosen by a majority of votes at a ballot.

From the year 1861 to 1873 an examination was, upon the application of the Court of Assistants, held at each University of the candidates upon each list for the approaching elections.

The position in the examination, and a consideration of the means of the candidates, guided the choice of the electors of those days.

Founders' kin can claim a preference for Mrs. Elliott's and Mr. Moseley's Trust exhibitions.

PART IV.—RETURN L.

RETURN L 1. (Church Patronage.)—Are there any ecclesiastical benefices in the gift of the Company?

2.—Give a list of such benefices, stating—

a. The county where situated.

b. The name of the parish or place.

c. The net annual value of such benefice, so near as it can be given, together with any other particulars affecting the value, present or prospective, of such benefice.

3.—Has the Company granted any augumentations of income to the incumbents of such benefices and if so, to what extent, and out of what funds?

4.—Has the Company during the last 10 years built or contributed, and to what extent, to the building of any churches or chapels, and when and out of what funds in each case respectively?

Under William Moseley's Trust the Company have the appointment of a preacher in the parish church of Kinver, Staffordshire. The Rev. John Hodgson, M.A., the vicar of Kinver, was elected by the Court of the Leathersellers' Company to the preachership in 1867.

Under the same trust the Company pay an annual amount of half the preacher's stipend to the governing body of Kinver grammar school, in aid of the master of the same grammar school.

Under the Rev. A. Colfe's scheme the Company have to elect the head master of the Lewisham grammar school from three masters of arts chosen by the head masters of Westminster School, St. Paul's School, and Merchant Taylors' School for their selection.

Under Alderman James Bunce's Trust the Company appoint a sufficient learned minister of God's word to catechise the children in the parish church of Otterden, Kent, whereof the Rev. W. A. Paxton is the present rector. In the year 1850 Mr. Paxton was chosen to be catechiser, and he employs the annual stipend (over 120*l.* a year) in maintaining the national school of his parish.

3. The Company have made no extra payments to the incumbents above named.

4. The Company has, during the last 10 years, paid sums of money, amounting to 110*l.* 10*s.*, in aid of the restoration and of new stained glass windows in the parish church of Saint Helen, Bishopsgate Within.

The Company has also given a donation of twenty guineas towards a new organ in the church of Saint Andrew-by-the-Wardrobe, where they attend on the 30th January every year to distribute a charitable bequest.

PART IV.—RETURN M.

RETURN M. (General and Technical Education).—A statement as to whether the Company does anything to subsidise or encourage education, whether general or technical, and a return of the means (if any) so employed, and of the amount expended on such objects, during each of the last preceding 10 years.

The Company have out of their corporate funds from time to time made advances for the benefit, and the carrying on, of the Rev. A. Colfe's grammar school at Lewisham, and made advances for the benefit of an English school of the same foundation until its close about three years ago. At the end of 1880 the advances made to the Rev. A. Colfe's Trust amounted to 3,100*l.* 13*s.* 8*d.*

The Company have, under the sanction of the Charity Commissioners, also advanced by way of loan, for roads and sewers on a building estate belonging to the Rev. A. Colfe's Trust, sums amounting with interest to 7,258*l.* 9*s.* 7*d.*, the particulars of which are given Part IV., Return B 1.

To the City and Guilds of London Institute the Company have made donations of 500*l.* in each of the years 1879, 1880, and 1881.

A member of the Court of Assistants represents the Company at the general council of the institute.

PART V.—REFORM AND PROTEST.

The Court of the Company have anxiously considered what answers it is their duty to make to the Commissioners' interrogatories, having regard, on the one hand, to the respect which is due to Her Majesty's Commission, and, on the other hand, to their duties to the society which they represent, and whose rights and interests they are bound to protect. They are advised that, from a legal point of view, the Commissioners have no power to compel the required returns to be made, and that the Companies would be acting within their clear constitutional and legal rights if they declined to submit to any examination. The Court of the Company, however, do not wish to stand upon the ground of mere legal right; they have furnished the required information, reserving only such privileged matters relating to the title to their own private and corporate property as every public or private body or person is universally held entitled, if not bound, to withhold for its protection. The Company further wish to place on record that, in furnishing the foregoing replies, they do so without admitting any jurisdiction on the part of the Crown, or the right of any power in the State, to inquire or examine into the Company's private affairs and property, or to deal therewith in disregard of the rights and interests of its members. In respect to their own property, however acquired, they claim the rights which every individual, as well as every corporate body, according to English law, possesses for its protection and preservation—none the less, and indeed à fortiori—because their rights and privileges have existed for centuries past, and have been handed down to the present members of the Company from a long line of predecessors; and they therefore formally claim that the returns hereby made shall be deemed to be, as they are, made without prejudice to the rights, privileges, and franchises of the Company and its members, as absolute owners of all property vested in them, and not subjected by a donor or founder to any specific trust for the benefit of others.

The Company maintain that their corporate estates and property are as fully and unquestionably private property, and as little liable to interference in its management, as the funds of the numerous commercial companies or associations established, which have been incorporated by various methods, possessing a capital provided by the contributions of their constituent members, past or present; and they further claim and insist that if the private and beneficial rights, interests, and privileges which they so maintain and assert, and which for centuries they have exercised without any question or disputes, are now or hereafter to be disputed, the question shall be referred to the decision of the ordinary tribunals of the country in due process of law.

The Company have no measure of "reform" to suggest, feeling quite competent to conduct their own affairs under their present constitution.

APPENDIX A.

The Company gave considerable information to the Municipal Commission appointed in 1834. The following is an extract from the Report:—

"No particulars were given of the property of the Company; but the clerk stated to the Commissioners that, including the charities and every source of income, the funds of the Company are below 4,000*l.* per annum; of this sum, 1,500*l.* per annum is applied in charities, &c., and in specific bequests or trusts, of which particulars are given in the Reports of the Charity Commissioners."

LORINERS' COMPANY.

The company made their returns subject to the following protest :—

This company begs to state that it claims its corporate property as its own absolutely, and not subject to any trust whatever. This company makes this return so far as regards such corporate property voluntarily, and contends that the Crown has no right illegally to interfere with the way in which the company chooses to dispose of it. Lastly, this company claims to have all questions having reference to its right to its corporate property tried and decided by the courts of law as established in this country and by no other authority whatsoever.

PART I.—Foundation and Object.

A. to H.

Return A.—A statement of the date, ascertained or probable, of the foundation of the company, and of the circumstances, so far as they can be discovered from its documents of foundation or archives, in which the company had its origin.

Return B.—A list of the charters, charters of inspeximus, and other instruments of a similar nature, whether originals or copies, which have been at any time in the possession of the company, together with an abstract of the purport of each, regard being specially had to any evidence which it may contain as to the object of the foundation of the company.

Return C.—A list of any trust deeds "founding, regulating, or affecting" the company, with the date of each, the names of the parties thereto, and an abstract of the purport of each.

Return D.—A list with dates of any "decrees of court," whether of the Courts of Common Law or of Chancery, or of any Acts of the Court of Aldermen or of the Court of Common Council, "regulating or affecting" the company, with a statement of the effect of each decision.

Return E.—A list of any other documents, not included in the descriptions in the preceding returns, which "found, regulate, or affect" the company, with dates and an abstract of the effect of each.

Return F.—A concise history of the company, from the time of its foundation to the present day, with special reference to the inquiry contained in the Commission as to "the objects for which the company was founded," and "how far those objects are now being carried into effect."

Return G.—Has the company a licence in mortmain? When was such licence granted (referring to the document by description)? What is its extent, and to what extent is it now unexhausted?

Return H.—Is there vested in the company, and how, whether by charter, statute, order of the Court of Aldermen, Act of Common Council, or otherwise, any right of exercising superintendence over, or any duty or discretion to encourage in any way, any and what art, trade, or business? State the nature and local limits of such control. In what manner and to what extent is such control now exercised? If such control is not now exercised, state the circumstances under which its exercise has fallen into desuetude.

A.—The Loriners of London appear first to have recorded their ordinances as a mystery in 1245, and from that date can easily trace their proceedings in regard to the regulation of the trade.

B.—The only charter of the company was granted by Queen Anne, 1711, for the purpose of regulating the internal government of the body.

C., D., and E.—None.

F.—The members of the trade formed themselves originally into an association and governed and regulated the trade in the City of London to a great extent. By the earliest ordinances approved in 1245, the craft were authorised to regulate and govern the trade within the City and liberties, which powers were confirmed from time to time by subsequent ordinances in accordance with the custom of the City. Since becoming a chartered company in 1711, they seem only to have been a municipal association carrying on their proceedings in pursuance of the Charter granted to them.

G.—Under the charter the company has power to become possessors of lands, &c. of the clear yearly value of five hundred pounds beyond holding a house or common hall.

H.—No power whatever, either by charter, orders of Court of Aldermen or Common Council, to exercise any control over or regulate the trade.

Part I.—I. Charities.

The company has no charities.

PART II.—Constitution and Privileges of Membership.

A.

Return A.—Governing Body.

1. State the present constitution of the governing body of the company, whether such constitution is according to the charter, and, if not, in what respects such constitution varies therefrom, and when and how such alteration was made.
2. State the qualifications for membership of the governing body of the company, the time and periods of election, and the qualifications of the voters at elections to the governing body.
3. State the functions of the governing body, and of the different members of the same respectively, and whether the members of the governing body pay any and what fees or fines on admission thereto, and whether they are paid any and what salaries or amounts in respect of their services respectively.

4. State the nature of the business which comes before the governing body of the company, the method adopted in transacting it, the times at which the governing body meets for business purposes, the way in which the opinions of the members are taken, and whether the resolutions and decisions of the governing body are published, or are otherwise accessible to any or all, and which of, the members of the company.

5. State whether the members of the governing body are liable to suspension or removal on any and what grounds, and by what method such suspension or removal is effected.

6. Has the company any byelaws sanctioned by the Courts of Law or Chancery, or by the Courts of Aldermen or of Common Council, or otherwise? State the effect of such byelaws.

1. The governing body is in strict accordance with the charter which says there shall be—

A master,
Two wardens,
24 assistants,

of which the master and wardens are always to be three.

2. The qualifications for becoming a member of the governing body are—

1st. Freedom of the company.
2nd. Admission on the livery of the company.
3rd. Paying the fine or serving the office of steward.

On vacancies arising, the court proceed to elect as follows, viz.:—

Every vacancy is officially announced in writing to each member of the court. A list of 24 liverymen is taken according to seniority, and laid on the table for inspection, at the court next after the official announcement of every vacancy. At the then succeeding court the same list is read twice, and on the second reading the master or presiding warden puts each name to the vote, reducing the list to two by show of hands, or by a poll if demanded; the election then takes place by the same process from the two candidates so elected. Every member of the court is at liberty to propose at the first of these two courts the addition to the list of any name or names from among the livery, in which case the addition is read and put to the vote at the second court as part of the list.

3. The governing body manage the affairs of the company.

The master and wardens are chosen annually, and some matters of detail are left to them to carry out. In the absence of the master the senior warden presides at all meetings of the company.

The assistants' duties are to attend all courts and consider the various affairs of the company brought before them. Fines for non-attendances were abolished some 10 years since.

The fees, &c. are as under:—

Payable on election as assistant -	50
,, ,, junior warden -	6
,, ,, senior warden -	6
,, ,, master -	12
Total -	74

Each member receives 1*l.* 1*s.* for punctual attendance at quarterly courts, if present until adjournment.

4. There are four fixed courts, besides courts held for special purposes when business requires it during the year.

The ruling body regulate every matter in connection with the company.

All matters are decided by show of hands; no resolution of the court can be suspended or rescinded without previous notice, of which every member must be warned.

Minutes of all proceedings are entered in the minute book, and read, confirmed (if correct), and signed by the chairman at a subsequent meeting.

Only members of the court can inspect the minute books of the company, except by order of the master of the company.

5. By the charter the court with a quorum of seven have power to remove, deprive, or disfranchise any warden or member of the corporation that shall "demean himself" in his or their office or offices, or as a member of the said company, and with a quorum of eleven can remove a master for misbehaviour.

6. The byelaws were approved in accordance with statute 19, Henry 7th, by the Lord Chancellor, and the Lord Chief Justices of the King's Bench and Common Pleas to give effect in detail to the provisions of the charter.

Part II.—B.

Return B.—Admission to Membership.

1. State the qualifications for membership of the company, the several grades of membership of the company, and whether women are admitted to membership.

2. State the several modes in which the freedom of the company may be obtained, the circumstances entitling an applicant to admission under each mode respectively, and the fees payable in respect of admission under each mode respectively.

3. State whether persons exercising any particular trade are required by statute or otherwise to become free of the company. Is there any process by which members of such trade can become members of the company, and is there any process for compelling such persons to procure admission, and are such processes enforced, and to what extent? Is the freedom of the City of London in any and what way a condition precedent or subsequent to membership? Are there any members who are not free of the City of London? Do persons exercising any particular trade commonly become members of the company? If so, how many members of such trade are at present members of the company? What is the number of the members of the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the company, who are members of the Company?

4. Are freemen liable to disfranchisement, and, if so, for what reasons, and what is the mode of disfranchisement?

5. Is the livery of the company limited or unlimited in number? What are the qualifications for election to the livery, who are the electors thereto, and how do the elections thereto take place, and what fees are payable on election? Are liverymen liable to removal from the livery, and for what reasons?

1. The qualifications for admission are patrimonial right, seven years servitude with a freeman of the company, and redemption; in the latter case the nomination of some member of the company is necessary. Females are admissible to freedom.

The grades of membership are:—

Freeman or freewoman.
Liveryman.
Assistant.
Warden.
Master.

2. The mode and circumstances of admission have been given in reply, Return B. 1.

The fees payable are:—

	£	s.	d.
Freedom by patrimony -	1	7	4
,, service -	1	7	4
,, redemption -	3	7	6

Mem.—The above includes Government stamp duty.

N.B.—There are certain official fees in addition to above.

3. There is no obligation of any kind for any person in the trade to become a member, but some join voluntarily.

Every freeman of the company is expected to and usually does become a freeman of London; not more than six have omitted to do so; no conditions are, however, laid down either by charter or otherwise.

4. Under the charter any member of the corporation can be disfranchised by a court with a quorum of seven composing it.

5. The numbers of the livery are unlimited. Freemen of the company are eligible, and in every case with the consent or by special election of the court, who have also power to remove a liveryman. The fine on admission is 12*l.*

N.B.—A further payment of 6*l.* for steward's fine is demanded of every liveryman of two years standing.

PART II.—C.

RETURN C.—Number of Members.

State (1) the present number of freemen, (2) the present number of the livery, (3) the present number of other members, (4) the number of admissions to the freedom by each mode respectively, and (5) the number of calls to the livery which have respectively taken place during each of the last preceding 10 years.

(1.) Freemen - - - - (about) 1391.
(2.) Livery - - - - „ 438.
(3.) None.

PART II.—D.

RETURN D.—(1) State the number of apprentices bound at the Company's Hall, or otherwise under the auspices of the company, during each of the last 10 years. (2.) State how many have been bound during each of the last 10 years to members following the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the company. (3) In what cases and to what extent have the fees or premiums of such apprentice been paid by the company?

(1.)	1870	12

(2.) Probably not more than six apprentices were bound to masters following the trade of the company.

(3.) The company has never paid any premiums in respect to above.

PART II.—E.

RETURN E.—Profits and Privileges.

1. State, with fullness, what are the advantages, pecuniary or otherwise, incident to the position of a member of the company in each grade of membership, as (1) a freeman, (2) a liveryman, (3) master, warden, or otherwise a member of the governing body.

2. State the sums paid on an average annually for the preceding 10 years by the company to the members according to the grades of membership mentioned above, and of what such sums consisted, whether (1) fees, and of what nature, (2) pensions, or (3) other payments, specifying the nature of the same respectively.

3. What circumstances are in practice held to constitute a claim to a pension or donation? State the number of present pensioners and donees respectively, and the amounts paid to them as such respectively. How many pensioners and donees are connected with the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the company?

4. (1) What is the average standing of a member when he becomes a member of the governing body, and (2) what is the average time for which a member continues on the governing body?

5 Does the company carry on any and what trade or manufacture with which its title is directly or indirectly connected? If so, what is the capital, and from what sources is it derived, and how are the profits (if any) divided or dealt with?

1. The advantages are social, charitable, municipal, and parliamentary to each grade except that of freeman.

PART IV.—E.

RETURN E.—Internal sources of Income.

A list of the annual amounts received in each of the last 10 years in respect of (1) fees paid on admission to the freedom of the company, specifying the amounts paid in respect of each mode of admission thereto; (2) fines or fees paid on admission to the livery of the company; (3) fines or fees paid by members on coming on the court of the company; (4) fines or fees paid on promotion to the offices of warden, &c.; (5) any other internal sources of income, specifying the same.

The company considers an answer to the above as of no possible utility to the Commissioners.

PART IV.—G.

RETURN G.—The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them—

1. What is the system of management of the company's estates and property?
2. In what way, and by whom, the several receipts and payments are taken and made, and under what control?
3. In what way the company's accounts are audited?
4. Whether the company's accounts are published, or are accessible to all or any, and which of the members of the company?

1. None.
2. The receipts and payments are taken and made by the clerk under the control and direction of the court.
3. By three members of the livery selected by ballot annually, together with the master, two past masters, and three assistants of the court.
4. The company's accounts are not published, but they are accessible to any liveryman, besides which, three members of the livery are appointed annually to audit the accounts in detail.

Part IV.—H.

Return H.—A detailed statement of the income from all sources of the company during each of the preceding 10 years, a detailed statement of the company's expenditure during each of such 10 years, and a detailed statement of the assets and liabilities of the company at the end of each of the last 10 years.

This company declines to set out in detail the manner in which its own income has been expended during each of the last 10 years, or to give any detailed statement of its assets and liabilities at the end of each such 10 years, but the gross expenditure for that period is as follows, viz :—

1879	1,127	9	6

PART V.—Reform.

Part V.—Reform.

The Commissioners, being bound to report to Her Majesty "what measures (if any) are, in their "judgment, expedient and necessary for improving or altering the constitution of the companies, or the "appropriation or administration of the property or revenues thereof," respectfully invite the attention of the officers of the companies to this part of the Commission.

The Commissioners will be very glad to receive and consider any suggestions respecting this part of the Commission with which the officers of the companies may do the Commissioners the honour of favouring them.

The company have no suggestions to make.

APPENDIX A.

The company gave full information to the Municipal Commissioners appointed in 1834. Their income was then about 412*l.* a year, and arose from dividends and fees, the company having no real estate.

APPENDIX B.

City of London Livery Companies' Commission,
2, Victoria Street, S.W.,
February 15th, 1882.

Sir,

The Commissioners desire me to thank, on their behalf, the Court of the Worshipful Company of Loriners for the information which they have supplied to the Commissioners; but at the same time to state that that information is not, in their judgment, quite sufficient. I am, therefore, to draw attention to some points in the returns of the Loriners' Company, with regard to which the Commissioners must respectfully ask for further information. The points are mentioned in the Schedule hereto, and the Commissioners will be much obliged to the Court if they will let them have the additional particulars as soon as possible.

I am, Sir,
Your obedient servant,
H. D. Warr,
Secretary.

The Clerk of the Worshipful Company of Loriners.

Schedule.

The Commissioners respectfully request further information in regard to the following point:—

Part IV. Circular, 14th August 1880.

The return does not contain a detailed statement of the Company's expenditure during the last 10 years.

Worshipful Company of Loriners,
Guildhall, E.C.,
4th April, 1882.

Sir,

Your communication of the 15th February was laid before a quarterly court held yesterday.

In reply, I am desired to inform you that it has been decided not to vary the answers forwarded to the Commissioners.

I have the honour to be, Sir,
Your obedient servant,
T. Davies Sewell,
Clerk.

H. D. Warr, Esq.,
Secretary, City of London
Livery Companies' Commission.

MASONS' COMPANY.

The returns were accompanied by a letter from which the following is an extract:

"In these answers the company have furnished full particulars of the only trust for charitable purposes of which they have any knowledge. With respect to such of their property as is not subject to any trust, the company are advised that they might properly as well as legally decline to furnish any information. They are not, however, disposed to insist upon their strict right.

"They think it indeed their duty to claim before the Commissioners the right which they would be entitled to assert even in legal proceedings before courts having power to enforce discovery, of protecting from disclosure their titles to the private property of which they are in possession, but with this exception they have given such information as they hope will be found sufficient for the purposes of Her Majesty's Commission.

"But in giving this information the company desire in the most formal manner to state that their readiness to assist the Commission is not to be taken now or hereafter as any admission on their part of any right in the Crown or any other jurisdiction to inquire into their private property, or to deal with it in disregard of their rights.

"They desire also to record their claim, that if any question be made whether any particular property is subject to any trust, or is the private property of the company, every such question must be determined only by the courts of law."

PART I.—FOUNDATION AND OBJECT.

A. TO H.

RETURN A.—A statement of the date, ascertained or probable, of the foundation of the company, and of the circumstances, so far as they can be discovered from its documents of foundation or archives, in which the company had its origin.

RETURN B.—A list of the charters, charters of inspeximus, and other instruments of a similar nature, whether originals or copies, which have been at any time in the possession of the company, together with an abstract of the purport of each, regard being specially had to any evidence which it may contain as to the object of the foundation of the company.

RETURN C.—A list of any trust deeds "founding, regulating, or affecting" the company, with the date of each, the names of the parties thereto, and an abstract of the purport of each.

RETURN D.—A list with dates of any "decrees of Court," whether of the Courts of Common Law or of Chancery, or of any acts of the Court of Aldermen or of the Court of Common Council, "regulating or affecting," the Company, with a statement of the effect of each decision.

RETURN E.—A list of any other documents, not included in the descriptions in the preceding returns, which "found, regulate, or affect" the company, with dates and an abstract of the effect of each.

RETURN F.—A concise history of the company, from the time of its foundation to the present day, with special reference to the inquiry contained in the commission as to "the objects for which the company was founded," and "how far those objects are now being carried into effect."

RETURN G.—Has the Company a licence in mortmain?—When was such licence granted (referring to the document by description)? What is its extent, and to what extent is it now unexhausted?

RETURN H.—Is there vested in the company and how, whether by charter, statute, order of the court of Aldermen, act of Common Council, or otherwise, any right of exercising superintendence over, or any duty or discretion to encourage in any way, any and what art, trade, or business? State the nature and local limits of such control. In what manner and to what extent is such control now exercised? If such control is not now exercised, state the circumstances under which its exercise has fallen into desuetude.

A.—Nearly the whole of the Records of the Worshipful Company of Masons prior to the year 1666, appear to have been destroyed when the Hall of the Company was burned in the Fire of London. The only documents in existence of an earlier date are the Grant of Arms dated the 12th Edward 4th, by which Clarencieux granted to the Craft and Fellowship of Masons a Coat of Arms, which is the same as now used by the company, and a volume of accounts, the earliest of which is dated 1620, being the accounts of the "Master and Wardens of the Company of Free Masons within the City of London." In the heading of the accounts the company is so styled until the year 1655–6, from which date to the present time the accounts are headed as the accounts of "The Master and Wardens "of the Worshipful Company of Masons of the City of "London." The earliest charter now in their possession is the 29th Charles 2nd, A.D. 1677, granted on a petition by the master, wardens, and assistants of the Company of Masons in London, but there is nothing to show whether or not any earlier charter had been granted to them.

B.—The company have the charter of the 29th Charles 2nd above-mentioned, and a charter of the second year of James 2nd, which commences by reciting that the master, wardens, assistants, and commonalty of the company had surrendered all their powers. The charter of Charles 2nd was afterwards inspected and approved in the first year of the reign of Queen Anne. By the charter of 29th Charles 2nd, after reciting that "by an Act of the 5th Queen "Elizabeth the art or occupation of a mason is reckoned "as a distinct art or occupation, and that all persons "exercising the said art were enabled and might be com-"pelled to take apprentices to be instructed in the occupa-"tion;" And reciting that the master, wardens, and assistants of the company of masons had prayed that the King would by letters patent incorporate them a body politic, to have perpetual succession, and to grant them such privileges as should seem requisite, and that the King willing and intending the support and continuance of the company, and the improvement of the art and mystery of masons, and to the end that they might be empowered to suppress and reform all abuses practised by persons who took upon them, without sufficient skill and knowledge, to work at a mason's trade, and that the art and mystery of masons within the City o London might from thenceforth be artificially and truly exercised, His Majesty ordained and granted that all and singular masons, freemen of the City of London, and all other subjects that should thereafter use the art in London or Westminster, or within seven miles' compass of the same on either side, should be one body incorporated politic by the name of master wardens, assistants, and commonalty of the art and mystery of masons of the City of London, and by the now-stating charter His Majesty did constitute and declare them to be one body corporate, so that they and their successors should have perpetual succession with power to hold lands notwithstanding the statute of mortmain, and that the company should have a common seal. The charter further ordained that there should be one master, two wardens, and 24 or more assistants of the company, with power to make and alter from time to time laws, ordinances, and constitutions which to them or any eight of them should seem necessary or expedient touching or concerning the improvement or trade of the mystery of masons, and the order, rule, and good government of the company, and for defraying the public and necessary charge of the company and corporation. The charter provided that the election of master and wardens should take place annually on the 14th June, that the assistants should be chosen for life unless removed for evil government or misbehaviour or other awful or reasonable cause, and the charter granted power to the master, wardens, assistants, and commonalty of the company in lawful manner at all convenient times at any place within seven miles of the City of London or Westminster, where any stones to be used in the art or trade of masonry should be brought or laid, to search and see whether the same be of proper length and measure, and whether the same be well and sufficiently wrought, and if any should be found and adjudged to be illwrought and not amended at the charges of the owner before the same should be put to sell, or that any of them which should be so faulty that they cannot be made good, then they should be disposed of according to law, and that the company should have power to depute any fit persons to make and execute such views and searches. The charter further ordained that no person should exercise the art or mystery of a mason, unless he served seven years' apprenticeship to a freeman of the company, or to some other person lawfully exercising the art. The charter provided that nothing in it should be considered to extend to the prejudice, obstruction, or hindrance of the erecting, building, and finishing of the Cathedral Church of St. Paul in the City of London or any other church in the same city, which was formerly burnt down by the late dreadful fire which happened in London. The charter further provided that the master, wardens, and assistants of the company, and all other persons admitted into or employed by the company, should before execution of their offices take the oaths of allegiance and supremacy. The charter of the 9th February in the second year of King James, after reciting that the master, wardens, and commonalty of the company of masons had surrendered all their powers, franchise, privileges, and authorities of or concerning the electing, nominating, constituting, being or appointing of any persons into the several offices of master, wardens, assistants, and clerk, which surrender His Majesty had accepted: The charter constituted, declared, and granted that all and singular masons freemen of our said city of London, and all other subjects that then did or thereafter should use the same trade within the cities of London and Westminster or seven miles' compass of the same, and all other persons that then were or should thereafter be free of the company, should be one body incorporate politic, by the name of master, wardens, or commonalty of the art or mystery of the masons of the City of London, and the charter ordained and constituted them one body corporate and politic accordingly. The charter granted to the same company power to hold any manor, lands, tenements, liberties, jurisdictions, franchise, rents, reversions, privileges, and other hereditaments in fee and perpetuity or for years, the statute of mortmain or any other statute notwithstanding, and the same lands to sell again, lease, and grant, and to sue and be sued as a corporate body, with similar directions as to the officers of the company to those contained in the charter granted by Charles 2nd.

C.—There are no trust deeds founding, regulating, or affecting the company.

D.—There are no decrees of court, either of the Courts of Common Law or Chancery, or any Court of Aldermen, or Court of Common Council, regulating or affecting the company, except the byelaws herein-after referred to.

E.—There are no other documents which found, regulate, or affect the company other than the charters and the byelaws in pursuance thereof.

G.—The company has the licence in mortmain contained in the charter. The licence is unlimited.

H.—By the charter, the company are authorised at any place within seven miles of the City of London or Westminster, where any stones to be used in the art or trade of masonry should be brought or laid, to search and see whether the same be of proper length and measure, and whether the same be well and sufficiently wrought, and if any shall be found and adjudged to be ill-wrought and not amended at the charges of the owner before the same be put to sell, and that any of them that are so faulty that they cannot be amended and made good in size, thickness, and goodness, the same should be then disposed of according to law and the Company was to be at liberty to appoint deputies or agents to make such searches.

The byelaws provide the mode of carrying out this search, authorise the appointment of deputies for the purpose, direct that no person of the company shall buy any stone to use or to sell again until the same has been viewed, and that the company shall have for their pains in viewing and searching 4*d.* per 100 of purbeck stone, and 4*d.* per ton of other stone. It also provides that if His Majesty or his successors should have occasion for the masons to erect, build, repair, or finish any structure, fort, tower, castle, or fortification, it should be lawful for the master, wardens, and assistants of the company to provide so many masons members of the company as should be from time to time ordered by the master mason of England for the time being.

It appears by the accounts of the company that this privilege of searching stone was exercised down to the year . No entry appears in the accounts of the company of any receipts from this source after the year , and the right has not been exercised within the memory of any living member of the company.

PART I.

Return I.—A list of the charities, eleemosynary, educational or otherwise, which are under the management of the Company, stating in each case the name of the founder, the date and nature of the benefaction, its original and its present value, and the purposes to which the funds have been applied for each of the last preceding ten years:

The only charity under the management of the company is one under the will of Mr. Joshua Marshall, a former master of the company, who died in the year 1678, and under an agreement entered into in that year between the company and the executors of Joshua Marshall, whereby after reciting that the company of Masons, whereof he was a member, were indebted to the testator in the sum of 200*l.*; the testator remitted and bequeathed unto the same company the debt which they owed him, upon condition that they in consideration thereof should yearly for ever pay about the day of his death to poor widows of members of the company, the yearly sum of 10*l.* amongst them. By the agreement, the company covenanted with the executors that they would yearly pay, distribute, and give away amongst poor widows of members of the company the yearly sum of 10*l.* in lawful money of England, in manner and form as by the will is directed.

On the 3rd April 1719, the court of the company passed the following resolution: "Whereas the charity money of "Mr. Joshua Marshall has quarterly been paid, but no "mention that the same was by the bequest of Mr. Marshall: It is now ordered that upon every quarterly court "in time to come an entry be inserted in these words, "'the charity money paid pursuant to the will of "'Mr. Joshua Marshall to the persons following.'" This entry is still made at each quarterly court of the company.

The amount paid in pensions to the members of the company and their widows is set out below:

Charles Henry Storey	20
Philip Norris Page	15
Widow, Jane Robertson	25
Widow, Eliza Kaye	10
Emma Barlow	10
Ann Mower Evelyn	10
Emily Wilson Richards	10
Mary Smith	10
Annually	£125

PART II.—Constitution and Privileges of Membership.

A.

Return A.—Governing Body.

1. State the present constitution of the governing body of the company, whether such constitution is according to the charter, and if not, in what respects such constitution varies therefrom, and when and how such alteration was made.

2. State the qualifications for membership of the governing body of the company, the time and periods of election, and the qualifications of the voters at elections to the governing body.

3. State the functions of the governing body, and of the different members of the same respectively, and whether the members of the governing body pay any, and what fees or fines on admission thereto, and whether they are paid any, and what salaries or amounts in respect of their services respectively.

4. State the nature of the business which comes before the governing body of the company, the method adopted in transacting it, the times at which the governing body meets for business purposes, the way in which the opinions of the members are taken, and whether the resolutions and decisions of the governing body are published, or are otherwise accessible to any or all, and which of, the members of the company.

5. State whether the members of the governing body are liable to suspension or removal, on any and what grounds, and by what method such suspension or removal is effected.

6. Has the company any byelaws sanctioned by the courts of law or chancery, or by the courts of aldermen or of common council, or otherwise? State the effect of such byelaws.

1. The present constitution of the governing body (three having recently died, and no opportunity of filling up their office having yet occurred) of the company is a master, a warden, a renter warden, and seven assistants. This constitution is in accordance with the charter, except that the charter prescribes that there should be 24 assistants. The number has fluctuated from time to time, and as the charter prescribes that eight members of the court should be a quorum, the number of assistants has been allowed to diminish.

2. The only qualification for membership of the governing body of the company is that the person elected should be a freeman and liveryman of the company. The master is annually elected on the 14th June, the day named in the charter as the election day by the members of the court of assistants present at the court. The warden and renter warden are elected annually on the 14th June by the members of the court of assistants present at the court. The members of the court of assistants are elected from time to time as vacancies occur, or as it becomes necessary in the opinion of the court to add numbers to it by the then existing members of the court of assistants, it being necessary to give notice at one court of the intention to propose a new assistant at a following court.

3. The master, wardens, and court of assistants of the company have the free, exclusive, and uncontrolled management of the affairs of the company. Each member of the court of assistants on his election to the court pays a fine of 5*l.* 7*s.* 6*d.* Each member of the court of assistants when elected renter warden pays a fine of 4*l.* 7*s.* 6*d.* The upper warden when elected pays a fine of 4*l.* 7*s.* 6*d.*, and the master when elected pays a fine of 4*l.* 7*s.* 6*d.* There is no salary paid to the members of the governing body, but each member receives a fee of 2*l.* 2*s.* at each court at which he attends.

4. The business which comes before the governing body of the company is the management of the affairs of the company, and the receipt and distribution of its income, and the election from time to time of new members. The members of the governing body meet at four quarterly courts held on the Thursday after the feast of Epiphany, the Thursday after Lady day, the Thursday after Midsummer day, and the Thursday after Michaelmas day in every year. On election day, the 14th June in every year, at a court held for the audit of the company's accounts on the first Friday in the month of August in every year, and at a court held on the 9th November, being Lord Mayor's day in every year. The opinions of the members of the court are taken by show of hands. The resolutions and decisions of the governing body of the company are recorded in the minute book of the company, and are accessible as a right to every member of the court of assistants.

5. The master is elected annually and serves for one year. The upper warden and renter warden are elected annually and serve one year. They are always members of the court of assistants. The court of assistants under the charter are nominated to the office during their natural lives, unless they or any of them shall misbehave themselves in their said offices, or for some other lawful or reasonable cause shall be removed. The charter authorises the master, wardens, and assistants of the company for the time being, the master and warden to be always two, to remove any one of the assistants of the company for evil government and misbehaviour, or for any other lawful or reasonable cause. By a resolution of the court of assistants passed on the 22nd day of October 1873, and which has been signed by every person then a member of the court, and every one since elected, it was resolved that any member of the court becoming bankrupt or making any arrangement with his creditors to procure a release from his liabilities or paying less than 20*s.* in the £ should cease to be a member of the court. There are at present members of the company formerly members of the court of assistants who have resigned their office of assistant but no member has been removed against his will within the memory of any one now in the company.

6. The byelaws of the company were made by the master, wardens, and assistants of the company, were approved of by the Lord Mayor and Court of Aldermen and the City of London and were ratified and approved by Heneage Lord Finch Baron of Daventry, Lord High Chancellor of England, Sir William Scroggs, Knight, Lord Chief Justice of His Majesty's Court of King's Bench, and Sir Francis North, Knight, Lord Chief Justice of His Majesty's Court of Common Pleas in the year 1678. The byelaws prescribe regulations for admission and register of apprentices, regulations for the search of stone used, brought, or laid in any place within 7 miles of the City of London or Westminster, and certain fees for such search namely, 4*d.* for every 100 of purbeck stone, and 4*d.* a ton for every other stone; prescribes the dimensions of paving stone, hard stone, ashler's purbeck stone, and steps. Fines to be paid by persons refusing to serve the office of master and wardens. Prescribe the fees to be paid by the persons to serve the office of master and wardens and accepting it. The fees to be paid by persons accepting or refusing to accept the office of assistant of the company. Give directions as to the security to be given by the renter warden. The fees to be paid by persons elected to the livery or clothing of the company. Provide for the custody of the company's property. Direct that 4 quarterly courts shall be held at the following times, viz., the Thursday after the Feast of Epiphany, the Thursday after the Enunciation of the Blessed Mary, the Thursday after the Feast of St. John the Baptist, and the Thursday after the Feast of St. Michael the Archangel. Prescribe the quarterage to be paid by members and officers of the company on attending the Court. Impose penalty for reviling the master wardens or assistants. Ordain that all persons using the art or mystery of a mason within the Cities of London and Westminster and 7 miles compass thereof, then, or thereafter to be made free of and admitted into the company shall contribute his or their equal sum or proportion of money towards paying or defraying the charges and expenses to be disbursed about the common affairs of the company. Authorise the master to appoint a deputy. Authorise the summoning of private courts. Prohibit the freemen of the company from employing any foreigner or journeyman coming out of the country either alien or English not being free of the company unless he be first presented to the master and wardens of the company and bring a certificate with him of his lawful service, behaviour, and former place of abode. Order that for the relief of all such members of the company, journeymen, and others as shall by age, impotency, extremity, and sickness, or other casualties be brought to want, the master and wardens according to their discretion might give relief out of such moneys as shall or may arise to the company, and the said moneys so distributed reasonably for the said charitable use should be allowed and approved of in all audits, reckonings, and accounts by the whole court of assistants. Direct that all persons using the art or mystery of a mason free of the company should be subject to the government of the company if they lived without the limits of the charter. Prescribe that certain forfeitures should go to the use of the poor.

PART II.—B.

RETURN B.—Admission to Membership.

1. State the qualifications for membership of the company, the several grades of membership of the company, and whether women are admitted to membership.
2. State the several modes in which the freedom of the company may be obtained, the circumstances entitling an applicant to admission under each mode respectively, and the fees payable in respect of admission under each mode respectively.
3. State whether persons exercising any particular trade are required by statute or otherwise to become free of the company. Is there any process by which members of such trade can become members of the company, and is there any process for compelling such persons to procure admission, and are such processes enforced, and to what extent? Is the freedom of the City of London in any and what way a condition precedent or subsequent to membership? Are there any members who are not free of the City of the London? Do persons exercising any particular trade commonly become members of the company? If so, how many members of such trade are at present members of the company? What is the number of the members of the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the company, who are members of the company?
4. Are freemen liable to disfranchisement, and if so, for what reasons, and what is the mode of disfranchisement?
5. Is the livery of the company limited or unlimited in number? What are the qualifications for election to the livery, who are the electors thereto, and how do the elections thereto take place, and what fees are payable on election? Are liverymen liable to removal from the livery, and for what reason?

1. The members of the company consist of freemen and liverymen, women are not admitted to membership of the company. The qualification for membership of the company is that the applicant shall be a male of full age and a subject of Her Majesty.

2. The freedom of the company may be obtained,—
(1.) By patrimony if at the time of the applicant's birth his father was free of the company.
(2.) By servitude, serving an apprenticeship of 7 years to a member of the company.
(3.) By redemption.
The fees payable in respect of the admission are 5*l.* 5*s.* by patrimony, 5*l.* 5*s.* by servitude, 7*l.* 7*s.* by redemption.

3. The Charter of 29th Charles II. prescribes that no person shall exercise the art or mystery of a mason within the Cities of London or Westminster or within a compass of 7 miles thereof except the freemen of this company. There is no process for compelling such persons to procure admission. The freedom of the City of London is not in any way a condition precedent or subsequent to membership. There are members who are not free of the City of London. A considerable proportion of the members of the company are connected with the building trade, being either architects, engineers, surveyors, builders, masons or stone merchants. The numbers of persons following these occupations who are now members of the company are 22.

4. Freemen are not liable to disfranchisement.

5. The livery of the company is unlimited in number. The qualifications for election to the livery are that the applicant should be free of the company and have taken up his freedom. The electors to the livery are the Master Wardens and Court of Assistants. The fees payable on election to the livery are 15*l.* No liveryman has been removed from the livery after his election thereto within the memory of anyone connected with the company.

PART II.—C.

RETURN C.—Number of Members.

State (1) the present number of freemen, (2) the present number of the livery, (3) the present number of other members, (4) the number of admissions to the freedom by each mode respectively, and (5) the number of calls to the livery which have respectively taken place during each of the last preceding ten years.

The present number of freemen of the company is 41. All the freemen are liverymen of the company. There are no other members. The number of admissions to the freedom of the company and calls to the livery which have taken place during the year 1871 was two, both by redemption. In the year 1872, there were two by redemption, and one by patrimony, In the year 1873, one by redemption. In the year 1874, one by redemption. In the year 1875, two by redemption. In the year 1876, one by redemption. In the year 1877, one by redemption. In the year 1878, none. In the year 1879, one by redemption. In the year 1880, two by redemption. Each person admitted to the freedom of the company during the last 10 years has been called to the livery of the company forthwith.

PART II.—D.

RETURN D.—(1) State the number of apprentices bound at the Company's Hall, or otherwise under the auspices of the company during each of the last ten years. (2) State how many have been bound during each of the last ten years to members following the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the Company. (3) In what cases and to what extent have the fees or premiums of such apprentice been paid by the company.

No apprentices have been bound under the auspices of the company during the last 10 years.

PART II.—E.

Return E.—Profits and privileges.

1. State with fulness what are the advantages, pecuniary or otherwise, incident to the position of a member of the company in each grade of membership, as (1) a freeman, (2) a liveryman, (3) Master, warden, or otherwise a member of the governing body.
2. State the sums paid on an average annually for the preceding ten years by the company to the members according to the grades of membership mentioned above, and of what such sums consisted, whether (1) fees and of what nature, (2) pensions, or (3) other payments, specifying the nature of the same respectively.
3. What circumstances are in practice held to constitute a claim to a pension or donation? State the number of present pensioners and donees respectively, and the amounts paid to them as such respectively? How many pensioners and donees are connected with the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the company?
4. (1) What is the average standing of a member when he becomes a member of the governing body, and (2) what is the average time for which a member continues on the governing body?
5. Does the company carry on any and what trade or manufacture with which its title is directly or indirectly connected? If so, what is the capital and from what sources is it derived, and how are the profits (if any) divided or dealt with?

1. There are no pecuniary advantages incident to the position of a member of the company as freeman, liveryman, or member of the governing body, except as stated in next paragraph. A freeman of this company is entitled to become a freeman of the city of London. There are no other advantages.

2. The sum paid on an average annually for the last 10 years by the company to the master of the company has been a fee of two guineas for his attendance at each court, averaging 12*l.* 12*s.* per annum. To each warden a fee of two guineas for attending each court, averaging 12*l.* 12*s.* per annum. To each renter warden a fee of 2*l.* 2*s.* for attending each court, averaging 12*l.* 12*s.* per annum. There are at this date only 10 members of the court of assistants, including master and wardens, but there are usually 12. Each member attending the court punctually is entitled to a fee of 2*l.* 2*s.* The average amount paid to the members of the court annually during the last 10 years, including the amount paid to the master and wardens, has been 115*l.* The amount paid annually in pensions to persons, members of the company, during the last 10 years, has averaged the sum of 132*l.* 3*s.* 6*d.*

3. There are no other payments to any member of the company. The circumstances which in practice are held to constitute a claim to a pension or donation from the funds of the company are that the applicant should himself have been a freeman of the company, or if a woman, that her husband or father should have been free. The number of pensioners at present receiving annually pensions from the company are nine. The pensions paid are one of 25*l.*, one of 20*l.*, two of 15*l.*, and five of 10*l.* All but one of the pensioners are connected with the trade of masons or the architects' profession.

4. The average standing of a member of the company when he becomes a member of the governing body is from eight to ten years. Any member elected to the court of assistants continues a member for the remainder of his life. The two last senior members of the court who have died in office had been members of the company for over 50 years and over 60 years respectively.

5. The company does not carry on any trade or manufacture.

PART III.—OFFICERS AND SERVANTS.

Return A.—A list of the officers of the company, with a statement of the duties of each, the amount of his salary and emoluments, and whether or not he is a member of the company.

Return B.—A list of the servants of the company, with a statement of the duties of each, and of the amounts of their wages and other emoluments.

Return C.—A statement as to the mode in which the officers and servants of the company are respectively appointed.

The officers of the company are—

1. Mr. Alfred Gwilt of Norbiton, Surrey, architect, surveyor to the company. Mr. Gwilt is a member of the company, and has no salary, but has fees for any work done on behalf of the company.
2. Mr. John Hunter, clerk to the company, has a salary of 31*l.* 10*s.* He has recently become a member of the company, this year, having been clerk to the company for several years previously.

The only servant of the company is Mr. Davis, the beadle of the company; his salary is 12*l.* per annum. The surveyor, clerk, and beadle of the company are appointed by the governing body and hold their office during their good behaviour.

PART IV.—E.

RETURN E.—Internal sources of income.

A list of the annual amounts received in each of the last 10 years in respect of (1) fees paid on admission to the freedom of the company, specifying the amounts paid in respect of each mode of admission thereto; (2) fines or fees paid on admission to the livery of the company; (3) fines or fees paid by members on coming on the court of the company; (4) fines or fees paid on promotion to the offices of warden, &c.; (5) any other internal sources of income, specifying the same.

The accounts copied in answer to inquiry Part IV. H. answer this inquiry.

PART IV.—F.

RETURN F.—(1.) The commissioners will be obliged by your informing them what has been the amount of the increase or decrease, from year to year, of the company's income during the last ten years, and whether there is reason to expect any increase or decrease during the next 10 years, together with a statement of the reasons for such expectation.

RETURN F.—(2.) The commissioners will be obliged by your informing them whether there is reason to expect any permanent increase or decrease in value in any of the estates or properties of the company, and if so, to what extent, together with a statement for the reasons for such expectation.

F. (1.)—There will be no material change in the income of the Masons' Company until the leases of the property purchased by them in Stoke Newington fall in in the next century.

F. (2.)—The income has not varied materially for the last 10 years.

PART IV.—G.

RETURN G.—The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them—

1. What is the system of management of the company's estates and property?
2. In what way, and by whom, the several receipts and payments are taken and made, and under what control?
3. In what way the company's accounts are audited?
4. Whether the company's accounts are published, or are accessible to all or any, and which of the members of the company.

The company's property is managed by the master, wardens, and court of assistants, who at their courts decide from time to time on any application for leases, sales, purchases, change of investments. The rents of the company's house property are collected by the surveyor to the company, and are by him handed from time to time to the clerk to the company. The remaining income of the company is collected by the clerk on behalf of the renter warden. An account is made up annually, and is audited by the members of the court at the annual court held for that purpose. The accounts are after being audited annually entered in the company's account book, and are accessible to any member of the governing body.

PART IV.—H.

RETURN H.—A detailed statement of the income from all sources of the company during each of the preceding 10 years, a detailed statement of the company's expenditure during each of such 10 years, and a detailed statement of the assets and liabilities of the company at the end of each of the last 10 years.

The annual accounts for 10 years are copied here*; these and the return Part IV. B. answer this inquiry.

PART IV.—M.

General and Technical Education.

RETURN M.—A statement as to whether the company does anything to subsidize or encourage education, whether general or technical, and a return of the means (if any) so employed, and of the amount expended on such objects during each of the last preceding ten years.

Several discussions have taken place at the courts of the company for some years past with a view of doing something to promote technical education in the trade, but the resources of the company are so small in comparison with the magnitude of the trade, that no scheme has yet been suggested which the company has been able to carry out.

---

* The company omitted to send any copies of their annual accounts.

PART V.—REFORM.

The Commissioners, being bound to report to Her Majesty "what measures (if any) are, in their "judgment, expedient and necessary for improving or altering the constitution of the companies, or the "appropriation or administration of the property or revenues thereof," respectfully invite the attention of the officers of the companies to this part of the commission.

The Commissioners will be very glad to receive and consider any suggestions respecting this part of the commission with which the officers of the companies may do the Commissioners the honour of favouring them.

The company have no suggestions to offer on this subject.

APPENDIX A.

The Company gave full information to the Municipal Commissioners appointed in 1834. They stated that their income was then about 300*l.* a year.

APPENDIX B.

City of London Livery Companies' Commission,
2, Victoria Street, Westminster, S.W., 18th July 1882.

Sir,

Referring to the circular of the Commissioners dated the 15th of February last, I am directed to point out to the Court of the Worshipful Company of Masons that the returns with which they have favoured the Commission do not, as stated therein, contain the Company's accounts from 1870–1879. Apparently the mistake has arisen through inadvertence. The Commissioners will be very much obliged to you if you will kindly mention this to the Court at their next meeting.

I am, &c.
H. D. Warr, Secretary.

J. Hunter, Esq.,
Clerk to the Masons' Company.

9, New Square, Lincoln's Inn, W.C., 17th October 1882.

Sir,

Referring to your letter of the 18th July 1882, addressed to the Clerk to the Masons' Company, we have now the pleasure to send you a copy of that Company's accounts for the years 1870 to 1880.

I am, &c.
A. J. C. Gwatkin, Clerk.

The Secretary,
City of London Livery Companies' Commission,

MUSICIANS' COMPANY.

The Company did not make their return in the form prescribed by the Commissioners. The following is their return:—

The Musicians' Company was instituted by charter granted on April 24th in the 9th year of the reign of Edward IV. (1472–3), and reconstituted by charter granted by James I. on July 8th, 1604, for the purposes indicated in such charter.

A copy of such charter is as follows:

James, by the Grace of God King of England, Scotland, France, and Ireland, Defender of the Faith, &c. To all to whom these present letters shall come, greeting: Know ye that of our special grace, certain science, and mere motion, and at the humble petition of our faithful subjects the freemen of the Society of Minstrels of our City of London, we have willed, ordained, constituted, declared, and granted, and by these presents for us, our heirs and successors, do will, ordain, constitute, declare, and grant, that they, the foresaid freemen of the Society aforesaid, or by what other name or names the same Society is called or named, and their successors, from henceforth for ever may be and shall be by force of these presents one body corporate and politic in substance, deed, and name, by the name of master, wardens, and commonalty of the Art or Science of the Musicians of London, and them, by the name of the master, wardens, and commonalty of the Art or Science of the Musicians of London, one body corporate and politic in substance, deed, and name, really and fully for us, our heirs and successors, we do erect, make, ordain, appoint, confirm, and declare by these presents; and that by that name they shall have perpetual succession, and so from henceforth shall be named, called, and accepted in our City of London and elsewhere, and not otherwise: And that they and their successors, by the name of the master, wardens, and commonalty of the Art or Science of the Musicians of London, be and shall be at all times for ever to come persons able and capable in law to have, purchase, receive, and possess messuage, lands, tenements, liberties, privileges, jurisdictions, franchises, and hereditaments, of what nature, kind, or property soever the same shall be, to them and their successors in fee and perpetuity, or for term of year or years, or otherwise howsoever, and also goods and chattels and other things whatsoever, of what kind, name, nature, quality, or property they shall be: And to give, grant, demise, alien, assign, and dispose lands, tenements, and hereditaments, and to do and execute all and every other deeds and things, by the name aforesaid; and that by the same name of the master, wardens, and commonalty of the Art or Science of Musicians of London they shall be able and may plead and be impleaded, make answer and be answered, defend and be defended in whatsoever courts and places, and before whatsoever judges and justices, and whatsoever other persons and officers of ours, our heirs and successors, in all and singular actions, pleas, suits, plaints, causes, matters, and demands whatsoever, of what kind, nature, quality, or form they be or shall be, in the like manner and form as any other our liege people of this our realm of England, persons able and capable in law, or any other body corporate and politic within our realm of England, can or may have, purchase, receive, possess, enjoy, retain, give, grant, demise, alienate, assign, and dispose, plead and be impleaded, answer and be answered, defend and be defended, do permit or execute: And that the master, wardens, and commonalty of the Art or Science of Musicians of London aforesaid shall have for ever a common seal to serve for the dispatching of the affairs and business whatsoever of them and their successors; and that it shall and may be lawful to the same master, wardens, and commonalty of the Art or Science of Musicians of London aforesaid from time to time, at their pleasure, to break and change that seal, and to make a new one, as to them shall be thought meet: And, moreover, we will and by these presents for us, our heirs and successors, do grant to the foresaid master, wardens, and commonalty, and their successors, that there may be and shall be for ever one of the commonalty aforesaid, to be chosen in form hereafter in these presents mentioned, who shall be and shall be named the master of the said Art or Science of Musicians of London: And that likewise there may be and shall be two of the commonalty of the same art or science, to be named and chosen in form hereafter in these presents mentioned, who shall be and shall be named wardens of the Art or Science of Musicians of London aforesaid: And that likewise there may be and shall be thirteen or more, not exceeding the number of twenty in the whole, to be chosen of the commonalty aforesaid in form hereafter in these presents mentioned, who shall be and shall be named assistants of the Art or Science of Musicians of London, and shall be from time to time aided and assisted to the same master and wardens for the time being in all causes, business, and matters touching or concerning the said commonalty: And, moreover, we will and by these presents for us, our heirs and successors, do grant to the foresaid master, wardens, and commonalty of the Art or Science of Musicians of London aforesaid, and to their successors, that the master, wardens, and assistants of the Art or Science of Musicians of London for the time being, or the greater part of them, upon summons of the master and wardens for the time being, or the greater part of them (being gathered together for this purpose), on that behalf to be made, may have and shall have full power and authority to frame, appoint, ordain, and make from time to time reasonable laws, statutes, constitutions, decrees, and ordinances whatsoever, in writing, which to them, or the greater part of them, according to their good discretions, shall seem to be good, wholesome, profitable, honest, and necessary for the good rule and government of the master, wardens, and commonalty of the art or science aforesaid, and of all other minstrels and musicians of the City of London, and within three miles of the same city, for the time being, and for the declamation in what manner and form the same master, wardens, and assistants, and all and singular persons of the commonalty aforesaid, shall bear and behave themselves in their office, art, and science, for the further public weal and common profit of the same master, wardens, and commonalty of the art or science aforesaid, and in all other affairs and causes whatsoever touching or in anywise concerning the art and science aforesaid: And that the same master, wardens, and assistants of the art and science aforesaid for the time being, or the greater part of them, as often as they shall make, frame, ordain, or establish such laws, statutes, institutions, ordinances, and constitutions in form aforesaid, shall and may make, limit, and provide such pains, punishments, and penalties, by imprisonment of body, or by fines, amerciaments, or by both of them, towards and upon all offenders against the same laws, statutes, institutions, ordinances, and constitutions, or any of them, as to the same master, wardens, and assistants for the time being, or the greater part of them, shall be thought necessary or requisite for the observation of the same laws, ordinances, and constitutions; and the same fines and amerciaments to have to the use of the said master, wardens, and commonalty, and their successors, without impediment of us, our heirs or successors, or of any officers or ministers of us, our heirs or successors, and without any account therefore to be yielded to us, our heirs or successors: All and every which said laws, ordinances, statutes, and constitutions so as aforesaid to be made we will shall be observed under the pains therein contained, so that the same laws, ordinances, constitutions, imprisonments, fines, and amerciaments be reasonable, and not repugnant, nor contrary to the laws, statutes, customs, or rights of our realm of England: And for the better execution of our will and grant in this behalf we have assigned, named, created, constituted, and made, and by these presents for us, our heirs and successors, do assign, name, create, constitute, and make, our beloved Phillip London to be the first and present master of the foresaid Art or Science of the Musicians of London: Willing that the same Phillip London shall be and continue master of the art or science aforesaid from the date of these presents unto the Feast of St. Michael the Archangel next following after the date of these presents, and from the same feast until one other to the office of master of the art or science aforesaid shall be in due form chosen and elected according to the orders and provisions hereafter in these presents expressed and declared, if the same Phillip London shall so long live: We have also assigned, named, and appointed, and by these presents for us, our heirs and successors, do assign, name, and appoint, our well-beloved Isaac Thorpe and Thomas Carter to be the two first and present wardens of the said Art or Science of the Musicians of London, to continue in the said office of wardens of the said art or science from the date of these presents unto the forcsaid Feast of St. Michael the Archangel next coming after the date of these presents, and from the same feast until two others to the same office of wardens of the same art or science shall be elected and chosen according to the ordinances and provisions in these presents expressed and declared, if the said Isaac Thorpe and Thomas Carter shall so long live, unless in the meantime they, or either of them, shall be removed from that office for their evil government or evil behaviour in that behalf, or for some reasonable cause: And we have assigned, named, created, and constituted, and by these presents for us, our heirs and successors, do assign, name, constitute, and make, our well-beloved Anthony Tindall, James Sherman, Walter Lowman, William Warren, Arthur Norton, Tristram Waters, William Benton, Rowland Rowbedge, Robert Baker, John Mitchell, John Popson, Vincent Johnveryn, John Bickley, and Simon Hopper to be the first and present assistants of the same master, wardens, and commonalty of the art or science aforesaid, to continue in the same office during their natural lives, unless they or any of them shall be in the meantime amoved from thence for their evil government or evil behaviour in that behalf, or for any other reasonable cause: And that it shall and may be lawful to the same master, wardens, and assistants for the time being, or to the greater part of them, for the time being, at their pleasure, to elect, name, and admit from time to time such and so many of the ancientest and most worthy freemen of the same commonalty as to them shall be thought meet to be the assistants of the same master and wardens, and their successors; and that he or they, after he or they shall be so elected and named, shall take a corporal oath before the master and wardens for the time being to execute that office rightly, well, and honestly in all things touching that office (so that the number of the said assistants do not at any time exceed the number of 20 persons); and to remove any of the said assistants for the time being or which hereafter shall be for any reasonable cause, and to choose, appoint, and admit others of new: And, moreover, we will and grant by these presents for us, our heirs and successors, to the said master, wardens, and commonalty, and their successors, that the said master, wardens, and assistants of the art or science aforesaid for the time being, or the greater part of them, from time to time, at all times to come, shall and may have power and authority every year for ever at the Feast of St. Michael the Archangel, or within 20 days after that feast, to name and choose, and that they shall and may name and choose, one of the freemen of the commonalty aforesaid, and which shall be master of the Art and Science of the Musicians of London for one whole year then next following: And that he which shall be elected and named to be master of the art or science aforesaid shall, before his admittance into that office, take his corporal oath before the last master, his predecessor, and the wardens of the art or science aforesaid for the time being truly, well, and faithfully to execute that office in all things touching the same office; and also two others of the aforesaid commonalty of the art or science aforesaid which shall be wardens of the same art or science aforesaid for one whole year then next ensuing: And that he which shall be elected and chosen as aforesaid into the office of the master of the art or science aforesaid shall and may execute the office of the master of the art or science aforesaid for one whole year then next following; and that they shall be elected and chosen as aforesaid into the office of the wardens of the art or science aforesaid shall execute the office of the wardens of the same art or science for one whole year then next following, and take a corporal oath before the master of the art or science aforesaid, the last wardens, their predecessors, and so many of the assistants as shall be then present, to execute the office of wardens of the art or science aforesaid well, uprightly, and honestly in all things touching that office: And, further, we will and by these presents grant for us, our heirs and successors, to the aforesaid master, wardens, and commonalty, and their successors, that if the master and wardens of the commonalty aforesaid, or any of them, shall happen to die or to be removed from their office at any time within one year after they or any of them shall be elected and chosen as aforesaid to the office of the master or to the office of wardens of the art or science aforesaid (which said master and wardens and every of them we will shall be to be removed for evil government or for any other reasonable cause, by the greater part of the same master, wardens, and assistants), that then and so often it shall and may be lawful for such and so many of the same master, wardens, and assistants who shall then survive or remain, or the greater part of them, at their pleasure, to elect and choose one other to be master, and one or two others to be warden or wardens of the art or science aforesaid, according to the ordinances and provisions before by these presents declared, to execute and exercise the said office of master or the said office or offices of warden or wardens aforesaid until the Feast of St. Michael the Archangel then next following, the like corporal oath being taken as aforesaid in form aforesaid, and so as often as any such occasion shall happen: And, moreover, of our more abundant special grace, certain science, and mere motion we have given and granted, and by these presents for us, our heirs and successors, do give and grant, to the said master, wardens, and commonalty, and their successors, special free license, lawful power, faculty, and authority to have, purchase, receive, and possess to them and their successors for ever messuages, lands, tenements, meadows, feedings, pastures, woods, underwoods, rectories, tithes, rents, reversions, and other hereditaments whatsoever within our realm of England or elsewhere within our dominions, as well of us, our heirs and successors, as of any other person or persons which are not immediately held of us, our heirs or successors, in capite or by knight's service, so as the same messuages, lands, tenements, meadows, feedings, pastures, woods, underwoods, rectories, tithes, rents, reversions, services, and other hereditaments do not exceed in the whole the yearly value of twenty pounds over and above all charges and reprises. (The statute of lands and tenements not to be put into mortmain or any other statute, act, ordinance, or provision heretofore had, made, or provided, or any other cause, matter, or thing whatsoever to the contrary thereof in anywise notwithstanding): And also we give and grant for us, our heirs and successors, by these presents to every subject and subjects of us, our heirs and successors, free and special license, lawful power, faculty, and authority that they or any of them may give, grant, sell, bequeath, or alienate messuages, lands, tenements, meadows, feedings, pastures, woods, underwoods, rectories, tithes, rents, reversions, services, and other hereditaments whatsoever which are not held of us, our heirs and successors, in capite or otherwise by knight's service unto the said master, wardens, and commonalty the Art or Science of the Musicians of London, and to their successors, so that all the same messuages, lands, tenements, meadows, feedings, pastures, woods, underwoods, rectories, tithes, rents, reversions, services and other hereditaments so to be given, granted, bequeathed, or alienated to the said master, wardens, and commonalty, and their successors, by virtue of these presents do not exceed in the whole the clear yearly value of twenty pounds by year above all charges and reprises; the statute of lands and tenements not to be put into mortmain, or any other thing, cause, or matter whatsoever before this time had, made, ordained, or provided to the contrary thereof in anywise notwithstanding: And, moreover, we will and by these presents for us, our heirs and successors, for the better rule and government of all those which in our City of London, and within three miles of the said city, do profess and exercise and hereafter shall profess and exercise the art or science of music, we give and grant to the said master, wardens, and commonalty of the Art or Science of Musicians of London, and to their successors, that the said masters and wardens, and their successors, for the time being at all times to come shall have the survey, search, correction, and government of all and singular musicians and minstrels within our said City of London, or within the suburbs, liberties, and precincts of the same city, or within three miles of the same city, and within all liberties, franchises, jurisdictions, and places, as well exempt as not exempt, situate and being within the said city, suburbs, and three miles of the same city: Also we will and by these presents grant to the said master, wardens, and commonalty of the Art or Science of Musicians of London that they may have and shall have these our letters patent under our great seal of England in due manner made and sealed without fine or fee, great or small, to be yielded or paid unto us in the Hanaper of our Chancery, or otherwise to our use howsoever, albeit express mention of the true yearly value or certainty of the premises, or any of them, or of other gifts or grants by us or any of our ancestors or progenitors before this time made to the foresaid master, wardens, and commonalty of the Art or Science of Musicians of London be not mentioned in these presents, or any statute, act, ordinance, provision, proclamation, or restraint to the contrary thereof before this time had, made, ordained, or provided, or any other thing, cause, or matter whatsoever in anywise notwithstanding. In witness whereof we have caused these our letters to be made patents. Witness ourself at Westminster, the eighth day of July, in the second year of our reign of England, France, and Ireland; and of Scotland the seven and thirtieth.

The byelaws were confirmed by the Lord Chancellor on the 25th August 1706.

A copy thereof as follows:

To all people to whom these presents shall come, Thomas Lord Ellesmere, Lord Chancellor of England; Thomas Earl Dorset, Lord Treasurer of England; and Sir John Popham, Knight, Lord Chief Justice of the Pleas before His Majesty to be holden, send greeting in our Lord God everlasting. Whereas in a certain Act or Statute in the Parliament holden at Westminster the five and twentieth day of January, in the nineteenth year of the reign of the late King of famous memory after the Conquest, Henry the Seventh, made and ordained for the weal and profit of the subjects, it was, amongst other things, ordained, established, and enacted that no master, wardens, or fellowships of crafts or mysteries, or any of them, nor any rulers of guilds or fraternities, should take upon them to make any act or ordinance, to execute any acts or ordinances by them theretofore made in disheritage or diminution of the King's prerogative, or any other, or against the common profit of the people: But if the same acts and ordinances were examined and approved by the Chancellor Treasurer of England, the chief justices of either bench, or three of them, or else before both the justices of assize in their circuit or progress in that shire where such acts or ordinances be made, upon pain of forty pounds for every time that they do the contrary, as in the said Act of Parliament more plainly doth and may appear. Know ye that Tristram Waters, master of the Art or Science of Musicians of London, and William Benton, Vincent Janvrin, now wardens of the said art or science, with the whole assent and consent of the assistants of the same, willing and desiring the said Act of Parliament in all and every thing to be duly observed and kept, the first day of August, in the year of the reign of Our Sovereign Lord James, by the Grace of God King of England, France, and Ireland, Defender of the Faith, the Fourth, and of Scotland the Fortieth, have exhibited a certain petition containing divers articles for acts and ordinances for the better rule and government of the Art or Science of Musicians of London dwelling and inhabiting or which hereafter shall dwell or inhabit in the said city, the suburbs thereof, and within three miles of the said city, in the Art or Science of Musicians of London aforesaid, and for the common weale and conservation of the good estate of the said Art or Science of Musicians, and have instantly desired us that we all and every their acts and ordinances hereafter mentioned to us exhibited would examine and approve and those and every of them correct and amend in due and convenient manner and form as the said recited Act of Parliament requireth: We well perceiving and considering their said supplication to be good and acceptable according to their desires, and by authority of the said Act of Parliament to us given all and every their acts and ordinances to us exhibited, have seen, read, and well understood, and all and every of them examined, corrected, and reformed, the tenor whereof hereafter followeth:

Imprimis, be it ordained that from henceforth, yearly, at the Feast of St. Michael the Archangel, or within twenty days next after the same feast, the master and wardens of the said Art or Science of the Musicians of London, with the assistants of the same fellowship, or the greater part of them, shall from time to time elect and choose out of the freemen of the said Company one master and two wardens of the same art and science to rule and govern the same fellowship for one whole year then next ensuing: And if any of the master or wardens so chosen or to be chosen shall happen to die or for reasonable cause be removed or deprived from his place and office within one year next after he shall be so elected, that then, within fourteen days next after such death, deprivation, or removing of any of the said master or wardens, one other or others of the freemen of the said Company shall be in like sort elected and chosen by the rest of the wardens and assistants of the same fellowship to serve in the place or stead of such of them as shall so happen to die, be deprived, or removed until the Feast of St. Michael the Archangel then next ensuing: And the master and wardens so newly elected and chosen shall take a corporal oath for the due execution of their offices and places in manner and form hereafter prescribed, and according to the limitation of the letters patents granted to the said master, wardens, and commonalty by our now Sovereign Lord the King: And whatsoever person or persons of the said fellowship being chosen by the said wardens and assistants, or the more part of them, to be master or any of the wardens of the said art or science, if he shall refuse to take upon him the said office of master or warden and the charges thereunto belonging, or to take the said oath, being thereunto required, he shall then presently pay to the commonalty and fellowship of the said Art or Science of Musicians for his or their refusal for every fine he or they shall so refuse the sum of five marks, to be levied of his or their goods and chattels, and to be employed as hereafter is specified.

Item: be it ordained and established that, according to the ancient custom of the City of London, the master and wardens and assistants of the foresaid Art or Science of Musicians of London for the time being, and their successors, may and shall elect and choose, at all such times as shall seem good unto them, so many of the said fellowship into the livery and clothing of the same fellowship as shall seem unto them meet and convenient for the worship of the said City and the credit of the said Art, Science, and Commonalty of the Musicians of London: And whatsoever person or persons of the said science or fellowship shall be at any time hereafter enabled and called by the said master and wardens and assistants for the time being, or by the said master and wardens and eight of the said assistants at the least, to be one of the livery of the said fellowship, and of his obstinacy and frowardness shall refuse and deny to take the same upon him at the time appointed unto him by the said master and wardens and assistants, that then he so refusing shall forfeit and pay as often as he so refuseth forty shillings; and that also all and every person and persons being called and chosen into the assistants or livery as aforesaid, and taking upon him or them the said calling, shall pay to the said master and wardens of the said fellowship, to the use of the said fellowship, twenty shillings.

Item: be it ordained that if any person or persons of the said Art, Science, or Fellowship of Musicians, of his own motion or frowardness, or by the procurement of any other person or persons at any time hereafter, shall go out of the said fellowship to any other mystery, fellowship, or occupation without the express consent of the master, wardens, and assistants of the fellowship of the said Art or Science of the Musicians of London for the time being, or the more part of them, in writing under their common seal to be had and obtained, shall forfeit and pay ten pounds of good and lawful money, to be levied of his or their goods and chattels.

Item: be it ordained and established that every person and persons of the said art or science shall be obedient to all manner of lawful summons and warnings given to him or them in the master and wardens' names for the time being by the beadle or other common officer of the said art or science and commonalty, or otherwise in the behalf of the said master and wardens of the said art or science for the time being, and shall be always ready to come and shall come unto them in such lawful and decent manner as he shall be assigned to do, at the hour and place to him conveniently appointed, for such causes and matters, either concerning the affairs of the King's Majesty, his heirs and successors, Kings and Queens of this realm, or the estate of the City of London, or anything concerning the said art or science, or any brother or sister of the same fellowship, whereof he shall have further knowledge at his coming, or for the burial of a brother or sister of the said fellowship; and if he will not come upon such warning, and in such manner, at his hour and place appointed him, that then he shall forfeit and pay for every default, for not keeping his hour and place, twelve pence; and if he shall not come at all upon such warning to the place of assembly while the master or wardens and assistants shall be there together, but shall willingly absent himself without a reasonable excuse, to be allowed of by the said master and wardens, he shall forfeit and pay for every such offence two shillings.

Item: be it ordained if any person or persons of the said fellowship, art, or science, or any other person whatsoever, shall use or exercise the said Art or Science of Musicians, or any faculty thereof, or make that any means toward the getting of his living within the said City of London and suburbs thereof, or three miles, compass of the said city, without the license or consent of the said master, wardens, and assistants, or the more part of them, in writing under their common seal first had and obtained, or shall not observe and obey the orders to be set down by the said master, wardens, and assistants, or the more part of them, every one so offending shall forfeit and pay such sum or sums of money or fines as shall by the said master, wardens, and assistants, or the more part of them, be imposed upon them for every such offence, so as the same exceed not the sum of forty shillings.

Item: it is also ordained that the master and wardens of the said Art or Science of Musicians of London for the time being shall or may yearly keep four quarter days in the year; and also within every quarter of the year quarterly for ever two other courts or assemblies, or more if need so require, at their common hall or other convenient place of meeting, as well for reformation of the defaults or abuses used in the said art or science as to hear the complaints of all such as shall find the aforesaid grievances concerning the same, and determine thereof according to their knowledge, wisdoms, and discretions; all which quarter days, courts, and assemblies shall be kept at convenient times to be appointed at the discretion of the said master and wardens of the said art or science for the time being: And every brother or widow of the same art or science shall pay for quarterage at every of the said quarter days quarterly for ever sixpence: And if any of the said master and wardens absent themselves and come not unto the common hall of the said fellowship at every such quarter day, and to every of the said other courts or assemblies, they shall not keep every of the said courts or assemblies according to the times or in form abovesaid, that then for so doing or electing to do as aforesaid he or they shall forfeit at every time in the name of a pain five shillings, without a reasonable excuse proved and allowed by and before the residue of the said master, wardens, and assistants of the said art or science, or the more part of them: And also every one of the said assistants that shall be at any time hereafter lawfully warned to come to such day and place appointed for the said courts and shall make default shall forfeit and pay for every such default, without a reasonable excuse proved and allowed by and before the said master and wardens, two shillings and sixpence.

Item: be it ordained that no person of the said fellowship shall unseemly revile, rebuke, smite, or abuse any brother of the same fellowship, either by facing, bracing, evil reproaching, or affraying, in the presence of the said master and wardens or elsewhere, nor in anywise disorder or misbehave him or themselves toward the master or wardens of the said fellowship, nor to any other of the said fellowship, upon pain to forfeit for every such offence forty shillings.

Item: be it ordained if any person or persons that do or shall use the said art or science shall, at any time or times, in any place, by any means, directly or indirectly, supplant, defeat, or put out, or wittingly practice to supplant, defeat, or put out, any musician free of the said fellowship, being first hired or spoken to to serve at any triumphs, marriages, revels, feasts, dinners, suppers, banquets, meetings, guilds, or brotherhoods, or for any such like occasions, to the hindrance of any brother of the said fellowship that was formerly bespoken, that then every person so offending shall forfeit and pay for such offence forty shillings, and suffer imprisonment of his or their bodies till he or they do pay the same.

Moreover, be it ordained that the master and wardens of the said art or science, or such other discreet and skilful persons of the said Company as for the time being shall be by the said master and wardens assigned or appointed, shall and may at all times hereafter, so often as they shall think needful and requisite, call before them to the common hall of the said Company, or to such other convenient place of meeting as the said master and wardens or the parties by them assigned shall appoint, all persons, as well free of the said fellowship as all others, which do or shall use or exercise the said Art or Science of Musicians, or the teaching of musick or dancing, or any faculty belonging to the said art or science of musicians or musick, and used for their maintenance, gain, or living within the City of London, and in the liberties or within three miles of the same city, and there to examine, approve, and allow the said parties and every of them for their sufficiency and skill in the said art or science, or to reject and disallow of any party for his insufficiency and want of skill; and that no person or persons, whether he be master, servant, or apprentice, so called before the said master and wardens, or before the parties by them assigned, and being by them disallowed as insufficient and unfit, shall presume to use or exercise the said art or science thereby to make any gain or have any reward for the same until he shall afterwards be allowed, upon pain to forfeit for every time he shall so offend the sum of twenty shillings: And it is ordained that if the said master or wardens, or their deputies, shall find any abuse or disorder used or practised in the said art or science, or any the faculties or qualities aforesaid, within the limits aforesaid, to the slander, hurt, or prejudice of the said art or science, or shall find any foreigner to use or practise the said art or science within the freedoms and liberties of the said city, or three miles compass of the same; or if any person summoned or warned to appear at the said common hall or other convenient place of meeting to be examined, opposed, approved, allowed, or disallowed as aforesaid shall refuse to appear or obey what shall be done and set down by the said master and wardens, or the persons that by them shall be assigned, that then all and every such person and persons so offending shall forfeit and pay to the said master and wardens and commonalty for every such offence twenty shillings, and shall suffer imprisonment of his or their bodies, at the discretion of the said master and wardens: And that the same penalty of twenty shillings for every offence committed by any apprentice or servant contrary to this ordinance or the ordinance next preceding, with the privity and allowance of his or their master, shall be levied and paid of and by the master of the said servant or apprentice.

Item: it is ordained that all persons not being free of the said Company that shall use or exercise the said art or science, or any faculty or quality touching and concerning the same, toward the getting of his or their living within the said city or liberties thereof, and all others allowed to use the same within three miles of the said city, and getting his or their living thereby, to their own use shall forfeit and pay to the said master, wardens, and commonalty at the four quarter days, at or in their common hall or other convenient place in that behalf assigned, sixpence quarterly: And if any of them shall fail to present themselves to pay the said quarterage at the said common hall or other place aforesaid at the said quarter days, having such sufficient warning thereof as the freemen of the said Company are to have, then he or they so failing shall forfeit and pay for every such default one shilling, except he show such reasonable cause in excuse of his default as shall be allowed by the said master and wardens.

Item: it is ordained that all and every persons free of the said commonalty that shall entertain or take any apprentice shall, at the assembly of the said master and wardens at the court or quarter day next and immediately after the sealing of the indentures to be made between them, present the same, his apprentice, to and before the master and wardens of the said Art or Science of Musicians of London for the time being to the intent the same master and wardens may have due examination of the said apprentice whether he be free born or not, and to see that he be clean and whole limbed; also to know what age he is of, and, further, to understand the number of years that the said apprentice shall serve, and when the same shall begin and end; and that every master shall pay to the master and wardens and commonalty of the said art or science two shillings sixpence for the presentment of every such apprentice, according to the ancient custom of the said city; and that every person that shall do contrary to this ordinance shall pay for every time offending twenty shillings.

Item: it is ordained and established that from henceforth no person or persons whatsoever that now or hereafter shall be master or wardens of the said Art or Science of Musicians of London shall take, have, or keep above two apprentices using the said art or science at any one time: And that none other person or persons of the same art or science not being or having been warden of the said Company shall either take, have, or keep above one apprentice at once using the said art or science until the said apprentice hath served with his master until the last half year of the term of his apprenticeship mentioned in his indenture; and then the same master may take one other apprentice: And that no person or persons which are not free of the said commonalty that do or shall use the said art or science within this city or the liberties thereof, or within three miles of the same city, shall at any time hereafter, directly or indirectly, have, take, or retain to be brought up in the said art or science any more apprentices than only one apprentice at one time, unless the master of such apprentice shall have continually used the same art or science to his own use for his maintenance and living by the space of fourteen years after the expiration of his term of apprenticehood: In which case it shall be lawful for any such person to have and keep two apprentices at one time, and not above; and that every person which shall offend against the true meaning of this act shall forfeit and pay the sum of twenty shillings for every month that he shall continue the keeping of any such apprentice.

Item: it is ordained that no person using the said Art or Science of Musicians of London, or any quality or faculty of dancing, shall teach, keep, or play, nor hand, exercise, or use, any dancing in any school of dancing upon any Sabbath Days within the said city or liberties thereof, or within three miles of the same city, upon pain to forfeit for every such offence forty shillings.

Neither shall any person sing any ribaldry, wanton, or lascivious songs or ditties at any time or place within the City of London or liberties thereof, or within three miles of the same city, whereby God may be dishonoured, or any slander or infamy may arise or be given of or to the said science, upon pain that every person offending against the true meaning of this branch of this Act shall forfeit for his offence ten shillings, and suffer imprisonment of his or their bodies for such convenient time as shall be thought fit by the discretion of the master and wardens of the same society for the time being.

Item: it is ordained that no person or persons of the said science or fellowship from henceforth shall present any of his apprentices before the Chamberlain of London, or his deputy, to be made free of the said city after his years be expired until he have presented his said apprentice before the master, wardens, and assistants of the said Art or Science of Musicians of London, or the more part of them, for the time being at their common hall or meeting place to be examined of his service and continuance of the same: And if upon due proof, as in such case is used, it shall appear unto the said master and wardens that the said apprentice hath duly served and continued as an apprentice during the term of his years, as in such case is used, then the same apprentice to submit himself to the rules and ordinances of the same fellowship in manner and form hereafter specified, and then to lay down and pay for his admission to the said master and wardens three shillings and fourpence: And after that the same master and wardens shall present the same late apprentice before the said chamberlain, or his deputy, for the time being, and thereupon shall cause the said late apprentice to be admitted into the said society and into the freedom of the said city, upon pain to every master of such apprentice doing contrary to this ordinance to forfeit for every such offence.

And it is further ordained that if hereafter any person or persons of the said Art or Science of Musicians of London, being a freeman of the said commonalty or any other, using or that shall use the said art, science, faculties, and qualities aforesaid, or any of them, within the said city and liberties, or within three miles compass thereof, having an apprentice bound unto him in the science or mystery aforesaid, be minded and will sell the term of years of the same, his apprentice, to any other man of the same art or science, or to any other, that then he shall first bring the same, his apprentice, to and before the master and wardens of the said Art or Science of Musicians of London for the time being that they may note and write the selling and turning over of the same apprentice in their hall book: And the master that so shall make sale of his apprentice shall forfeit and pay two shillings; and that every person of the said art or science that shall offend contrary to this ordinance shall pay for every such offence twenty shillings.

Item: it is ordained and established that no person or persons free of the said art or science, or any their servants or apprentices, or any other person or persons professing the said art or science, or any their servants or apprentices, either in consort or otherwise, shall at any time or times hereafter play upon any kind of instrument or instruments, either evening or morning, at or under any nobleman, knight, or gentleman's window or lodging in the street, or the window or lodging of any other person or persons whatsoever, within the City of London, suburbs, liberties, and precincts aforesaid, without license and leave of the master, wardens, and eight of the assistants at the least of the said Art or Science of Musicians of London for the time being, upon pain that the master of every such servant or apprentice shall forfeit and pay for every person so offending and for every time that he or they shall so offend the sum of three shillings and fourpence.

Item: it is likewise ordained and established that no person or persons free of the said Art or Science of Musicians, nor any their servants or apprentices, nor any other person or persons using or exercising the said art or science, or any their apprentices or servants whatsoever, shall play at any weddings, feasts, banquets, revels, or other assemblies or meetings within the City of London, suburbs, or precincts aforesaid, under the number of four, in consort or with violins, upon pain that the master of every such servant or apprentice shall forfeit and pay for every person, servant, and apprentice, and for every time he or they shall offend contrary to this ordinance, the sum of three shillings and fourpence.

Item: it is ordained and established that the master and wardens of the said Art or Science of Musicians of London for the time being shall not at any time hereafter demise, grant, let, or sell any lands or tenements which shall hereafter belong to the Company of the said Art or Science of Musicians of London to any person or persons by lease for term of years or otherwise, nor shall receive any fine or fines or incomes, nor shall do any act whatsoever which shall bind, charge, or hinder the said Company, and the master, wardens, and commonalty thereof, without the special agreement, will, consent, and assent of all the assistants of the same Company for the time being, or of eight of the same assistants at the least, and of the same master and wardens, upon pain of forfeiture of twenty pounds for every time they or any of them shall do contrary to the meaning of this ordinance: And that all and every demise, grant, act and acts hereafter to be made, procured, or done by the master or wardens to the contrary shall be utterly void and of no force.

Item: it is ordained that if hereafter the master and wardens of the said Art or Science of Musicians for the time being, or any of them, during the time of their continuance in their office, shall be found partial, remiss, negligent, or not indifferent in executing any of the said Acts or ordinances comprised in this book shall favour any person or persons in his or their offences, or for meed, favour, affection, or dread shall not execute the said ordinances and every of them indifferently to and upon every person after their offences according to the meaning of this book and the ordinances herein comprised, that then, upon a due proof thereof had before the other master, wardens, and the assistants of the said art or science for the time being, or before the other wardens and eight of the same assistants at the least, every person so found partial, negligent, or not indifferent as is aforesaid, shall forfeit and pay for every time so offending forty shillings, more or less, at the discretion of the other wardens and of the said assistants.

Item: it is ordained that the master and wardens of the said Art or Science of Musicians of London for the time being, and their successors master and wardens of the said art or science for ever, shall, within one month next and immediately after the expiration of their office of wardenship and the admission and oath of the new master and wardens that shall supply their place, make and yield up yearly unto the same new master and wardens for the time being, and to the assistants of the same company or fellowship or eight of the same assistants at the least, a true, whole, plain, and perfect accompt, payment, and delivery of all and all manner sums of money and of all other things whatsoever which have been delivered unto them, or otherwise by any whatsoever means come or ought to come to the hands, possession, order, or custody of them, or any of them, to the use of the commonalty of the said Art or Science of the Musicians of London during the year of their office and charge, and of the office and charge of every or any of them, upon pain to forfeit and pay at every time for doing contrary to this ordinance ten pounds.

Item: it is also ordained that every year, yearly, against the foresaid day of account to be made to the new master and wardens of the said Art or Science of Musicians of London for the time being by them that last were in the same office, before there shall be chosen by the same new master and wardens, with the advice of the said assistants, four or more to audit, hear, try, and examine the same account with auditors, shall be chosen out of the aforesaid assistants of the said art or science; and such person or persons being chosen as aforesaid which shall refuse to take upon him or them the said office of auditor shall forfeit and pay every of them five shillings.

Item: it is ordained and established that all and every of the same penalties, fines, amerciaments, forfeitures, and sums of money by these ordinances limited and appointed to be taxed, forfeited, or paid shall be sued for, levied, and recovered by the said master, wardens, and fellowship to the use of the said master, wardens, commonalty, and fellowship of the said Art or Science of the Musicians of London, to be employed by the said master and wardens of the said art or science for the time being in and about the relief of the poor of the commonalty and fellowship of the said Art or Science of the Musicians of London, and to the sustentation of the charge to be borne by the master, wardens, and commonalty of the said art or science in the common occasions of the said Company: And if any person or persons, of his or their froward disposition or otherwise, shall hereafter refuse ordain to pay in good and lawful money of England any quarterage, penalties, fines, forfeitures, or other amerciaments whatsoever, set or assessed, or to be set or assessed, upon him or them, that then it shall be lawful to the said master and wardens, and their successors master and wardens of the said art or science, to command and commit all and every such person and persons to ward until he shall agree with the master and wardens for the time being for his contempt and misbehaviour in that behalf, and have paid the same: Provided always, that the said master, wardens, and assistants for the time being, by their discretion, may mitigate, diminish, or abate the said forfeitures, penalties, and amerciaments, or any of them, as the case shall require, according to equity and good conscience: Provided also, that these Acts or ordinances, or anything herein contained, shall not in anywise extend or be construed to extend unto the King's Majesty's musicians in ordinary being not free of the said commonalty of the musicians of London, anything herein contained or expressed to the contrary in anywise notwithstanding.

Item: it is ordained that all and every person and persons, being of the full age of 21 years, which now are or hereafter shall be of the said Art or Science of Musicians of London, now using or exercising or which hereafter shall use or exercise the said art or science, as well masters as journeymen and apprentices, and every of them, within the places and precincts aforesaid, shall, upon reasonable warning and monition to them given personally, appear at the common hall, at the time and times for that purpose appointed, before the said master, wardens, and assistants, or the greater part of them, and then and there shall in willing and obedient manner, under their hands, submit themselves and yield their consents to the true and due performance of all and singular the ordinances, laws, constitutions, and orders above in these presents, upon and under the pains in them and every of them mentioned, specified, contained, and set down.

Ye shall swear that ye shall be true to our Sovereign Lord the King, and to his heirs and successors Kings and Queens of the realm of England: And that you and every of you, effectually and diligently, during the time and season you shall be or remain in your said office, shall, as far forth as you lawfully and conveniently may, see to and keep the said Art and Science of the Musicians in good order, and rule and execute your office in every case thereunto appertaining truly, justly, and indifferently. So help you God, and by the contents of this Book.

Ye shall swear that ye shall always, in what lawfully and conveniently you may to your power, faithfully aid and assist the master and wardens of the Art or Science of Musicians of London for the time being, and every of them, as well in the execution of the rules and ordinances made and ratified for the good order and government of the said art as in all other affairs whatsoever concerning the same art, good and faithful counsel to the best of your knowledge from time to time shall ye give unto them. You shall not procure nor consent that the lands, revenues of, or goods of the foresaid Company shall be inordinately spent, consumed, or embezzled, but to the best of your skill and power ye shall the same let and withstand. So help you God, and by the contents of this Book.

All which acts, ordinances, constitutions, and oaths in manner and form aforesaid, as well at the request of the said Tristram Waters, now master of the said Art or Science of Musicians of London, and of the said William Benton and Vincent Janvrin, now wardens, and the commonalty of the same, by the authority and virtue of the same Act of Parliament made in the nineteenth year of King Henry the Seventh, we, the said Chancellor, Treasurer, and Chief Justice aforesaid, have seen, perused, read, examined, and approved, and for good, laudable, and lawful ordinances, constitutions, and oaths we do allow and approve. In witness whereof to these presents, we, the said Lord Chancellor, Lord Treasurer, and Chief Justice, have subscribed our names and set our seals, the five and twentieth day of August, in the fourth year of the reign of our Sovereign Lord James, by the grace of God King of England, France, and Ireland, Defender of the Faith, and of Scotland the fortieth.

Ye shall swear that ye shall be faithful and true to our Sovereign Lord the King's Majesty, and to his heirs and successors Kings and Queens of Great Britain; ye shall not do nor consent to be done any treasons or felonies, but all such as you shall know ye shall duly to your power do to be revealed and known to the King or his Council: And ye shall be obedient unto the master and wardens of the Art or Science of Musicians of London for the time being in all things concerning the same art and science, being agreeable to the ordinances of the said art and customs of the City of London, and shall come duly and truly upon every lawful summons to any assembly to be made for any matter or cause to be treated and communed upon by the master, wardens, and assistants of the said art or science, except ye reasonably or lawfully be, or else to pay such penalties and fines as ye shall forfeit by reason of your default: And also ye shall be at all times contributory to all manner of charges done or to be done by them in and about the weal and continuance of the said art or science to your power: Also well and truly after your power ye shall in all things obey, keep, and observe all the acts and ordinances made for the governance and good order of the said art and science, and confirmed according to the laws and statutes of this realm in that case provided. So help ye God, and by the contents of this Book.

Item: be it ordained if any person or persons of the said fellowship, art, or science, or any other person, either free or not free, whatsoever, that shall use or exercise the said art or science of musick or musicians, or any faculty thereof, shall go himself, or suffer his servant or apprentice to go, in any open street within this city or liberties thereof, or within three miles of the same city, from house to house with any instrument or instruments uncased or uncovered in any part, to be seen by any passing by, upon pain of forfeiture of twelve pence for every such offence.

Item: be it ordained that if any person or persons of the Art, Science, or Fellowship of Musicians, or any other person whatsoever that shall use the said Art or Science of Musicians within this city or liberties thereof, shall by themselves, their servants, or apprentices play upon or with any instrument, or use the said art or science of music, or any other thing concerning the same in consort, or any other kind of instruments whatsoever of or with any foreigner or foreigners, servants, or apprentices, within the city or liberties thereof and not elsewhere, upon pain to forfeit and pay for every such offence three shillings and fourpence.

Item: be it ordained if any person or persons, free or not, of the Art, Science, or Fellowship of Musicians shall suffer their servants or apprentices to by themselves with any music within this city or liberties thereof, or three miles of the same, at any feasts, banquets, weddings, hunts, or at any other assemblies, triumphs, or occasions, either to go abroad in the streets or to play at any taverns, victualling houses, or any other place whatsoever, except they do go in or with the company of two freemen at the least well and sufficiently exercised and experienced in the said art or science of music, whereof one to be the master of some one of the said apprentices or servants, as also foreigners without the city and liberties and within the three miles of the same city, shall in like manner observe the same orders as the freemen of the same city doth, whereby they may be the better guided and directed in that science for the laud, honour, and commendation thereof; and that the freeman or foreigner being master of the said apprentice or servants shall himself, or the other freeman or foreign master, offer and present the music, and not any other his apprentice or servant, upon pain to forfeit for every offence contrary to this act three shillings and fourpence.

Item: be it also ordained that if any person or persons professing the said Art, Science, or Fellowship of Musicians of the City of London or the liberties thereof, or three miles of the same city, shall at any time hereafter by any means, directly or indirectly, by himself or wittingly know or suffer his servant or apprentice to use or practice any manner of unlawful games at any time or in any place with any freeman's servants or apprentices, either of the said art or science or being free of any other company whatsoever, or any foreigners, within three miles of this city, shall in anywise or by any means countenance him or them therein, upon pain of forfeiture of every such offence being justly proved against them or him, shall for every time he or they shall so offend forfeit and pay to the master and wardens and commonalty ten shillings, or suffer imprisonment of his or their bodies till he or they have paid the same.

It is also ordained and established, consented, and agreed that if hereafter any person of the said art or science be grieved with any other person of the same art or science, that then he that is so grieved shall first complain to the master and wardens of the said Art or Science of Musicians of London for the time being, and show his cause of griefs unto them without any his further complaint, to the intent that the same master and wardens may understand the same and the circumstances thereof, and thereupon to take order for good agreement, peace, and concord to be had between the said parties, according to the right, equity, and good conscience, either by mutual agreement of the parties themselves or else by way of arbitrament: And also that no person of the said art or science maintain any matters or quarrels against or between any persons of the same art or science, nor that any of the same art or science shall arrest, sue, or molest any other of the said art or science for any matter of controversy, evil words, or debt not exceeding ten pounds, before such time as the master and wardens of the said art or science for the time being do give licence unto the same parties to enter into the law if reasonable order cannot be by them therein taken, upon pain that every person that shall do contrary to the intent and meaning hereof shall pay for every such offence twenty shillings.

It is also enacted, ordered, consented, and decreed that there shall be chosen every year two stewards, to provide for one whole year upon the four quarter days four dinners for the master, wardens, and assistants of the said Company, unto which charge it is also enacted, ordered, consented, and agreed that any assistant that shall come to every or any of the said dinners shall contribute and pay to the stewards towards the charge of the said quarter dinners twelve pence: And also it is further enacted, ordered, consented, and agreed that every person refusing to hold steward as aforesaid shall pay unto this Company the sum of forty shillings for his fine for every time that he shall so refuse the same stewardship, being thereunto chosen by the master, wardens, and assistants, or the greater part of them: And it is further ordered, consented, and agreed that the said four quarter dinners, and every of them, shall be from time to time kept and held at such place as the master and wardens for the time being shall think fit, meet, and convenient, and shall nominate the same place unto them the said stewards.

For any further information the Royal Commissioners are referred to Grove's History of Music.

The livery consists of forty-nine members, thirteen of whom now form the court of assistants or governing body. There are only a few freemen to the knowledge of the court, who are not liverymen. Four quarterly courts are held in the months of January, April, July, and October, for the transaction of business.

A fee of one guinea is allowed to each of such members for their attendances at each court. After payment of the expenses of such meetings and the salaries to the officers, the surplus income of the Company is devoted to the relief of decayed members or in the encouragement of music by donations to institutions such as the Royal Society of Musicians, &c.

The fees payable on admission are as follows:—

	£	s.	d.
On admission by redemption - - -	5	17	6
„ „ patrimony or servitude - -	3	17	6
On being called upon the livery -	15	17	6
On admission to the court - -	31	15	0

The Musicians' Company is the only professional company connected with the City of London, and, although chartered, has now no controlling power over the profession which it represents (see Pulling, p. 491), and is, in fact, more of a society associated with the art of music.

The officers, who are elected annually by the court, are a clerk, whose salary is 30*l.* per annum, and a beadle, whose salary is 20*l.* per annum.

The funds of the Company were derived wholly from fees and fines paid by the members on admission to the freedom, livery, and court. There is no property held for charitable purposes.

The property of the Company now consists of freehold ground rents, amounting in the aggregate to 336*l.* 7*s.* per annum, arising out of the following properties:—

Nos. 4, 6, 16, 18, 20, and 22, Powerscroft Road, Lower Clapton, Middlesex.
Nos. 6, 8, 10, 27, 29, 31, 33, 35, and 37, Rushmore Road, Lower Clapton, Middlesex.
Nos. 31, 33, 35, and 39, Almach Road, Lower Clapton.
Nos. 1 and 2, Emily Villas, and Seymour Villa, Arlington Road, Surbiton, Surrey.
Ten houses in the Avenue, Hornsey Park, Middlesex.
Nos. 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, and 46, West Green Road, Wood Green, Middlesex.
Also 277*l.* 4*s.* 5*d.* New Three per Cent. Annuities.

This return is made on behalf of the Musicians' Company to the Royal Commissioners out of courtesy and consideration to such Commissioners, and it is desired that it may not be regarded as any admission by the Company of any right of the Commissioners to call for such return.

APPENDIX A.

The Company gave considerable information to the Municipal Commissioners appointed in 1834

NEEDLEMAKERS' COMPANY.

The following returns were made by the Court of the Company under protest.

PART I.—FOUNDATION AND OBJECT.

RETURNS A to H, both inclusive.

RETURN A.—A statement of the date, ascertained or probable, of the foundation of the Company, and of the circumstances, so far as they can be discovered from its documents of foundation or archives, in which the Company had its origin.

RETURN B.—A list of the charters, charters of inspeximus, and other instruments of a similar nature, whether originals or copies, which have been at any time in the possession of the Company, together with an abstract of the purport of each, regard being specially had to any evidence which it may contain as to the object of the foundation of the Company.

RETURN C.—A list of any trust deeds "founding, regulating, or affecting" the Company, with the date of each, the names of the parties thereto, and an abstract of the purport of each.

RETURN D.—A list, with dates, of any "decrees of court," whether of the Courts of Common Law or of Chancery, or of any acts of the Court of Aldermen or of the Court of Common Council, "regulating or affecting" the Company, with a statement of the effect of each decision.

RETURN E.—A list of any other documents, not included in the descriptions in the preceding returns, which "found, regulate, or affect" the Company, with dates and an abstract of the effect of each.

RETURN F.—A concise history of the Company from the time of its foundation to the present day, with special reference to the inquiry contained in the Commission as to "the objects for which the Company "was founded," and "how far those objects are now being carried into effect."

RETURN G.—Has the Company a licence in mortmain? When was such licence granted (referring to the document by description)? What is its extent, and to what extent is it now unexhausted?

RETURN H.—Is there vested in the Company, and how, whether by charter, statute, order of the Court of Aldermen, act of Common Council, or otherwise, any right of exercising superintendence over, or any duty or discretion to encourage in any way, any and what art, trade, or business? State the nature and local limits of such control. In what manner, and to what extent, is such control now exercised? If such control is not now exercised, state the circumstances under which its exercise has fallen into desuetude.

A.—The Needlemakers' Company date from the time of Henry VIII. A charter of incorporation was first granted to the Company by Oliver Cromwell as Lord Protector of the Commonwealth, and is dated 10th November 1656. After the Restoration the charter under which the Needlemakers' Company now act was granted by Charles the II. It is dated the 9th day of February 1664. The circumstances under which the Company had its origin will be found in the recital in the last-mentioned document.

B.—The following original charters are now in the possession of the Company, viz. (1), the charter granted by Oliver Cromwell, dated 10th November 1656.

(2.) The charter granted by Charles II., dated 9th February 1664.

The latter charter under which the Company now acts is to the following effect:—

Charles the Second, by the grace of God King of England, Scotland, France, and Ireland, Defender of the Faith, &c. To all to whom these presents shall come, greeting. Whereas, we are informed by the humble petition of divers Needlemakers in and near our City of London, that sundry persons using the trade and mystery of needlemaking in and near the same our City of London have for many years past, and still do use and practise many abuses and deceits in making of iron needles, and needles of bad stuffs and unworkmanlike, to the great abuse and wrong of the people of this kingdom, and the scandal of the said art or mystery of needlemaking, for the prevention whereof We have been humbly besought to incorporate them into a body politique, and to invest them with such privileges and powers as may be meet and necessary for the well ordering and regulating of the same art and mystery. Now know ye, that We, taking the premises into our princely consideration, and being desirous to advance the good and benefit of the artists and freemen of the said art and mystery, and for the general good and advantage of all our loving subjects, of our especial grace, certain knowledge, and mere motion, have ordained, granted, constituted, and appointed, and by these presents, for Us, our heirs and successors, do ordain, grant, constitute, and appoint that Matthew Chantrell, John Shipman, William Watts, William Pride, senior, John Hankestine, Charles Bourod, John Read, Richard Taylor, Edward Walgrave, William Pride, junior, John Flower, Francis Shaw, Christopher Cobson, Henry Willmore, and Robert Coles, citizens of London, being all needlemakers and freemen of the said City of London, and all such other persons as now do or hereafter shall or may use the said art or mystery of needlemaking within the said City of London and ten miles compass thereof, for ever hereafter be and shall be, by virtue of these presents, one body, corporate and politique, in deed and in name, and shall have continuance and perpetual succession for ever, by the name of Master, Wardens, and Commonalty of the art or mystery of Needlemakers of the City of London. And that they and their successors shall be for ever hereafter persons able and capable in the law to purchase, have, receive, and enjoy manors, messuages, lands, tenements, liberties, privileges, jurisdictions, franchises, and other hereditaments whatsoever, of what kind, nature, or quality soever they be, to them and their successors in fee and perpetuity, or for term of life, lives, or years, or otherwise, in what sort soever * * * the statute of mortmain or anything therein contained, or any other act or statute to the contrary notwithstanding. And also all manner of goods, chattels, and things whatsoever, of what name, nature, or quality soever they be. And also to give, grant, sell, assign, alien, set over, and dispose of any of the said manors, messuages, lands, tenements, and hereditaments, goods, and chattels, at their wills and pleasures. And that they and their successors by that name shall and may be able to plead and be impleaded, answer and be answered, defend and be defended, in what court or courts soever, and before any judge or justice and other persons and officers of Us, our heirs and successors whatsoever, in all and singular actions, pleas, suits, plaints, matters, and demands of what kind, quality, or sort soever. And also to do, perform, and execute all such acts and things whatsoever, as fully and amply to all intents and purposes as any other body politique or corporate, within this our kingdom of England or Dominion of Wales can or may act or do. And further, that they, the said master, wardens, and commonalty of the art or mystery of Needlemakers of the City of London, and their successors, shall and may for ever hereafter have a common seal to serve and use in and for all causes, matters, and affairs whatsoever of them and their successors. And that it shall and may be lawful to and for them and their successors to break, alter, and make new the said seal from time to time at their wills and pleasures. And further, We will and ordain, and by these presents, for Us, our heirs and successors, do give and grant unto the said master, wardens, and commonalty, and their successors for the time being, full power and authority to assemble themselves and meet together from time to time in some convenient place within the said City of London where they shall think most meet, and then and there they shall and may elect and choose of the said art and mystery, in manner and form hereafter in these presents mentioned, a meet person who shall and may be called the master of the said Company. And also then and there elect and choose two other of the said Company, in manner and form hereafter mentioned, who shall be and shall be called the wardens of the said Company. And also then and there nominate, elect, and choose twelve other meet persons of the same Society, in manner and form hereafter in these presents expressed, who shall be and shall be called the assistants of the said Company, who from time to time shall be aiding and assisting to the said master and wardens for the time being in all causes, matters, or things touching or concerning the said Company. And also that the said master, wardens, and assistants, and their successors for the time being, or any five or more of them, having obtained a warrant from the Lord Chief Justice of the Court of King's Bench for the time being, and with the assistance of a constable or any other lawful officer, shall have full power and authority, from time to time, and at all convenient times, peaceably and quietly to enter into the house, shop, or warehouse of any member of the said Society, or other person employed by him, there to search, prove, and see whether the needles made, sold, or put to sale, by him or them, be made of good and sufficient materials, and well and duly made and wrought; and such as shall be found not to be made of good and sufficient materials, and well and duly made and wrought, to seize upon and carry away, to the end the same may be duly examined and tried by the said master, wardens, and assistants, or the major part of them, and disposed of as they shall think fit. And further, We do grant for Us, our heirs and successors, by these presents, unto the said master, wardens, and commonalty of the art or mystery of Needlemakers of the City of London for the time being, that they * * * shall and may have full power and authority by virtue of these presents to make, ordain, constitute, appoint, and set down from time to time such reasonable laws, acts, orders, ordinances, and constitutions in writing as to them * * * shall seem fit, good, and convenient according to their best discretion, as well for and concerning such fit and legal oaths as shall be requisite to be administered to the master, wardens, and assistants, or any other of the said Society, for touching and concerning the good rule and government of the said Company, or any of the members thereof, as for the punishment and reformation of such deceits and abuses as shall from time to time be practised, either in uttering or making bad and deceitful needles by any member of the said Society, or any other employed by him, within the said City of London, or any other place or places within the limits aforesaid. And also to provide and limit such reasonable pains, penalties, and punishments, either by fines, amerciaments, or any other lawful ways or means whatsoever, upon all offenders or breakers of such acts, orders, ordinances, and constitutions, as to the said master, wardens, and assistants * * * shall think fit. And that the said master, wardens, and commonalty, and their successors, shall and may by virtue of these presents, have and take the same by distress, action of debt, or other lawful ways or means whatsoever; the said fines and amerciaments to be and to remain to the use of the said Society and their successors, without let or hindrance of Us, our heirs or successors, or without the giving or rendering any account or other thing to Us, our heirs or successors in that behalf. All such acts, ordinances, and constitutions so as aforesaid to be made We will, shall be observed, obeyed, performed, and kept, under the pains and penalties therein to be contained, so as always such acts, orders, ordinances, constitutions, fines, and amerciaments be reasonable, and not repugnant or contrary, but as near as may be agreeable, to the laws and statutes of this kingdom and to the custom or usage of our said city of London. And for the better execution of this our grant, We have created, assigned, named, constituted, and appointed, and made, and by these presents, for Us, our heirs and successors, do create, assign, name, constitute, make, and appoint the said Matthew Chantrell to be the first and present master of the said Company, who shall continue in the said office from the date of these presents until the Thursday next following the nine and twentieth day of September now next ensuing, if he shall so long live and well behave himself in the said office, and from thenceforth until one other of the said Society shall be chosen and sworn in to the said office of master in due manner, according to the ordinances and provisions in that behalf in these presents mentioned and expressed, he, the said Matthew Chantrell, taking his corporal oath for the due and faithful execution of the said office or place. * * * And also We have assigned, named, constituted, and made, and by these presents, for Us, our heirs, and successors, do assign, name, ordain, constitute, and make the said John Shipman and William Watts to be the first and present wardens of the said Company; and that they, and either of them respectively, shall continue in the said office from the day of the date of these presents until the said Thursday next following the aforesaid nine and twentieth day of September now next coming, if the said John Shipman and William Watts, or either of them respectively, shall so long live, and shall well demean themselves in their said offices or places respectively, and from thenceforth until two others of the said Society shall be duly chosen and sworn in to the said office of wardens of the said Company, according to the ordinances and provisions herein expressed and declared, they, the said John Shipman and William Watts, taking their respective corporal oaths. * * * And We likewise have assigned, named, constituted, appointed, and made, and by these presents, for Us, our heirs, and successors, do assign, name, constitute, and make the said William Pride, senior, John Hankestine, Charles Bourod, John Read, Richard Taylor, Edward Walgrave, William Pride, junior, John Flower, Francis Shaw, Christopher Cobson, Henry Willmore, and Robert Coles to be the first and present assistants of the said Company, whom We will shall continue in the said office of assistants during their natural lives, unless they, or any of them respectively, shall be removed for misbehaving of themselves in their said office, or some other just and reasonable cause, they and every of them taking their respective corporal oaths * * * for the faithful execution of their said place of assistants. * * * And We will, and by these presents, for Us, our heirs, and successors, do grant unto the said master, wardens, and commonalty of the said art or mystery of Needlemakers of the City of London, and their successors, that the said master, wardens, and assistants of the said Company for the time being * * * from time to time for ever hereafter, shall have full power and authority yearly and every year, at and upon the Thursday next following the nine and twentieth day of September, to elect and nominate one of the wardens or assistants for the time being to be the master of the said Company for one whole year thence next ensuing, and until one other of the said wardens or assistants shall be elected and sworn according to the ordinances and provisions in these presents expressed and declared; and that such person as shall be so chosen and named unto the said office of master of the said Company, before he be admitted to execute the same, shall take his corporal oath * * * to execute the said office rightly, well, and faithfully in all things touching the same. And that after such oath so as aforesaid taken, shall have and exercise the said office for one whole year from thence next ensuing, and until one other shall be duly elected and chosen in his place, or elected according to the provisions in these presents contained. * * * And likewise that at the same time of electing the said master as aforesaid, the said master, wardens, and assistants of the said Company for the time being * * * shall and may also elect, choose, and nominate two other of the assistants of the said Society, which shall be and shall be called the wardens of the said Company for one whole year thence next ensuing, and until two others of the said assistants be duly chosen, elected, and sworn in to the said office of wardens of the said Company, according to the ordinances and provisions herein-after declared and expressed; and that such persons as shall be so chosen and named unto the said office of wardens of the said Company, before they be admitted to execute the same, shall take their respective corporal oaths * * * well and duly to execute the said office in all things touching the same. And that after such oath so as aforesaid taken, the said persons shall and may execute the said offices for one whole year from thence next ensuing, and until two others shall be duly elected and chosen in their places and stead, according to the provisions in these presents contained. * * * And further, We will, and by these presents, for Us, our heirs, and successors, do grant to the aforesaid master, wardens, and commonalty of the art or mystery of Needlemakers of the City of London, and their successors, that if the master and wardens of the said Company, now and for the time being, or any of them, at any time after they shall be elected and chosen into his and their office and offices, shall happen to die or be removed from his or their said office or offices, which said master and wardens, and every of them, for ill-government, or for any other just and reasonable cause, We will from time to time shall be removed * * * that then, and so often in any of those cases, it shall and may be lawful to and for the said master, wardens, and assistants for the time being * * * at their wills and pleasures, one other or others of the assistants aforesaid to be master, warden, or wardens of the said Company, in the place or places of him or them so deceased or removed, to elect and choose, according to the orders and provisions before in these presents expressed and declared, to execute and exercise the said office of master, warden, or wardens of the said Company until the Thursday after the nine and twentieth day of September then next following, and then and from thenceforth until some other meet person and persons shall be elected and sworn to be master and wardens of the said Company respectively as aforesaid. Nevertheless We will that every master and warden of the said Society to be nominated and elected in the place or places of him or them so dying or being removed, from time to time for ever, before he shall be admitted to the execution of the said office, shall take his corporal oath * * * well, rightly, and faithfully to execute the said office in and by all things respectively touching and concerning the same. * * * And further We will, and by these presents, for Us, our heirs, and successors, do grant to the aforesaid master, wardens, and commonalty of the art or mystery of Needlemakers of the City of London, and their successors, that whensoever it shall happen any of the assistants of the said Company now and for the time being do die or be removed from his said office, which said assistants, and every of them, for evil government, or for any just and reasonable cause, We will from time to time be removed by the greater part of the master, wardens, and assistants of the art and mystery aforesaid for the time being, that then and so often it shall and may be lawful to and for the said master, wardens, and assistants for the time being, or the greater part of them, at their wills and pleasures, to elect and ordain one other or others of the said Society, being meet person or persons, to be assistant or assistants in the place or places of him or them deceased or removed, according to the orders and provisions before in these presents expressed and declared, to execute and exercise the said office of assistant or assistants during his or their natural life or lives in manner and form aforesaid. Nevertheless We will that every assistant of the said Society so to be nominated and elected in the place or places of him or them so dying or removed shall from time to time, before he or they be admitted to the execution of his office of assistant, take his and their corporal oath. * * * And also We will, and by these presents, for Us, our heirs, and successors, do grant unto the said master, wardens, and commonalty, and their successors, full power and authority that the master, wardens, and assistants of the said Company for the time being * * * shall and may from time to time nominate, elect, choose, and constitute one fit and meet person to be clerk of the said Company, to serve for the affairs of the said Society; and one other fit and meet person to be beadle of the said Company, to be serviceable and attendant on the said master, wardens, and assistants of the said Company, and all matters touching the same. And the said clerk and beadle, and either of them, for reasonable and just cause, to displace and remove, and other persons in their place or places, at the discretion of the master, wardens, and assistants, or the greater part of them, for the time being, to choose and elect, which said clerk and beadle so elected and ordained, before they be admitted to the execution of their said offices, shall take their corporal oaths * * * well, faithfully, and honestly to demean and behave themselves in the execution of the said offices respectively. * * * And for the better discovery of the false, deceitful, and insufficient works belonging to the said art or trade, We will, and by these presents, for Us, our heirs and successors, do ordain and firmly charge and command, that no person or persons whatsoever from henceforth within the said City of London, and ten miles' compass of the same, do use, exercise, or practise the said art or mystery of needlemaking unless he or they shall first have served as an apprentice or apprentices for the space of seven years at the least unto a freeman of the said Company, or some other person or persons lawfully using or exercising the said art or mystery of a needlemaker, according to the statute in that behalf made and provided, upon pain of being proceeded against for his or their contempt thereof, according to the laws and statutes of this our realm. And We, well weighing and considering that the good order and honest practice of the art or mystery aforesaid will conduce much to the benefit and good of the people of this kingdom, and that the members thereof being under the government of the City of London, the offenders in the said trade are like to be more effectually dealt withal, and punished according to their demerits, and those that do use and exercise the same as they ought to do the better comforted and nourished, We hereby declare our will and pleasure to be that the lord mayor and aldermen of the City of London for the time being do cause and allow these our Letters Patents to be enrolled within the Common Chamber of the said city, amongst the records thereof, to the intent that those that are and shall be freemen of London and members of the said Society of Needlemakers may be subject to the government of the said city, and may enjoy the benefit thereof. And further, We will, ordain, and grant for Us, our heirs and successors, by these presents, to the said master, wardens, and assistants of the art or mystery of Needlemakers of the City of London, and their successors, that it shall and may be lawful to and for the said master, wardens, and assistants * * * for the time being to take and admit into the same Society such persons as they shall from time to time think fit, and as shall desire to become members of the same Society. * * * And furthermore, We will, and by these presents, for Us, our heirs and successors, do firmly charge and command all and singular justices of the peace, mayors, sheriffs, bailiffs, constables, and other officers and ministers of Us, our heirs and successors, to whom it shall appertain, that from time to time they be and shall be aiding and assisting to the aforesaid master, wardens, and assistants for the time being, and the deputy and deputies of the said master and wardens for the time being respectively, whom we do hereby give full power and authority to make and constitute under the seal of the said Company, with full power and authority to make searches, and act and do all things in their places and steads, as fully and amply as they may respectively do or perform by virtue of and according to the intent of these presents in the due execution of these Our letters patent in and by all things according to the true intent and meaning thereof. And moreover, We will, and by these presents for Us, our heirs and successors, do grant to the aforesaid master, wardens, and commonalty, and their successors, that these our Letters Patent or the enrolment of the same, and all and singular matters and things therein contained from time to time shall be good, sufficient, firm, and effectual in the law in all things, and by all things according to the true intent thereof, and shall be expounded and construed chiefly, beneficially, and largely to the greatest profit, benefit, and advantage of the aforesaid master, wardens, and commonalty and their successors. Provided always, that if it shall at any time hereafter be made appear to Us, our heirs or successors, that these our letters patents of incorporation, or any the clauses, powers, or privileges thereby granted are prejudicial or inconvenient, and not of public use and benefit, then upon signification or declaration thereof to be made by Us, our heirs or successors, under our or their signett, sign manuall, or privy seal, these presents or so many of the said powers and privileges, whereof any such signification or declaration shall be so made, shall from thenceforth cease, determine, and have no longer being, anything in these presents contained to the contrary thereof in anywise notwithstanding. And lastly, We will, and by these presents for Us, our heirs and successors, do ordain and firmly command that the said master, wardens, and assistants of the said Company of Needlemakers, and all officers of the said Company now being or that hereafter by virtue of these presents, or of any other Letters Patents, shall be elected or constituted before they, or any of them respectively, act or meddle in the execution of their several and respective offices or places, do and shall take the oaths of allegiance and supremacy on the Holy Evangelists before the lord mayor and chamberlain of our said City of London for the time being, or either of them, whom we do hereby authorise to administer the same accordingly. In witness whereof We have caused these our Letters to be made Patent. Witness Ourself at Westminster, the ninth day of February, in the sixteenth year of Our reign.

By writ of Privy Seal,
HOWARD.

C.—There is no trust deed founding, regulating, or affecting the Company, other than the before-mentioned charters and the byelaws, dated 20th June 1664.

The following are extracts from the byelaws:—

To all Christian people to whom these presents shall come, Edward Earl of Clarendon, Lord High Chancellor of England, Sir Robert Hyde, Knt., Chief Justice of the Pleas, to be holden before His Majesty; and Sir Orlando Bridgman, Knt. and Bart., Chief Justice of His Majesty's

Court of Common Pleas, send greeting in our Lord God everlasting. Whereas by Act of Parliament made in the nineteenth year of the reign of the late king of famous memory, Henry, after the Conquest the Seventh, it was amongst other things enacted, that no master, wardens, and fellowship of crafts or mysteries, nor any of them, nor any rulers of guilds or fraternities should take upon them to make any acts or ordinances nor to execute any acts or ordinances, by them before that time made in disinheritance or diminution of the King's prerogative, nor of other nor against the common profit of the people, unless the same acts or ordinances were examined and approved by the Chancellor, Treasurer of England, and Chief Justice of either Bench, or three of them, or before both the Justices of Assize in their circuit or progress in the shire where such acts or ordinances be made, upon pain of forfeiture of forty pounds for every time that they do the contrary, as by the said Act of Parliament more plainly it doth and may appear; the master, wardens, assistants, and commonalty of the art or mystery of Needlemakers of the City of London desiring the said Act in every behalf to be observed and kept, the ninth day of April, in the year of our Lord one thousand six hundred and sixty-four, have exhibited to us a certain petition with this present writing, containing the good orders, rules, and ordinances by them devised and made for the said society, and their successors, and made for the wholesome and good rule and government of the said Society of Needlemakers; and thereupon have instantly desired us that we would peruse and examine the said orders, rules, and ordinances, as the said Act made in the said Parliament requireth and approve the same; whereupon, in pursuance of the said Act of Parliament, we have perused the said orders, rules, and ordinances, the tenor whereof ensueth and followeth, viz.:—

The Search for Needles.

Also it is ordained, that as well the master and wardens of the said Company for the time being, or any two of them, together with two or more of the said society, as also that the sworn deputies, to be appointed from time to time under the common seal of the said Society by the master, wardens, and assistants aforesaid, or the greater part of them, shall and may from henceforth in every year, when and so often as they or any of them shall think fit and convenient, have full power and lawful authority at convenient times in the daytime, and in the presence of a constable, to enter and come into all manner of houses, shops, warehouses, and all other places whatsoever, where any needles are made or shall be made or wrought by needlemakers or others using the same art, and then and there may view, search, try, prove, and see all and every such wares and workmanship appertaining or belonging to the art aforesaid, whether the same be well and artificially made and wrought, and whether the same be made and wrought of good stuff and materials, without fraud or deceit, or contrary to any the lawful orders, acts, ordinances, and constitutions made or to be made by the said master, wardens, and assistants for the time being, or the greater part of them, of which the master and one of the wardens to be two; and every offender that shall offend contrary to this present ordinance shall forfeit and pay to the use of the said society the sum of twenty-six shillings and eightpence of lawful money of England, or such less sum of like money as the master, wardens, and assistants, or the greater part of them, shall think fit. And that also every person and persons that shall or doth resist, deny, disobey, trouble, hinder, or molest, the said master and wardens and their lawful deputies as aforesaid, or any of them, in any of their search or searches hereafter to be had or made, shall forfeit and pay to the said master and wardens, to and for the use of the said society, for every such his, her, or their resisting, denying, disobeying, troubling, hindering, or molesting, five pounds of lawful money of England, or such less sum of like money as he, she, or they, by the master, wardens, and assistants aforesaid for the time being, or the greater part of them, whereof the master and one of the wardens to be two, shall be thought fit and ordered to pay for the same offence.

Time limited for Young Men coming out of their Apprenticeship before they shall take an Apprentice.

Also it is ordained that no person or persons which now or hereafter shall use or exercise the said art or mystery of a needlemaker shall at any time or times hereafter retain, keep, or have any apprentice or apprentices until such time as he hath been out of his time of apprenticeship and a freeman of the said Company by the space of three years, and make his proof piece as is hereafter expressed; nor shall to or for his own proper gain, profit, or advantage, profess, exercise, or manage the same mystery as a master thereof, or to take any apprentice, until such time as he shall, for the trial and approbation of his skill in the same trade, have made and wrought in the presence of the master or wardens for the time being, or such person or persons as by them or any two of them shall be appointed for that purpose, five hundred needles of such sorts and sizes as by the master and wardens for the time being, or any two of them, shall be to him or them in that behalf prescribed, and upon the finishing of the same needles shall present them to the master, wardens, and assistants of the said Society for the time being, or the greater part of them; and that every person upon such approbation shall pay to the master and wardens aforesaid, to and for the use aforesaid, the sum of ten shillings of lawful money of England, and to the clerk of the said Company for the time being one shilling and sixpence, and to the beadle thereof twelvepence. And that every person or persons that shall offend in any point contrary to this ordinance shall forfeit and pay for every offence, and for the use aforesaid, to the master and wardens of the said Company for the time being, five pounds of lawful money of England, or such less sum of like money as by the said master, wardens, and assistants for the time being, or the greater part of them, shall be adjudged and thought fitting.

The Number of Apprentices whereof each Freeman is capable.

Also it is ordained that no person or persons free, or which hereafter shall be free, of the said Company, nor any other person or persons which now do or hereafter shall use the art or mystery of needlemaking within the limits aforesaid, that hath borne or which hereafter shall bear the office, room, or place of master or warden, or assistant or assistants of the said Company of Needlemakers, shall have, retain, keep, or employ above the number of two apprentices at the most at one time; and that no person but such as shall be chosen to the office of master, wardens, or assistants to keep two apprentices as afore is mentioned; and they, the master, wardens, or assistants, not to take any more unless the term of one of his or their said apprentices be within six months of expiration or determination. And that no other person or persons which shall hereafter use or exercise the art or mystery of needlemaking within the said city of London, and ten miles' compass of the same, that hath not borne such office or offices as aforesaid, shall have, retain, and keep at one time more than one apprentice, unless the term or terms of the apprenticeship or apprenticeships of such apprentice or apprentices shall be within one year of the expiration or determination of the said term or terms; and that every person or persons which shall offend in any point contrary to this present ordinance shall forfeit and pay to the master and wardens of the said Society, to and for the use aforesaid, the sum of five pounds of lawful money of England for every month that he, she, or they shall keep, have, or retain any apprentice contrary to the true intent and meaning of this present ordinance, or such less sum of like money as by the master, wardens, and assistants for the time being, or the greater part of them, shall be adjudged and thought fitting.

Against Enticements of an Apprentice out of his Service.

Also it is ordained that no person or persons now using, or which hereafter shall use, the same trade of needlemaking, or which now is or hereafter shall be free of the same Company, shall entice, seduce, persuade, intreat, procure, receive, take, or entertain into his or their service or house the apprentice of any man or woman now or hereafter using the same trade, or being of the same Company, unless the term for which every such apprentice is respectively to serve be fully ended, or unless it be otherwise ordered by the master and wardens of the said Company and their assistants, or the greater part of them, for the time being; and that every person that doth or shall offend contrary to this present ordinance shall forfeit and pay, for the use aforesaid, for every such offence, to the master and wardens of the said Company for the time being, three pounds of lawful money of England, or such less sum of like money as shall be adjudged and thought fitting as aforesaid.

Against teaching the Trade to any other than to Apprentices.

Also it is ordained that such person or persons which now or hereafter are or shall be free of the said Company, or which now do or hereafter shall use or exercise the art or mystery of needlemaking within the limits or places before mentioned, or any of them, that shall by any manner of means whatsoever teach, instruct, or cause to be taught and instructed, or endeavour by any colour or otherwise to teach or instruct any person or persons whatsoever other than his apprentice or apprentices (to be by him or them lawfully bound, according to the laws of this Kingdom and custom of the city of London), the trade, mystery, craft, art, or occupation of needlemaking, or any skill, knowledge, workmanship, or thing thereunto in any manner of wise belonging or appertaining, shall for every such offence in that behalf forfeit and pay to the master and wardens of the Company aforesaid for the time being, to and for the use of the said Society, the sum of ten pounds of lawful money of England, or such less sum of like money as by the master, wardens, and assistants of the Company aforesaid, or the greater part of them, for the time being, shall be adjudged fitting.

Not to strike the mark on ordinary needles.

Also it is ordained that no person or persons whatsoever which now do or hereafter shall use the said art within the limits aforesaid, or be free of the said Company, shall at any time or times hereafter strike or set any mark or stamp upon any sort or size of ordinary needles, for that it is a means to delude and deceive the buyers of the same, they thinking and many times taking them to be of the best sort of needles in respect of the mark or stamp that is set on them as aforesaid; and every person or persons as aforesaid that shall offend contrary to this ordinance shall forfeit and pay for every offence to the master and wardens aforesaid, to and for the use of the said Society, the sum of twenty shillings of lawful money of England, or such less sum of like money as shall be thought fitting and adjudged by the said master, wardens, and assistants, or the greater number of them.

Against swearing, reviling, and the like.

Also it is ordained that if any person which now doth or hereafter shall exercise the same art within the limits aforesaid, or any that now are or shall be free of the said Company, shall at any time or times hereafter, in the common hall or meeting place of the said Society, or at any other meeting of the said Society, take the name of the Lord God in vain by rash, wilful, or misadvised swearing, cursing, or blaspheming, or shall at any time scandalise, defame, speak evil of, revile, or deride, or otherwise abuse or wrong the said Company or Society, or any member of the same Company, either in word, deed, or otherwise, that then every such person offending in any point contrary to this ordinance, and being thereof by his own acknowledgment or confession, or by other sufficient proof of one or more witnesses, detected, shall for every such offence forfeit and pay to the said master and wardens of the Company aforesaid for the time being, to and for the use of the said Society, the sum of thirteen shillings and fourpence of lawful money of England, or such less sum of like money as by the said master, wardens, and assistants, or the greater number of them, shall be adjudged fitting.

Against the employing of unskilful and unfit persons.

Also it is ordained, for the reformation of the great abuses already grown, and which are like daily to grow and increase, by employing unskilful and unfit persons, as women and young girls, in the art and mystery of making of needles, and that by reason of their unskilfulness therein there hath been a great number of bad insufficient needles made and put to sale, and for that by reason of the weakness of their sex they are not able to perform so laborious a work as to the beginning and ending thereof is required, it is ordered and ordained that no man or woman whatsoever using the art and mystery of needlemaking within the City of London and ten miles compass thereof shall hereafter take any woman, maid, or girl to be his, her, or their apprentice to the said art, nor shall employ or set at work any woman, maid, or girl other than the widows of those men who in their lifetimes had used the said art by the space of seven years at the least; and that every such widow so set at work shall be presented at the hall, before the Society at a court, to the intent that care may be taken for all such poor widows as their several necessities shall require, upon pain to forfeit ten pounds of lawful money of England to the use of the master, wardens, and Society of the art and mystery aforesaid for every maid, girl, or woman that shall be taken apprentice contrary to this order; and five shillings of like money for every day wherein any (using the art and mystery aforesaid within the limits aforesaid) shall offend by setting any woman or womankind at work contrary to the true meaning of this order.

To distrain upon all offenders' goods.

Also it is further ordained that all and every the penalties, forfeitures, and sums of money aforesaid appointed to be lost and forfeited (other than such as are specially limited and appointed to be to the use of the poor) shall be to the use of the said Society; and that for the due levying, obtaining, or recovery thereof it shall and may be lawful to or for any person or persons lawfully thereunto authorised, under the seal of the said Society, to distrain and take and carry away a reasonable distress of the goods and chattels of such offender or offenders, if, upon request or demand at the house of the offender or to his person, he shall not satisfy and pay the sum and sums of money so as aforesaid forfeited; and if after such distress taken the party offending shall not pay the sum for which such distress was so taken within 20 days after such distress so taken, the party so offending shall forfeit and pay for such default the sum of five pounds current money to the said master and wardens, to the use of the said Society, to be recovered by the said master, wardens, and Society in any of His Majesty's Courts of Record, if the party for whose default such distress was taken do not in the mean time agree with the said master and wardens for the same.

Against hawking.

Also it is ordained, that to the intent that His Majesty's liege people may not be privately and secretly deceived with bad and deceitful needles, that no person free of the said Company, or that now doth or hereafter shall use or exercise the art, trade, or mystery of needlemaking, shall hawk up and down the City of London, or in any other place or places within 10 miles' compass thereof—that is to say, going into inns, private houses, or ale-houses, or any suchlike places, or in common streets or ways, to proffer or cause to be proffered any sort of needles to sale other than to needlemakers, milliners, and haberdasher shops, which are the only usual places where needles are publicly and lawfully bought and sold; and if any person or persons shall do anything contrary to this ordinance, he or they shall forfeit and pay for every such his, her, or their offence the sum of two pounds thirteen shillings and fourpence of lawful English money to the master, wardens, and assistants of the Company of Needlemakers of London, or such less sum of like money as by the master, wardens, and assistants for the time being, or the greater number of them, shall be adjudged fitting.

Not to instruct or set a Son at Work without Binding.

Also it is ordained that none of the said Society shall instruct his son in the art and occupation of needlemaking, nor set him on work in the same, unless he first bind him an apprentice at the said hall of the said Society in form aforesaid; and that such son's apprenticeship be not made to begin before he be 14 years of age at the least; and that such son so to be bound shall be accounted one of the number of apprentices which every member of the said Society is allowed to keep, upon pain to forfeit twenty shillings of lawful money of England for every month wherein he shall offend in setting such son on work contrary to the true meaning of this ordinance.

No Member of the said Company to buy or sell any insufficient Needles.

Also it is ordained that if any member of the said Society do openly or secretly buy or procure of any person or persons any needles made of iron or other bad stuff, or unworkmanlike wrought, and do sell or offer to put them to sale, or employ any other to sell or offer them to sale to any of His Majesty's liege people, either in the City of London and liberties thereof, or in any fair or market-place or places of His Majesty's realm of England and dominion of Wales, the party so offending shall forfeit and pay to the master and wardens of the Society aforesaid, to the use of the Society aforesaid, the sum of ten pounds of lawful money of England for every time any one shall offend contrary to the true meaning of this ordinance, or suchlike less sum as by the said master, wardens, and assistants, or the greater number of them, for the time being, shall be adjudged and thought fitting.

Which said ordinances, in manner and form afore specified, at the request of the master, wardens, and assistants, and commonalty of the aforesaid art and mystery of needlemakers, by the authority of the said Act of Parliament, we the said Lord High Chancellor and Chief Justice of either Bench have examined, and the same ordinance and ordinances do by these presents as much as in us is, and as far as we lawfully may, ratify, allow, and approve. In witness whereof we have hereunto subscribed our names and put our seals, this 20th day of June in the year of our Lord God, according to the computation of the Church of England 1664.

D.—17th March 1712. Order of the Court of Aldermen, being a grant of livery to the number of 50.

24th March 1874. Order of the Court of Aldermen, being a grant of a further number of livery, making 100 in all.

13th June 1875. Order of the Court of Aldermen, being a grant of a further number of the livery, making 200 in all.

F.—The Commissioners are respectfully referred to the second report of the Commissioners appointed to inquire into municipal corporations, ordered by the House of Commons to be printed 25th April 1837. The Company from the earliest times have been associated on the basis of patrimonial succession in promoting good fellowship, and, as far as its means have admitted, in succouring the poorer members of the fraternity.* The Company have given prizes for the best workmanship in the manufacture of needles, and assist in disseminating technical education by means of grants to the City and Guilds of London Institute.

G.—Under the charter of Charles the Second the Company is empowered to hold lands not exceeding the clear yearly value of 100*l.* The Company is not at present possessed of any lands; this power, therefore, is now unexhausted to its full extent.

H.—There are still vested in the Company the various powers set forth in the charter of 9th February 1664 and the byelaws.

* See Appendix A.

PART I.—I.

I.—A list of the charities, eleemosynary, educational, or otherwise, which are under the management of the Company, stating in each case the name of the founder, the date and nature of the benefaction, its original and its present value, and the purposes to which the funds have been applied for each of the last preceding 10 years.

There are no charities connected with the Company.

PART II.—A.

Constitution and Privileges of Membership.

Return A.—Governing Body.

1. State the present constitution of the governing body of the Company, whether such constitution is according to the charter, and if not, in what respects such constitution varies therefrom, and when and how such alteration was made.
2. State the qualifications for membership of the governing body of the Company, the time and periods of election, and the qualifications of the voters at elections to the governing body.
3. State the functions of the governing body, and of the different members of the same respectively, and whether the members of the governing body pay any and what fees or fines on admission thereto, and whether they are paid any and what salaries or amounts in respect of their services respectively.
4. State the nature of the business which comes before the governing body of the Company, the method adopted in transacting it, the times at which the governing body meets for business purposes, the way in which the opinions of the members are taken, and whether the resolutions and decisions of the governing body are published, or are otherwise accessible to any or all, and which of, the members of the Company.
5. State whether the members of the governing body are liable to suspension or removal on any and what grounds, and by what method such suspension or removal is effected.
6. Has the Company any byelaws sanctioned by the Courts of Law or Chancery, or by the Courts of Aldermen or of Common Council, or otherwise? State the effect of such byelaws.

1. The present constitution of the governing body is in accordance with the charter, and consists of a master, two wardens, and 12 assistants.

2. The qualification consists of being a liveryman of the Company and the payment of the fees on election. The election of master and wardens takes place on the Thursday after Michaelmas Day in every year, and of the assistants at a court after each vacancy caused by death or resignation. The voters at election of the governing body are the members of the court, consisting of the master, wardens, and assistants.

3. The functions of the governing body are the general control of the Company in accordance with the charter and byelaws.

The fees payable on admission thereto are now as follows:—

	£	s.	d.
The master - -	5	15	6
The senior warden -	3	13	6
The junior warden -	3	3	0
Assistant - -	26	5	0

Neither the master, wardens, nor assistants receive any salary or fees in respect of their services.

4. To receive reports of the admission to the freedom of the Company. To elect by ballot in to the livery such freemen as are desirous of becoming liverymen. To elect the master, wardens, and assistants, all elections taking place by ballot, to appoint auditors and members of the general purposes and other committees, and to receive the audited accounts of the Company, and generally to transact all business connected with the Company. The court (viz., the master, wardens, and assistants) meet quarterly and at other times whenever a court is required. The resolutions and decisions of the governing body are not usually published, but are accessible to the members of the court at all times.

5. There is no instance of any removal or suspension of any member of the governing body, but a member is liable to be removed for misconduct in office or other just and reasonable cause; the removal, it is considered, would be by the resolution of the court.

6. See answer, to Part I., Return C., where the byelaws are stated.

PART II.—B.

RETURN B.—Admission to membership.

1. State the qualifications for membership of the Company, the several grades of membership of the Company, and whether women are admitted to membership.
2. State the several modes in which the freedom of the Company may be obtained, the circumstances entitling an applicant to admission under each mode respectively, and the fees payable in respect of admission under each mode respectively.
3. State whether persons exercising any particular trade are required by statute or otherwise to become free of the Company. Is there any process by which members of such trade can become members of the Company, and is there any process for compelling such persons to procure admission, and are such processes enforced, and to what extent? Is the freedom of the City of London in any and what way a condition precedent or subsequent to membership? Are there any members who are not free of the City of London? Do persons exercising any particular trade commonly become members of the Company? If so, how many members of such trade are at present members of the Company? What is the number of the members of the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the Company, who are members of the Company?
4. Are freemen liable to disfranchisement, and, if so, for what reasons, and what is the mode of disfranchisement?
5. Is the livery of the Company limited or unlimited in number? What are the qualifications for election to the livery, who are the electors thereto, and how do the elections thereto take place, and what fees are payable on election? Are liverymen liable to removal from the livery, and for what reasons?

1. The several grades of membership are as follows:—

	Qualification.
Freemen (1) -	By redemption. By patrimony. By servitude.
Livery (2) - -	By being a freeman and on election by the court by ballot.

Women are admitted to the freedom in all cases on payment of fees.

		£	s.	d.
2. By redemption (a).	(a) Fees payable	5	10	0
By patrimony (b).	(b) „	2	12	6
By servitude (c).	(c) „	2	12	6

3. Under the charter no person within the City of London and 10 miles' compass of the same is to use, exercise, or practise the art or mystery of needlemaking unless he shall first have served as an apprentice for seven years unto a freeman of the Company, &c., see Charter. Persons exercising any particular trade do not commonly become members of the Company. It is not known whether there are any members of the trade of needle-making members of the Company. The freedom of the city is not a condition precedent or subsequent to membership of the Company. It is believed that all the members of the Company are free of the City of London.

4. There is no instance of any freeman having been disfranchised in this Company.

5. The livery of the Company is limited to 200. The qualification for election on the livery is the being a freeman of the Company, who must be of good name and fame and possessed of adequate pecuniary means. The electors thereto are the master, wardens and assistants, and the election thereto takes place by ballot, the fees payable being 26*l.* 5*s.* There is no instance of a liveryman having been removed.

PART II.—C.

RETURN C.—Number of members.

State (1) the present number of freemen, (2) the present number of the livery, (3) the present number of other members, (4) the number of admissions to the freedom by each mode respectively, and (5) the number of calls to the livery which have respectively taken place during each of the last preceding 10 years.

1. The present number of freemen is believed to be about 150.

2. The present number of the livery is 116.

3. There are no other members.

4. The number of admissions to the freedom within such period has been by redemption about 130. There have also been admissions by patrimony.

5. The number of calls to the livery in the following years has been:—

1873 - - -	19
1874 - - -	35
1875 - - -	37
1876 - - -	5
1877 - - -	4
1878 - - -	4
1879 - - -	1

PART II.—D.

RETURN D.—(1) State the number of apprentices bound at the Company's Hall, or otherwise under the auspices of the Company during each of the last 10 years. (2) State how many have been bound during each of the last 10 years to members following the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the Company. (3) In what cases and to what extent have the fees or premiums of such apprentices been paid by the Company?

During the past 10 years one apprentice has been bound, viz., in the year 1877, but not to a member of the trade; the Company did not pay the fees or premium of this apprentice.

PART II.—E.

RETURN E.—Profits and privileges.

1. State with fulness what are the advantages, pecuniary or otherwise, incident to the position of a member of the Company in each grade of membership, as (1) a freeman, (2) a liveryman, (3) a master, warden, or otherwise a member of the governing body.
2. State the sums paid on an average annually for the preceding 10 years by the Company to the members according to the grades of membership mentioned above, and of what such sums consisted, whether (1) fees, and of what nature, (2) pensions, or (3) other payments, specifying the nature of the same respectively.
3. What circumstances are in practice held to constitute a claim to a pension or donation? State the number of present pensioners and donees respectively, and the amounts paid to them as such respectively. How many pensioners and donees are connected with the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the Company?
4. (1) What is the average standing of a member when he becomes a member of the governing body, and (2) what is the average time for which a member continues on the governing body?
5. Does the Company carry on any and what trade or manufacture with which its title is directly or indirectly connected? If so, what is the capital and from what sources is it derived, and how are the profits (if any) divided or dealt with?

1. There is no pecuniary advantage incident to the position of a member of the Company. There are certain advantages, such as in the case of a liveryman of voting in the election of lord mayor, sheriffs, and other officers connected with the city of London, and if resident within 25 miles in the election of members of Parliament for the city of London.

2. See last answer.

3. There are no charitable funds and no pensioners.

4. The present oldest liveryman was elected a freeman in 1827. The average standing of a member would depend on the age of such member on his admission.

5. The Company does not carry on any trade or manufacture.

PART III.—

OFFICERS AND SERVANTS.

RETURN A.—A list of the officers of the Company, with a statement of the duties of each, the amount of his salary and emoluments, and whether or not he is a member of the Company.

RETURN B.—A list of the servants of the Company, with a statement of the duties of each, and of the amounts of their wages and other emoluments.

RETURN C.—A statement as to the mode in which the officers and servants of the Company are respectively appointed.

A.—A clerk, whose duty it is to summon the court, keep the minutes of proceedings, keep the accounts of the Company, and act under the direction of the court.

There is no fixed salary, but he is paid by fees and in accordance with a scale settled in 1876, under which it was calculated his remuneration might reach about 100*l.* a year, which sum was to include the payment for the use of offices for the Company. The present clerk is not a member of the Company.

B.—A beadle, whose duties are—

To attend all the courts of the Company.

To attend all common halls and elections for members of Parliament and others at the wicket of the Company at Guildhall.

To take charge of the plate belonging to the Company in its transit from and to the bank.

To attend all courts and livery meetings.

To collect the quarterage.

And to do such other work in connexion with the Company as the master, wardens, and clerk shall respectively from time to time direct.

He is paid by fees and certain fixed payments and gratuity, and his remuneration reaches upon an average 12*l.* 12*s.* per annum.

C.—By the master, wardens, and assistants at a court.

PART IV.—A. 1–A. 13.

The Company has no real estate.

PART IV.—RETURN B. 1.

RETURN B 1.—List of Moneys belonging to the Needlemakers' Company invested in Government or other Stocks, Shares, Funds, or Securities.

Amount of Stock, &c.	Description of Stock.	Source from whence arising, e.g., gift with name of donor, bequest with name of Testator, sale of lands and which, &c.	In what Name standing, e.g., Company, Chancery Division of High Court of Justice, &c.	To what Account belonging, e.g., any particular Fund or Trust Account.	Net Annual Receipt.	Remarks.

PART IV.—RETURNS B. 2 AND 3.

B 2.—A return of the balance of moneys in the hands of the Company unappropriated in their accounts on the 31st December in each of the last preceding ten years.

B 3.—A return of the estimated value of the plate, pictures, furniture, and other property, at present on the premises of the Company, or in their possession elsewhere.

B 2.—The accounts of the Company are audited up to Michaelmas in every year.

The balance on the accounts for the following years appears as follows:—

1874	360	14	2
1875	316	15	8
1876	66	6	1
1877	122	12	8
1878	249	17	2
1879	230	0	5
1880	211	7	6

B 2.—Probably 1,000*l.*, for which amount it is insured.

PART IV.—RETURN E.

INTERNAL SOURCES OF INCOME.

RETURN E.—Internal sources of income.

A list of the annual amounts received in each of the last 10 years in respect of (1) fees paid on admission to the freedom of the Company, specifying the amounts paid in respect of each mode of admission thereto; (2) fines or fees paid on admission to the livery of the Company; (3) fines or fees paid by members on coming on the court of the Company; (4) fines or fees paid on promotion to the offices of warden, &c.; (5) any other internal sources of income, specifying the same.

PART IV.—RETURN G.

RETURN G.—The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them—

1. What is the system of management of the Company's estates and property?
2. In what way, and by whom, the several receipts and payments are taken and made, and under what control?
3. In what way the Company's accounts are audited?
4. Whether the Company's accounts are published, or are accessible to all or any, and which of the members of the Company.

(2.) The several fees and dividends are received by the clerk, and the quarterage by the beadle. The several sums are from time to time paid into the current banking account of the Company. The payments are made on cheques signed by the master and one of the wardens and countersigned by the clerk.

(3.) Two auditors are appointed annually at the Midsummer Court, and they audit the accounts in the usual course.

(4.) The Company's accounts are not published; they are accessible to the members of the court at all times.

PART IV.—Return H.

Return H.—A detailed statement of the income from all sources of the Company during each of the preceding 10 years, a detailed statement of the Company's expenditure during each of such 10 years, and a detailed statement of the assets and liabilities of the Company at the end of each of the last 10 years.

This would be simply a copy of the accounts for the 10 years; and it is submitted, after the foregoing answers, that the Commissioners will not require further detail.

PART IV.—Return M.

General and Technical Education.

Return M.—A statement as to whether the Company does anything to subsidise or encourage education, whether general or technical, and a return of the means (if any) so employed and of the amount expended on such objects during each of the last preceding 10 years.

The Company has engaged to contribute 250*l.* by instalments of 50*l.* per annum to the City and Guilds of London Institute for the Advancement of Technical Education. On a recent occasion the Company gave prizes for the best workmanship, &c. in the manufacture of the needle, (see Appendix A.) It is also in contemplation to offer such prizes from time to time.

PART V.—REFORM.

Part V.—Reform.

The Commissioners, being bound to report to Her Majesty "what measures (if any) are, in their judgment, "expedient and necessary for improving or altering the constitution of the Companies, or the appro- "priation or administration of the property or revenues thereof," respectfully invite the attention of the officers of the Companies to this part of the Commission.

The Commissioners will be very glad to receive and consider any suggestions respecting this part of the Commission with which the officers of the Companies may do the Commissioners the honour of favouring them.

The Company have no suggestion to make.

APPENDIX (A.)

The Court enclosed with their returns two papers dated respectively May 1876 and October 1876.

I. The Worshipful Company of Needlemakers.

The Master, Wardens, and Court of Assistants of the Worshipful Company of Needlemakers of the City of London, having had under consideration the desirability of assisting in the development of the art of needlemaking, with a view of benefiting the workmen as well as the public generally, propose to give this year (1876) the several prizes mentioned below.

Section 1.

First Prize.

Silver Medal of the Company and Five Pounds.

For the best labour-saving machine.
Subject to the following—

Conditions.

(a.) It must be applicable to the manufacture of sewing needles.
(b.) To have been originated since 1st January 1875.
(c.) Not to be exclusively used by one manufacturer but open to the public on payment of such royalty as may enable them to use it profitably.
(d.) The prize shall be awarded to the inventor of the machine.
(e.) The judges should have ample opportunity of viewing machines intended for competition, and therefore such machines as cannot from their nature be sent to the rooms of the School of Art, Redditch, for exhibition, must be open to the view of the judges at such time as it may be convenient to examine them; intimation of intention to compete for this prize should be sent to the honorary secretary of the Committee of Manufacturers at Redditch, on or before the first day of July next, and an appointment arranged with him for the judges' inspection.

N.B.—It must be understood that the public are also to have the privilege of viewing such machines from the 4th to 11th of August next, on the production of a ticket for that purpose from the honorary secretary of the before-mentioned Committee of Manufacturers.

SECTION 2.

Second Prize.

Bronze Medal of the Company and Five Pounds.

For the greatest improvement in any of the processes of sewing needle manufacture.

SECTION 3.

PRIZES FOR HANDICRAFT.—TOOL MAKING.

Third Prize.

Bronze Medal of the Company and Three Pounds.

For the best specimen of tool and work for sewing needles.

Fourth Prize.

Bronze Medal of the Company and Three Pounds.

For the best specimen of tool and work for sewing machine needles.

SECTION 4.

PRIZES FOR ESSAY.

Fifth Prize.

Three Pounds.

For the best essay in connection with the needle manufacture.

Subject open. Length not less than 4,000 words nor more than 5,000 words.

Sixth Prize.

One Pound.

For the second best essay on the above subject and within the same limits.

JUDGES.—Three judges in each section to be non-competitors, to be nominated by the Committee of Manufacturers, and submitted for confirmation by the Company before the fifth day of July next.

British subjects only to be eligible to compete for the several prizes.

No prize to be awarded unless, in the opinion of the judges or the majority of them, sufficient merit be shewn.

No competitor to send in more than two specimens.

The court will be assisted by a Committee of Needle Manufacturers at Redditch, of which R. S. Bartleet, Esq., D.L., is chairman, pro tem., and Victor Milward Esq., J.P., honorary secretary, pro tem.

The essays and such objects as can be exhibited must be delivered free at the rooms of the School of Art, Redditch, on or before Saturday, the 15th July next, and will be on view after the decision of the judges until the 11th day of August next; they must be marked with a private mark, or motto, and numbered, and accompanied by a list, showing for each number the grounds on which the prize is sought. They must also be accompanied by a sealed envelope, marked with the same mark or motto, and containing the name and address of the competitor, and a certificate or declaration that the work is his own, and has been executed during the period of competition.

The envelopes will not be opened until the judges have made their report.

The specimens sent will remain the property of the competitor, (subject to the condition marked C in Section 1), care will be taken of them, but neither the court nor the committee before-mentioned will hold themselves responsible for their safety. The competitors must remove the specimens at their own cost within a week of the decision being communicated to them, in default of so doing the Committee of Needle Manufacturers before-mentioned will be at liberty to deal with the specimens in such manner as they deem proper.

The master of the Company, J. C. Parkinson, Esq., J.P., will present the prizes on Friday, the 4th August 1876, at the rooms of the School of Art, Redditch, on which occasion the wardens and several members of the Company will attend.

By order of the Court,
GEORGE H. COLE,
Clerk to the Company,
1, Church Court, Clement's Lane,
London, E.C.

May, 1876.

II. THE WORSHIPFUL COMPANY OF NEEDLEMAKERS, LONDON.

The Worshipful Company of Needlemakers having determined to offer prizes by way of encouraging and developing the art of needlemaking in the neighbourhood of Redditch, in which locality this manufacture has been established for many years past, the court of the Company appointed a special committee to arrange a scheme for that purpose, and to confer with some of the leading manufacturers as to the most desirable mode of inducing competition in the respective processes necessary to the development of the art. With the kind assistance of Mr. Victor Milward and Mr. Thomas Fletcher, of Redditch, who acted as honorary secretaries, a committee of manufacturers was selected from the manufacturing district, and the various details of the prize scheme, after having been duly considered by that committee, were adopted by the Company and embraced the subjects hereinafter described.

VICTOR MILWARD, T. FLETCHER, } Hon. Joint Secretaries.

The Committee of Manufacturers reported:—

That the proposed scheme of prizes sought to develop the art of needlemaking under three great heads, for which prizes were offered; first, to encourage the introduction of labour-saving machines; secondly, to reward skill in handicraft, and lastly, to stimulate the inventive and reflective talent of the needlemaking locality in the neighbourhood of Redditch by means of prizes for essays in connexion with the needle manufacture. It must be understood that there are not less than thirty distinct processes in the manufacture of a needle, many of them requiring great manual dexterity, and others very great care, intelligence, and discretion on the part of the mechanics.

With reference to labour-saving machines, none were submitted for competition, the conditions stated that they must have been originated since 1st January 1875, and, although a great deal of machinery has of late years been introduced with success into the manufacture, only one machine is known that would come within that stringent condition, and this was not entered.

Section No. 3. Prizes for Handicraft (tool making) produced, as might have been expected, the greatest number of competitors and the keenest competition. The prizes in this section were offered for the best specimens of tool and work for sewing needles and sewing machine needles. The art of toolmaking has always been considered in this and kindred trades one requiring the greatest skill, and it will be readily understood that the delicate needles used in the manufacture of gloves and fine cambric sewing, whether by hand or by sewing machine, must be made from dies of the greatest nicety and finish. Undoubtedly the toolmakers were much stimulated by the prize scheme and exhibition, and, as a consequence, the merits of many of them became better known.

The exhibition of the various objects took place in the rooms of the School of Art, Redditch, on the 31st July 1876, and the following days. It created much interest in the town and district, and a large number of manufacturers and artizans visited the exhibition and narrowly inspected the objects submitted for competition.

The undermentioned gentlemen were requested to act as judges :—

2nd Section.

Mr. R. S. Bartleet (W. Bartleet & Sons), Redditch.
„ William Avery (W. Avery & Son), Headless Cross.
„ Charles Cross (Engineer), Redditch.

3rd Section.

„ George Townsend (G. Townsend & Co.) Hunt End.
„ Charles Laight (C. Laight & Sons), Redditch.
„ Thomas Eames (Toolmaker), Redditch.

3rd A Section.

„ Jos. Perkins (Jos. Perkins & Son), Ashwood Bank.
„ George Townsend (G. Townsend & Co.), Redditch.
„ William Heath (W. Heath), Crabbs Cross.

4th Section.

„ T. J. Slatter (Gloucester Banking Co.), Redditch.
„ Victor Milward (Hy. Milward & Sons), Redditch.
„ R. B. Turner (R. B. Turner & Co.), Redditch.

EXTRACTS FROM THE REPORTS OF THE JUDGES IN THE VARIOUS SECTIONS.

SECTION 1.

First Prize.

Silver Medal of the Company and Five Pounds,

FOR THE BEST LABOUR-SAVING MACHINE.

No entry was made of any machines in this section for the reasons before stated in the Committee of Manufacturers' Report.

SECTION 2.

Second Prize.

Bronze Medal of the Company and Five Pounds,

FOR THE GREATEST IMPROVEMENT IN ANY OF THE PROCESSES OF SEWING NEEDLE MANUFACTURE.

In accordance with the terms of the scheme the judges inspected the various improvements entered for competition in this section; they were four in number, viz. :—

1st.—A pair of shears for wire-cutting, worked by the foot, the improvement claimed being the substitution of an easy foot motion for the former very laborious work, and greater accuracy in cutting.

2nd.—A fetching and carrying apparatus attached to a wire-cutting machine, for which was claimed greater accuracy than can be attained by any system of hand or foot cutting.

3rd.—A newly patented double polishing buff, by which two operations can be performed without putting the needle down.

4th.—A set of clams for cloth-sticking needles by which a saving of cloth and a greater grip is obtained.

After considering the merits of the various inventions,

THE JUDGES AWARDED

The prize, consisting of the bronze medal of the Company and 5*l.*, with the Company's certificate of merit, to Benjamin Hill, needle hardener, of Studley, for the foot shears;

And they awarded a second prize, consisting of one pound from local sources, with a certificate of merit, to Richard Bennett, junior foreman, of Redditch, for the double buff, on one spindle.

SECTION 3.

PRIZES FOR HANDICRAFT. TOOL MAKING.

Third Prize.

Bronze Medal of the Company and Three Pounds.

FOR THE BEST SPECIMEN OF TOOL AND WORK FOR SEWING NEEDLES.

The judges in this section expressed their pleasure at the large number of exhibits in this section, the superior quality and general excellence of which caused the task of judging to be a most difficult and perplexing one, so much so, that they decided to recommend a Third Prize, and also award certificates of merit to two others, who, they felt, could not be passed over without some form of recognition. The judges further expressed their opinion that the scheme of prizes had in this section a very beneficial effect, it having caused an amount of friendly rivalry amongst the toolmakers of the needle district, stimulating them to endeavour to excel each other in this important department.

THE JUDGES AWARDED

The prize, consisting of the bronze medal of the Company and 3*l.*, with a certificate of merit, to Charles Townsend, toolmaker, of Redditch;

And they recommended the Company to give a second prize, consisting of 1*l.* 10*s.*, with a certificate of merit, to George Richards, toolmaker, of Headless Cross, near Redditch;

And they awarded a third prize of 10*s.* from local sources, with a certificate of merit, to George Field, toolmaker, of Headless Cross, near Redditch;

They also highly commended two others, viz. :—
Frederick Court, toolmaker, of Redditch; and Jonah Warner, toolmaker, of Redditch;

And recommended that a certificate of merit be given to each of them.

SECTION 3a.

Bronze Medal of the Company and Three Pounds.

FOR THE BEST SPECIMEN OF TOOL AND WORK FOR SEWING MACHINE NEEDLES.

In this section the judges reported that, although the tools were a small quantity only, the tools of those to whom they awarded the prizes were undoubtedly of very superior quality and workmanship, being first-class working tools.

THE JUDGES AWARDED

The prize, consisting of the bronze medal of the Company and 3*l.*, with a certificate of merit, to Jonah Walker, toolmaker, of Redditch;

And they recommended the Company to give a second prize, consisting of 1*l.* 10*s.*, with a certificate of merit, to James Hiam, manufacturer, of Ashwood Bank.

SECTION 4.

PRIZES FOR ESSAY.

Fifth Prize.

Three Pounds.

(To be supplemented by Two Pounds from local sources.)

FOR THE BEST ESSAY IN CONNEXION WITH THE NEEDLE MANUFACTURE.

Subject open. Length not less than 4,000 words nor more than 5,000 words.

Sixth Prize.

One Pound.

FOR THE SECOND BEST ESSAY OF THE ABOVE SUBJECT AND WITHIN THE SAME LIMITS.

In this section the judges awarded the sixth prize of 1*l.* from the Company, with a certificate of merit and 2*l.* added from local sources to William Shrimpton, foreman, of Edward Street, Redditch.

At the request of the master, wardens, and assistants of the Company, the prizes were distributed by R. S. Bartleet, Esq., J.P., D.L., Chairman of the Committee of Manufacturers (Messrs. Bartleet & Sons), on Friday the 4th August 1876, at the Park Road Room, Redditch. The meeting was addressed by Mr. W. Avery (Messrs. W. Avery & Sons), Mr. Perkins (Messrs. Perkins & Sons) Mr. Townsend (Messrs. George Townsend & Sons), Mr. Victor Milward, honorary secretary, and others. The distribution took place in the presence of a large number of competitors and others, and the prize winners were greeted with considerable applause. In the opinion of the local committee the scheme has been attended by a gratifying amount of success, the amount of competition it drew forth caused surprise, and there is no doubt much good has resulted from it.

REPORT OF THE SPECIAL COMMITTEE.

The under-mentioned (being one of the wardens and two of the members of court of assistants,) constituting the special committee intrusted with the organisation and carrying out of the scheme of the court relating to the foregoing object, have much pleasure in testifying to the success which has resulted from this, the first attempt of the Company, to aid in promoting technical education.

F. W. H. RAMSAY,
Warden.

CHARLES HARDING,
HENRY GREENE,
Assistants.

Members of the Special Committee on Technical Education.

GEORGE H. COLE,
Clerk of the Company,

APPENDIX (B.)

This Company furnished full information to the Municipal Commissioners.

PAINTERS' COMPANY.

The following returns were accompanied with a protest against the inquiry as illegal.

PART I.—FOUNDATION AND OBJECT.

Returns A. to H., both inclusive.

Return A.—A statement of the date, ascertained or probable, of the foundation of the Company, and of the circumstances, so far as they can be discovered from its documents of foundation or archives, in which the Company had its origin.

Return B.—A list of the charters, charters of inspeximus, and other instruments of a similar nature, whether originals or copies, which have been at any time in the possession of the Company, together with an abstract of the purport of each, regard being specially had to any evidence which it may contain as to the object of the foundation of the Company.

Return C.—A list of any trust deeds "founding, regulating, or affecting" the Company, with the date of each, the names of the parties thereto, and an abstract of the purport of each.

Return D.—A list, with dates, of any "decrees of court," whether of the Courts of Common Law or of Chancery, or of any acts of the Court of Aldermen or of the Court of Common Council, "regulating or affecting" the Company, with a statement of the effect of each decision.

Return E.—A list of any other documents, not included in the descriptions in the preceding returns, which "found, regulate, or affect" the Company, with dates and an abstract of the effect of each.

Return F.—A concise history of the Company from the time of its foundation to the present day, with special reference to the inquiry contained in the commission as to "the objects for which the Company was founded," and "how far those objects are now being carried into effect."

Return G.—Has the Company a licence in mortmain? When was such licence granted (referring to the document by description)? What is its extent, and to what extent is it now unexhausted?

Return H.—Is there vested in the Company, and how, whether by charter, statute, order of the Court of Aldermen, act of Common Council, or otherwise, any right of exercising superintendence over, or any duty or discretion to encourage in any way, any and what art, trade, or business? State the nature and local limits of such control. In what manner, and to what extent, is such control now exercised? If such control is not now exercised, state the circumstances under which its exercise has fallen into desuetude.

A.—The Painters' Company is an ancient art and mystery, and hath time out of mind been an ancient Company and fellowship, as so recited in the Statute 1 James I., c. 20. It was probably formed of persons engaged in the same trade for association and convenience.

The inspeximus or grant of byelaws made under the city seal bears date the 4th July 1467 in the sixth year of the reign of Edward IV.

B.—1. 14th July 1467, inspeximus and grant of byelaws under city seal as follows:—

"To all and singular faithful in Christ that shall see or hear the contents of these presents, Ralph Verney, mayor, and the aldermen of the City of London, health and faith in the Lord everlasting. Everything is more valid that bears and can be disputed with less calumy if it derives its form from the testimony of letters. Therefore it is we take notice of your university by these presents. We have seen and inspected the tenour of a certain bill or petition remaining with us entered in the court of our lord the king in the chamber of the Guildhall, of the said city, in the sixth year of the reign of Edward the Fourth after the Conqueror, in the book signed with the letter L., fo. 43, whose tenor follows in these words, to wit:—Memorandum that on the 9th day of June in the sixth year of the reign of Edward the Fourth after the Conqueror, men of the mystery of painters came here into the courts of our said lord the king, in the chamber of the Guildhall of the City of London, before Ralph Verney, mayor, William Hulyn, Richard Lee, Hugh Wish, Thomas Cooke, Matthew Phillips, Ralph Josselyn, William Tailour, Henry Navor, Bartho. James, John Stockdon, William Constantyn, William Edwards, and Humphrey Hayford, aldermen of the City of London, and presented to the said mayor and aldermen a certain bill, the tenour whereof follows in these words, to wit:—To the full honourable lord and right worshipful sovereign, the mayor and aldermen of the City of London, beseeching most meekly all the good folks enfranchised in the mistery or craft of painters within this City of London. Forasmuch as before this time no day in certain hath been limited or assigned in which the good folks of the same craft among themselves might choose wardens to rule and oversee yearly the fellowship and works of the same mistery or craft, neither search nor present the defaults found in the same as other crafts of the said city, do and have been wonted and accustomed to do, that it may please unto your good lordship and wise discretions to grant that they yearly from henceforth in the feast of Saint Luke the Evangelist, or within 10 days next suing after that, may goodly assemble in some honest place within the same city; and there within one assent amiable and good accord peaceably choose two true, witty, and honest men free of the same craft, and holding house within the liberty of the said city, to be wardens of their said craft for the year then suing; and the said two wardens so chosen within 12 days next suing the same election be yearly by the old wardens, and eight or six good honest and free persons of the same craft presented in to the Mayor's Court at Guildhall of London, there to be accepted, admitted, and sworn well, truly, and lawfully to search the said craft and the works of the same, and the defaults therein found truly to present to the Chamberlain of the city for the time being; and in all other things belonging to their craft to do and exercise their said office according to their oaths, the which wardens by all the time they so stand and abide in the same their office with six or four other sufficient and good men of the same craft by them thereto to be chosen shall have the ward and keeping of all money, goods, jewels, and other necessaries appertaining to the same craft, and them they shall be bound to surrender and plainly to deliver up at the end of the said year to their next successors wardens, and to six or four sufficient and honest persons of the same craft. Item.—That no able person enfranchised in the same craft shall refuse any manner of office or clothing pertaining to the same craft at such time as he by his said bretheren be abled and chosen thereunto upon pain to pay unto the chamber of the Guildhall 20*s.*; that is to say, 10*s.* thereof unto the use of the same chamber, and 10*s.* unto the common alms of the said craft, and what manner of man of the same craft that absenteth himself from the same election without cause reasonable or absenteth himself from the dinner to be made for the same craft the same day, and will not pay his part thereto, then he shall pay at the said chamber 3*s.* 4*d.*, equally to be divided, the one half thereof to the chamber aforesaid and the other half to the common alms of the said craft. Item.—That every man enfranchised in the same craft under form aforesaid shall assemble with his fellowship of the same craft by the assignment of the said wardens for the time being in a certain place by them limited at four times of the year called four quarter days; that is to say, at Michaelmas, Christmas, Easter, and Midsummer, and at every such quarter day every brother enfranchised of the same craft being of the clothing thereof shall pay to the alms abovesaid 4*d.*, and that these quarter days yearly hereafter may be kept and holden in the feasts aforesaid to the intent that the said wardens shall duly enquire among the said fellowship so assembled if any debate, rancour, or default be had among them, and that then the said wardens, to set them at rest and peace, and to correct and reform such defaults to their power if any be, and every one person of the same craft that without cause reasonable shall be absent in any of the said days shall pay for every such day towards the expenses of the said wardens 4*d.*; and the said wardens yearly to be charged upon their accounts as well of all such said 4*d.* growing in their time within the said craft for the causes abovesaid. Item.—It is ordained from henceforth that if any man occupying the same craft of 'Payntours' be misruled, and of evil will and malice be so misadvised to revile, call, or rebuke any manner of men of the same craft, hat is to say, for to lye him, or with other dishonest or unfitting language behave him in presence of the said wardens, or in any other place among the fellowship of the same, and thereof by the report of the said wardens be duly convict, shall forfeit and pay at every time he so doth to the chamber aforesaid 6*s.* 8*d.*, that is to say, to the chamber aforesaid 3*s.* 4*d.*, and to the alms box of the said craft 3*s.* 4*d.* Item.—That if any man of the said craft without cause reasonable within the franchise of the city be found rebel or contrarywise to the wardens of the same craft, that is to wit, on now coming to their reasonable summoning or warning of the beadle or common hunt of the same craft at such place and time as he in the name of the wardens of the same craft shall be duly warned to the intent there to ordain and do such necessary business or needs as of reason belong unto the same craft, either to reform the defaults and misprisons of the same, or else to do any other thing that mought be to the honour of the king, the weal of this city, or the common profit of the people of the same, shall forfeit and pay at every time so being found rebel or without cause reasonable absenting, 1 lb. of wax without redemption, whereof half shall be to the light of the chappel of the Guildhall aforesaid, and the other half to the light of Saint Luke. Item.—That none of the wardens of the same craft now being or hereafter to come receive nor admit any person into the franchise of the same craft of payntours by way of redemption without he be duly examined and proved for cunning, and able by eight or six honest persons of the same craft at least, nor that none of the said wardens from henceforth do or grant by colour of their office anything that mought turn or to be prejudice or common hurt to the said craft upon pain to forfeit and lose at every time that any such warden is thereof convict afore the mayor and aldermen for the time being 40*s.*, to be paid to the chamber of the said city, whereof the one half to be divided to the chamber of the said city, and the other half to the alms box of the said craft. Item.—That no man enfranchised in the same craft take any foreign or 'lowes' that hath been or is in service with another payntour enfranchised before that he knows well that the same servant have lawfully compleat his covenants with his former master, or at least hath agreed with him unless then such servant by that agreement and license of his master be assigned by the wardens for the time being to depart from him, and to go to the second master for great business of work and lack of help that he hath in the same occupation; nor that no man so enfranchised procure nor desire into his service any man's servant of the same craft out of his master's service within the year to be with him the next year, and if it be duly proved forfeit 20*s.*, to be paid in the chamber of the Guildhall of London mediately, 10*s.* to the said chamber, 10*s.* to the alms box of the said craft. Item.—What man occupying the said craft have any man enfranchised in the same craft out of his house, shop, or dwelling-house shall pay 40*s.* at said chamber, whereof 20*s.* shall go to the said chamber and 20*s.* to the alms box of the said craft. Item.—What man of the said craft shall wilfully or wittingly forswear with himself by any suggestion or saying unto his wardens in anything belonging unto his wardens in the same craft, and thereof be duly convict shall forfeit and pay at every time to the said chamber 6*s.* 8*d.*, equally to be divided, to the chamber 3*s.* 4*d.* and to the alms box of the said craft 3*s.* 4*d.* Item.—That no man of the said craft hereafter work any manner of tinfoil, but it be sufficiently wrought with oil colours, and that it be made only for colours and so oiled, and not for gold, and if it be wrought in any clothe of gold for church work that it be wrought sufficiently, and that it be well and truly gilt above upon pain to lose and pay in the chamber aforesaid 13*s.* 4*d.* at every time he be found and duly proved doing the contrary of this article, the one part thereof to the chamber aforesaid, and the other part thereof to the alms box of the craft aforesaid. Item.—That no man enfranchised in the same craft take upon him in anywise to work with any foreign payntour within the city nor without, unless he be thereto licensed by the wardens for the time being while he may have sufficient work with men of the same craft upon pain to forfeit and pay at every time doing the contrary thereof 20*s.*, whereof 10*s.* to the chamber aforesaid, and 10*s.* to the alms box of the same craft. 2. 19th July 1581.—Charter of Elizabeth (probably granted for valuable consideration) and confirmed by Statute I., James I., caput 20, of which charter the following is a copy:—

"The Queen's Majesty, to all and singular, &c, sendeth greeting. Know ye that We, of our special grace and favour and mere motion, do will, ordain, constitute and grant, and for Us, our heirs and successors, have willed, constituted, and granted that 'The freemen and citizens of the City of 'London of the art or mystery of the Painters of the said 'city, commonly called in English Painter Stainers,' henceforth for ever are and shall be one body corporate and politick, in art, deed, and name, by the names of 'Master, 'Wardens, and Commonalty of the Freemen of the Art 'and Mystery of Painters, commonly called Painters' 'Stainers, within the City of London and the suburbs and 'liberties thereof,'—one body corporate and politick really and fully for Us, our heirs and successors, and that by the same name they may have succession for ever. And that they by the name of 'The Master and Wardens and 'Commonalty of the Freemen of the Mystery or Art of 'Painters, commonly called Painters' Stainers, within the 'City of London, and suburbs and liberties thereof'; and shall be for ever hereafter personally and in law sufficient to have, get, receive, possess lands, tenements, liberties, privileges, jurisdictions, franchises, and hereditaments whatsoever to them and their successors, in fee for ever, of what kind, nature, or quality soever they be. And also to give, grant, demise, and assign the same lands, tenements, and hereditaments, and to do and follow by the name aforesaid all and singular other matters and things. And that by the name of master and wardens and commonalty of the freemen of the art or mystery of painters, commonly called painters' stainers, within the City of London, and suburbs and liberties thereof, they may sue, implead, answer and be answered, defend and be defended, in whatsoever court, pleas, and places, and before whatsoever judges and justices, and other persons and officers of Us, our heirs and successors, in all and singular actions, suits, and quarrells, causes, matters, and demands, whatsoever kind, nature, condition, or quality they be, in such manner and form as other, being persons of this our realm of England, be able or may in law plead, implead, answer, or be answered, defend and be defended. And to have, receive, possess, give, and demise, and that the said master, wardens, and commonalty of freemen of the art or mystery of painters, commonly called painter stayners, within the City of London and suburbs and the liberties thereof, to have for ever a common seal to serve their causes and businesses whatsoever, and their successors. And further we will, and for us our heirs and successors, by these presents do grant that the commonalty of the freemen of the society of the mystery aforesaid whensoever they will, lawfully may, according to the orders by them to that intent made or to be made, shall or may of themselves chuse and ordaine one master and two wardens of one assent to interview, dispatch, and finish all and singular their business, things, and matters whatsoever touching and concerning their said art and mystery. And that the said master, wardens, and their successors, master and wardens of the freemen of the art or mystery abovesaid for the time being, with their assistance may and shall have from time to time for ever full power and authority to rule and govern the company, commonalty, and society of the art and mystery aforesaid, for the time being with their assistants. And all and singular person and persons of the same art and mystery, or the same using or occupying, and to govern also the servants, works, things, and merchandize whatsoever belonging to the said mystery, or thereto in anywise appertaining within the City of London and the suburbs thereof, or elsewhere, and the defaults thereof to correct and amend. And that the aforesaid master and wardens, and their successors, master and wardens of the freemen of the art aforesaid, and their assistants for the time being, shall make, constitute, and ordain, and may make, constitute, and ordain honest and reasonable ordinances, and constitutions for the good governance; maintenance, and ordering of the mystery aforesaid as often and when to them shall seem good without impeachment, lett, or interruption of us, our heirs and successors, or of any of our justices, mayors, sheriffs, constables, bayliffs, or any other our officers or ministers whatsoever, by whatsoever name or title they or any of them are called, any law, custom, statute, or use to the contrary thereof in anywise notwithstanding. And furthermore of our more abundant grace, certain knowledge, and meer motion, we have given and granted, and for us, our heirs and successors, by these presents do give and grant to the aforesaid master and wardens and commonalty of the freemen of the art and mystery aforesaid, and their successors for ever. And also do prohibit, and by these presents do firmly command that no person or persons, of whatsoever estate, degree, or condition he or they be, shall use, exercise, or occupy the art or mystery of the painters, commonly called painter stayners, or any work or works in the same art or mysterie occupied or used, but such person or persons as heretofore have been brought up and instructed, or shall be hereafter brought up and instructed by some one of the same art or mystery, as apprentice or apprentices in the same art for the term and space of seven years at the least; and except such person and persons at the time of the said term of their apprenticeship be diligently examined, approved, and allowed by the judgments and superview of the master and wardens and assistants of the same art and mystery of painters, commonly called paynters stayners, to be of good knowledge and good artificers, meet and able to serve the subjects of us, our heirs and successors, with good and sufficient works, before they shall attempt to occupy or exercise the aforesaid art or mystery under penalty to forfeit so often as they shall offend the sum of five pounds of lawful money of England, whereof the one half of all such penalties and forfeitures shall come to us, our heirs and successors, and the other part thereof to the company, society, and commonalty of the art or mystery of painters, commonly called in English painter stayners. And furthermore of our abundant grace have given, granted, and by these presents for us, our heirs and successors, do give and grant to the aforesaid master and wardens, and their successors masters and wardens of the freemen of the art or mystery aforesaid, and their assistants for the time being, full power and authority for ever to search, govern, and overview all and all manner of works, things, and merchandize to the said mystery belonging or appertaining, to be occupied or sett forth to be sold or to be suspected to be sold within the City of London aforesaid, and the default or defaults of the same works thereof whatsoever to punish and correct according to the quantity of the offence so found. And we have given also and granted and for us, our heirs and successors, do by these presents give and grant to the aforesaid master and wardens, their successors and assistants for the time being, full power, leave, and authority for ever to make or cause to be made due search of all and singular the premises, and of all and singular works, colours, and tinctures, and all other things touching and concerning the said mystery, as well upon the freemen of the said mystery as upon any other within the said city aforesaid, and liberties and suburbs of the same, or elsewhere, so sold, wrought, or uttered, and all deceitful works set forth to sale or wrought to the deceit of our subjects by unjust or deceitful workmanship, colours, things, merchandize, to the aforesaid mystery belonging and appertaining, which by the said master and wardens, and their assistants for the time being, searched out and found to take away and forfeit, whereof one moiety of all such forfeitures shall come to us, our heirs and successors, and the other half thereof to the use and behalf of the aforesaid master and wardens, and their successors for the time being, and of the commonalty of the same society. And that it may and shall be lawful to and for the said master and wardens, and their successors for the time being, and their assistants, to punish and correct the same setter to sale of such deceitful works according to their deserts, and such search to make as often and when as to the aforesaid master and wardens, and their successors and their assistants, shall seem necessary and convenient. And further we will, and for us, our heirs and successors, do firmly command all and singular mayors, sheriffs, and constables, bayliffs, and all other officers whatsoever, as well within the aforesaid City of London and the suburbs of the same or elsewhere, that whensoever such search shall fortune to be made by the aforesaid master and wardens in all things to the said master and wardens, and their successors and assistants for the time being belonging, to be attentive councilling and helping as often and when as any such search shall fortune to be concerning the said mystery. And further know ye that we, in consideration that the said master and wardens and commonalty of the freemen of the art and mystery aforesaid, and their successors, may the better sustain and support the bretheren of the same from time to time of our especiall grace, certain knowledge, and meere motion, have granted and given license, and for us, our heirs and successors, as much as in us by these presents, do grant and give license and free leave, power, and authority to the said master and wardens and commonalty, and their successors, to have, receive, and gett to them and their successors for ever, as well of us, our heirs and successors, as of any other person whatsoever, any manors, messuages, lands, tenements, rectories, tenth rents, reversions, services, and all other possessions and hereditaments whatsoever which are not holden of us, our heirs and successors, in capite by knight service, nor of us, nor of any other by knight service, without the special license of us, our heirs and successors, or the license of the lord or lords, whereof the aforesaid lands and tenements are so holden so as the said manors, messuages, lands, tenements, rectories, tenths, rents, reversions, services, and other possessions, and hereditaments aforesaid do not exceed the yearly value of twenty pounds by the year. And to the said master, wardens, and commonalty, we grant license that the said manors, messuages, lands, tenths, rectories, tenements, reversions, services, and other possessions and hereditaments aforesaid, which are not holden of us, our heirs and successors as aforesaid, in capite knight's service, nor of us, nor of any other by knight's service, to the value of twenty pounds by the year of us, our heirs and successors, by any other person or persons to them, to be given or granted by any willing to sell them, to hold to them and their successors for ever, as is aforesaid by the tenour of these presents. The Statute of Mortmain, Dead Hand, or any other statute, act, ordinance, provision, or restraint to the contrary thereof made, set forth, and ordained or provided, or any other cause or matter whatsoever to the contrary notwithstanding."

3. 1582.—Grant of byelaws, of which the following is a copy :—

"To all experienced people to whom this present writing shall come, Sir Thomas Bromley, Knight, Lord Chancelour of England, Sir William Cecill, Knight of the most Honourable Order of the Garter, Lord Burleigh, High Treasurer of England, Sir Christopher Wray, Knight, Lord Chief Justice of Plees to be holden before Her Majesty, and Sir James Dyer, Knight, Lord Chief Justice of the Common Plees send greeting in our Lord God everlasting. Whereas in a certain Act of Parliament of the late most noble Prince King Henry the Seventh, holden at Westminster the five and twentieth day of January, in the XIXth year of his reign, made and ordained for the weale and profit of his subjects. It was amongst other things ordained, established, and enacted that no master, wardens, fellowships of craft, or mysteries, nor any of them, nor any rulers of gyldes or fraternities should take upon them to make any actes or ordinances, nor to execute or use any actes or ordinances by them heretofore made in disinheritance or dyminution of the prerogative of the king, nor of other, nor against the common weale and profit of the people, except the same acts and ordinances should be examined and approved by the Chancelour and Treasurer of England, and Chief Justices of either Benches, or three of them, or else before the Justices of Assizes in their Circuit, and progresses in that shyre where such acts and ordinances be made upon pain of forfeiture of forty pounds at every time they should do contrary as in the same Act it doth more plainly appear. And whereas the master, wardens, and fellowship of the arte of paynters, alias paynters stayners of the City of London being an ancient mystery, fellowship, and company time out of mind, and being now lately upon due considerations incorporated by the patent of our Sovereign Lady the Queen's Majestie that now is made under the Great Seal of England, bearing date at Westminster the 19th day of July, in three and twentieth year of Her Majesty's reign as by the same Letters Patent may appear, and having divers ancient rules, privileges, ordinances, and oathes heretofore time out of mind by their predecessors ordained, and some other by the said master, wardens, and fellowship devised, and made for the conservation, rule, good order, good name, and maintenance of the actes aforesaid, now of late which the now master, wardens, and fellowship are not minded to infringe in anything but to observe the aforesaid Act of Parliament, and the said former ordinances, rules, privileges, and oaths, and the good orders hereafter mentioned willingly to confirm, ratify, allow, and approve.

"1. Imprimis.—It is ordeyned and constituted that whereas there hath been heretofore, that is to say, in the time of Thomas Cobb, master, William Herne, esquire, sargeant painter to the Queen's Majestie, uper warden, deceased, and John Birde, youngest warden, twelve persons only of the assistants of the Company of Paintours alias Payntours Stayners of London, which number of assistants do now also remain at this present time. That henceforth and at all times hereafter there shall be sixteen or more honest, able, discreet, and skilfull persons elected, nominated, and appointed to be of the assistants of the said Company to the aid of the said master and wardens for the time being, and their successors which shall be elected, nominated, and chosen as followeth:—

"2. Item.—It is ordeyned and constituted that whensoever any of the said assistants shall happen to decease, or to be deprived, or to depart the said City of London, or the suburbs of the same, and to dwell, inhabit, and remain out of the said City of London and suburbs thereof, and do and shall so continue for the space of one whole year and more. That then every such person shall not be taken as any assistant. And that then the said master and wardens or their successors, and six of the said assistants or more during his or their office or offices, place or places in the said Company for the time being, or of the more parts of the assistants within 14 days next after such decease, deprivation, or departure shall elect and choose at their common hall within the City of London one or more of the said Company to be new assistants in the place or places of him or them, which hereafter shall decease or be deprived, or which shall depart and dwell as aforesaid, so as there shall be continually 16 persons or more assistants to the said master and wardens of the said art and misterie for the time being.

"3. Item.—It is ordeyned and constituted that at the feast of St. Luke the Evangelist, or within 14 days next after and every two years from the said feast thenceforth continually, or within 14 days next after for ever the said master and wardens of the said Company and Fellowship of Paintours, alias Paintours Stayners of London and the Livery of the said Company, or the more part of the same livery for the time being from time to time, and oftener if need shall so require, shall at their common hall elect, nominate, and choose among the Company and fellowship of the aforesaid art and mystery, one skilful master and two wardens to rule, order, reform, and govern the said Company and Fellowship the two years next ensuing, or for less time, at the discretion and by the consent of the aforesaid assistants, or the most part of them, and what person soever he be (being a freeman of the said Company) which shall be so elected and chosen as aforesaid, and doth or shall refuse to take upon him any of the said offices, and which shall deny to be sworn in the Paintours' Hall by the master and wardens then being, and the most part of the said assistants according to the oath of the wardens hereafter expressed, having no just, sufficient, or reasonable cause, lett, or impediment to the contrary, shall forfeit and pay to the said wardens then being to the use of the poor decayed brethren of the said Company for the time being at every time he or they do or shall so refuse the sum of 3*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*, or less money at the discretion of the master and wardens for the time being, and of the assistants or the most part of them then being. And if it doth or shall happen any of the said master and wardens to decease or for any just cause to be deprived or to depart the said city and suburbs of the same, and to dwell and remain out of the said city and suburbs by the space of one whole year or more after the election of them or any of them as aforesaid. That then the said master and wardens and livery of the said Company, or the more part of them for the time being shall elect, nominate, and choose of the said Company one other able person in his or their room which shall so decease be deprived or depart. Provided always that the said new master and wardens shall be sworn at the Payntours' Hall by the then old master and wardens or some of them, and by the most part of the said assistants within 12 days next after the aforesaid election, upon pain that the said old master, wardens, and residue above specified being negligent and faulty therein or such and so many of them as shall be negligent and faulty shall forfeit and pay for every such negligence 40*s.* of lawful money of England, or less sums at their discretion aforesaid to be employed to the use afore rehersed. And it is further ordeyned and provided that no person shall be compelled or bound to be master of the said art and mystery, or to execute the roome thereof above four times, nor to be upper warden above three times, nor to be under warden above twice in all his or their lifetyme.

"4. Item.—It is ordeyned and constituted that the master and wardens of the said fellowship, and the said assistants, or the more part of them for the time being as they shall need and find cause shall and may from time to time call, nominate, choose, and admit into the livery of the said Company and mystery such and so many of the freemen of the said fellowship as they shall think good, honest, meet, skilfull and able men thereunto. And that every person which shall be so called and chosen as aforesaid, immediately upon knowledge thereof to him or them given by the said wardens, or by their officer called the balye or beadle or any of them shall pay unto the said beadle twelve pence of lawful English money, and which of them soever so called and chosen that doth or shall refuse to be of the said livery accordingly shall forfeit and pay 40*s.* of like money for every time of such refusal, or less money at their discretion aforesaid, and to be employed to the use above rehersed. Item.—It is ordeyned that no person or persons whatsoever, Englishman or stranger, denizen or not denizen, freeman or foreign, shall, or any time hereafter lawfully may within the circuit and compass above specified, lay or work anything to be sold with varnish upon any wood, stone, paper, parchment, or vellum that is grounded first with any kind of commixture appertaining to the art, science, or mystery of paynting or stayning, or with or upon any kind of colour or colours, oil, size, gum, gleere, glue, or any such like thing or things whatsoever commonly used in the art and mystery of payntours staynours of the City of London, or within the compass or circuit thereof afore mentioned as their or any of their common and usual mixtures but only such persons as are known to be skilful in the said art and mystery, and which shall be approved and allowed by the master and wardens and the assistants of the said Company, or the more part of them for the time being upon pain for every his or their offence and offences in that behalf, to forfeit, lose, and pay the sum of 40*s.* of lawful money of England, the one moiety thereof to the Queen's Majesty, her heirs and successors, and the other moiety to the use of the poor decayed bretheren of the said Company of Paynters Stayners.

"5. Item.—It is ordained and constituted that every person and persons as well freemen as denizens, foreigners, aliens, and strangers, inhabiting or dwelling within the City of London or the suburbs of the same, or within four miles compass and circuit of the said city that now doth or hereafter at any time shall exercise, use, or occupy the art of payntours, alias painters stayners, or do or shall make or work in anything or things appertaining, incident and belonging to the said science and mystery, or being any part, parcel, or member thereof; that is to say, painting, stayning, lymming, washing, or laying or otherwise doing or working any kind of colours or colour with oil, size, gum, or any other kind of temperature or mixture, or gilding with gold or silver, or other colouring, painting, or stayning upon any silk, cloth, wool, leather, stone, iron, lead, tin, plaister, paper, parchment, vellum, or any other thing or things, and which do or shall keep house or houses and family, shall pay to the master and wardens of the said Company and fellowship and their successors for the time being at the common hall of the said Company every quarter for his or their quarteridge as followeth, videlicet:—All of the livery of the said Company twelvepence a man; all strangers within the city and suburbs twelvepence a man, as they have usually done; and every other stranger without the city and suburbs, and four miles distant from the same city sixpence a man. Every housekeeper of the yeomanry of the same Company eightpence a man. Every journeyman, free and foreign, working at the said science now or hereafter within the said city and suburbs thereof, and four miles compass of the same as aforesaid, shall pay for his or their quarteridge fourpence a man every quarter. And also every such person and persons aforesaid to pay all other duties and fines or forfeitures that shall or may arise or grow to be employed to the said fellowship as aforesaid, which said quarteridge or other duties if they or any of them do refuse and will not pay at the time therefore due and payable or within 12 days next following any time of the payment thereof. That then every such person making default of payment of the said quarteridge or any other duties shall forfeit and pay 5*s.* of lawful money of England or less money at their discretion afore mentioned, and to be employed to the use afore declared.

"6. Item.—It is ordained and constituted that if any person of the said fellowship, or any other using or exercising the said art, mystery, or science within the City of London and suburbs thereof, or within the circuit and compass of the same afore limited, shall at any time hereafter be found obstinate, wilful, perverse, and disobedient in any thing or matter contained in this ordinance or any part of them herein mentioned against the said master, and wardens, and assistants, and their successors, or any of them, for the time being, whereby they are, shall, or may be hindered, letted, denied, or anywise interrupted from the executing of the said ordinances, or any part of the same, according to their offices and charge, and to the tenour, effect, and true meaning thereof. That then every such person or persons whatsoever, English or stranger, freeman or foreigner, denizen or not denizen, remaining and being within the same city and suburbs or compass thereof aforesaid, so offending, and the same offence to be proved against him or them by the testimony of two or more honest witnesses afore the said master and wardens and assistants, or the more part of them, for the time being, shall forfeit and pay for every such offence and time of offending 10*s.* of lawful money of England to the said master and wardens, or less money, at their discretion, to be employed to the use of the fellowship afore rehersed.

"7. Item.—It is ordained and constituted, forasmuch as the true workmanship and knowledge of the said art and science of paynting and staining cannot be attained, or the exercise thereof be had, without many years and great diligence, and that, notwithstanding many unskilful and unable persons in that science do intrude, usurp, and unlawfully presume to use, exercise, and occupy the same art and mystery, and having no sufficient skill, do enterprise to portrait, counterfeit, shaddow, and paint the pictures, proportions, ensigns, and arms, and divers other great parts of workmanship, as well of the Kings and Queens, predecessors and ancestors, to the Queen's most Excellent Majesty as of Her Highness, as also of divers and many noble, honourable, and worshipful personages and persons as of sundry and manifold number of other honest, credible, and faithful subjects. By occasion whereof Her Highness and other honourable personages and subjects are not only greatly abused by the deformity of such portraits, shaddows, and pictures, but also in all or most part of his or their undue and corrupt works, and workmanship great and many sleights, deceits, and abuses of colours and colourings daily used, practised, and increased to the great slander and reproach of the whole Company aforesaid, to the utter decay and subversion of the said ancient art and mystery, and to the manifest hurt of true and perfect colours and good workmanship thereof, and to the lamentable prejudice and deceit of Her Majesty and Her Highness' loving subjects. That, therefore, no person or persons afore rehersed within the said city, suburbs, or compass before prescribed shall or lawfully may occupy, use, or exercise the said art, science, or mystery of painters, alias paynters stayners, or any part or parcel thereof, or do or work anything thereunto belonging or in anywise appertaining unless he or they be free of the said art and mystery, or have been apprentice or shall be apprentice thereunto by the space of seven years at the least or more, namely, with a painter stayner, or hath heretofore occupied the said science according to the statute of the fifth year of the Queen's Majesty's reign, in that case made and provided, or except any gentleman or other known skilful person which shall use the same science for his or their own recreation or private pleasure being not any common hindrance and disprofit to the aforesaid Fellowship and Company of Painters, or such as shall be allowed and approved by the master and wardens of the said Company. And that no person or persons, English or stranger, free or foreign, denizen or not denizen whatsoever, other than such as by the said statute are allowed and thereunto permitted, or which are afore excepted, shall or lawfully may occupy, use, or exercise the said art or mystery of painters stayners, or any part thereof, before he or they be thereunto admitted, approved, and allowed by the master, wardens, and six of the assistants, at the least, of the said fellowship to be an expert, skilful, and able workman upon pain to forfeit and pay for any and every of the offences aforesaid 40*s.* of lawful money of England, or less sum of money for every month or less time so offending, the one half thereof to be to the use of the Queen's Majesty, her heirs and successors, and the other half of the same forfeitures to the master and wardens and their successors for the time being, to be employed to the use of the poor decayed bretheren of the said Company.

"8. Item.—It is ordained and constituted that no person or persons, be he or they English or stranger, free or foreign, denizen or not denizen, using, occupying, or exercising the said art or mystery of painter staynors, or any part or parcel thereof, or which shall use the same or any for them by any means shall go in and about the streets to sell or proffer to be sold the King's or Queen's Majesty's pictures, or the counterfeit or portrait of any other, or of any other kind of work or works, thing or things whatsoever appertaining to the art and mystery aforesaid, painted, coloured, and printed sleight proportions, device or devices of workmanship, and not to go from shop to shop, inn to inn, house to house, or place to place, within the said city or the suburbs thereof, or elsewhere thereabout, but only in their own shops, warehouses or workhouses; and all such works, and all the works that be made by them or any person by them before sale be made thereof, shall be marked with the mark of the house in that behalf appointed by the master and wardens for the time being to be known for good, sufficient, and skilful work and works, to serve the Queen's Majesty's subjects. And they and every of them to pay for every such thing, piece of work so to be marked one penny upon pain of forfeiture of all such portrait counterfeit and all other evil, faulty, or unskilfull works, the one moiety of all which forfeitures to be to the use of the Queen's Majesty, her heirs and successors, and the other moiety to be to the said master and wardens and their successors, to be employed to the use of the said poor decayed persons of the said Company for the time being.

"9. Item.—It is ordained and constituted that no person or persons which shall use or exercise the said art of paynters, and shall paint, stain, gild, or lay any kind of colour or colours upon any wood, iron, stone, or any other thing or things which shall stand and abide the force and extremity of the weather. But the same shall only be wrought with expert and skilful workmen of the same art, and with oil colours and gilt of fine gold for the more, perfecter, better, and surer workmanship of all such works upon pain that every person working or doing to the contrary shall forfeit for every his or their offence and pay the sum of 5*l.* of lawful money of England. The one half thereof to be unto the Queen's Majesty, her heirs and successors, and the other half to be to the master and wardens for the time being and their successors, to be employed to the use above rehershed.

"10. Item.—It is ordained and constituted that no person or persons whatsoever shall devise, make, work, use, exercise and set to sale any manner of false, deceitful, undue, or unlawful works which shall be wrought with stencil pattern or otherwise as painted and printed sleight upon cloth, silk, leather, or any other thing or things with work of sundry colours or with gold foil or silver foil that is deceitful, corrupt, and unlawful, or which shall differ from the true, good, ancient, and perfect use and manner of workmanship, painting, stayning, or laying of colour. But that all such work and works whatsoever shall be examined, reformed, corrected, allowed, or approved by the master and wardens and assistants of the same science, or the most part of them, for the time being, upon pain of forfeiture of the sum of three pounds six shillings and eightpence, or less money at the discretion of the said master and wardens, of lawful money of England, the one half thereof to be to the use of the Queen's Majesty, her heirs or successors, and the other half and moiety of the same to the said master and wardens for the time being, to be employed to the use afore rehersed.

"11. Item.—It is ordained and constituted that if any person or persons using the said art of painters, and which shall promise for to work with any person or persons in the same science, and do or shall appoint him or them a time for the same, and do or shall not observe the same promise and time accordingly, that then every such person and persons for every time so offending as aforesaid shall forfeit and pay for every such offence 40*s.* of lawful money of England, the one half thereof to the master and wardens and their successors for the time being, to be employed to the use aforesaid, and the other moiety of the same to the chamber of the City of London. And that no person or persons being enfranchised and free of the said art do or shall take upon him or them to receive or accept into his or their service or do set to work any other person or persons free or enfranchised of and in another science or occupation, or any foreigner or stranger, or do set to work any apprentice or apprentices, except his own apprentice, without license and consent of the said master and wardens and their successors for the time being upon pain to forfeit and pay for every time so offending the sum of 40*s.* of lawful money of England, to be employed to the use afore rehersed.

"12. Item.—It is ordained and constituted that no person or persons of the said Company, free or foreign, shall at any time hereafter by any way or means seek to prevent, hinder, or interrupt any other person of the said Company in buying or bargaining either for wares, colours, or work whatsoever concerning or anywise belonging to the said science which he or they shall enter communication, contrive, or drive the bargain or price thereof or being in bargain with another for the premises before and until such time as he or they so first contriving or driving any such bargain be thereby void thereof upon pain to forfeit and pay for every time so offending the sum of 40*s.* of lawful money of England, or less money at the discretion of the master and wardens, the one half thereof to be to the said master, wardens, and their successors for the time being, to be employed to the use afore declared, and the other moiety thereof to the use of the chamber of London. And also, that if any person or persons using or exercising the said art shall at any time or times hereafter take any cloth or other thing of any person or persons to work, paint, stain, or colour, and shall change, spoil, consume, or otherwise make away the same, that then he or they which shall so do, upon just and due proofs thereof to be had and made before the master and wardens of the same science for the time being, shall therefor make a sufficient recompense to every such party to whom the same pertained; and, further, to be punished at the discretion of the said master and wardens and assistants for the time being or the more part of them.

"13. Item.—It is ordained and constituted that every apprentice, after the expiration of his years of apprenticehood, shall serve one whole year then next following with his master or some other expert workman in that science, as the said servant shall best like of for such reasonable wages as shall be thought meet by the master and wardens of the said science for the time being, according to his knowledge and skill in workmanship upon pain to forfeit and pay 5*l.* of lawful money of England to the said master and wardens for the time being to be employed to the use aforesaid. And that no housekeeper, nor journeyman, free or foreign, using the said art shall work in any house and art of the said Company, but with a freeman that useth the said science without license of the said master and wardens upon pain to forfeit and pay for every such offence the sum of 20*s.* of lawful money of England, to be paid and employed to the use afore rehersed. And further, that every journeyman of the said Company, freeman or foreign, occupying the said art and mystery, shall, once every week, give true notice and knowledge by writing or otherwise unto the bayly or bedill of the said Company at the common hall for the time being where and with whom he or they are in work, upon pain for every default thereof to forfeit and pay 12 pence to the said master and wardens for and to the use afore mentioned.

"14. Item.—It is ordained and constituted that no person and persons whatsoever using the said art and mystery within the City of London and suburbs thereof, or elsewhere, shall devise any kind of work or works, or make any kind of painted cloth or cloths, with patterns, prynt, stencil, or otherwise, to put into sale to any person or persons which do or shall intend to sell the same again. But that such work and works, cloth and cloths, device and devices of workmanship shall be examined, corrected, reformed, approved, and allowed by the said master and wardens, and their successors for the time being by some thereunto appointed by them. And the same to be marked with a mark, therefor to be prepared by the said master and wardens to be known for good, true, perfect, and sufficient works to serve the Queen's Majesty's subjects; and that everyone that shall put to sale or sell any such work or works before the same shall be so marked shall, for every such work or works so put to sale or sold, forfeit and incur the penalty and loss of five marks, or less current money of England, according to the discretion of the master and wardens and assistants, or the more part of them for the time being. The one moiety thereof to be to the Queen's Majesty, her heirs and successors; the other moiety to the said master and wardens, to be employed to the use afore specified.

"15. Item.—It is ordained and constituted forasmuch as many great inconveniences are grown and daily do increase amongst the said Company and in the said science by taking and keeping of many apprentices contrary to the necessary laws and statutes in such wise heretofore made and provided. That from henceforth no person or persons whatsoever which hath been, now is, or hereafter shall be master and wardens of the said art and mystery, shall have, take, or keep above three apprentices in the said science at one time. And that no other person or persons which now are or hereafter shall be of the livery and clothing of the said Company, and which shall not first have been warden of the same, shall take, have, or keep at any one time hereafter above the number of two apprentices in the said science. And that none other person or persons being not of the said livery, and using and occupying the same science and mystery, and being a householder, shall have, take, or keep above one apprentice until the said apprentice have served with his master for the time being the most part of the last year of his term of his apprenticehood, and then to take another apprentice, and so to continue accordingly from time to time the order aforesaid for the taking and having of apprentices; and that all and every person and persons of the said art which shall or doth attempt anything contrary to this present ordinance concerning the taking and keeping of apprentices aforesaid, or any part thereof, shall forfeit and pay for every his and their offence the sum of 20*s.* of lawful money of England. The one half thereof to be paid and imployed to the use of the Queen's Majesty, her heirs and successors, and the other moiety to the use of poor decayed persons of the said Company for the time being. Provided that it shall and may be lawful, notwithstanding these present ordinances to any of the said Company, to take any apprentice or apprentices of the assignment and putting over of any of the said Company, with the assent of the master and wardens and assistants of the said Company, or the more part of them for the time being above the number aforesaid, without danger or forfeiture or penalty therefor to be levied, had, or forfeited.

"16. Item.—It is ordained and constituted that there shall be kept and holden at the common hall of the said Company at four times in every year, hereafter commonly called four quarter days by the master and wardens and assistants for the time being, or the more part of them, a court or assembly of and for the said Company, that is to say: At the Annunciation of our Lady, at the Nativity of St. John the Baptist, St. Michael the Archangel, and the birth of our Lord God, or within eight days after any and every of the said feasts in and to the which shall be summoned and warned by the bayly or bedyll of the said Company, or by some other thereunto to be appointed by the said master and wardens the whole number of freemen of the said Company. And all and every other person and persons using and exercising the same art, mystery, and science, as well Englishmen as strangers dwelling or remaining in the said City of London and suburbs thereof, or elsewhere within the compass of four miles aforesaid to appear and attend at the common hall aforesaid, and to pay his or their quarteridge afore mentioned, or any other duties, fines, or forfeitures to be required or levied. And to the intent these same present ordinances may be then and there, once or twice, at the summoning of them in every year, to be read and published by the said bedyll in the said common hall for the better knowledge and government of themselves, and to avoid and eschew the danger and penalties of and for not performing of the same ordinances; and likewise to continue and not to depart the same court or courts without license of the said master and wardens until the end thereof, upon pain of 12 pence of lawful money, to be forfeited and paid to the use of the said poor decayed persons of the said Company for the time being. And it is also ordained that there shall and may be holden monthly and oftener every year, if need be, at the common hall aforesaid by the master and wardens and the said assistants, or four of them, to be thereunto appointed one court or courts, there to sit, hear, examine, end, and determine all and all manner of controversies, debates, fines, forfeitures, and demands that shall happen to arise, grow, or become due amongst the said Company, or any of them, or amongst any other using the said science, denizen, or not denizen, free or foreign, English or strangers. As also for the correction, punishment, reformation, or imprisonment of any wilful, disordered, and stubborn apprentices, or other persons touching or concerning anything done or to be done contrary to these present ordinances, or any part thereof, at the discretion of the said master and wardens, and their successors, for the time being.

"17. Item.—It is ordained and constituted that all persons of the said art, and all those persons which useth the same art, or any part thereof, or any of them which shall be summoned and warned by the aforesaid bayly or bedyll of the said Company to any person himself, to his wife or servant, to attend or appear before the master and wardens of the said mystery for the time being at any certain hour, time, or place upon the said quarter days, or any of them, or at any other common assemblies or affairs of the said Company, or about any affairs of the Queen's Majesty, her heirs and successors, or to attend upon the Lord Mayor, aldermen, and sheriffs to Westminster, or about any other necessary affairs of the aforesaid Company, and do or shall make any default of or in his or their said appearance or attendance at the time and place aforesaid, and having or showing us just and reasonable excuse. Then to forfeit and pay for every time so offending 12 pence of lawful English money; and that if any person or persons do or shall become obstinate or wilful, or do disdain to come, appear, or attend as aforesaid. Then he or they to forfeit and pay 10*s.* of lawful money of England. The one half of all which forfeitures to be unto the chamber of London, and the other half thereof to the use of the poor decayed persons of the aforesaid Company for the time being to be employed.

"18. Item.—It is ordained and constituted that the master and wardens and the assistants of the said Company, or the more part of them, for the time being, according to their ancient rule and custom used thereabouts at the Feast of St. Luke the Evangelist afore rehersed, shall choose every year from time to time two of the aforesaid livery to be stewards for their dinner at their common hall at the time of the Lord Mayor's feast, which shall be such of the younger sort of the livery of the said Company as have not been stewards of the said feast at any time before. And the said stewards so to be chosen to have towards the said dinner of every such person as have been master and wardens, eightpence; and of every other of the livery of the said Company, sixpence a man; and the house of the proper charges thereof to allow unto the said stewards 40*s.*; and whatsoever is or shall be more spent or laid out about the said dinner, the same to be borne and discharged at the charges of the said stewards for the time being. Provided always, that the said stewards shall have the appointment of the diet for the same dinner, and that every such person or persons which shall hereafter be chosen to be stewards as aforesaid, and do or shall refuse to accept the same, shall forfeit and pay to the said master and wardens, and their successors for the time being, the sum of 40*s.* of lawful money of England, to be employed to the use aforesaid for every such time of offending and refusing the same.

"19. Item.—It is ordained and constituted that when any of the said Company or fellowship have or shall take any work or works to do or finish in or about the house of any person or persons, or otherwise, or that any other person or persons do or shall set any person or persons of the said art or mystery to work, and do discharge and put away any such workman before he or they be fully satisfied for his and their work. That then every other person or persons of the aforesaid Company that shall enter into the same work, or any parcel thereof, and do take upon him or them to finish, end, or meddle in the same, the former workman thereof being not fully satisfied or paid for such work done or begun as aforesaid, shall forfeit and pay for every such offence and offences to the said master and wardens of the said Company for the time being the sum of 3*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* of lawful money of England, or less money by the discretion of the master and wardens to be employed to the use of the said poor decayed persons of the said Company; and also shall pay to every such former workman all and every such sum and sums of money as shall be due and owing unto him or them for or by the said work from the which he or they shall be so put or removed.

"20. Item.—It is ordained that no manner of person or persons whatsoever of the aforesaid art and Company in open audience, or privily do revile or shall anywise misuse another with evil speeches or words of reproach any of the said Company or fellowship, or shall swear any oath vainly, or wilfully blaspheme the name of God amongst the said fellowship in the said common hall upon pain to forfeit for every time so offending to the said master and wardens, and their successors for the time being, to the use of the aforesaid fellowship, the sum of 3*s.* 4*d.* of lawful English money, or less money at the discretion of the said master and wardens, and their successors.

"21. Item. It is ordained and constituted that no person or persons whatsoever using the said art and mystery within the said city and suburbs thereof, and compass afore declared, shall from henceforth set over any his or their apprentice or apprentices, being once bound unto him or them, to any other person or persons using any other trade, handicraft, or occupation without the license, consent, and agreement of the master and wardens of paynters, and their successors for the time being, and the assistants of the said Company, or the more part of them, upon pain to forfeit for every time of such offence 5*l.* of lawful money of England, or less money to be paid unto the said master and wardens, and their successors for the time being, at their discretion to be employed to the use of the poor decayed persons of the said Company then being as afore specified.

"22. Item.—It is ordained and constituted that no manner of person or persons whatsoever being once made free and accepted into the freedom of the Company of Paynters, whatsoever his or their occupying or trade is or shall be, shall change and alter his copy, and become free of any other company or fellowship within the City of London, without the knowledge, consent, and agreement of the master and wardens of painters, and the assistants, and their successors, for the time being, or the more part of them, upon pain that every person or persons so offending or doing anything contrary to this ordinance shall forfeit and pay to the said master and wardens aforesaid 20*l.* of lawful money of England, or less money at their discretion, and of the assistants, or the more part of them, to be employed to the use above rehersed, without the license and consent of the said master and wardens, and their successors, first had and obtained, except such person or persons do or shall change his said copy by reason of his or their election into any head office within the aforesaid city.

"23. Item.—It is ordained and constituted that if any manner of person or persons whatsoever being of the said fellowship, or using the said art and mystery of paynters that doth or shall entice, procure, allure, or persuade any person or persons being servant with any of the said Company to go away or depart from his or their service before the end of his or their term and time of service, shall be expired or shall be lawfully discharged of the same, or have warning to be given him or them to depart, and otherwise to provide for service upon pain that every person herein offending shall, for every his and their offence aforesaid, forfeit and pay to the master and wardens, and their successors, the sum of 40*s.* of lawful money of England, or less money at their discretion, and, according to the quality or quantity of the said offence, to be employed to the use of the poor of the Company aforesaid.

"24. Item.—It is ordained and constituted that every alien, stranger, denizen or not denizen dwelling or remaining within the City of London aforesaid, and the suburbs or compass afore specified, as well within places, except as not exempt therein or thereabouts, and which doth work, use, or exercise the said science and mystery of paynters or any part thereof, shall become contributory, bear and pay to the master and wardens and fellowship of paynters for the time being all and every such sum and sums of money and duties as shall be orderly assessed, and duly to be demanded of every such stranger or strangers by the said master and wardens and their successors as becometh a subject, and as any other person or persons being a brother of the aforesaid Company, doth or shall pay as well for and about the affairs of the Queen's Majesty, her heirs and successors, as for any other things necessary, and needful whatsoever; and that every such stranger, denizen or not denizen, which doth or hereafter shall refuse to pay and bear the said sums of money and duties afore mentioned, as the same shall happen to be assessed and demanded as aforesaid, shall forfeit and pay for every time so denying and offending the sum of 40*s.* of lawful money of England to the said master and wardens and their successors, or less money at their discretion, to be employed to the use of the poor of the said Company as afore recited.

"25. Item.—It is ordained and constituted that no person or persons using or exercising the said art and mystery shall teach and instruct or cause to be taught or instructed any person or persons in the said art or mystery but such as he or they shall keep as apprentice or apprentices seven years at the least, upon pain to forfeit and pay to the aforesaid master and wardens and their successors for the time being 20*s.* of lawful money of England, or less money at their discretion, to be employed to the use of the poor of the said Company; and shall present every his and their apprentice or apprentices to the said master and wardens and their successors within one month next after the taking and receiving of such apprentice or apprentices, and shall be done at the common hall of the said Company; and then and there to pay for every such apprentice that is so taken 20 pence at the time of the said presentment to the said master and wardens to the use of the whole Company. And whosoever of the same Company which doth not present his apprentice or apprentices as aforesaid, and also which doth not enrol his apprentice within six months next after the ensealing his or their indenture, shall forfeit and pay to the said master and wardens and their successors for every such apprentice not being presented and enrolled accordingly 6*s.* 8*d.* of lawful money of England as well for not enrolling as for not presenting any such apprentice as aforesaid.

"26. Item.—It is ordained and constituted that if any person or persons of the said fellowship, or any other person or persons using or exercising the same art of painting, or any person that shall utter or sell any kind of work, colours, or colourings appertaining to the said art and mystery, of what degree, estate, or condition he, she, or they be which shall offend in any ordinance in this book mentioned, and shall deny, refuse, withhold or not pay such sum or sums of money, fines, penalties, duties, forfeitures, and amerciaments as upon him, her, or them shall be assessed and required for his, her, or their duties, offence, or offences whatsoever. That then the said master, wardens, and assistants, or the more part of them, for the time being, shall have full power and authority by these presents to imprison every such person or persons, and the same person or persons to keep imprisoned until he, she, or they have well and truly contented and paid to the said master and wardens or one of them such sum or sums of money, duties, fines, penalties, forfeitures, and amerciaments as upon him, her, or them shall be assessed as aforesaid.

"27. Item.—It is ordained and constituted that the said Company and Fellowship shall have one substantial chest with three locks thereupon, with three several keys to the same, which shall stand and be placed conveniently in the common hall, wherein shall be put all such money, plate, jewels, and other like treasure belonging to the said Company, which three keys shall be and remain in the custody of the said master and wardens, every one of them to have a key; that three of them personally do and may go and repair together to the said chest when and as often as need and occasion shall be to put anything into the said chest or to take anything out thereof, and not any one or two of them to have all the said three keys, neither to go alone otherwise than aforesaid to the same chest to the intent and about the occasions aforesaid, but all three, the master and two wardens, to go together as aforesaid; and if it happen the said master and wardens or any of them to be sick or out of the town to have any other lawful business, that then the same master and wardens shall nominate and appoint one of the most ancient of the assistants for the time being, which hath been warden afore, to take the same key in his absence for that time to go, repair, keep, and condescend to the opening, taking out, and putting in of anything out of or in the same chest as aforesaid.

"28. Item.—It is ordained and constituted that if the master or wardens or any other of the livery of the Company of Painter Stainers at any time hereafter shall be sufficiently known and proved to be a dishonest or vicious liver, or which shall be detected or convicted of any special, odious, or notorious crime, offence, or fault, that then and so often it shall and may be lawful to and for the said master and wardens and their successors for the time being, with the assistants, or the more part of them, to expel, remove, and put out of the livery of the said Company, and out of and from any office or offices in the said Company, every such person and persons so to be hereafter known, and detected, and convicted, and him or them utterly to exclude from the same, be he master or warden or whatsoever other officer, or of the assistants, or of the livery, or any other in the said Company, except upon his or their reformation it shall be thought good by the said Company to make new choice of him or them again which doth or shall so offend and be known.

"29. Item.—It is ordained and constituted that within 30 days next after the new wardens of the said Company of Paynters shall be chosen and shall have taken their oaths from time to time for ever, the old wardens which were last before shall make a true, plain, and just account to the new wardens which shall then succeed them in the presence of all or the most part of the assistants of the said Company of all manner of money, jewels, plate, goods, chattels, gifts, deeds, grants, and commodities whatsoever touching and concerning the said fellowship which doth, shall, or may come, arise, grow, and be received by him or them, or to his or their hands or charge, and which doth or shall remain and be in his or their custody by reason of any fine, penalty, forfeiture, sum or sums of money, or other thing or things whatsoever levied, taken, distrained, given, or paid by any or from any person of the said Company; and shall make payment and true delivery thereof to the new wardens for the time being, within 30 days as aforesaid, upon pain to forfeit and pay for not doing, paying, and delivering of the same accordingly, such pains and penalties as shall be adjudged and assessed upon the said old wardens or any of them so offending by the said new wardens and assistants, or the more part of them, to be employed to the use of the said Company as in other forfeitures afore specified.

"30. Item.—It is ordained and constituted that no person or persons of the same fellowship or any other person or persons using the art, science, or mystery of painters, shall pack or convey to any fair or market, or shall send or convey any made wares or works appertaining to the said science made or wrought within the said City of London, suburbs, and compass aforesaid, or in any place or places beyond the seas, before and until the said wares and works shall be first opened and showed unto the master and wardens of the said mystery, or their successors for the time being, or unto some other skilful workmen thereunto to be appointed afore the packing and carriage thereof nor before the same wares and works concerning the said science, or any part of them, shall be duly sealed by the master and wardens for the time being, or by some thereunto to be appointed with a common seal in that behalf to be prepared to the intent none shall utter or put to sale any false, corrupt, or insufficient and unlawful wares or works belonging to the same science to any deceit or hindrance of the Queen's Majesty's subjects or to the slander or dispraise of the said Company upon pain that every person offending against this ordinance shall forfeit and pay to the said master and wardens for the time being, to the use of the said fellowship, for every such offence 40*s.* of lawful money of England, or less at their discretion, the one half thereof to the use of the Company and the other moiety to the use of the Queen's Majesty, her heirs, and successors, to be divided: Provided always, that if any of the said art or mystery shall, before any such packing of any wares or works aforesaid, give notice and warning in due time to the master and wardens, or some of them, for the time being, of his or their said works or wares so to be packed, and of the place or places where the same do lie or remain, to the end the said master and wardens, or some by them to be appointed, may at his or their pleasure view and seal the same wares, and do not come or send thither within six hours after such notice given, that then any and every person lawfully may pack his said wares and works, and to carry the same to any fair or market without any danger aforesaid.

"31. Item.—It is ordained and constituted that every person or persons, of whatsoever art or mystery he, she, or they be enfranchised or not enfranchised, using or exercising the said science or mystery of Paynter Staynors within the City of London and suburbs, or within four miles anyway distant from the same, shall at all times hereafter for ever be under the search, survey, and government of the master and wardens of the said science and their successors for the time being, and them to obey in all things requisite and concerning the said science only; and every offender against this present ordinance at every time denying or refusing to be searched and surveyed, to forfeit and pay for every time so denying to be searched and surveyed the sum of 40*s.* of lawful money of England, or less at the discretion of the master and wardens and assistants aforesaid for the time being, the same to be employed the one half thereof to the use of the Queen's Majesty, her heirs and successors, and the other moiety to the use of the whole fellowship of the said Company. And also be it further ordained that it shall be lawful to and for the said master and wardens and their successors for the time being, with the aforesaid assistants or the more part of them, without force at all times to enter when and as often as need shall thereunto require into any house or houses, shops, warehouses, fairs, markets, booths, standing tents, workhouses, or any other place or places, and there to view, search, and oversee all and all manner of wares, works, devices of workmanship, proportions, shadows, counterfeits, portraits, pictures, paintings, colours and colourings, or other things set forth to be sold or suspected to be sold whatsoever appertaining or belonging to the said science of Painters Staynors, and which shall be wrought, made, used, set forth, and showed or offered to be put to sale within the said City of London or elsewhere, and for the default and defaults of the same wares and works and of all or any other the premises so found or to be found and known, to punish the workers, makers, owners, and sellers thereof, and every of them by fine or fines, according to the nature, quantity, and manner of the offence and offences therein, so that it exceed not 3*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* And also that the said master and wardens and their successors with the assistants, or the more part of them, for the time being, shall have full power and authority by virtue of these presents at all times hereafter to make or cause to be made due search and survey of all and singular the premises, and of all other things concerning the said science, as well upon the freemen of the aforesaid art as upon all and every other person or persons whatsoever using and exercising the said art within the City of London, suburbs, and compass thereof aforementioned, as well in places exempt as not exempt, and of all deceitful wares or works and devices of workmanship whatsoever, foreign or otherwise, made, wrought, and put to sale or offered to be sold to the deceit or any hindrance of the Queen's Majesty's loving subjects, or to the slander of the said Company as afore declared. That it shall and may be lawful to and for the said master and wardens and their successors for the time being, and the said assistants, or the more part of them, to break and deface the same at their will and pleasure.

"32. Item.—It is ordained and constituted that the master and wardens of the aforesaid mystery, and their successors for the time being, calling to them four or more of the said assistants, may make an assessment and rate the wages of the best, second, third, fourth, and worst sort of workmen as heretofore hath been used in the said Company, according to a statute in that behalf; and those workmen of the said mystery not to take any more wages, nor refuse to accept the same wages so to be rated upon pain to forfeit and pay 5*l.* of lawful money of England for every offence to the said master and wardens for the time being to be employed to the use of the poor of the said Company.

"33. Item.—It is ordained and constituted that no foreigner, Englishman, or stranger, denizen or not denizen, shall keep house within the said city, suburbs, and compass of four miles afore declared, as a master to occupy the said science of painters, or to take any apprentice unless he or they show and prove that he and they have been apprentice thereunto seven years; nor afore that he and they shall be found, known, tried, and allowed by the master and wardens aforesaid to be a skilful and expert workman; nor that any foreigner shall conjoin with any freeman to be his partner, or any freeman to conjoin with any foreigner using that science, to be his partner without license and consent of the said master and wardens upon pain of the forfeiture of 5*l.* of lawful money of England for every time so offending, the one half to be forfeited and paid to the said master and wardens and their successors, to be employed to the use of the poor of the said Company as aforesaid, and the other moiety to the use of the Queen's Majesty, her heirs and successors.

"34. The Oath of the Wardens.

"You and every of you shall be true to our Sovereign Lady the Queen, and to her heirs and successors, kings and queens of England, and every of you shall, after the best manner you can by yourselves, justly and indifferently execute or cause to be executed your office in every respect, and all the good and lawful ordinances in this book of ordinances expressed without sparing of any person or persons for affection, reward, mede, dread, malice, or promise of reward during the time you shall execute and continue in the same office of your wardenship and of all and every such goods, jewels, plate, sums of money, deeds, gifts, grants, commodities, or of any other thing or things whatsoever that by reason of your said office shall come to any of your said hands, you shall, attending to all the ordinances in this book specified, make a good, true, and plain account, and shall deliver all the said goods, deeds, gifts, and other things whatsoever aforesaid to the safe keeping and custody of the master and assistants for the time being at the common hall aforesaid at the time thereunto appointed, or else to pay such fines as you shall be ordered to pay by them for your not so doing. You shall not for malice, love, or affection assess any person or persons in a greater or lesser sum than after the quantity or quality of his or their offence or offences after your discretion, and according to the said ordinances herein mentioned. So help you God, and the contents of this book.

"35. The Oath of the Freemen.

"You shall swear that you shall be true and faithful to our Sovereign Lady the Queen of England now being, and to her heirs and successors, kings and queens after her, and to the art and mystery of painters stainers wherein you be instructed either by apprenticehood or otherwise. The secrets of the same mystery and science shall you well and faithfully keep, and not to reveal or teach the same to any person or persons, but unto such as is your apprentice or have been apprentice by the space of seven years at the least, namely, with a painter stainer; also you shall be obedient unto all manner of summons whensoever you shall be warned by the officer, bayly, or beadill aforesaid, or any other person or persons thereunto lawfully appointed by the said master and wardens for the time being. And to pay all duties as it becometh a freeman of the said art or mystery to do. If you know any evil or hurt to the said Company or mystery, or to the master and wardens of the same, to be done or pretended the same, you shall lett to your power or do them thereof to mete. So help you God, and the contents of this book.

"36. The Oath of Foreign Journeymen and Free Denizens.

"You shall be true to our Sovereign Lady the Queen of England now being, and to her heirs and successors, kings and queens of England. You shall be obedient from time to time to all matters lawful of the said Company to the master and wardens of the said Company of Painter Stainers for the time being, and to be ready to come to every lawful summons, or else you shall pay such penalties as you shall any time forfeit against these present ordinances or other disobediencies. And these ordinances, and every part of them, to your power you shall observe and keep. The lawful counsels and secrets of the said master, wardens, and fellowship you shall keep secret, and not disclose the same to any person or persons of the said Company, nor to any other, and especially to any such person or persons whom the said matter doth touch or concern. So help you God, and by the contents of this book.

"37. The Oath of the Baylie or Bedyll.

"You shall be true to our Sovereign Lady the Queen's Majesty of England now being, and to her heirs and successors, kings and queens of England. You shall be obedient to the master and wardens of the Company of Painters Stainers for the time being. You shall from time to time read all the ordinances, and make due and true entries of all things which the master and wardens aforesaid shall command you without sparing of any person for affection, lucre, or malice. You shall not deliver any copies of the books or orders concerning the said Company, or any part thereof, nor any of the articles nor ordinances whereby the said fellowship may or shall take any hurt, neither to show the same books or ordinances to any person or persons without the consent, commandment, and agreement of the said master and wardens for the time being. You shall truly execute your office in carrying of any person or persons to ward, and in releasing him or them again at the commandment of the said master and wardens, and in all other points so near as you can. So help you God, and by the contents of this book. Provided always, that nevertheless if there shall happen anything contained in these ordinances heretofore made, or any part of them, to be prejudicial to the Queen's Highness prerogative, or contrary to the laws or statutes of this realm. That then it shall be lawful to the said Lord Chancellor and Lord Treasurer, and the Chief Justice of either Bench for the time being, or three of them, to correct, reform, or clearly make void the same according to their wisdoms, these presents, or anything heretofore provided, and made or herein contained to the contrary in anywise notwithstanding. In witness whereof we have signed this present book of rules and ordinances with our signs manual, Given the 10th day of January, in the 24th year of the reign of our Sovereign Lady Elizabeth, by the grace of God Queen of England, France, and Ireland, Defender of the Faith, and A.D. 1581."

4. 21st June 1685. Charter of James II., probably granted for valuable consideration as follows:—

1. James the Second, by the Grace of God of England, Scotland, France, and Ireland King, Defender of the Faith, &c. To all to whom these presents shall come greeting. Whereas the art or mystery of painters, commonly called Painters Stainers, is an ancient art and mystery, and hath time out of mind been an ancient company and fellowship within the City of London and liberties thereof, and held and enjoyed divers liberties and privileges.

2. And whereas our late Sovereign Lady Queen Elizabeth, of ever blessed memory, by her Letters Patents under the Great Seal of England, bearing date the 19th day of July in the 23rd year of the said reign, upon the humble supplication made unto her by the painters in and about the cities of London and Westminster, it pleased Her Majesty to will, ordain, constitute, and grant that the freemen and citizens of the City of London of the art or mystery of the painters of the said city, commonly called in English Paynters Stayners, should be from thenceforth for ever one body corporate and politick in act, deed, and name by the name of Master, Wardens, and Commonalty of the Freemen of the Art or Mystery of Painters, commonly called Painters Stainers within the City of London and suburbs and liberties thereof. And then by the name of Master, Wardens, and Commonalty of the Freemen of the Art or Mystery of Painters, commonly called Painter Stayners, the said late Queen Elizabeth did for her heirs and successors make, create, and ordain to be one body corporate and politick in deed and name really and fully by the said Letters Patents as aforesaid, and did thereby invest them with divers powers and privileges for the well ordering and government of themselves and their said art and mystery, as by the said recited or mentioned Letters Patents amongst other things therein contained at large it doth and may appear.

3. And whereas since the granting of the said corporation unto the said master, wardens, and commonalty of Painters, otherwise called Painter Stayners of the City of London, the Lord Mayor and aldermen of the said city have owned the said company, and enrolled their charter or corporation amongst other charters of the said city in the Rolls of the same, for their better regulation and government, and have granted to them and their successors divers privileges and liberties in such manner as then were and now are used by other companies of the same city, according to the ancient custom thereof.

4. And whereas by an Act of Parliament made at Westminster in the first year of the reign of our Royal Grandfather, King James, therein reciting, That the art or mystery of painters is an ancient art or mystery, and had time out of mind been an ancient company and fellowship within the City of London, and of late upon due considerations the freemen of the said city of that faculty, art, or mystery, by Letters Patents under the Great Seal of England, dated at Westminster the 19th day of July, in the 23rd year of the reign of Queen Elizabeth were incorporated by the name of Master, Wardens, and Commonalty of the Freemen of the Art or Mistery of Paynters, commonly called Painters Steyners, within the City of London, and the suburbs and liberties of the same city. And furthermore by the said Letters Patents it is prohibited, enjoined, and commanded that no person or persons of whatsoever degree or condition they were, should use, occupy, or exercise the said art or mystery of painters, commonly called Painters Steyners, or any work or works, colour or colours, painting or paintings, in the said art or mystery occupied, unless such person or persons had been brought up and instructed, or should from that time forwards be brought up and instructed by and with some one person of the said art or mystery, as an apprentice for the space of seven years at the least. And whereas for avoiding deceit to be used in the said art or mystery of painting, the said late Queen by the aforesaid Letters Patents did grant unto the said master, wardens, and their successors, that they should have full power and authority for ever to make or cause to be made due search, all and singular the works, paintings, colours, and other things whatsoever to the said art or mystery of painting, or in anywise appertaining or touching or concerning the same, as well upon the freemen of the said mystery as upon any person or persons whatsoever selling, making, or working of the same within the City of London, or suburbs or liberties of the same. And the said works, colours, and paintings whatsoever so deceitfully made, to seize and take away, and the said offenders to punish and correct, as by the said Letters Patents more at large it doth and may appear. The said Act reciting that the plasterers within the City of London, using nothing but lathing, daubing, plastering, and limeing, did and yet do procure thereby for themselves and their families a convenient living and maintenance; yet not satisfied with that reasonable living, that they do make of their said proper faculties, wherewith and wherein they have been brought up as apprentices, have now of late used and practised the art or mystery of painters stainers, as well with oil colours as size colours, and that since the making of the said Letters Patents more usually than in former times they have used or did whereby, not only many of the said art or mystery of painters, who have well and honestly as apprentices to the same served for the space of seven years and upwards, and by their labours and industries have attained to the full and perfect skill and knowledge thereof, are not only disabled to get a competent living thereby for the relief of themselves, their poor wives and children, but also that the said plaisterers, not having been trained up in the said art or mystery of painting, neither can or do make any such good work or such true and perfect colours as others having been trained up in the said trade as apprentices thereto, and yet utter the same for good and perfect colours, and being no freemen of the painters stainers, escape therefor unpunished, to the great deceit and abuse of His Majesty's most loving subjects; and whereby the said art or mystery of painting was likely in such sort in short time to decay, as that there will not be sufficient workmen of skill in and about the said city to serve in the said art His Majesty, or any other His Majesty's subjects for remedy; whereof it was enacted by the authority of that present Parliament, that from and after the 29th day of September, which was in the year of our Lord God 1606 next after the end of that session of Parliament, no manner of person or persons being or pleading to be a plaisterer, or thereafter to become or to be a plaisterer, or which should be a servant or sett on work by any plaisterer, should use, exercise, or set up the art or mystery or manual occupation of a painter, commonly called a painter stainer, or any part thereof within the City of London or the liberties or suburbs of the same, or should within the same places aforesaid make any manner of work or works, or lay any manner of colour or colours or painting whatsoever in the said art or mystery of painters stainers aforesaid, at anytime before occupied or used, unless he or they be or should be the servant or servants, apprentice or apprentices of a painter, otherwise called a painter stainer, or had served or should serve as an apprentice or apprentices by the space of seven years at the least to a painter stainer, upon pain that every such person or persons as should or did offend contrary to the true intent and meaning of the said art, should forfeit for every time that he or they should so do or offend, the sum of 5*l.* of lawful money of England, the one moiety of all which forfeitures should be to the King's Majesty, his heirs and successors, and the other moiety to him or them that will sue for the same in any of the King's Courts of Record by action of debt, bill, plaint, or information, in which said suit no essoin, prevention, or wager of law should be admitted or allowed for the said defendant; any law, usage, or custom heretofore used or had to the contrary thereof in anywise notwithstanding.

5. And whereas also since the granting of the said corporation we are informed that the said Company of Painters, otherwise Painters Stainers, have attained to a far greater skill in their art and mystery; and that notwithstanding the aforesaid Act of Parliament and Letters Patents, divers and several plaisterers, bricklayers, joiners, glaziers, turners, box makers, and divers and several other persons who were never brought up or served any apprenticeship to the trade, art, or mystery of a painter, otherwise painter steyners, do take upon themselves without experience, judgment, or skill, to work at, use, exercise, and follow the said art or mystery of a painter, alias painter stainer, in several and many branches, to the great damage of our subjects in general, and particularly to the loss, damage, and utter ruin of the said master, wardens, and commonalty of the said art or mystery of painters, alias painters stainers, contrary to the meaning and intent of the said Letters Patents and Act of Parliament. And whereas the said master, wardens, and assistants and commonalty of the said art or mystery of painters, alias painter stainers, of the said City of London, have informed us that the painters, alias painter steyners, within the cities of London and Westminster and other places adjacent, are grown very numerous; and humbly prayed as a mark of our Royal favour to them, we would be graciously pleased by Letters Patents under our Great Seal of England, to grant and confirm unto them, as well the said Letters Patents of Incorporation, as also all the grants, powers, liberties, privileges, clauses, and authorities therein respectively contained, together with such further and other liberties, powers, and privileges as to us in our princely wisdom shall seem requisite and necessary for the better order, rule, and government of the said corporation, and the members thereof. And we willing and intending the continuance and support of the said corporation, and the improvement of the said art or mystery of painters, alias painter stainers, by all just and lawful means, and to the end they may be armed and empowered to surprise and reform all abuses practised by persons, who take upon them without sufficient skill or knowledge to work and follow the said art and mystery of painter, alias painter stainer, to the damage of our subjects; and that the said art and mystery may from henceforth be duly, artificially, and truly exercised, and that no person or persons may hereafter repair to our said City of London and places adjacent to be set on work or employed as a journeyman in the said art or mystery, unless such person or persons shall justly and truly have served the full term of seven years as an apprentice bound by indenture in the said trade or art to some master exercising the same according to the said Act of Parliament. Know ye that we of our especial grace, certain knowledge, and mere motion, have granted, approved, ratified, and confirmed and by these presents for us, our heirs and successors, do grant, approve, ratify, and confirm unto the said master, and wardens, and commonalty of the art or mystery of painters, alias painter stainers of the City of London, and their successors for ever, as well the said Letters Patents or charter above recited, as also as much as in us lies, and so far forth as by law we may all and singular the grants, liberties, immunities, preeminences, powers, authorities, jurisdictions, privileges, benefits, advantages, and other things whatsoever comprised, specified, and declared, granted, or confirmed, or mentioned, or intended to be mentioned, comprised, specified, and declared, granted, or confirmed by the said Letters Patents, and every clause, and article, and thing therein contained, other than what is herein and hereby altered, changed, or corrected. And of our more especial grace, certain knowledge, and mere motion, have granted, constituted, declared, ordained, and confirmed, and by these presents for us, our heirs, and successors, do grant, constitute, declare, and ordain, and confirm that all and every person and persons, being painters alias painter stainers, and now inhabiting within our said cities of London and Westminster, and suburbs of the same cities, or within six miles compass on every side thereof, shall from henceforth be for ever one body corporate and politick, in matter, deed, and name, by the name of Master, Wardens, Assistants, and Commonalty of the Art or Mystery of Painters, otherwise Painter Stainers of the City of London, one body corporate and politick, really, fully, and wholly, we do for us, our heirs and successors, erect, ordain, make, create, and confirm by these presents. And that by the name of Master, Wardens, Assistants, and Commonalty of the Art or Mystery of Painters alias Painter Stainers of the City of London, they shall have perpetual succession. And that by the same name of Master, Wardens, Assistants, and Commonalty of the Art or Mystery of Painters, alias Painter Stainers of the City of London, they be and shall be for ever persons able and capable in law to have, take, purchase, hold, receive, possess, and enjoy, to them and their successors, as well of us our heirs and successors, as of any other person or persons whatever, as well any manors, lands, tenements, liberties, franchises, rents, reversions, privileges, and other hereditaments in fee to them and their successors for ever. As also all and singular the goods, chattels and other things whatsoever, and the same lands, tenements, rents, reversions, goods, and chattels, and other the premises, and every parcel thereof, to sell again, demise, and grant, and to make, seal and accomplish all deeds, evidences, and writings of for and concerning the same, and every part thereof, needful, necessary, or convenient to be had or made. And that by the said name of "Master, Wardens, "Assistants and Commonalty of the Art or Mystery of "Painters alias Painter Stainers" they shall and may be persons able and capable in law to plead and be impleaded, answer and be answered, defend and be defended in any our courts or other places in all and all manner of complaints, pleas, suits, matters, and demands whatsoever, of whatsoever kind, nature, or form they be in the same manner and form as other our liege people of this our realm of England, being also persons able and capable in law may plead and be impleaded, answer and be answered, defend and be defended, have, purchase, receive, and take, give, grant, let, set, assign and dispose by any lawful ways or means whatsoever. And also that the said master, wardens, assistants, and commonalty of the art or mystery aforesaid, shall and may have for ever a common seal for them and their successors, to serve for the ensealing, doing and confirming all and singular their causes, affairs, and businesses whatsoever, and that it shall and may be lawful to and for the said master, wardens, assistants, and commonalty, and their successors, the said seale at their will and pleasures from time to time to break, alter, and make new as to them shall seem most meet and convenient. And further we will and by these presents for us, our heirs, and successors; we do grant by these presents that from henceforth there shall be one master, two wardens, and 30 or more assistants besides the same master and wardens of the mystery of painters, alias painter stainers of London aforesaid, to be from time to time constituted and chosen in such manner and form as hereinafter in these presents is expressed and specified. And for the better execution of the premises, and for the good rule and government of the said master, wardens, assistants, and commonalty of the art or mystery of painters alias painters stainers aforesaid, from time to time for ever, we have assigned, named, constituted, and confirmed, and by these presents for us our heirs and successors, we do assign, name, constitute, and confirm our well-beloved subject John Shales, Esq., of the City of London, and a freeman of the said city, to be the present master of the said art or mystery of painters, alias painter stainers aforesaid, willing and hereby granting that the said John Shales shall be and continue master of the said art or mystery unto the 18th day of October next ensuing the date of these presents, and on and from that day until some meet and sufficient person who hath borne the office of upper warden of the said art or mystery of painters alias painter stainers, be elected and sworn to execute the office of master of the said art or mystery of paynters alias painters stainers of London according to the ordinances and provisions in these presents expressed and limited if the said John Shales shall so long live. And also we have assigned, named, and constituted, and by these presents for us our heirs and successors do assign, name, and constitute our well-beloved subjects Richard Wallis and William Strange, to be the present two wardens of the art or mystery of painters, alias painter stainers, unto the said 18th of October next ensuing the date of these presents. And on and from that day until two others meet and sufficient men who are of the assistants or livery of the art or mystery aforesaid, and citizens of our said city, be to the said offices elected and sworn to execute the same according to the ordinances and provisions in these presents limited and expressed, if they the said Richard Wallis and William Strange shall so long live and shall not in the meantime for some just cause be removed. And moreover for the better assistance and councel of the said master and wardens in and about the execution of their offices we have assigned, named, ordained, and constituted, and by these presents for us our heirs and successors, do assign, name, ordain, and constitute our well-beloved subjects Thomas Botelor, Samuel Hedge, Thomas Evans, Paul Audley, Silvanus Morgan, Thomas Seaman, William Stamper, John Saunders, Edward Attwood, Jeremiah Wright, John Bridge, the said John Shales, John Perrin John Gale, Edward Mole, Henry Asgill, Chudleigh Cranwell, John Ivans, Thomas Blundell, William Barker, Edward Pierce, the said Richard Wallis, William Strange, and John Johnson, painters, alias painter stainers of London, to be the present assistants of the said art or mystery. And hereby granting that the said Thomas Botelor, Samuel Hedge, Thomas Evans, Paul Audley, Silvanus Morgan, Thomas Seaman, William Stamper, John Saunders, Edward Attwood, Jeremiah Wright, John Bridge, John Shales, John Perrin, John Gale, Edward Mole, Henry Asgill, Chudleigh Cranwell, John Ivans, Thomas Blundell, William Barker, Edward Pierce, Richard Wallis, William Strange and John Johnson, shall be and continue assistants of the said art or mystery of painters alias painter stainers aforesaid, for and during their natural lives according to the directions, intent and meaning of these presents. And they shall from time to time be aiding, counselling, and assisting unto the said master, wardens, and commonalty of the said art or mystery, and every member thereof. And for the better establishment of all good, wholesome and reasonable laws, and statutes, and ordinances whatsoever concordant and agreeing to and with the laws and statutes of this our realm of England, and the custom of our said City of London, for the better direction, rule, and government of the whole body of the said art or mystery and every member thereof. We further will and by these presents for us our heirs and successors do hereby grant unto the said master, wardens, assistants and commonalty of the art or mystery of painters alias painters stayners aforesaid for the time being with the assent and consent of the assistants and livery of the said art or mystery or the greater part of them whereof the master and one of the wardens to be always two of them on the 18th day of October next ensuing the date of these presents, and on the 18th day of October yearly for ever hereafter happening and coming, to meet and assemble themselves at or in their common hall or other convenient place for their use, to be by them provided within the City of London and suburbs thereof, then and there to nominate two able and sufficient persons of the assistants of the art or mystery aforesaid who have borne the office of upper warden of the Company aforesaid, or who have fined for the same office out of which two assistants so nominated the said master, wardens, and the residue of the said assistants for the time being or the greater part of them, whereof the master and one of the wardens to be always two, shall immediately upon the same day elect and choose one to be master of the said art or mystery, and that the person so nominated, elected and chosen as is aforesaid shall be and continue master of the said art or mystery unto the end and term of one whole year then next ensuing, and further until some other person who hath been twice warden of the said Company as is hereafter mentioned shall be elected in his stead and place to be the master of the same Company first taking his corporal oath for the due execution of the said office according to the contents of these presents. And further that the said master, wardens, assistants, and livery of the art or mystery aforesaid, or the greater part of them, whereof the master and one of the wardens to be always two, shall upon the same day, yearly, for ever, elect and choose two able persons out of the wardens and assistants or livery of the said art or mystery to be wardens of the same art or mystery for the year following, which said two persons then and there so elected and chosen shall be and continue wardens of the said art or mystery of painters, alias painter stainers of London aforesaid, for and unto the end and term of one whole year then next ensuing, and further until two other able and sufficient persons shall be duly elected and chosen to be wardens of the said Company, they and every one of them first taking their corporal oaths for the due execution of their said places of wardens according to the contents of these presents. Provided always, and it is our express command, that no person should be put in nomination or elected to be the master of this Company, until he has served twice warden of the said Company of Painters alias Painter Stainers, London, or paid such fine or fines for the same as already is or hereafter shall be limited and appointed by the ordinances of the said Company according to the custom of other companies of our said City of London, anything in these presents, or in the said Letters Patents of our Royal Predecessors, or any usage, ordinance, or byelaw to the contrary notwithstanding. And further we will, and by these presents for us and our heirs and successors, do ordain and appoint that when and as often as it shall happen that the master and wardens of the said art or mystery, or any of them, do die or depart out of this life, or otherwise for any lawful or reasonable cause to be removed or dismissed from their or any of their office or offices of master, wardens, or any of them within the year wherein they or any of them shall be so chosen and elected as is aforesaid, out of which several places of master and wardens respectively, we will and hereby grant that they or any of them may be removed by the major part of the assistants or any eight of them, of the art or mystery aforesaid, for the time being for any reasonable just cause or misdemeanor to be by them committed or done respectively. That then and so often it shall and may be lawful to and for the said master and wardens and assistants of the said art or mystery for the time being, and continuing in his or their place or places or any eight of them within 15 days next after such death or dismission or removing of such master or wardens, or any of them, to nominate, preserve, elect, or choose any other able and sufficient person or persons out of the said assistants or livery in the place and stead of him or them so dying, removed, or dismissed as aforesaid, to be and continue master or warden or wardens for and during the residue of the said year, and further until some others shall be elected and sworn unto the same place of master or warden or wardens aforesaid respectively, according to the contents of these presents, and that this course shall be taken from time to time so often as the case shall so require. And if it shall happen any of the assistants of the said art or mystery do dye or be removed from their said offices for some reasonable cause, that then and so often it shall and may be lawful to and for the said master, wardens and court of assistants, or the greater part of them then living or remaining, for the time being, within 15 days after the death or removing any of the said assistants, to choose or make one or more other person or persons to be chosen and elected out of the livery of the said Company to be assistant or assistants of the said art or mystery, to continue their said office during the term of his or their natural life or lives unless they be removed from the said office or offices according to the ordinance and provisions in these presents mentioned and expressed, all which assistants now being or to be hereafter elected and constituted, and every or any of them not well behaving him or themselves in their said office or offices, or discontinuing to attend the court of the said master, wardens, and assistants of the said Company of Painters, alias Painters Stainers, by the space of one whole and entire year. We will to be removed at the pleasure of the said master, wardens, and assistants, or the major part of them, whereof we will the master and one of the wardens of the time being to be always two. And then and so often it shall and may be lawful to and for the master, wardens, and assistants, or the major part of them then living and remaining as aforesaid, whereof we will the master and one of the wardens for the time being to be always two, to choose and name one other or more others of the livery of the art or mystery aforesaid in his and their stead which shall so die or happen to be removed to fulfil and supply the said members of masters, wardens, and assistants, and that he or they so to be nominated and chosen to take the office or offices of assistant or assistants of the said art or mystery taking his and their corporal oaths well and truly to execute the said office or offices according to the contents of these presents shall and may be of the number of the said assistants of the art or mystery aforesaid, and this to be done so often as the case shall so require. And we further will and ordain that the said John Shales, the present master, shall take his oath before the said wardens hereinbefore named, or one of them, well and truly to execute the said office of master of the art or mystery aforesaid, to which said wardens, or any one of them we do hereby give power to administer the same oath accordingly without further or other warrant in that behalf. And we also will and ordain that the present wardens hereinbefore mentioned shall take their corporal oaths before the said John Shales, the present master, well and faithfully to execute the said office of wardens of the said art or mystery, to which said John Shales we do give power to administer the same oaths to the said wardens accordingly without further or other warrant in that behalf to be had or obtained. And we also further will and ordain that the present assistants of the art or mystery aforesaid, before they take upon them the execution of the said offices or places, shall take their corporal oaths before the master and wardens of the art or mystery aforesaid, or any two of them, to which said master and wardens, or any two of them, we do hereby give full power and authority from time to time to administer the same oaths accordingly. And we will and further ordain that every master of the art and mystery aforesaid hereafter elected and constituted according to the tenor of these presents, shall before he take upon him the exercise of the said office, take his corporal oath before the master his predecessor of the art or mystery aforesaid for the time being well and faithfully to execute the same office of master of the said art or mystery to which said last preceding master of the same art or mystery for the time being we do hereby give full power and authority to administer the same oath to the succeeding master accordingly. And we also will and ordain that all and every the wardens of the art or mystery aforesaid, hereafter to be elected and constituted, do and shall, before they take upon them the exercising of the said office or place of warden or wardens of the same art or mystery aforesaid, take his and their corporal oath and oaths before the master of the said art or mystery for the time being well and faithfully to execute the same office or place of warden or wardens of the art or mystery aforesaid, to which said master of the said art or mystery we do hereby give full power and authority from time to time to administer the said oath accordingly. And we do hereby further will and ordain that all and every the assistants of the art or mystery aforesaid hereafter to be elected and constituted before they respectively take upon them the same office or place do and shall, from time to time, take his and their corporal oath and oaths before the master and wardens of the art or mystery aforesaid, any two of them, well and faithfully to execute the same place or office of assistant or assistants of the art or mystery aforesaid, and that in all things thereunto appertaining to which said master and wardens, or any two of them for the time being, we do hereby give full power and authority from time to time to administer the same oath or oaths accordingly. And further we will, and by these presents for us, our heirs and successors, do grant unto the said master, wardens, and commonalty of the art or mystery of painters, alias painters stainers, and their successors, that the master, wardens, and assistants of the art and mystery aforesaid, or the major part of them for the time being, whereof the master and one of the wardens to be always two, shall and may from time to time and at all times for ever hereafter have full power and authority by virtue of these presents to admit and make free members of their corporation all such person or persons as are painters by trade and have already or hereafter shall have duly served seven years apprenticeship to the said trade of painting by indenture bound, who shall be called Commonalty of the said art or mystery of painters, alias Painters Stainers, and upon the admittance of such person or persons into the said corporation. We do by these presents will and require that they and every of them do take their corporal oaths upon the Holy Evangelists before the master, wardens, and assistants of the said art or mystery for the time being, or any four of them, whereof the master and one of the wardens for the time being to be always two, well, truly, and honestly to bear and behave themselves in every respect as one of the commonalty of the said Company towards the said master, wardens, and assistants for the time being unto which said master, wardens, and assistants, or any four or more of them for the time being, whereof the master and one of the wardens for the time being to be always two, we do by these presents give full power and authority to administer such oath without further delay or other warrant, to be had or obtained from us, our heirs and successors, in this behalf. And furthermore of our more abundant grace, certain knowledge, and mere motion we have given and granted, and for us, our heirs and successors, by these presents do give and grant to the aforesaid master, wardens, assistants, and commonalty of the art or mystery of painters, alias painter stainers, and their successors for ever, and also do prohibit and by these presents do firmly command that no person or persons of whatsoever estate, degree, or condition he or they be, shall use, exercise, or occupy the art or mystery of the painters commonly called Painter Stainers, or any work or works in the said art or mystery occupied or used, but such person or persons as heretofore have been brought up and instructed by some one of the said art or mystery as apprentice or apprentices in the same art for the term and space of seven years at the least, and except such person or persons at the end or term of the said seven years be diligently examined, approved, and allowed by the judgment of the master, wardens, and assistants of the same art and mystery of painters, alias painters stainers, to be of good knowledge, and to be good artificers meet and able to serve the subjects of us, our heirs and successors, with good and sufficient works before they shall attempt to occupy or exercise the aforesaid art or mystery, upon such penalties and forfeitures as by law can be inflicted on such offenders. And forasmuch as we are informed that the plaisterers in and about the cities of London and Westminster, notwithstanding that in and by the aforementioned and recited Act of Parliament they were allowed to lay and use the six colours in and by the said Act mentioned, and that mingled with size only, and not with oil, and not to make any work or works, painting or paintings, yet they and the major part of them, contrary to the true intent and meaning of the said Act, do with the said six colors, and otherwise by glazing of them over with oil and varnish, work at and exercise the art and mystery of a painter, alias painter stainer, in divers several works, painting and paintings, and other things properly belonging to the art and mystery of a painter, alias painter stainer, by means whereof much bad work is made and wrought and which turns to the detriment, hurt and damage of our subjects in general, and particularly to the utmost ruin of the said Company of Painters, alias Painter Stainers, of our said cities of London and Westminster, the suburbs and liberties of the same, and within six miles compass on every side thereof for remedy whereof, and to prevent the like for the future, and to the intent that the said art or mystery of painters, alias painter stainers, may be in every respect truly and artificially wrought and exercised, our Royal will and pleasure, is and we do hereby strictly charge and command that no plaisterer or plaisterers, nor any other person whatsoever do or shall at any time or times hereafter presume to take upon him to work at, use or exercise, the art or mystery of a painter, alias painter stainer, in any work or in any painting or paintings, or in any other thing belonging to the said art or mystery of painter, or to glaze, oil, or varnish over any work or works made of or mixed with any of the said six colours before mentioned, unless such person hath, or hereafter shall have, served the term of seven years as an apprentice to the said art or mystery, alias painter stainer, upon pain of forfeiture for every such offence of the sum of five pounds of lawful money of England, according to the intent of the said Act of Parliament in that behalf, the one half whereof to come to us, our heirs and successors, and the other half to the use of the corporation, society, and commonalty aforesaid. And furthermore of our abundant grace we have given, granted, and by these presents for us, our heirs and successors, do give and grant unto the aforesaid master, wardens, and assistants and commonalty, and their successors, that the master, wardens, and assistants, and freemen of the art or mystery aforesaid for the time being, or any three or more of them, shall and have hereby full power and authority for ever to search, govern, and view all and all manner of works, things, and merchandize to the said mystery belonging or appertaining to be occupied or set forth to be sold within the cities of London and Westminster, the suburbs of the same cities, or within six miles compass on every side thereof as aforesaid, and the default or defaults of the same works thereof whatsoever in lawful manner to punish and correct according to the quantity of the offence so found. And we have given also and granted, and for us, our heirs and successors, and do by these presents give and grant to the aforesaid master, wardens, assistants, and commonalty, and their successors for the time being, full power and authority for ever to make, or cause to be made, due search of all and singular the premises, and of all and singular works, colours, and tinctures, and all other things touching and concerning the said mystery as well upon the freemen of the said mystery, or upon any others within the said cities of London and Westminster, the suburbs of the same, or within six miles compass of every side thereof as aforesaid, so sold, wrought, or uttered, and all deceitful works set forth to sale, or wrought to the deceit of our subjects by unjust and deceitful workmanship, colours, and things, and merchandize to the aforesaid mystery belonging and appertaining, which by the said master, wardens, and assistants for the time being, searched out and found to seize according to law, whereof one moiety of all such forfeitures shall come to us, our heirs and successors, and the other half to the use and behoof of the aforesaid master, wardens, and assistants, and their successors for the time being, and the commonalty of the said society. And that it may and shall be lawful to and for the said master, wardens, and assistants, and their successors for the time being, to punish and correct the same setters to sale of all such deceitful and unlawful works according to law, and such search to make as often and when as to the aforesaid master and wardens and assistants, and their successors, shall seem necessary and convenient. And we also do further grant to the said master, wardens, assistants, and commonalty of the said Company for the time being, or any eight or more of them, shall have full power and liberty under the common seal of the said Company from time to time to depute and constitute such and so many fit persons as they in their discretions shall choose and approve to be their deputies or agents to make and execute all views and searches, and to act and do all other matters and things thereunto relating as fully as the said master, wardens, and assistants, or any eight of them, are by these presents empowered to make, execute, do, and perform. And we do by these presents for us, our heirs and successors, give full power and authority to the said master and wardens and assistants for the time being, to administer such fit oath and oaths to all and every member and members of the said society as shall, according to law, be approved and allowed of in order to the good government of the said corporation and the improvement of the said trade without further or other warrant in that behalf from us, our heirs and successors, to be procured and obtained. And further, we will, and by these presents for us, our heirs and successors, do grant unto the said master and wardens, assistants and commonalty of painters, alias painters stainers, of the City of London, and to their successors, that the master, wardens, and assistants for the time being, or any eight of them, shall and may from time to time nominate and elect, choose, and constitute a clerk, beadle, and other officers to serve for the affairs of the said Company, and to be serviceable to and attendant on the said master, wardens, and assistants of the said Company in all matters touching the same, and to allow the said clerk, beadle, and other officers respectively, such salaries, fees, and rewards as they shall think fit, and them or any of them respectively for reasonable and just cause to remove and displace, and other persons in their places to choose and elect, which said clerk, beadle, and other officers so elected and constituted before they be admitted to the execution of their said offices before the master, wardens, and assistants of the said Company, or two or more of them, shall take their corporal oaths well, faithfully, and honestly to demean and behave themselves in the execution of their said offices respectively, to which said master, and wardens and assistants, or any two or more of them, we do hereby give power and authority to administer such like oaths as well to the said clerk, beadle, and other officers, as to all other person or persons which shall be from time to time admitted into the said Company. And we do hereby nominate and appoint our trusty and well-beloved subject, Robert Barker, to be the first and present clerk of the said Company, to hold and enjoy the said office of clerk during such time, and so long as he the said Robert Barker shall well demeane himself therein, and to be executed by himself or his sufficient deputy in that behalf, and to be sworn according to the power and authority in that behalf hereinbefore expressed and declared, and considering that the good order and honesty of the art or mystery aforesaid will conduce much to the good and benefit of the artists of the said society, being for the most part under the government of the City of London, the offenders in the said trade are likely to be more effectually punished, and those that do use and exercise the same as they ought to do the better encouraged. We do hereby declare our will and pleasure to be that the Lord Mayor and Aldermen of the City of London for the time being do cause and allow these our letters patents to be enrolled in the common chamber of the said city amongst the records thereof to the intent that these that are and shall be freemen of the City of London and members of the said Company of Painters, alias Painters Stainers, may be subject to the government of the said city, and may enjoy the benefit thereof. And further, we will and by these presents for us, our heirs and successors, do firmly charge and command all and singular justices of the peace, mayors, sheriffs, bailiffs, constables, and all other officers and ministers of us, our heirs and successors, to whom it shall appertain that they shall be aiding and assisting to the said master, wardens, and assistants for the time being, and the deputies for the master and wardens for the time being respectively, in all things touching the due execution of the powers and authorities hereby granted according to our pleasure hereinbefore delivered. And moreover, we will and by these presents for us, our heirs and successors, do grant unto the aforesaid master, wardens, assistants, and commonalty, and their successors, that these presents and the enrollment of the same, and all and singular all other matters and things therein contained from time to time shall be good, firm, and effectual in the law in and by all things, according to the intent and meaning thereof, and shall be expanded beneficially and largely for the benefit and advantage of the said master, wardens, assistants, and commonalty, and their successors; and that the said master, wardens, assistants, and commonalty of the said art or mystery of painters, alias painter stainers, of the City of London for the time being, or any eight or more of them, whereof the master and one of the wardens for the time being to be always two, shall and may have full power and authority by virtue of these presents to make, constitute, ordain, and set down from time to time, and also from time to time to alter, change, amend, or make new such reasonable laws, acts, orders, ordinances, and constitutions in writing, which to them or eight or any more of them as aforesaid, whereof the master and one of the wardens for the time being, to be always two, shall seem good, necessary, and expedient for, touching and concerning the improvement of the said trade, art, or mystery of painters, alias painter stainers, and the good order, rule, and government of the said company and corporation, and every member thereof, and for punishment and reformation of such abuses, deceits, falsities, and other wrongful practices and misdemeanors from time to time to be committed or practised in their trade, or in anything appertaining or in anywise belonging to the art or mystery of the painters, alias painter stainers, whereby our loving subjects may be wronged, damnified, or abused, or any other cosenage, deceit, or abuse offered or used in the said trade at any time whatever within the said cities of London and Westminster, and suburbs thereof, or within any limits and places aforesaid. And further, we do for us, our heirs and successors, grant and confirm unto the said master, wardens, and commonalty of the Company of Painters, alias Painter Stainers, London, and their successors, that they and their successors shall and may from henceforth from time to time for ever hereafter have, hold, use, and enjoy to them and their successors, all and singular the same and such-like reasonable customs, ordinances, franchises, powers, privileges, exemptions, jurisdictions, and authorities whatsoever which they the said master, wardens, and commonalty, now have and enjoy, or which they or their predecessors, by what name or names soever, or by pretext of what corporation or company soever heretofore, have had, used, held, enjoyed, or ought to have used, had, held, or enjoyed by reason of any charters or letters patent by any our progenitors or predecessors, kings or queens of England, in manner of wise heretofore made, granted, or confirmed, or by any other lawful means, right, custom, use, prescription, right, or title whatsoever used, had, or accustomed, and not otherwise, in these presents altered, limited, or appointed, any statute, Act, ordinance, matter, cause, or thing to the contrary thereof in anywise notwithstanding: Provided always, and our will is and by these presents for us, our heirs and successors, we charge and command that no person or persons at any time hereafter shall be elected, nominated, or put in the office of master, wardens, assistants, or clerk, who before his or their respective elections do or doth not hold communion with the Church of England, or within six months before such election, have not or hath not received the Sacrament according to the form of the Church of England by law established; and that all and every person and persons after such election, and before his admission in or to the offices or places aforesaid, shall each and every of them take the said oaths of allegiance and supremacy, and the oaths prescribed and mentioned in the aforesaid Act, together with the usual oaths of the master, wardens, assistants, and clerk of the said Company respectively, for the due execution of their respective offices, and that every and each of them shall subscribe the declaration aforesaid before the last master and wardens of the said Company, or any two of them for the time being, which said several oaths and subscriptions we direct and require, and by these presents for us, our heirs and successors, do give and grant to them power and authority to give, administer, and require in the court of assistants of the said Company from time to time as often as occasion shall require. Also, we will and command that every clerk to the Society of the said Company of Painters Stayners, hereafter to be nominated and chosen before he be admitted unto such place or office shall be presented to us, our heirs or successors, to be approved by us, our heirs or successors, and if we, our heirs or successors, shall approve of such clerk under our privy seal or Royal sign manual, then he, taking the several oaths aforesaid, and making the declaration and subscription before mentioned, shall be thereunto admitted; but, in case that we, our heirs or successors, shall refuse the said approbation of such person so chosen to be clerk, that then every such election shall be void, and the master, wardens, and assistants for the time being or the major part of them, in the court of assistants shall immediately proceed to the electing another person to be their clerk, who shall be presented as aforesaid for the like approbation, and so from time to time until such person shall be chosen, who shall be approved by us, our heirs and successors as aforesaid, and shall take the said several oaths, and make the said subscriptions: Provided always, and we futher will and declare that every election of the said master, warden, assistant, or clerk of the said Company contrary to the directions and limitations in these presents in that behalf mentioned shall be void and of none effect to all intents and purposes whatsoever: Provided always, and by these presents we will and declare that it shall and may be lawful for us, our heirs and successors, from time to time and at all times hereafter, by Order made in the Privy Council of us, our heirs or successors, from time to time to remove and to declare to be removed any master, warden, assistant or assistants, or clerk of the said Company now or for the time being, and thereupon the place or office of such person so removed or declared to be removed shall be ipso facto void, and one or more fit person or persons shall in due manner be elected, constituted, and sworn in the said place or places of such person or persons so removed or declared to be removed as aforesaid, according to the order and provision aforesaid, which said person or persons so to be chosen shall before he or they be admitted into such place or office each and every of them take the several oaths and make the said subscription as aforesaid, and so often as the case shall thus happen. And further, we will and command for us, our heirs and successors, that the master, wardens, and commonalty of the said Company of Painters Stainers and their successors be from time to time and at all times hereafter subject and obedient to the Lord Mayor and Court of Aldermen of the City of London for the time being in all that concerns the good government of the said City of London: Provided always, our will is that no person or persons of the said mystery for the time being who shall not hold communion with the Church of England or shall be present or frequent at conventicles or any unlawful assembly under pretext of religious worship, shall at any time hereafter be chosen or brought upon the livery of the said Company when the same shall be granted to the said Company of Painters by the Mayor and Court of Aldermen of the said City of London, and that every person chosen or to be chosen upon the livery of the said Company, before he be thereunto admitted shall be approved by the Lord Mayor and Court of Aldermen of the City of London, and shall take the said oaths of allegiance and supremacy, and the oaths prescribed and mentioned in the said Act for the well governing and regulating of corporations, and shall make the said subscription before the master and wardens of the said Company, or any two of them, in the court of assistants, which said master, wardens, or any two of them, for the time being in the court of assistants, we do by these presents for us, our heirs, and successors, order, authorise, and require to give and require the said oaths and subscriptions as aforesaid: Provided further, and we do for us, our heirs and successors, declare that if any person or persons who were of the assistants of the said Company at the time of the surrender aforesaid shall not within the space of three months after the date of these presents surrender his or their office or place of assistant or assistants of the said Company to the master, wardens, and commonalty of the said Company, and submit to a new election at the pleasure of the said Company, then they shall not nor ought to have any power or privilege in or concerning the electing any officer or officers, member or members, of the said Company, but shall thereof and of and from all benefit of this our grant be wholly discharged and excluded. In witness whereof we have caused these our letters to be made patents. Witness ourself, at Westminster, the 12th day of June, in the first year of our reign.

G.—The Company has license in mortmain in charters as above.

H.—The under-mentioned documents purport to give powers to the Company in addition to those given by the documents above set out, but it is questionable whether all the powers would not be so strictly construed that such gifts would be wholly nugatory. It has been found that such powers are uninforceable, and they are not now enforced.

As to encouraging trade see Part IV., Return M.

By an Act of Parliament, 5 Elizabeth, c. 4, 1563, it is enacted,—

"That no one that hath not served seven years in the "art or mystery which he shall use, shall exercise "the same or set any other to work therein who hath "not served that time under the penalty of forty "shillings for every month."

By an Act of Parliament, 1 James I., c. 20, 1606, it enacted as follows:—

"No manner of person or persons being or pretending "to be a plaisterer or hereafter to become or to be "a plaisterer or being or which shall be a servant or "set on work by any plaisterer, shall use, exercise, or "set up the art, mystery, or manual occupation of a "painter, commonly called a painter stainer, or any "part thereof, in the City of London or the liberties "or suburbs of the same, or shall within the places "aforesaid make any manner of work or works, or "lay any manner of colour or colours, painting or "paintings, whatsoever in the said art or mystery of "painters stainers aforesaid, at any time heretofore "occupied or used unless he or they be or shall be "the servant or servants, apprentice, or as apprenticer "of a painter, otherwise called a painter stainer, or "have served or shall serve as an apprentice or as "apprentices by the space of seven years at the least "to a painter, otherwise called a painter stainer, upon "pain that every such person or persons as shall "hereafter do or offend contrary to the true intent "and meaning of this present Act shall forfeit for "every time that he or they shall so do or offend the "sum of five pounds of lawful money of England, "It shall not be lawful to any person or persons other "than such as now do lawfully use or exercise any "art mystery, or manual occupation, to set up, "occupy, use, or exercise any craft, mystery, or occu-"pation now used or occupied within the realm of "England or Wales, except he shall have been "brought up therein seven years at the least as an "apprentice in manner and form above said, nor to "set any person or persons on work in such mystery "art, or occupation, being not a workman at this day, "except he shall have been apprentice as is aforesaid, "or else, having served as an apprentice as is afore-"said, shall or will become a journeyman or be hired "by the year, upon pain that every person willingly "offending or doing the contrary shall forfeit and lose "for every default forty shillings for every month."

An Act of Common Council, in 1612, was also obtained whereby (after enacting "That all persons free of the City "of London, of what Company soever, using the art of "painting within the city shall be under the survey of "the said Company and shall be subject to the ordinances "and byelaws thereof") it is also enacted—

"That no person whosoever being free of any Company "whatsoever, and who shall use the art of painting, "and shall take any apprentice, shall bind such "apprentice to any person but to one of the said "Company under the penalty of twenty pounds for "every offence," and further to oblige all persons "exercising painting in the city to be free of the city "in this Company.

And by another Act of Common Council, in 1767, it is enacted—

"That every person using painting within the said city, "and who shall (after the 29th of September 1767) "be made free, shall take up their freedom of the "said Company and not of any other Company, and "if any shall exercise painting without being so free "they shall forfeit five pounds for every offence."

PART II.—A.

Constitution and Privileges of Membership.

Return A.—Governing Body.

1. State the present constitution of the governing body of the Company, whether such constitution is according to the charter, and if not, in what respects such constitution varies therefrom, and when and how such alteration was made.
2. State the qualifications for membership of the governing body of the Company, the time and periods of election, and the qualifications of the voters at elections to the governing body.
3. State the functions of the governing body, and of the different members of the same respectively, and whether the members of the governing body pay any and what fees or fines on admission thereto, and whether they are paid any and what salaries or amounts in respect of their services respectively.
4. State the nature of the business which comes before the governing body of the Company, the method adopted in transacting it, the times at which the governing body meets for business purposes, the way in which the opinions of the members are taken, and whether the resolutions and decisions of the governing body are published, or are otherwise accessible to any or all, and which, of the members of the Company.
5. State whether the members of the governing body are liable to suspension or removal on any and what grounds, and by what method such suspension or removal is effected.
6. Has the Company any byelaws sanctioned by the Courts of Law or Chancery, or by the Courts of Aldermen or of Common Council, or otherwise? State the effect of such byelaws.

1. The present governing body consists of the master, the upper warden, renter warden, and 24 assistants, elected according to the charter of James II.

2. The master must have served or fined for both wardenships, and the upper warden for the renter wardenship. The assistants must be members of the livery, and have served or fined for the renter wardenship. The master and wardens are elected annually at the common hall on the 18th of October by the livery. The assistants are elected by the court as vacancies occur according to the charter, but it is usual to elect all persons first who have served the office of renter warden. Every liveryman is entitled to vote. Votes are taken on a polling paper.

3. The functions of the master wardens and court (the governing body) are the administration of the charities, binding apprentices, admissions to freedom and livery, and managing the Company's property, arranging exhibitions, and awarding prizes to encourage technical education in the trade, election of their clerk and beadle, and any other business necessary for the Company to transact. Each master and warden pays a proportion of expense of the annual feast, and each member admitted on the court pays a fine of 10 guineas. There is no fee, reward, perquisite, profit, or enrolment directly or indirectly attached to any office.

4. For the nature of the business, see Answer 3. The method of transacting it is by resolution and show of hands, and such resolutions are open to the livery on inquiry at the annual common hall.

5. Members of the court are liable to be removed under the provisions of the second byelaw for non-residence, and also by the charter for misconduct, non-residence, or non-attendance. By the 28th byelaw there is a power to remove a liveryman from the livery, and a member of the court being also a liveryman, this ordinance would apply to him. The removal would be effected by the court, which means the master, wardens, and assistants.

6. See Part I., Return B.

PART II.—B.

Constitution and Privileges of Membership.

Return B.—Admission to Membership.

1. State the qualifications for membership of the Company, the several grades of membership of the Company, and whether women are admitted to membership.
2. State the several modes in which the freedom of the Company may be obtained, the circumstances entitling an applicant to admission under each mode respectively, and the fees payable in respect of admission under each mode respectively.
3. State whether persons exercising any particular trade are required by statute or otherwise to become free of the Company. Is there any process by which members of such trade can become members of the Company, and is there any process for compelling such persons to procure admission, and are such processes enforced, and to what extent? Is the freedom of the City of London in any and what way a condition precedent or subsequent to membership? Are there any members who are not free of the City of London? Do persons exercising any particular trade commonly become members of the Company? If so, how many members of such trade are at present members of the Company? What is the number of the members of the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the Company, who are members of the Company?
4. Are freemen liable to disfranchisement, and, if so, for what reasons, and what is the mode of disfranchisement?
5. Is the livery of the Company limited or unlimited in number? What are the qualifications for election to the livery, who are the electors thereto, and how do the elections thereto take place, and what fees are payable on election? Are liverymen liable to removal from the livery, and for what reasons?
6. State the number of apprentices bound at the Company's hall, or otherwise under the auspices of the Company, during each of the last 10 years, and state how many of such apprentices have been bound to members following the trade, if any, the name of which is borne by the Company. Has the Company in any and what cases paid the fees or premiums of such apprentices, and what has been the amount, if any, so expended in each of the last 10 years?
7. Is the freedom of the City of London in any way a condition precedent or subsequent of membership of the Company? Are there any, and how many, members of the Company who are not free of the City of London?

PAINTERS' COMPANY—continued.

1. Females are entitled to the freedom of the Company, but no female has now the freedom. Every person is qualified to be elected to the freedom or livery of the Company upon being proposed, seconded, and elected by the court.

2. The freedom of the Company is obtained on election.

3. See Part I., Return H. The powers so given are not enforced, and probably not enforceable. The leading members of decorative painting do belong to the Company, and 55 members are in the painting trade.

4. No power can be found to disfranchise a freeman. No instance has occurred since 1880.

5. The Company have a livery by prescription unlimited. For residue of answer, see above.

7. This question can best be answered by the city authorities. A person is admitted to the freedom of the Company without any communication or act on the part of the city, but no proof has hitherto been required by the Company of the subsequent completion of the freedom of the city. It is believed that no freeman of the Company is at present without the freedom of the city.

PART II.—C.

CONSTITUTION AND PRIVILEGES OF MEMBERSHIP.

RETURN C.—Number of members.

State (1) the present number of freemen, (2) the present number of the livery, (3) the present number of other members, (4) the number of admissions to the freedom by each mode respectively, and (5) the number of calls to the livery which have respectively taken place during each of the last preceding 10 years.

PART II.—D.

CONSTITUTION AND PRIVILEGES OF MEMBERSHIP.

RETURN D.—Profits and privileges.

1. State with fullness what are the advantages, pecuniary or otherwise, incident to the position of a member of the Company in each grade of membership, as (1) a freeman, (2) a liveryman, (3) master, warden, or otherwise a member of the governing body.
2. State the sums paid on an average annually for the preceding 10 years by the Company to the members according to the grades of membership mentioned above, and of what such sums consisted, whether (1) fees, and of what nature, (2) pensions, or (3) other payments, specifying the nature of the same respectively.
3. What circumstances are in practice held to constitute a claim to a pension or donation? State the number of present pensioners and donees respectively, and the amounts paid to them as such respectively. How many pensioners and donees are connected with the trade (if any), the name of which is borne by the Company?
4. (1) What is the average standing of a member when he becomes a member of the governing body, and (2) what is the average time for which a member continues on the governing body?
5. Does the Company carry on any and what trade or manufacture with which its title is directly or indirectly connected? If so, what is the capital, and from what sources is it derived, and how are the profits (if any) divided or dealt with?

1, 2, and 3. As before stated there is no fee, reward, perquisite, profit, or emolument, directly or indirectly, attached to membership, except as stated in Charities Return. Part I. Return I. to two decayed liverymen and 10 poor lame painters, who are eligible for Mr. Stock's charity of 10*l.* annually, and except the poor box supported by voluntary contributions, and Mr. Fairchild's legacy (see Part I. Return I.) distributed to the widows and orphans of past members, in sums varying from 30*s.* to 4*l.*, poverty and respectability being the only further qualifications.

The members of the livery are entitled to vote for Lord Mayor, sheriffs, chamberlain, bridgemasters, and other city offices at the common halls at Guildhall, and at all elections of master and wardens of the Company at the common hall on the 18th of October.

4. The average standing of a liveryman when he is elected on the court is about 10 years, and unless he resigns he remains after election a member of the court for the rest of his life, subject to the restrictions already mentioned.

5. No.

PART IV.—RETURN F.

RETURN F.—(1.) The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them what has been the amount of the increase or decrease, from year to year, of the Company's income during the last 10 years, and whether there is reason to expect any increase or decrease during the next 10 years, together with a statement of the reasons for such expectation.

RETURN F.—(2.) The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them whether there is reason to expect any permanent increase or decrease in value in any of the estates or properties of the Company, and if so, to what extent, together with a statement for the reasons for such expectation.

See prior Returns.

PART IV.—RETURN G.

RETURN G.—The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them—

1. What is the system of management of the Company's estates and property?
2. In what way, and by whom, the several receipts and payments are taken and made, and under what control?
3. In what way the Company's accounts are audited?
4. Whether the Company's accounts are published, or are accessible to all or any, and which, of the members of the Company.

G.—1. The Company's estates and property are managed by the court, who direct their clerk by resolution to seal such leases as are agreed to by the master and wardens and court.

2. The receipts and payments are taken and made by the clerk under the control of the court.

3. The Company's accounts are audited annually by two members of the court annually appointed by resolution of the court who report the result of that audit, with an abstract of receipts and expenditure under its various items, and a balance sheet.

4. The Company's accounts are not published, but the book containing the annual accounts is laid upon the table at every meeting, to be referred to by any member of the court or by any member of the livery at any common hall.

PART IV.—H.

RETURN H.—A detailed statement of the income from all sources of the Company during each of the preceding 10 years, a detailed statement of the Company's expenditure during each of such 10 years and a detailed statement of the assets and liabilities of the Company at the end of each of the last 10 years.

PART IV.—RETURN M.

General and Technical Education.

RETURN M.—A statement as to whether the Company does anything to subsidise or encourage education, whether general or technical, and a return of the means (if any) so employed, and of the amount expended on such objects during each of the last preceding 10 years.

The Painters' Company were the pioneers of the movement for technical education. The subject was first started in 1858, and after many meetings and discussions it was resolved to hold annual exhibitions in the hall, of graining, marbling, writing, painting, and decorative art generally.

The first exhibition took place in 1860, when certificates of merit and the freedom of the Company were awarded to several exhibitors. In 1861 the second exhibition was held in the hall, as in 1860, when the court divided the prizes into 1st, 2nd, and 3rd class, awarding four silver medals and freedoms of the Company, four bronze medals, and four certificates of merit. These exhibitions were open to the public gratuitously, and the expenses, exclusive of the use of the hall and the servants of the Company, amounted to about 200*l.*, mostly contributed by members of the court, with some assistance from the livery. In 1862 the court intimated to the trade that, owing to the International Exhibition held that year at Kensington, no exhibition of writing, graining, marbling, and decorative art would be held at the hall, but the court would appoint judges to examine the work exhibited at such International Exhibition and award prizes independent of the Commissioners. Judges were accordingly appointed, and awarded as prizes five silver medals, four bronze medals, and one certificate of merit. In 1863 and 1864 exhibitions were again held in the hall as in 1861. It was found that these exhibitions being of the specimens of a single trade did not create sufficient interest outside the craft, and all exhibitions and competitions were suspended until the year 1872, when it was resolved to hold a competition of works in alto relievo and decorative painting. The interest, however, felt by mere workmen was small, as evidenced by the few specimens sent in, but the court awarded as prizes, two silver medals and one bronze medal. In 1873 the court decided to give money prizes in addition to the silver and bronze medals, and issued a circular to the livery asking for subscriptions. The competition was this year opened out to all the various branches of the trade, and the following prizes were offered, viz., two of 5*l.*, three of 3*l.*, and two of 2*l.*, with silver and bronze medals. The court also awarded a silver medal to the City of London School. In 1874 the subjects for competition were decorative painting, painting from natural foliage, and freehand drawing and design, and the prizes given were one of 5*l.*, two of 3*l.*, and one of 2*l.* In 1875 it was decided to suspend all exhibitions and competitions at the hall, and in lieu thereof to offer prizes to schools: such prizes were accepted by the two under-mentioned schools, viz.:—

The City of London School, silver medal and 2*l.* 2*s.*

The City and Spitalfields School, silver medal and 2*l.* 2*s.*

In 1876 the court extended their award of prizes, and the presentations made were as follows:—

To the City of London School, 1st prize, 3*l.* 3*s.* and silver medal.

To the City of London School, 2nd prize, 2*l.* 2*s.*

To the Freemen's Orphan School, 1st prize, 2*l.* 2*s.* and silver medal.

To the Freemen's Orphan School, 2nd prize, 1*l.* 1*s.*

To the City and Spitalfields School, 1st prize, 2*l.* 2*s.* and silver medal.

To the Commercial Travellers' School, 1st prize, 2*l.* 2*s.* and silver medal.

In 1877 the presentations were as in 1876, with the addition of a 2nd prize to the Commercial Travellers' School of 1*l.* 1*s.*

In 1878 the court again revised the award of prizes, as follows:—To the City of London School the same as in 1876, and to the other schools mentioned in 1876, silver and bronze medals only.

In 1879 and 1880 prizes were given as in 1878.

Lectures have also occasionally been given by the master or some other member of the court on "colour," or some other parts of the painting trade.

APPENDIX A.

*SOME ACCOUNT OF THE WORSHIPFUL COMPANY OF PAINTER-STAINERS.

The Company of Painter-Stainers is of considerable antiquity. According to Horace Walpole, their first Charter, in which they are styled Peyntours, was granted in the sixth of King Edward IV., but they existed as a fraternity in the time of King Edward III.

They were called Paynter-Stayners because a picture on canvas was formerly called a stained cloth, as one on panel was called a table, probably from the French "tableau." In the Inventory of the Pictures of King Henry VIII. we find them always so distinguished, as,—

"Item, a table with the picture of the Lady Elizabeth her Grace."

"Item, a stained cloth with the picture of Charles the Emperor."

The Company must have attained some importance in the 16th century, for Strype tells us that they were charged with the setting forth of 12 soldiers and all their furniture, though they had neither lands nor revenues, nor any riches to discharge the same; but the amount was levied among the brethren, every man according to his ability.

The same author informs us that about 1575 "the "Peyntours Company found that their trade began to "decay, by reason of other persons that had not been "apprentices to it, who undertook painting. Whereby "much slight work went off; as pictures of the Queen, "and noblemen and others; which showed fair to sight; "and the people bought the same being much deceived; "for that such pictures and works were not substantially "wrought; a slander to the whole Company of Painters, "and a great decay of workmanship in the said science; "and also a great discouragement to divers forward "young men very desirous to travel for knowledge in the "same."

Therefore in the year 1575 they addressed Queen Elizabeth, that she would consider their cause, and give aid and assistance to them.

Their petition was favourably entertained, for in the year 1581 Queen Elizabeth granted the Charter of Incorporation which we now possess. It is in Latin, finely inscribed on a good-sized sheet of parchment. On the heading is a well-drawn coloured portrait of the Queen seated, and the Royal Seal is attached. It is addressed, "Liberi Homines et Cives Civitatis London Artis sive Misterii "pictorium vocati Anglice Paynters-Steyners," and is dated, "Teste meipso apud Westmonasteriensis decimo "novo die Julii regni nostri vicessimo tertio," being the 19th of July, the twenty-third of her reign (1581).

Supplementary to this Royal Charter we have a Deed on three large sheets of parchment, also dated in 1581, endorsed, "The Book of Ordynnances for the Paynter-"Steyners of London, was confirmed and sealed by the "Lord Chancellor, the Lord Treasurer, and two Lords "Chief Justices," and is accordingly signed by "Syr "Thomas Bromley, Syr William Cecil, Lord Burleigh, "Syr Christofer Wraye, and Syr James Dyer." To each of the signatures is attached the full coat-of-arms, blazoned in colour.

The charter constitutes and grants the Paynter-Steyners to be a body corporate and Politick in Art, Deed, and Name, by the Names of Master, Wardens, and Commonality of the Freemen of the Art and Mystery of Paynters, commonly called Paynter-Steyners, within the City of London and the suburbs and liberties thereof; authorises them to have a common seal, gives the usual powers, and specially prohibits "that any person, of whatever estate or degree, "shall use or exercise the Arte or Mystery of the Paynter-"Steyners, but only such persons as have been heretofore "brought up and instructed by some one of the same Arte "or Mystery as apprentice in the same Arte for the term "of seven years, under penaltie to forfeit the sum of five "pounds."

The aforesaid ordinances mention the names of Thomas Cobbe, as master, William Herne, Esq., Sergeant-Paynter to the Queene's Majestie as Upper Warden, and John Byrde as youngest Warden.

King James II. also granted a charter to this Company, dated the twelfth day in the first year of his reign, which confirms all the powers of the Charter of Queen Elizabeth. It alludes to an "Act of Parliament made at Westminster "in the first year of the reign of our Royal Grandfather, "King James I.," and recites that "The Art and Mystery "of Paynters is an ancient Art or Mystery, and had time "out of mind been an ancient Company and Fellowship in "the City of London;" and further says, "And for our "heirs and executors we doe assign, name and constitute, "and confirm our well-beloved subject, John Shales, Esq., "to be present Master, and Richard Wallis and William "Strange to be the present two Wardens," and assigns, names, and constitutes the following as the Court of Assistants:—"T. Botelor, S. Hedge, T. Evans, P. Audley, "S. Morgan, T. Seaman, W. Stamper, I. Saunders, "E. Atwood, J. Wright, J. Bridge, the said J. Shales, "I. Perrin, I. Gale, E. Mole, H. Asgill, C. Cranwell, "I. Ivans, T. Blundell, W. Barker, E. Pierce, the said "R. Wallis, W. Strange, and J. Johnson, and R. Barker, "clerk." Of the above, Sylvanus Morgan had great reputation as a herald, and was the author of the "Sphære of Gentry;" he was master of the Company, 1676, and gave us the interesting portrait of Camden; Richard Wallis was a herald and an arms paynter; Thomas Evans was master of the Company, 1667, is known to us as a benefactor, and his bust is in our court-room.

The minute books, which the Company still possess, commence from the year 1623. They prove how completely this Company was empowered to control and regulate the art of this country. One of their duties, frequently exercised, was to search for work, to judge if it were well or ill done, and on many occasions to condemn it. On the 10th of March 1673, there is a minute, "That "the Painter of Joseph and Pottifer's wife and the Fowre "Elements be fined 3*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* for such bad work."

The Company were also applied to as arbitrators or judges of the value of artists' work, of which there is a remarkable instance, as shown in the minute dated January 11th, 1631–2. They had received from the Lord Chamberlain the following letter, dated December 13th, 1631:—

"I desire the Masters of the Kings and Queene's barges to cawle unto them the Master and Wardens of the Company of Panter-Steyners in London, and such other discreet men as they shall think fitt of the said Company, to make request of them to view the Kings and Queene's new barges, and to make a trewe valuation and estimate of the woorke done by Iohn De Cretz in panting trymming and gilding the said barges and certify your knowledge under your hands.

(Signed) PEMBROKE MONTGOMERY.

"Iohn de Cretz, sergeant paynter to the King, demand for two barges, the one for the King, newly done, the other for the Quene repared, the Kings 270*l.*, the other 40*l.*"

* A copy of a small printed book (Chiswick Press, 1880), supplied to the Commission by the Company.

The following is the answer of the Company sent to the Lord Chamberlain :—

"The Master and Wardens of the Company of Panter-Steyners of London have received a warrant from your Lordship, dated the 13th of December Anõ 1631, to vyew the King and Queene's barges, and to estimate the woork done by Iohn De Cretz sergeant panter to his Majie in panting trymming and gilding the sade barges, and to certifie our knowledg therein. We have according to your honour's direction made thereof from able and discreet men of our Company did together view the sade barges, and fynde and testify vnto your honour as followeth, vid^t^ that the new pantyng and gilding and trymming of his Majie's barge is worth 250*l.* The reparing, gilding, and trymming of her Majie's barge is worth 32*l.*

(Signed) IOHN POTKIN, Master.
THOMAS CARLTON,
IOHN TAYLER,
Wardens.
POWLE ISAACSON,
THOMAS BABB,
THOMAS KNIGHT,
Assistants.
HENRY DODDINGTON, Material Closer."

There is another minute in the following year showing a similar case, dated January 18th, 1632–3 :—

"At the request of Right Honorable the Lord Goryng the Master and Wardens with certain others of the Company were intreated to vewe a peece of work don by Mr. Buckit at the Lord Goryng's howse beyond St. James's howse, and to give a reasonable estimate of the work, which was performed according to his honour's request."

From an early period down to the middle of the last century, when the Royal Academy of Arts was founded, the Painters' Company included the principal artists of England. In the reign of King Henry VIII., Sir John Browne, John Hethe, and Andrew Wright, sargeant paynters to that King, were liverymen of this Company, as will be shown when we allude to our old hall. In the Charter granted by Queen Elizabeth, William Herne, Her Majesty's sergeant paynter, is mentioned as upper warden of the Company. Sampson Camden, who is said to have painted a portrait of Queen Elizabeth, was a liveryman of this Company, and his son, William Camden the historian, and Clarencieux king of arms, gave us the silver cup in memory of his father.

In the minutes of October 26, 1647, it is recorded that—

"George Wyld, Doctor of Divinitie, Colonell Richard Lovelace, Thomas Rawlins, Esqre., Graver of his Majie's Mint, and Mr. Peter Lilly, were all made free at this Court."

On the 17th May 1635 :

"Mr. Inigo Jones, the King's surveyor, was invited to dinner, and very lovingly came and dined with the companye."

In the minutes of the 16th September 1632 :

"It is ordered by this court that so soon as the picture of Mr. John Potkin and the two wardens be sett up, that the peece now in that place be given to Mr. William Foster."*

On July 7th 1648, there is a minute that—

"Mr. Iohn Cradock at this court presented a peece of painting of his own making which he gave unto this Company, consisting of varieties of fruits, viz^t^., apricocks, quinces, ffilberts, grapes, aples, and other sortes of fruits, and was also at this Court made free of this Company."

On September 18th 1657 :

"It is ordered that Mr. Fuller shall have the making of the peece of the Court of Assistants and the master and wardens do return him thanks for his love with assurance that they will endeavour to make him some part requital of the same."

On the 6th of April 1676 :

"Mr. Lilly is desired to paint the King's picture—Mr. Housman the Queen's, Mr. Wright the Duke of York's, Mr. Greenhill the Duchess of Yorks."

In the year 1687 the invitations to the Feast of St. Luke were signed by Anthony Verrio and Sir Godfrey Kneller, with N. Shepherd and Ed. Polehampton. The various pictures in the possession of the Company, many of them of considerable merit, are by artists, liverymen of the Company, and mostly presented by them. Sir James Thornhill was on our livery, and Charles Catton, one of the founders of the Royal Academy of Arts, was our master in 1761.

According to the minute books much business was transacted at the meetings of the Court of Assistants, which were numerously attended.

A very kindly feeling appears to have prevailed among the brotherhood : bequests of small sums are recited that the brethren may have supper in memory of a deceased liveryman. The Company are frequently in money difficulties, and members of the court come forward with loans.

On the 3rd of February 1635–6 :

"At this court Mr. Iohn Beston presented as a token and memorial of his love to the Company a Round Salt with an open cover gilt waying 37 ounces."

On the 28th of October 1645 :

"This day a faire silver bread bowle was presented to this Company by Mr. George Willingham (being his guift), with his name and the yeare of our Lord engraven thereon."

On the 18th of October 1647 :

"Whereas Mr. Willingham had disbursed for this Company 42*l.*, when upper warden in 1642, and in 1643 lent to the Company on their plate 50*l.* more, and now will not take any consideration, and the court requests him to accept 20 nobles, which he took to lay out on a piece of plate to follow that bowle, which he formerly gave in remembrance of his wife."

The present Painters' Hall stands on the site of the old Painters' Hall, once the residence of Sir John Browne, sergeant paynter to King Henry VIII., by patent dated 1511, and elected an alderman of London in 1522. He made his will on the 17th of September 1532, and on the 24th of the same month he conveyed to his brother paynter-steyners his house in Little Trinity Lane, which has from that time continued to be the hall of this Company. The various deeds connected with this property date from the 2nd of King Henry VI., when John de Padyngton gives to Thomas Wayte the reversion of certain tenements with shops, and the appurtenances in Hoggen Lane and Trinity Lane in the parish of Holy Trinity the Little, next Queenhithe, belonging to him after the decease of Katherine, daughter of Johanne Atte Pitte, which certain tenement with shops and its appurtenances is situated between the garden of Edmund Salle, clothworker, on the north side, and the tenement of Ralph Mark; brewer, on the south side, and the highway of Hoggen Lane on the west side, and the highway of Trinity Lane on the east side. After this there are sundry grants and releases till the 17th of Henry VII., when there is a recovery in the hustings of London, by Childers and Ellys against Padyngton, who is obliged to grant release to them.

On the 18th of King Henry VII. Childers and Ellys grant the property to Lupsett and others, and on the 20th day of October, in the 20th King Henry VII., Thomas Lupsett, citizen and goldsmith with others, enfeoffs the property to John Browne, paynter-steyner, John Milborne Chamberlain of London, and others, and possession and seisin were delivered on the 28th of October following to John Browne, and on the 24th of September, in the 24th of Henry VIII., John Browne conveys the same to Richard Ryppingale, Richard Lame, Thomas Alexander, John Heth, Richard Gates, Andrew Wright, Thomas Crystyne, William Lucas, William Hountlowe, and Robert Cope, citizens and paynter-steyners. Of the above, John Heth was said to have been employed by King Henry VIII. at the Palace of Nonsuch ; Andrew Wright was appointed sargeant paynter to the king after Sir John Browne's death ; William Lucas was a miniature painter, greatly esteemed.

We have no record showing what the old Painters' Hall was like, but in our minute book of the date April 2nd, 1630, "It is fully ordered and agreed that the wanskotting and beautifying of the hall shall presently be set in hand." . . . "For the furtherance of which works there was "this day presented to this court a forme and patterns "drawn by the care and paynes of Mr. Poule Isaacson, "which this court with general good liking approved "of."

On August 5th following, six or more of the most able and best workmen to be had are ordered to be engaged, and inventions, copies, patterns, and draughts to be provided for them to work from.

On August 26th, it is ordered that the arms of the livery shall be placed in the hall window, after the fashion of those in the upper parlour, and a remembrance to be made in some eminent place in the hall, that this hall was beautifyed A.D. 1630.

* This is the picture now in our Court Room.

This old Painters' Hall was of some importance. Sir John Evelyn in his "Diary" states that the commission for supporting the sick and wounded in the war had permission to meet there; under date of November 16th, 1664, he mentions "Painters' Hall was lent us to meete in. "In the greate room were divers pictures, some reasonably "good, that had been given to the Company by several "of the wardens and masters of the Company." They continued to meet there till July 3rd, 1666, on which day he writes, "Thence to Painters' Hall to our other Com- "mission and dined at the Lord Mayor's."

Alas! in two months afterwards the old hall was consumed in the great fire of London. We have no record of what relics of the olden time were lost to us in that calamity, but we are fortunate in still possessing some of the pictures and a few relics of silver, and amongst these our Camden cup.

The present Painters' Hall was erected on the site of the old one, but we do not find any allusion to the fire in the minute book; one of the earliest subsequent entries is in November 1666:—

"Ordered for Mr. Savile the last warden, of what is "remaining of the brasses to sell and so bring them to "accompt."

On the 30th of September 1667, it is recorded that the Company used Cooks' Hall till their own was rebuilt.

On December 20th, 1668, there is a minute as follows:—

"At a committee for rebuilding the hall, Mr. Bird, "master, Mr. Savile, Mr. John Bird, and Mr. Evans—

"Mr. Luck the bricklayer appeared and agreed to do all "the bricklayer's work belonging to the hall for fifty-four "shillings the rod, he to find lime and sand and to use "all the old bricks on the ground.

"Mr. Bell the carpenter appeared and contracted to "build the hall and front house burnt lately, for 50*l.* a "square upon the flatt, he agreed to employ Mr. Luck the "bricklayer and to pay him thirty and eight shillings a "rod for workmanship."

This was agreed to, and the Company to pay him his money as he does his work.

"Ordered, That the committee meet every Tuesday at 9 in the morning without warning."

"Ordered, That those persons who are members of the committee and do not appear on Tuesdays shall forfeit 6*s.* for every default."

On the 24th of August 1669, it was resolved that the plate of the Company should be mortgaged in order to raise money for the rebuilding, and several members of the court lent sums of 50*l.*

By the end of the year 1669 the new hall must have been built, as in the February following it was agreed to let the German Protestants have the use of the hall every Lord's day twice, and on every holiday, for two years, at 24*l.* per annum.

The "New View of London," 1708, states as follows:—

"Painter-Stainers' Hall is situated in Little Trinity Lane. It is adorned with a handsome screen, arches, pillars, and pilasters of the Corinthian order, painted in imitation of porphyry with gilded capitals. The pannels of the wainscot and the ceiling are imbellished with great variety of history and other painture, exquisitely performed; as 1st, the portraitures of King Charles II., and his Queen Catherine, by Howsman; 2nd, the fire of London; 3rd, Endymeon and Luna, by Palmaitier; 4th, Orpheus fleaing Pan, by Brull; 5, a piece of architecture, by Trevit; 6th, another, given by Mr. Thompson, the city painter; 7, Heraclitus and Democritus, by Penn; 8, a landscape, by Aggas; 9, fish and fowl, by Robinson; 10, art and envy, by Hungis: 11, a piece of birds, by Barlow; 12, a piece of fruit and flowers, by Everbrook; 13, a ruin, by Griffier; 14, Cambden's portraicture; 15, a piece of birds; 16, the ceiling is finely painted with Pallas triumphant, with the arts and fame (attended by Mercury) suppressing their enemies, sloth, envy, pride, &c., done by Fuller; and there are several other pieces in the parlour."

The ceiling decorations above described unfortunately no longer exist, nor is it known when they were destroyed. The pictures, the gifts of artists, former liverymen of the Company, still hang upon the walls, and serve to illustrate how intimately this ancient guild was associated with artists in the olden time.

In giving this brief account of the Painter-Stainers' Company we must not omit to mention the charitable bequests of which they are the faithful dispensers. One worthy liveryman of our Company, Mr. John Stock, painter to His Majesty's Dockyards, left to us by his will in 1781, the distribution of the interest of upwards of 60,000*l.* to be paid in pensions of 10*l.* per annum, principally to aged blind persons, and to poor lame painters, &c. Mrs. Jane Shank, Mrs. Dorothy Smith, Mrs. Mary Grainger, Mrs. Francis Yeates, and Miss A. R. Syddall were also benefactors. The funds arising from these bequests are distributed with the most careful consideration, and under the control of the Charity Commissioners, to about 200 old and needy persons.

The Painters' Company, though they thus receive and pay away large sums yearly, have very limited corporate funds. They are, however, desirous of exercising to the best of their ability the influence of their guild for the advancement of the art they represent. They were the first of the City Companies to open an Exhibition of Works of Decorative Art. They propose from time to time to give lectures suitable for the technical education of young men in industrial art; and they are endeavouring to open an intercourse with the working men, which they trust may be attended with useful results.

Having so venerable a history, and such honourable associations, performing its charitable trusts so scrupulously, and retaining so much modern vitality, this Company may fairly appeal to all good citizens to join in the wish expressed in their time-honoured toast, "May the Painter- "Stainers' Company flourish root and branch for ever."

Master, 1880.

APPENDIX B.

The Company gave full information to the Municipal Commissioners appointed in 1834.

PATTENMAKERS' COMPANY.

The Returns were made subject to the following protest signed by the Master of the Company for the time being :—

The Company begs to state that it claims its corporate property as its own absolutely, and not subject to any trust whatever.

The Company makes this return so far as regards such corporate property voluntarily and without admitting the right for such a return to be called for.

14th January 1882.

PART I.—FOUNDATION AND OBJECT.

State the functions of the governing body, and of the different members of the same respectively, and whether the members of the governing body pay any, and what fees or fines on admission thereto, and whether they are paid any, and what salaries or amounts in respect of their services respectively.

4. State the nature of the business which comes before the governing body of the Company, the method adopted in transacting it, the times at which the governing body meets for business purposes, the way in which the opinions of the members are taken, and whether the resolutions and decisions of the Governing Body are published, or are otherwise accessible to any or all, and which of, the members of the Company,

5. State whether the members of the governing body are liable to suspension, or removal, on any, and what grounds, and by what method such suspension or removal is effected.

6. Has the Company any bye-laws sanctioned by the Courts of Law or Chancery, or by the Courts of Aldermen or of Common Council, or otherwise. State the effect of such bye-laws.

1. Master, two wardens and twelve assistants in accordance with charter.

2. The governing body consists of freemen who are also liverymen of the Company. The master and wardens are elected from the court of assistants annually. The assistants are elected from time to time as vacancies occur from death, resignation, or removal, the electors being the master, wardens, and remaining assistants.

3. Generally to administer the affairs of the Company. The master presides at the several courts, the wardens assist the master, and the assistants are required to be aiding, counselling, and assisting the master, and wardens in all matters affecting the good rule and government of the Company.

The members of the court formerly paid 10*l.* upon admission, this has from time to time increased and is now 50*l.*

The governing body are paid ten shillings each for their attendance at the four courts of the Company holden quarterly. In the event of their non-attendance, they are fined five shillings each, which amount is put in the Company's poor box, and annually with other sums distributed among the Company's poor.

4. The nature of the business which comes before the governing body is the general regulation of the affairs of the fellowship. The opinions of the members are ascertained by open voting, the resolutions and decisions of the court are not published, but are recorded in their minute books which are open to every member of the court, and also to any member of the Company on application.

5. The master and wardens are liable to removal for just and reasonable cause, and the assistants for default or frequent neglect of attendance at the courts or other meetings of the Company, such removal is effected by the votes of the majority of the court.

6. The Company's byelaws were made on the 27th October 1673, (25 Charles II.) under the provisions of the Act 19 Henry VII., and were approved in accordance with that statute on the 20th June in the twenty-sixth year of the reign of King Charles the Second, by the Lord Keeper, and the Lords Chief Justices of the King's Bench and Common Pleas. The effect of the byelaws is to regulate the estate, rule, and government of the Fellowship, and the members thereof, and in what manner the Company, and all persons using or exercising the art and mystery of making pattens and clogs within the Cities of London and Westminster, and ten miles every way distant therefrom, shall demean and behave themselves as well in all matters touching or concerning the trade as in their offices, functions, places, and businesses touching or concerning the Company.

PART II.—B.

RETURN B.—Admission to Membership.

1. State the qualifications for membership of the Company, the several grades of membership of the Company, and whether women are admitted to membership.
2. State the several modes in which the freedom of the Company may be obtained, the circumstances entitling an applicant to admission under each mode respectively, and the fees payable in respect of admission under each mode respectively.
3. State whether persons exercising any particular trade are required by statute or otherwise to become free of the Company. Is there any process by which members of such trade can become members of the Company, and is there any process for compelling such persons to procure admission, and are such processes enforced, and to what extent? Is the freedom of the City of London in any and what way a condition precedent or subsequent to membership? Are there any members who are not free of the City of London? Do persons exercising any particular trade commonly become members of the Company? If so, how many members of such trade are at present members of the Company? What is the number of the members of the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the Company, who are members of the Company?
4. Are freemen liable to disfranchisement, and if so, for what reasons, and what is the mode of disfranchisement?
5. Is the livery of the Company limited or unlimited in number? What are the qualifications for election to the livery, who are the electors thereto, and how do the elections thereto take place, and what fees are payable on election? Are liverymen liable to removal from the livery, and for what reasons?

1. Persons must be of good character, not subject to any legal incapacity and of the age of 21 years or upwards. The several grades of membership are—

Freemen;
Liverymen;
Assistants;
Wardens;
Master.

Unmarried women and widows have been admitted to membership.

2. The several modes by which the Freedom of the Company may be obtained are—

1st. Patrimony, i.e. by right of birth in lawful wedlock after admission of the parent to the Freedom of the Company.

2nd. Servitude, by an apprenticeship of seven years to a member of the Company.

(3.) Redemption, by purchase or gift.

The fees payable in respect of admission under each mode respectively are—

	Company. £ s. d.	Government Stamp Duty. £ s. d.
By patrimony or servitude	1 17 0	1 0 0
By redemption	12 8 6	3 0 0

3. Vide Part I.—Return D. No steps are now taken to compel persons to join the Company. No persons exercising any particular trade become members of the Company, and no working pattenmakers are now members of the Company.

4. Freemen are presumed to be liable to disfranchisement by the Court, but no cases are known to have occurred.

5. The livery is limited. The qualification for the livery of the Company is to be admitted to the freedom thereof. The court of the Company are the electors. Freemen become Liverymen upon their own application, but their admission is discretionary with the court. Liverymen are however admitted out of court in the presence of the master or one of the wardens by the clerk under the authority of the court delegated to him for that purpose. Fee on admission fifteen pounds. Liverymen are presumed to be liable to removal by the court for gross misconduct.

PART II.—C.

RETURN C.—Number of members.

State (1.) The present number of freemen. (2.) The present number of the livery. (3.) The present number of other members. (4.) The number of admissions to the freedom by each mode respectively; and (5.) The number of calls to the livery which have respectively taken place during each of the last preceding ten years.

(1.) The present number of freemen is unknown, but it is presumed they do not exceed 100 in all.
(2.) The present number of the livery is 74.
(3.) There are no other members of the Company than freemen or liverymen.
(4.) and (5.) The number of admissions to the freedom and calls to the livery during the last preceding ten years, were as follows:

Year.	Freemen.			Total number of Freemen.	Liverymen.

PART II.—D.

RETURN D.—(1.) State the number of apprentices bound at the Company's Hall, or otherwise under the auspices of the Company during each of the last 10 years. (2.) State how many have been bound during each of the last ten years to members following the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the Company. (3.) In what cases and to what extent have the fees or premiums of such apprentice been paid by the Company ?

1. The number of apprentices bound under the auspices of the Company during each of the last ten years, is as follows :—

1872	4
1873	22
1874	8
1875	12
1876	7
1877	8
1878	8
1879	7
1880	5

2. No apprentices have been bound during the last ten years to members following the trade, the name of which is borne by the Company.

3. No fees or premiums have in any case been paid by the Company.

PART II.—E.

RETURN E.—Profits and privileges.

1. State with fullness what are the advantages, pecuniary or otherwise, incident to the position of a member of the Company in each grade of membership, as (1) a freeman, (2) a liveryman, (3) master warden, or otherwise a member of the governing body.

2. State the sums paid on an average annually for the preceding ten years by the Company to the members according to the grades of membership mentioned above, and of what such sums consisted, whether (1) fees, and of what nature, (2) pensions, or (3) other payments, specifying the nature of the same respectively.

3. What circumstances are in practice held to constitute a claim to a pension or donation ? State the number of present pensioners and donees respectively, and the amounts paid to them as such respectively. How many pensioners and donees are connected with the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the Company.

4. (1) What is the average standing of a member when he becomes a member of the governing body, and (2) what is the average time for which a member continues on the governing body ?

5. Does the Company carry on any and what trade or manufacture with which its title is directly or indirectly connected ? If so, what is the capital and from what source is it derived, and how are the profits (if any) divided or dealt with ?

1. The advantages pecuniary or otherwise incident to the position of a freeman are eligibility for election to the livery, and if in distress assistance from the Company's funds.

(2.) A liveryman has the right of voting for members of Parliament for the City of London, and for the election of Lord Mayor, Sheriffs, and certain Corporation officers.

(3.) The Court of Assistants is chosen from the livery, and the master and warden from the court. The pecuniary advantage of the master wardens and Court of Assistants is that they each receive ten shillings for early attendance at the four quarterly courts of the Company. In the event of their not attending, they are each fined five shillings, which is put in the Company's poor box, and annually with other amounts distributed amongst the poor of the Company. The master pays a fine of 7*l.* 10*s.* 0*d.* and the wardens each 5*l.* 5*s.* 0*d.* upon taking office.

2. The average annual sum paid during the past ten years to the members of the governing body was 13*l.* 10*s.* There were no pensions or other payments. For charitable disbursements, see part 1, Return 1.

4. The average standing of a member of the Company is not necessarily a consideration when admitting him to the governing body. A member remains on the court until he dies, resigns, or is removed.

5. The Company does not carry on any trade or manufacture with which its title is directly or indirectly connected.

PART III.—OFFICERS AND SERVANTS.

RETURN A.—A list of the Officers of the Company, with a statement of the duties of each, the amount of his salary and emoluments, and whether or not he is a member of the Company.

RETURN B.—A list of the servants of the Company, with a statement of the duties of each, and of the amount of their wages and emoluments.

RETURN C.—A statement as to the mode in which the officers and servants of the Company are respectively appointed.

A. The clerk of the Company. His duties are to attend the several meetings of the Court of Assistants to record the minutes of the proceedings, to prepare list of voters, and attend the revising barrister theron, to prepare accounts for Charity Commissioners, conduct all correspondence, and generally to advise upon all matters affecting the interests of the Company.

The clerk receives 21*l.* per annum and some small fees upon the admission of members.

The clerk is a freeman and liveryman of the Company.

B. The beadle. The Company has an acting beadle appointed by the clerk subject to the approval of the court. His duties are to attend the courts of the Company, and the several common halls, and to perform such other duties as he may be from time to time directed. He receives 5*s.* for each attendance on the court and common halls, and some few other small payments.

PART IV.—F.

RETURN F. (1.) The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them what has been the amount of the increase or decrease from year to year of the Company's income during the last ten years, and whether there is reason to expect any increase or decrease during the next ten years, together with a statement of the reasons for such expectation.

RETURN F.—(2.) The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them whether there is reason to expect any permanent increase or decrease in value in any of the estates or properties of the Company, and if so, to what extent, together with a statement for the reasons for such expectation.

F. (1.) This Return is answered by the preceding statement.
F. (2.) The Company having neither estates nor property can form no expectation upon this subject.

PART IV.—G.

RETURN G.—The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them—

1. What is the system of management of the Company's estates and property?
2. In what way and by whom the several receipts and payments are taken and made, and under what control?
3. In what way the Company's accounts are audited?
4. Whether the Company's accounts are published, or are accessible to all or any and which of the members of the Company?

1. The Company as before stated have no estates to manage.
2. The receipt of its income and payments thereout are by the renter warden, assisted by the clerk.
3. The accounts are audited by members of the governing body annually appointed for that purpose.
4. The accounts are not published, but are open to inspection to every member of the governing body.

PART IV.

RETURN H.—A detailed statement of the income from all sources of the Company during each of the preceding 10 years, a detailed statement of the Company's expenditure during each of such 10 years, and a detailed statement of the assets and liabilities of the Company at the end of each of the last 10 years.

The Income and Expenditure during each of the preceding years was as follows:

PART V.—REFORM.

PART V.—Reform.

The Commissioners, being bound to report to Her Majesty "what measures (if any) are, in their judgment, expedient and necessary for improving or altering the constitution of the Companies, or the appropriation or administration of the property or revenues thereof," respectively invite the attention of the officers of the Companies to this part of the Commission.

The Commissioners will be very glad to receive and consider any suggestions respecting this part of the Commission with which the officers of the Companies may do the Commissioners the honour of favouring them.

The members of the Company who are the only persons interested in any measures for improving or altering its constitution or appropriating or administering its property or revenue have not deemed it necessary to take any steps for either purpose. The officers of the Company respectfully protest against being asked to make any such suggestions as are indicated, they considering that the members only of the Company can be interested in the administration and appropriation of its property and revenue.

APPENDIX A.

This Company gave full information to the Municipal Commissioners of 1834. In that year the property of the Company consisted of 150*l.* three per cents., and 400*l.* three-and-a-half per cents, which sums arose from savings out of casual income within the then last 40 years.

PEWTERERS' COMPANY.

The Return was made subject to the following protest :—

In the annexed Returns the Worshipful Company of Pewterers have furnished full particulars of their trust property.

With respect to such of their property as is not subject to any trust, the company are advised that they might properly, as well as legally, decline to furnish any information. They are not, however, disposed to insist upon their strict right.

They think it indeed their duty to claim before the Commissioners the right, which they would be entitled to assert even in legal proceedings before courts having power to enforce discovery, of protecting from disclosure their titles to the private property of which they are in possession; but with this exception they have given such information as they hope will be found sufficient for the purposes of Her Majesty's Commission.

But, in giving this information, the company desire in the most formal manner to state that their readiness so to assist the Commission is not to be taken now or hereafter as any admission on their part of any right in the Crown, or any other jurisdiction, to inquire into their private property, or to deal with it in disregard of their rights.

They desire also to record their claim that, if any question be made whether any particular property is subject to any trust, or is the private property of the company, every such question must be determined only by the courts of law.

PART I.—FOUNDATION AND OBJECT.

A to H.

Return A.—A statement of the date, ascertained or probable, of the foundation of the company, and of the circumstances, so far as they can be discovered from its documents of foundation or archives, in which the company had its origin.

Return B.—A list of the charters, charters of inspeximus, and other instruments of a similar nature, whether originals or copies, which have been at any time in the possession of the company, together with an abstract of the purport of each, regard being specially had to any evidence which it may contain as to the object of the foundation of the company.

Return C.—A list of any trust deeds "founding, regulating, or affecting" the company, with the date of each, the names of the parties thereto, and an abstract of the purport of each.

Return D.—A list with dates of any "decrees of court," whether of the Courts of Common Law or of Chancery, or of any Acts of the Court of Aldermen or of the Court of Common Council, "regulating or affecting" the company, with a statement of the effect of each decision.

Return E.—A list of any other documents, not included in the descriptions in the preceeding returns, which "found, regulate, or affect" the company, with dates and an abstract of the effect of each.

Return F.—A concise history of the company, from the time of its foundation to the present day, with special reference to the inquiry contained in the commission as to "the objects for which the company war founded," and "how far those objects are now being carried into effect."

Return G.—Has the company a licence in mortmain? When was such licence granted (referring to the document by description)? What is its extent, and to what extent is it now unexhausted?

Return H.—Is there vested in the company, and how, whether by charter, statute, order of the Court of Aldermen, act of Common Council, or otherwise, any right of exercising superintendence over, or any duty or discretion to encourage in any way, any and what art, trade, or business? State the nature and local limits of such control. In what manner and to what extent is such control now exercised? If such control is not now exercised, state the circumstances under which its exercise has fallen into desuetude.

A.—It would be extremely difficult, if not impossible, to fix the date of the foundation of the Pewterers' Company. Tin, the basis of pewter, has been an article of commerce and of considerable importance to this country from the earliest period of our history. There is reasonable evidence that the Phœnicians traded with England for tin, and that the blocks of tin were cast in forms adapted to fit as ballast in the boats which conveyed the metal to the shores of Gaul, and equally suitable to sling on the mules or horses which transported them across the continent of Europe. The importance of the tin mines is recognised by the appropriation of the produce thereof to the Crown in the fourteenth century (1329), when Cornwall was created a duchy in favour of the Prince of Wales, who, like succeeding princes, drew large revenues from the country.

The Pewterers appear to have been originally a company or meeting of friendly and neighbouring men, associated together as a society or fellowship of persons actually carrying on the trade from which they took their name.

The earliest information respecting the company is found in the records of the City of London, 22 Edward III., A.D. 1348, when the Mayor and Aldermen are prayed by the good folk of the trade to hear the state and points of the trade, to provide redress and amendment of the defaults thereof for the common profit, and to ordain two or three of the trade to oversee the alloys and workmanship.

In the year 1443 (22 Henry VI.), in consequence of the complaints of "the multitude of tin which was untrue "and deceyvable brought to the City, the defaults not "being perceptible until it comes to the melting," the Mayor and Aldermen granted to the company the right to search and assay all the tin which was brought into the City of London.

Edward IV. (1473–4) incorporated the company by Royal charter, confirming the power to search and assay all merchandise belonging to the craft.

This power was recognized and confirmed by charters granted successively by Henry VIII., Philip and Mary, Queen Elizabeth, James I., and Queen Anne. The charter of Queen Anne not only confirms the preceding charters, but also defines the powers of the company and empowers them to ordain laws for the government of the company.

An Act of Parliament confirming the company's powers to search for bad wares was passed in 1503–4, 19 Henry VII. c. 6., confirmed by other Acts, 4 Henry VIII. c. 7., 1512–13; 25 Henry VIII. c. 9., 1533–4; and a statute 33 Henry VIII. c. 4., 1541–2, prohibited the hawking of pewter.

The maintenance of the good faith of the trade appears to have been one of the primary considerations in the proceedings of the company.

In 1555 it was resolved that any member buying metal of tylors, labourers, boys, women, or suspected persons, or between six at night and six in the morning, if the metal should prove to have been stolen, should not only be dismissed the company, but stand to such punishment as the Lord Mayor and Aldermen might direct.

The company's books give particulars of numerous infractions of the regulations for the quality of metal, and show very clearly the necessity for some supervision in the interest of the public.

The London and provincial markets and fairs were visited by the officials of the company, and reports were frequent of the seizure and condemnation of pewter ware, of brass goods, and of false beams or scales. Members of the trade were continually cited before the court of the company for making false, or selling unstamped, ware. In general the Court decided on the complaint, but the more important cases were remitted to the Mayor and Aldermen. Disputes between masters and servants, "variances" between members of the trade, and sometimes even the differences between men and their wives, were also submitted to the judgment of the Court by members of the trade.

The company appear to have furnished a certain number of men with arms for the defence of the City, and to have kept at the Hall equipments for them—calyvers, corslets, bills, pikes, &c.—and to have appointed an armourer to preserve them in good condition.

Their great difficulty seems to have been to provide money to meet the precepts from the Lord Mayor or from the Crown, for the purchase of wheat for the provision of the City, for setting forth of ships, for men to serve the King and provide for their furnishing, but more frequently for loans, which were seldom or never repaid.

For these purposes subscriptions were raised from the members of the company. Sometimes part of the money was borrowed, and in some instances the silver plate presented by liverymen on their enrolment and by other members was sold to make up the required amount.

Indeed, the advantages which the company may have derived from their privileges seem to have been to a great extent neutralized by these continual claims and exactions of the Crown—claims which could not, apparently, be resisted, and which heavily taxed the funds of the company.

The company used to cast into bars such tin as was to be transported out of the realm, whereby the poor of the company were wont to provide for part of their living; but after these bars were made by strangers beyond the sea, the poor were greatly "hindered." A petition was presented to Queen Elizabeth in 1594, and after a delay of four years letters patent were granted to the company, giving permission for a small charge to be made on the smelting and casting of bars of tin.

The fellowship of the craft and mystery of Pewterers of London and elsewhere represented, before Henry VIII.'s reign, one of the best handicrafts within the realm. By means of successive Acts and Statutes made for the exercise of the same, it so continued as in the time of Henry VII. and Henry VIII.; and we read that English pewter was long held in much estimation in strange regions and countries.

The Master and Wardens appear at the commencement of the seventeenth century to have exercised the right to nominate the casters of tin in London, and the company received a small royalty on the casting, which was distributed to the poor of the company. They also appear to have had from the Council of the Revenue of the Prince of Wales an allotment of certain proportions of the tin produced in Cornwall, and to have derived some profit from the privilege. In fact, the pewter trade in London was supplied with tin from Cornwall through the company, and frequent disputations are recorded between the company and the Prince's Council as to the rate, which was sometimes said to be so high that the poor of the company could not live thereby.

At a later period the company, in order to prevent the public from imposition, and to sustain the credit of the pewterers' trade, appointed the standard assays of the various wares and the weight of metal for each article.

From the earliest period to which the books extend, it seems to have been the custom to have dinners and festival meetings at the Hall at certain fixed periods.

In 1559 the arrangements for the dinner to the Livery and Freemen—to which their wives were admitted—are given, and entries are also found of permission being granted to the Master and Wardens to invite divers guests.

The property of the company is as set out in the subsequent returns.

B.—By a Deed of Incorporation, dated 20th January 1473, Edward IV. granted to the three persons therein named that they might found and establish, in honour of the Virgin Mary, a Fraternity or Guild of one Master, two Wardens, and Commonalty of Freemen of the Mistery of Pewterers then dwelling or thereafter to dwell within the City of London or the Suburbs thereof, and of the brethren and sisters of the Freemen of the same Mistery, and of others who of their own pleasure were willing to be of the same Fraternity or Guild, to be one body and one community, to be fit and capable in law of acquiring in fee and perpetuity lands, tenements, rents, services, and all other possessions whatsoever, from any person or persons willing to give, devise, grant, or assign the same to them and their successors for ever; to have perpetual succession and a common seal for their service, and by their name to plead and be impleaded in any Courts or places; to have survey, rule, and govern the said Commonalty and all men occupying the same, and all servants, stuffs, workmanship, and merchandise belonging or appertaining to the said Mistery, according to their discretion; to make honest and reasonable ordinances and constitutions for the good rule and government of the said Mistery as often as they should please; the said Master, Wardens, and Commonalty to have a search and government of all manner of workmanships and merchandise belonging to the said Mistery within the said City and Suburbs thereof and in any other places whatsoever without the said City throughout the whole Kingdom of England, and to punish and correct defects of the said workmanships and merchandises according to the quantity of the same defects; to make and exercise due search of all workmanships or works, as well over the men of the said Mistery as any other workmen belonging thereto, as well within the said City of London and the Suburbs thereof as in all other places whatsoever without the said City throughout the whole Kingdom of England; and to seize, take, and carry away as forfeited, all manner of deceitful and unjust workmanships and merchandises, one moiety of such forfeitures to the Crown, and the other moiety to the said Master, Wardens, and Commonalty, and their successors. All Mayors, Sheriffs, Bailiffs, Stewards, and other officers whatsoever, to assist in searches.

The charter dated 14th April, 18 Edward IV., 1478, directed all Mayors, Sheriffs, Bailiffs, Constables, and other the King's officers, servants, faithful and liege subjects, to make proclamation of searches to be made by the company and to assist the company therein when required.

The charter of 20th January, 13 Edward IV., was exemplified and confirmed by charters of 19th May, 20 Henry VII.; 4th January, 4 Henry VIII.; 14th October, 2 Philip and Mary; and 20th November, 2 Elizabeth; and that of 30th December, 4 James I., confirmed all former charters.

On the 14th March, in the first year of his reign, Charles I. granted a charter by which, after reciting the charter of Edward IV., he conferred greater and more extensive powers upon the company for the survey and government of the manufacture of pewter throughout England and Wales.

Charles II., by Letters Patent dated 23rd September, in the twenty-sixth year of his reign, ratified all former powers and authorities granted to the company, and also conferred further and more extensive powers for the examination of all vessels, workmanships, and manufactures of tin, pewter, and ley metal, and for prevention of frauds and deceits in such manufactures. And by certain other Letters Patent, dated 18th December following, in the nature of a Writ of Assistance, the King commanded all municipal and other magistrates to aid and assist the company in making their searches in all cities, boroughs, and towns in England and Wales, and also to permit them to use and exercise all their powers without hindrance or molestation.

By charter dated 19th September 1702, Queen Anne ratified and confirmed the preceding charters and all franchises possessed by the company, and moreover incorporated all and every person and persons being Freemen of the company by the name of the Master, Wardens, and Commonalty of the Mistery of Pewterers of the City of London, with all usual powers of perpetual succession, and directed that they should by that name be for ever able and capable in law to have, take, purchase, hold, possess, and enjoy, to them and their successors, as well of Her Majesty, her heirs and successors, as of any other person or persons whatsoever, manors, lands, tenements, liberties, franchises, rents, reversions, privileges, and other hereditaments in fee, to them and their successors, all and singular goods, chattels, and other things whatsoever, and the same lands, tenements, rents, reversions, goods, and chattels, and other the premises and every parcel thereof to sell again, demise, and grant; and by the same name to sue and be sued, and have a common seal. It was ordained and granted that there should be one Master and two Wardens, viz., an Upper Warden and a Renter Warden, and also twenty-four or more Assistants besides the Master and Wardens, but the number of which Assistants should never exceed forty at any one time. The then present Master and Wardens were therein by name appointed or continued as Master and Wardens until the election of other Masters and Wardens as therein is mentioned; twenty-five persons therein named and who were then the Assistants of the company were appointed or continued Assistants during their natural lives, or until amoved for some misdemeanour according to the power therein contained. The Master and Wardens or their deputies and any ten or more of the Assistants were empowered, when and as they should think fit, to nominate and elect as often as they should think proper so many able and sufficient person or persons, being of the Livery of the Company, to be assistant or assistants, to continue in office during his or their natural life or lives or until amoved pursuant to the powers therein contained, so as such Assistants did not at any one time exceed forty in number. It was further ordered that the Master and Wardens and any ten or more of the Assistants should in the month of August in any year assemble and meet together in the Common Hall of the Company, and then and there as in Court and by a majority of voices nominate three persons of the Company to stand candidates for the office or place of Master, three others to stand candidates for the office of Upper Warden, and four others to stand candidates for the place of Renter Warden; and that out of such members the Liverymen or the major part of them, in a General Court to be on the same day assembled, might elect and choose one to be Master and two to be Wardens of the company for the year ensuing, commencing from the Thursday next before the Feast of St. Michael the Archangel in every year. The Charter granted and declared that it should be lawful for the Master, Wardens, and Assistants, and all other persons being of the Livery of the Company, at any Court or Courts to be summoned as therein mentioned, or the major part of them, to constitute and ordain laws, articles, and ordinances for the good rule and government of the company, and all other persons using the said art or mistery within the City of London and the suburbs of the same City.

The last set of bylaws made pursuant to the above power was made on 19th August, 1766, and was allowed and approved of by the then Lord Chancellor and the Chief Justices of the King's Bench and Common Pleas.

C.—The company have not any trust deeds "found-" ing, regulating, or affecting" the company.

D.—The Company have not any decrees of Court, whether of the Courts of Common Law or of Chancery or of the Court of Aldermen or of the Court of Common Council, regulating or affecting the company.

E.—The company have not any other documents which will further show the matters before inquired after, or which found, regulate, or affect the company.

F.—Included in Return A.

G.—The company have a general licence in mortmain by charter 26th January, 13 Edward IV., 1473, and also by charter 19th September, 1 Anne, 1702.

H.—The rights of the company are set out in the preceding returns. The practice of searches has gradually grown into desuetude.

PART II.—Constitution and Privileges of Membership.

Return A.—Governing Body.

1. State the present constitution of the governing body of the company, whether such constitution is according to the charter, and if not, in what respects such constitution varies therefrom, and when and how such alteration was made.
2. State the qualifications for membership of the governing body of the company, the times and methods of election, and the qualifications of the voters at elections to the governing body.
3. State the functions of the governing body and of the different members of the same respectively, and whether the members of the governing body pay any, and what, fees or fines on admission thereto, and whether they are paid any, and what, salaries or amounts in respect of their services respectively.
4. State the nature of the business which comes before the governing body of the company, the method adopted in transacting it, the times at which the governing body meets for business purposes, the way in which the opinions of the members are taken, and whether the resolutions and decisions of the governing body are published, or are otherwise accessible to all, or any, and which, of the members of the company.
5. State whether the members of the governing body are liable to suspension, or removal, on any and what grounds, and by what method such suspension or removal is effected.
6. Has the company any byelaws sanctioned by the Courts of Law, or by the Courts of Aldermen or of Common Council, or otherwise. State the effect of such byelaws.

A.—1. The present constitution of the Governing Body of the company is the Master, Wardens, and Court of Assistants, and such constitution is in accordance with the Charters.

2. The qualification of membership of the Governing Body is that each member must be a Freeman and Liveryman of the company, must have served the office of Steward, or have paid a fine for being excused from such office, and be in solvent circumstances and of good moral character and repute. The time of election is generally when a member is required to serve the office of Renter Warden, but it may occur in case of any unusual vacancy, from death or otherwise, among the Court of Assistants. Such member is almost invariably selected from the Livery by rotation. The election is by the Court and by a majority of voices.

3. The function of the Governing Body is to manage the entire affairs of the company. The Master presides at the meetings of the Court of Assistants and on all other occasions when present, except at Committee meetings. The Wardens assist the Master in all matters relating to the company, and with him attend all courts. The Renter Warden also attends to the receipt of the rents and other moneys belonging to the company, and the application thereof, under the direction of the Court. The Master and Wardens sign all cheques drawn on the Company's bankers, which are afterwards countersigned by the Clerk. Each member of the Governing Body pays a fine of 20*l.* on his election as an Assistant, but no fine is paid on being appointed Master or Warden. Much of the business coming before the Governing Body is referred to various Committees of its members, who duly inquire and report to the Court thereon. Each member of the Court present during its sitting receives a fee for his services, but no fees are received for attendance on any of the Committees.

4. The Governing Body meets once a month, and the business which comes before it relates to the general affairs of the company: To receive and consider reports of the Committees on the matters referred to them; to admit Freemen and Liverymen; to regulate the disposal of the funds of the company; to consider applications for assistance, and generally to manage the affairs of the company. The method in transacting such business is that all questions shall be determined by the majority of votes of the Court. The Governing Body meets for business purposes on the Thursday nearest the twenty-fifth day of each month, at the Hall of the Company, at one o'clock in the afternoon, except on the day appointed for electing officers in August, when it meets at eleven in the forenoon. The resolutions and decisions of the Governing Body are not published, but are accessible to all or any of the members of the Court.

5. The members of the Governing Body are not to reveal the secrets of the Master, Warden, and Assistants, or the debates in their Courts or other assemblies, or any other secrets of or belonging to the Mistery or Company, unto any person or persons whatsoever who is not one of the Assistants, but especially not to such person or persons whom the same matter doth in any way touch or concern, or unto any person or persons who might give him notice thereof whereby the company should receive or sustain any damage or injury; and whosoever may offend in any point of this ordinance to the prejudice of the company shall be fined for the first and second offences, and for the third offence be dismissed and removed from being any longer such Assistant, in case the Court of Assistants or the greater part of them shall so think fit.

6. The by-laws of the company, made on the nineteenth day of August, 1766, for the well ordering and governing the company, were afterwards approved by Lord Chancellor Camden, Lord Mansfield, Chief Justice of the Court of King's Bench, and Sir John Eardley Wilmot, Lord Chief Justice of the Common Pleas, pursuant to Act of Parliament 19 Henry VII.

Part II.—B.

Return B.—Admission to membership.

1. State the qualifications for membership of the company, the several grades of membership of the company, and whether women are admitted to membership.
2. State the several modes in which the freedom of the company may be obtained, the circumstances entitling an applicant to admission under each mode respectively, and the fees payable in respect of admission under each mode respectively.
3. State whether persons exercising any particular trade are required by statute or otherwise to become free of the company. Is there any process for compelling such persons to procure admission, or any process by which such persons are enabled themselves to procure admission, and are such processes enforced respectively, and to what extent? Do persons exercising any particular trade commonly become members of the company? If so, how many members of such trade are at present members of the company? State also (if the company bears the name of any existing trade) how many members of such trade are members of the company?
4. Are freemen liable to disfranchisement, and if so, for what reasons, and what is the mode of disfranchisement?
5. Is the livery of the company limited or unlimited in number? What are the qualifications for election to the livery, who are the electors thereto, and how do the elections thereto take place, and what fees are payable on election? Are liverymen liable to removal from the livery, and for what reasons?
6. State the number of apprentices bound at the company's Hall or otherwise under the auspices of the company during each of the last 10 years, and state how many of such apprentices have been bound to members following the trade, if any, the name of which is borne by the company? Has the company in any and what cases paid the fees or premiums of such apprentices, and what has been the amount, if any, so expended in each of the last 10 years?

7. Is the freedom of the City of London in any way a condition, precedent or subsequent, of membership of the company? Are there any and how many members of the company who are not free of the City of London?

B.—1. The qualifications for membership of the company are obtained by patrimony, servitude, or redemption. The several grades of membership are freemen, liverymen, stewards, and members of the court of assistants. Women are admitted to the freedom of the company.

2. The freedom of the company may be obtained by patrimony, servitude, or redemption. The legitimate child of any freeman applying for his freedom is, with the consent of the court of assistants, to be admitted thereto. Each apprentice, after the completion of his apprenticeship, applying for his freedom, is entitled thereto, with the like consent. The fee payable on admission by patrimony is 9*s.* 2*d.*, the fee payable on admission by servitude is 3*s.* 4*d.*, and the fee payable to the company on admission by redemption to the freedom and livery is 10*l.*

3. The Pewterers' Company do not call upon persons exercising the trade of a pewterer to take up their freedom in the company. The company believe that two members of the livery are not free of the City of London. Two members of the company do now or did carry on the trade of a pewterer.

4. The company have no knowledge of any instance of disfranchisement.

5. The livery of the company are not limited in number. The qualification for election to the livery is obtained by patrimony, servitude, or redemption. The electors thereto are the court of assistants. The person wishing to be admitted to the livery must be proposed by a member of the court; inquiries are then made by the master and wardens as to whether such person is a fit and proper person for such admission, and if their report be satisfactory, he is summoned before the court and admitted to the livery on payment of a fine; in cases of patrimony or servitude, 20*l.*; and on redemption, for both freedom and livery, 105*l.*

6. Apprentices have been bound under the auspices of the company during each of the last ten years, viz., in 1870, one; in 1871, three; in 1872, one; in 1873, one; in 1874, one; in 1875, six; in 1876, four; in 1877, five; in 1878, four; in 1879, two. It cannot be stated how many of such apprentices have been bound to members following the trade. No fees or premiums have in any of the above cases been paid by the company.

7. The freedom of the City of London is not in any way a condition precedent or subsequent to membership.

Part II.—C.

Return C.—Number of members.

State (1) the present number of freemen, (2) the present number of the livery, (3) the present number of other members, (4) the number of admissions to the freedom by each mode respectively, and (5) the number of calls to the livery which have respectively taken place during each of the last preceding 10 years.

C.—1. There are five freemen and five freewomen.
2. The present number of liverymen is 70.
3. Other members 32, being the court of assistants.
4. There have been 35 admissions to the freedom during the preceding ten years, and
5. Twenty-five admissions to the livery during the preceding ten years.

Part II.—E. Profits and Privileges.

Return E.—

1. State with fullness what are the advantages, pecuniary or otherwise, incident to the position of a member of the company in each grade of membership, as (1) a freeman, (2) a liveryman, (3) master, warden, or otherwise a member of the governing body.
2. State the sums paid on an average annually for the preceeding 10 years by the company to the members according to the grades of membership mentioned above, and of what such sums consisted, whether (1) fees, and of what nature, (2) pensions, or (3) other payments, specifying the nature of the same respectively.
3. What circumstances are in practice held to constitute a claim to a pension or donation? State the number of present pensioners and donees respectively, and the amounts paid to them as such respectively. How many pensioners and donees are connected with the trade (if any), the name of which is borne by the company?
4. (1) What is the average standing of a member when he becomes a member of the governing body, and (2) what is the average time for which a member continues on the governing body?
5. Does the company carry on any and what trade or manufacture with which its title is directly or indirectly connected? If so, what is the capital and from what sources is it derived, and how are the profits (if any) divided or dealt with?

1. Members of the company, their widows and orphans, in distressed circumstances, are (subject to the approval of the court of assistants) entitled to the following pensions and annuities, according to the ages mentioned:—

Officers.	Members.			Widow's Annuity.			Orphans.

2. The average sums paid annually to members for the preceding ten years out of the funds of the company are as follows:—

1. Court fees to the master, wardens, court of assistants, and auditors, 1,717*l.*
2. Pensions, payments, and gratuities to decayed members of the company, 629*l.*

3. Members of the company in distressed circumstances (as indicated at head of this return, par. 1):—

There are 39 pensioners and donees. The sums paid to them are 629*l.* per annum. None are members of the trade.

4. 1. A liveryman does not become a member of the governing body until he has been such liveryman for about 20 years on an average.
2. Under ordinary circumstances he continues a member during the remainder of his life.

5. The company does not carry on any trade or manufacture.

PART III.—OFFICERS AND SERVANTS.

As to an ESTATE in IRELAND, the Manor of Lizard, in the COUNTY of LONDONDERRY, Barony of Coleraine, and Parishes of Aghadervey, Agivey, Desertoghill, Enigall, and Macosquire.

The company is entitled to a portion of an estate in Ireland known by the name of the Manor of Lizard in connexion with the Ironmongers' and other companies of the City of London.

The Society of the Governors and Assistants, London, of the new Plantation in Ulster, agreed with the twelve chief companies of the City of London to divide the greater part of the estates among the companies, who were to provide the necessary funds for carrying out the purposes of the Society in equal shares. And it was agreed that if any chief company was unable to provide its share, then certain of the smaller companies of the City of London should be associated with it to make up the required amount in such sums as they were prepared to advance.

The total amount to be advanced by the Ironmongers' Company, which was one of the chief companies, was 5,000*l.*, towards which the Pewterers' Company contributed 360*l.*, and then became entitled to a share of the above estate.

An annual account of the rents and profits is rendered by the Ironmongers' Company to the companies associated therewith in the month of May, and which for the year ending May, 1881, amounted to 180*l.*

PLAISTERERS' COMPANY.

The Returns were accompanied by a letter from the clerk of the Company stating that their sending them "is not to be construed that they are under any obligation to answer, or that their property, which is not subject to any trust, is other than private, or can be otherwise treated."

PART I.—FOUNDATION AND OBJECT.

Returns A to H, both inclusive.

RETURN A.—A statement of the date, ascertained or probable, of the foundation of the company, and of the circumstances, so far as they can be discovered from its documents of foundation or archives, in which the company had its origin.

RETURN B.—A list of the charters, charters of inspeximus, and other instruments of a similar nature, whether originals or copies, which have been at any time in the possession of the company, together with an abstract of the purport of each, regard being specially had to any evidence which it may contain as to the object of the foundation of the company.

RETURN C.—A list of any trust deeds "founding, regulating, or affecting" the company, with the date of each, the names of the parties thereto, and an abstract of the purport of each.

RETURN D.—A list with dates of any "decrees of Court," whether of the Courts of Common Law or of Chancery, or of any acts of the Court of Aldermen or of the Court of Common Council, "regulating or affecting" the company, with a statement of the effect of each decision.

RETURN E.—A list of any other documents, not included in the descriptions in the preceding returns, which "found, regulate or affect" the company, with dates and an abstract of the effect of each.

RETURN F.—A concise history of the company, from the time of its foundation to the present day, with special reference to the inquiry contained in the commission as to "the objects for which the company was founded," and "how far those objects are now being carried into effect."

RETURN G.—Has the company a licence in mortmain? When was such licence granted (referring to the document by description)? What is its extent, and to what extent is it now unexhausted.

RETURN H.—Is there vested in the company, and how, whether by charter, statute, order of the Court of Aldermen, act of Common Council, or otherwise, any right of exercising superintendence over, or any duty or discretion to encourage in any way, any and what art, trade or business? State the nature and local limits of such control. In what manner and to what extent is such control now exercised? If such control is not now exercised, state the circumstances under which its exercise has fallen into desuetude.

A.—The Plaisterers' Company was incorporated in the year 1501, to search, and try, and make, and exercise due search as well in, upon, and of all manner of stuff touching and concerning the Art and Mystery of Pargettors, commonly called Plaisterers, and upon all work and workmen in the said Art or Mystery, so that the said work might be just, true, and lawful without any deceit or fraud whatsoever within the City of London, or suburbs thereof.

B.—(1.) 16 Henry VII. 10th March 1501. By charter of this date, King Henry VII gave power to establish the company as the Guild or Fraternity in honour of the Blessed Virgin Mary, of men of the Mystery or Art of Pargettors in the City of London, commonly called Plaisterers, to be increased and augmented when necessary, and to be governed by a master and two wardens, to be elected annually. The said master and wardens and brotherhood were to be a body corporate, with perpetual succession and a Common Seal, and they were empowered to purchase and enjoy in fee and perpetuity lands and other possessions in the City, suburbs, and elsewhere. And the charter empowered the said master and wardens to sue and be sued as "The master and wardens of the Guild or Fraternity of "the Blessed Mary of Pargettors, commonly called Plais-"terers, London."

The company had full power to make the search set out in Return A., and to punish all persons offending by survey of the Mayor of the said City.

(2.) 2 Elizabeth. This charter has been lost, and the company has no record of its contents.

(3.) 39 Elizabeth. 10th February 1597. This charter confirmed the privileges of the company, and extended the authority of the master and wardens to and over all persons exercising the Art of Plaisterers, as well English as Aliens and Denizens inhabiting and exercising the said Art within the City and suburbs and liberties thereof, or within two miles of the said city.

(4.) 2 James I. This charter has been lost, and there is no record of its contents.

(5.) 19 Charles II. 19th June 1679. This charter confirmed the privileges granted by the previous charters, and having in view the re-building of the City, forbade any person to carry on simultaneously the trades of a mason bricklayer, or plaisterer, and also forbade any person to exercise or carry on the Art of a Plaisterer without having been apprenticed seven years to the Mystery. And the jurisdiction of the company was extended to three miles' distance from the City.

C.—There are no trust deeds.

D.—(1.) 1579 and 1585—Two orders made by the Court of Aldermen (exemplified under the mayoralty seal, 1st April 1585) for settling matters in dispute between the tilers and bricklayers and the plaisterers as to interfering in each other's trades. The observance of these orders was enforced by an order of the Privy Council dated 1st June 1613, and a general writ or precept issued to the same effect on 13th August 1613.

(2.) 29 Elizabeth, 14th February 1586–7.—An order of the Court of Aldermen relating to the number of apprentices to be kept by members.

(3.) 18 James I., 5th October 1620.—An Act of Common Council of this date was passed.

(4.) 6 William and Mary, 19th October 1694.—An Act of Common Council of this date was passed to compel all persons using the trade of a plaisterer in the city of London, or the liberties thereof, to become free of this company under penalty to be recovered as therein mentioned.

E.—37 Henry VIII., 15th January 1546.—A grant of arms to the company.

A set of byelaws and ordinances not dated, but probably made in the time of Henry VIII., prior to the Reformation.

28 Elizabeth, 25th March 1586.—Another set of byelaws, not now in force.

1765, December 30.—Another set of byelaws.

F.—This company ranks as forty-sixth of the eighty-nine civic companies of the City of London, and was incorporated in the year 1501 by a charter granted by Henry VII. for the objects specified in Return A. hereof. Search days appear to have been annually appointed up to 1832, but not since, and fines were inflicted on offending parties for using bad materials, and for bad workmanship. Although for many years the company has not exercised any control over plaisterers' work, they have for nearly 20 years offered prizes to art workmen, thus encouraging improvement in the art of plastering and modelling; and the company subscribes to the City and Guilds of London Institute.

G.—The company holds a licence in mortmain.

It was granted by the Charter of Incorporation, 16 Henry VII., 10th March 1501.

Its extent is unlimited and unexhausted.

H.—For this Return, see Returns A., B., and F.

I.—Charities, 1870 to 1879.

Return I.—A list of the charities, eleemosynary, educational, or otherwise, which are under the management of the Company, stating in each case the name of the founder, the date and nature of the benefaction, its original and its present value, and the purposes to which the funds have been applied for each of the last preceding 10 years.

Founder's Name.	Date of Foundation.	Objects of Benefaction.	Endowment.		Present Income.	Application of Income.	Remarks.
			Personalty.
			Stock.	Dividends and Interest.
William Roberts	Will dated 22nd July 1813, and proved 3rd November 1813.	Three poor women, widows of plasterers, whose husbands were free of the company.	1,000*l.* 3*l.* per cent. consols.	30*l.* per annum.	30*l.* per annum.	In paying three annuities of 10*l.* each by half-yearly payments to three poor plaisterers' widows.	The income of this charity has been applied in the same manner for the preceding ten years, and accounts of the income and expenditure regularly furnished to the Charity Commissioners.
James Ellis	Will dated 17th May 1735 and proved 22nd December 1737.	Poor people belonging to the Plaisterers' Company.	120*l.* consols.	3*l.* 12*s.* per annum.	3*l.* 12*s.* per annum.	The amount has been annually distributed (in lieu of purchasing coals for distribution) among poor widows of plaisterers.	By the will, 120*l* cash was left to be laid out in land, and until so laid out was to be invested in Government securities. The investment in land has never taken place. See also Note above.

PART II.—A.

Constitution and Privileges of Membership.

Return A.—Governing Body.

1. State the present constitution of the governing body of the company, whether such constitution is according to the charter, and if not, in what respects such constitution varies therefrom, and when and how such alteration was made.
2. State the qualifications for membership of the governing body of the company, the time and periods of election, and the qualifications of the voters at elections to the governing body.
3. State the functions of the governing body, and of the different members of the same respectively, and whether the members of the governing body pay any, and what fees or fines on admission thereto, and whether they are paid any, and what salaries or amounts in respect of their services respectively.
4. State the nature of the business which comes before the governing body of the company, the method adopted in transacting it, the times at which the governing body meets for business purposes, the way in which the opinions of the members are taken, and whether the resolutions and decisions of the governing body are published, or are otherwise accessible to any or all, and which of the members of the company.

5. State whether the members of the governing body are liable to suspension, or removal, on any, and what grounds, and by what method such suspension or removal is effected.

6. Has the company any byelaws sanctioned by the Courts of Law or Chancery, or by the Courts of Aldermen or of Common Council, or otherwise? State the effect of such byelaws.

A.—1. The governing body consists of a master and two wardens (an upper and a renter warden) and a court of assistants as directed by the charter.

2. The qualification for membership of the governing body is to be on the livery of the company; one member of the livery is elected by the court of assistants every year in the month of July as renter warden, and after his year of office has expired he is elected on to the court as an assistant.

3. The master presides at all meetings of the court of assistants.

The duties of the upper warden are nominal.

The duties of the renter warden are to receive the rents and income of the company, and to manage its finances.

The court of assistants act and vote in the direction of the company's affairs.

The fee now paid by the master on his election is ten guineas. No fee is payable by the upper warden on election. A fee of twenty-five pounds is paid by the renter warden on his election.

Each member of the court of assistants attending a court receives two pounds.

4. The court receives and inquires into applications for pensions as vacancies arise, and distributes the charities and funds of the company. Elects its officers. Audits the accounts; and exercises a general supervision over the affairs of the company.

The business is brought before the court by the clerk at meetings which are now held five times in the year. The opinions of the members are usually taken by show of hands.

The resolutions are not published, and are not accessible to any but members of the governing body.

5. Any member of the governing body is liable to be removed, deprived, and displaced if he shall misdemean or misbehave himself, or be guilty of any abuse of his place of office. A court must be summoned specially for the purpose, and a majority of the whole court obtained.

6. The rules in force are those of 30th December 1765, referred to in Return E., which were sanctioned by the then Lord Chancellor and the Lord Chief Justices of the King's Bench and Common Pleas, but they have been altered in some respects by subsequent byelaws made by the court of assistants.

These rules provide for the constitution of the company, for the meeting of the courts, for the election of its officers, for their duties and for the security to be given by the renter warden, for the control of the funds under the renter warden, for the custody of the seal, which is not to be used under a penalty but by order of a court specially summoned, for election of officers on death, for the election of an assistant from the livery, should the court be reduced below twenty-seven, for regulating the fees and fines payable by members of the company, for the penalties for non-attendance of a member of the court, for the election of liverymen and stewards, clerk and beadle, for prohibiting change of freedom without consent, for payment of quarterage by all members, for regulating the mode of binding apprentices and their number, and the fees payable on apprenticeship, for powers exerciseable on searches, and the penalties to be inflicted on offenders, and for the mode of recovery of penalties.

PART II.—B.

RETURN B.—Admission to membership.

1. State the qualifications for membership of the company, the several grades of membership of the company, and whether women are admitted to membership.

2. State the several modes in which the freedom of the company may be obtained, the circumstances entitling an applicant to admission under each mode respectively, and the fees payable in respect of admission under each mode respectively.

3. State whether persons exercising any particular trade are required by statute or otherwise to become free of the company. Is there any process by which members of such trade can become members of the company, and is there any process for compelling such persons to procure admission, and are such processes enforced, and to what extent? Is the freedom of the City of London in any, and what way, a condition precedent and subsequent to membership? Are there any members who are not free of the City of London? Do persons exercising any particular trade commonly become members of the company? If so, how many members of such trade are at present members of the company? What is the number of the members of the trade (if any), the name of which is borne by the company, who are members of the company?

4. Are freemen liable to disfranchisement, and if so, for what reasons, and what is the mode of disfranchisement?

5. Is the livery of the company limited or unlimited in number? What are the qualifications for election to the livery, who are the electors thereto, and how do the elections thereto take place, and what fees are payable on election? Are liverymen liable to removal from the livery, and for what reasons?

1. Any person can become free of the company by redemption, patrimony, or servitude.

The grades are "freemen," "liverymen," and "assistants."

Women are not admitted to membership.

2. See last answer.

The fees payable on redemption are 5*l.* 5*s.*

By patrimony or servitude 1*l.* 16*s.* 6*d.*

3. The company are aware of no statute to this effect, but by an Act of the Common Council, dated 19th October 1694, all persons using the trade of a Plaisterer in the City and Liberties were compelled to become free of this company under a penalty.

The freedom of the City of London is not a condition precedent to membership, but generally follows.

The members of the company are not of any particular trade.

About twelve plaisterers are members of the company.

4. No.

5. Unlimited.

The qualification for election to the livery is to be a freeman. The court of assistants elects. Freemen are proposed and seconded by members of the court. The fees now payable are 30*l.* to the court, 1*l.* 1*s.* to the clerk, and 10*s.* 6*d.* to the beadle.

Liverymen are not liable to be removed.

PART II.—C.

RETURN C.—Number of members.

State (1) the present number of freemen, (2) the present number of the livery, (3) the present number of other members, (4) the number of admissions to the freedom by each mode respectively, and (5) the number of calls to the livery which have respectively taken place during each of the last preceding 10 years.

1. About 25 freemen.
2 & 3. 60 liverymen, of whom 30 are members of the court of assistants.
4. The following are the admissions.

PART II.—D.

RETURN D.—(1.) State the number or apprentices bound at the Company's Hall, or otherwise under the auspices of the company during each of the last ten years. (2.) State how many have been bound during each of the last ten years to members following the trade (if any), the name of which is borne by the company. (3.) In what cases and to what extent have the fees or premiums of such apprentice been paid by the company?

Only one apprentice has been bound under the auspices of the company during the last ten years, which was in 1877.

PART II.—E.

RETURN E.—Profits and privileges.

1. State with fulness what are the advantages, pecuniary or otherwise, incident to the position of a member of the company in each grade of membership, as (1) a freeman, (2) a liveryman, (3) master, warden, or otherwise a member of the governing body.
2. State the sums paid on an average annually for the preceding ten years by the company to the members, according to the grades of membership mentioned above, and of what such sums consisted, whether (1) fees, and of what nature, (2) pensions, or (3) other payments, specifying the nature of the same respectively.
3. What circumstances are in practice held to constitute a claim to a pension or donation? State the number of present pensioners and donees respectively, and the amounts paid to them as such respectively. How many pensioners and donees are connected with the trade (if any), the name of which is borne by the company?
4. (1) What is the average standing of a member when he becomes a member of the governing body, and (2) what is the average time for which a member continues on the governing body?
5. Does the company carry on any, and what trade or manufacture with which its title is directly or indirectly connected? If so, what is the capital and from what sources is it derived, and how are the profits (if any), divided or dealt with?

1. A freeman has no pecuniary advantage other than he is eligible to be elected to a pension.
A liveryman has the same advantage, and in addition has the privilege of dining with the court once a year.
The master, wardens, and assistants receive a fee, as before stated, of 2*l.* for each court they attend.
2. To the court of assistants including the master and wardens, about 220*l.* per annum for attendance fees.
To the liverymen and freemen for pensions and donations, about 100*l.* per annum in addition to the charities referred to in Return I.
3. The pensioners must not be under the age of 55, and they and the donees must be in distressed circumstances.
There are 10 pensioners. The donees vary.
Most of the pensioners are widows of poor freemen; about half are connected with the plaistering trade.
4. (1) about 10 years.
(2) until his death.
5. No.

PART III.—Officers and Servants.

RETURN A.—A list of the officers of the company, with a statement of the duties of each, the amount of his salary and emoluments, and whether or not he is a member of the company.

RETURN B.—A list of the servants of the company, with a statement of the duties of each, and of the amounts of their wages and other emoluments.

RETURN C.—A statement as to the mode in which the officers and servants of the Company are respectively appointed.

A. The only officers are a clerk and beadle. The former receives a salary of 40*l.* per annum and certain small fees payable on admission and election of members.
His duties consist in summoning and attending the courts of the company, keeping the minutes and books, and conducting the correspondence of the company.

The present clerk is not a member of the company.
The latter receives a salary of 20*l.* and certain small fees, payable on admission of members.
He attends the courts of the company, and also at the Guildhall at elections to identify members.

B. No servants.

C. The clerk and beadle are annually elected by the court of assistants.

PART IV.—RETURN F.

RETURN F.—(1.) The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them what has been the amount of the increase or decrease, from year to year, of the company's income during the last 10 years, and whether there is reason to expect any increase or decrease during the next 10 years, together with a statement of the reasons for such expectation.

RETURN F.—(2.) The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them whether there is reason to expect any permanent increase or decrease in value in any of the estates or properties of the company, and if so, to what extent, together with a statement of the reasons for such expectation.

(1.)—Practically there has been no material increase or decrease, and the company has no reason to expect any material increase or decrease.
(2.)—The company has no reason to expect any increase or decrease in the value of the property.

PART IV.—RETURN G.

RETURN G.—The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them—

1. What is the system of management of the company's estates and property?
2. In what way, and by whom, the several receipts and payments are taken and made, and under what control?
3. In what way the company's accounts are audited?
4. Whether the company's accounts are published, or are accessible to all or any, and which of the members of the company?

1 & 2.—The receipts and payments are taken and made by the renter warden and clerk.
3.—By a committee of six members of the court.
4.—The accounts are not published, and are accessible only to members of the court.

PART IV.—RETURN H.

RETURN H.—A detailed statement of the income from all sources of the company during each of the preceding 10 years, a detailed statement of the company's expenditure during each of such 10 years, and a detailed statement of the assets and liabilities of the company at the end of each of the last 10 years.

The following is a detailed statement of the income and expenditure of the company for the financial year ending July 25, 1878, and may be taken to be a fair specimen of the accounts as audited for the last 10 years. The house referred to therein as 28, Minories, has been recently sold to the Metropolitan Railway Company, and the purchase money received (1,540*l.*) invested in consols.

PART IV.—RETURN K.

Position in relation to Universities.

RETURN K.—Has the company any relations with the Universities, or with any of the colleges in them? State the nature and extent of such relations. Has the company any scholarships or exhibitions tenable at any of the Universities in its gift? Give a list of such scholarships or exhibitions, with their respective values, and the periods for which they are respectively tenable; and state how the same are awarded, whether the competition is limited to relations of members, or whether persons so related have any preference.

The Company has no return to make under this head.

PART IV.—RETURN L.

Church Patronage.

RETURN L.

1. Are there any ecclesiastical benefices in the gift of the company?
2. Give a list of such benefices, stating—
   a. The county where situated.
   b. The name of the parish or place.
   c. The net annual value of such benefice, so near as it can be given, together with any other particulars affecting the value present or prospective of such benefice.
3. Has the Company granted during the last 10 years any augmentations of income to the incumbents of such benefices; and, if so, to what extent, and out of what funds? Has the company, during such 10 years, built or contributed, and to what extent, to the building of any, and what, churches, or chapels, and where situated?

The Company has no return to make under this head.

PART IV.—RETURN M.

General and Technical Education.

RETURN M.

A statement as to whether the company does anything to subsidize or encourage education, whether general or technical, and a return of the means (if any), so employed, and of the amount expended on such objects during each of the last preceding 10 years.

The company has for the past 16 years, through the Science and Art Department, South Kensington, offered and distributed prizes, amounting to 25*l.* per annum, to art workmen in connexion with the trade from which the company takes its name, and since the year 1873 has expended 15*l.* per annum in photographs and casts of the prize models for distribution among several of the schools of art.

The company since 1877 has subscribed 52*l.* 10*s.* per annum to the City and Guilds of London Institute, for the advancement of technical education.

PART V.—REFORM.

PART V.—REFORM.

The Commissioners, being bound to report to Her Majesty "what measures (if any), are, in their "judgment, expedient and necessary for improving or altering the constitution of the companies, or the "appropriation or administration of the property or revenues thereof," respectively invite the attention of the officers of the companies to this part of the Commission.

The Commissioners will be very glad to receive and consider any suggestions respecting this part of the Commission with which the officers of the companies may do the Commissioners the honour of favouring them.

The master and wardens have no suggestion to offer under this head, as in their judgment the constitution of the company does not require amendment.

APPENDIX A.

This Company made no communication to the Commission of 1834. From a statement made by two members to the Commission it appeared that the rental of the Hall, mentioned below, was, in 1837, 100*l.*, and that the permanent income of the Company then fell short of 200*l.* a year.

APPENDIX B.

City of London Livery Companies' Commission,
2, Victoria Street, Westminster, S.W.,
15 February 1882.

SIR,

The Commissioners instruct me to thank on their behalf the Court and Officers of the Worshipful Company of Plaisterers for the careful returns to their enquiries with which that Company has favoured them, and also instruct me to ask whether the Company desires to appoint a representative or representatives to give evidence before the Commissioners and to confer with them with respect to the matters mentioned in Her Majesty's Commission.

I am also to inform the Court of the Worshipful Company of Plaisterers that I have been directed to examine the returns of the Company and to point out to the Clerk any portions of them which may seem to require some little additional explanation.

I am also to state that the Commissioners will have the pleasure of presenting each member of the Court and the Clerk of the Company with a printed copy of the returns with which the Company has favoured the Commissioners.

I am, Sir,
Your obedient servant,
H. D. WARR,
Secretary.

The Clerk to
The Worshipful Company of Plaisterers.

Plaisterers,
22, Bedford Row, W.C.,
6th April 1882.

DEAR SIR,

I am requested by the Court of the Plaisterers' Company to acknowledge the receipt of your favour of the 15th February last, and in reply to state that Mr. Spurling, of No. 5, Copthal Court, has been appointed to act as the representative of the Company in the event of the Commissioners requiring evidence to be given before them.

I am also desired to thank you for the offer to present each member of the Court with a printed copy of the Returns, which they will be pleased to accept. The number required will be 31.

Yours, &c.,
(Signed) H. MOTT.

PLAYING CARD MAKERS' COMPANY.

The Returns were made subject to the protest contained in the Return to Part V. below.

PART I.—FOUNDATION AND OBJECT.

A to H.

RETURN A.—A statement of the date, ascertained or probable, of the foundation of the company, and of the circumstances, so far as they can be discovered from its documents of foundation or archives, in which the company had its origin.

RETURN B.—A list of the charters, charters of inspeximus, and other instruments of a similar nature, whether originals or copies, which have been at any time in the possession of the company, together with an abstract of the purport of each, regard being specially had to any evidence which it may contain as to the object of the foundation of the company.

RETURN C.—A list of any trust deeds "founding, regulating, or affecting" the company, with the date of each, the names of the parties thereto, and an abstract of the purport of each.

RETURN D.—A list, with dates, of any "decrees of court," whether of the Courts of Common Law or of Chancery, or of any acts of the Court of Aldermen or of the Court of Common Council, "regulating or affecting" the company, with a statement of the effect of each decision.

RETURN E.—A list of any other documents, not included in the descriptions in the preceding returns, which "found, regulate, or affect" the company, with dates, and an abstract of the effect of each.

RETURN F.—A concise history of the company from the time of its foundation to the present day, with special reference to the inquiry contained in the commission as to "the objects for which the company "was founded," and "how far those objects are now being carried into effect."

RETURN G.—Has the company a licence in mortmain? When was such licence granted (referring to the document by description)? What is its extent, and to what extent it is now unexhausted?

RETURN H.—Is there vested in the company, and how, whether by charter, statute, order of the Court of Aldermen, act of Common Council, or otherwise, any right of exercising superintendence over, or any duty or discretion to encourage in any way, any and what art, trade, or business? State the nature and local limits of such control. In what manner and to what extent is such control now exercised? If such control is not now exercised, state the circumstances under which its exercise has fallen into desuetude.

A.—The company was founded and had its origin by Royal Charter, dated 22nd October 1628. The company has no other information respecting the circumstances in which it had its origin.

B.—The only documents of which there is any record are the charter above mentioned of the 4th Charles II., and byelaws allowed under date 19th February 1630, by Lord Coventry, Keeper of the Great Seal, and the Chief Justices of the Pleas and Common Pleas, pursuant to the Statute 19th Henry VII.

The charter grants that the company shall be governed by a master, 2 wardens, and 16 assistants. The assistants are elected for life, or until removal by the governing body for just and reasonable cause. For the future election of these officers the charter provides that yearly on St. Andrew's Day, or within two days thereafter, the master, wardens, and assistants for the time being shall elect and choose one of the wardens or assistants to be the master for the ensuing year, and then the two wardens from the assistants for the year next ensuing. Any vacancy among the assistants is to be filled up by the master, wardens, and assistants out of the commonalty. The object of the company is described by the charter as having its origin in the deceits and abuses practised by the inexpert in the art and trade of making of playing cards, and by the continued importation of foreign cards into this country, and the public selling of the same without restraint, whereby many persons engaged in it had become unable to maintain themselves and families, and forced to give over their trade and live idly without employment.

C., D., and E.—None.

F.—The company does not possess any materials from which to compile an answer to this return. The powers and privileges conferred by the charter appear to have fallen into abeyance for very many years, but there is no record giving the precise period.

G.—The charter contains a licence to hold lands, but it has never been acted under.

H.—The charter confers powers for making laws, ordinances, and orders for the good order, rule, and government of the company, and of all apprentices and servants and all others using or exercising, or that shall use and exercise the trade or mistery within the City of London and within a distance of 10 miles any way from it; to impose reasonable pains, punishments, and penalties, by fines or amerciaments, upon all who shall break such laws, ordinances, and orders, and the same fines and amerciaments to levy by distress, or otherwise, and take the same to the use of the company. Within the limits aforesaid the master, wardens, and assistants, and their successors for the time being are for ever thereafter from time to time to have, hold, and enjoy the pre-eminence, jurisdiction, power, and authority to supervise, rule, govern, and correct the mistery and manufacture of making of playing cards, and of all and singular the freemen of the said mistery, and of all others using the trade, and their apprentices and servants, and to punish all offenders and offences, and to reform all disorders and abuses, by fine, amerciament, or otherwise, according to the laws of the realm. No person other than a freeman of the company was to be permitted to use or exercise the trade without having first served apprenticeship for seven years, and no cards to be sold unless previously sealed by the king's officer upon pain of forfeiture.

The exercise of these powers has been in abeyance for very many years, but there are no records to show the exact period.

PART I.—I.

Return I.—A list of the charities, eleemosynary, educational, or otherwise, which are under the management of the company, stating in each case the name of the founder, the date and nature of the benefaction, its original and its present value, and the purposes to which the funds have been applied for each of the last preceding ten years.

None.

PART II.—A.

Constitution and Privileges of Membership.

Return A.—Governing Body.

1. State the present constitution of the governing body of the company, whether such constitution is according to the charter, and if not, in what respects such constitution varies therefrom, and when and how such alteration was made.
2. State the qualifications for membership of the governing body of the company, the time and periods of election, and the qualifications of the voters at elections to the governing body.
3. State the functions of the governing body, and of the different members of the same respectively, and whether the members of the governing body pay any and what fees or fines on admission thereto, and whether they are paid any and what salaries or amounts in respect of their services respectively.
4. State the nature of the business which comes before the governing body of the company, the method adopted in transacting it, the times at which the governing body meets for business purposes, the way in which the opinions of the members are taken, and whether the resolutions and decisions of the governing body are published, or are otherwise accessible to any or all, and which of the members of the company.
5. State whether the members of the governing body are liable to suspension, or removal, on any and what grounds, and by what method such suspension or removal is effected.
6. Has the company any byelaws sanctioned by the Courts of Law or Chancery, or by the Courts of Aldermen, or of Common Council, or otherwise? State the effect of such byelaws.

1. The governing body consists of the master, wardens, and assistants as provided by the charter. There has not been any alteration in the constitution of it.

2. The master and wardens are elected annually on St. Andrew's Day by the assistants, and vacancies among the assistants are filled up as they arise by the assistants from the ranks of the livery. No one can be elected an assistant unless a liveryman.

3. Having no special trade duties to perform, the functions of the master consist in presiding over the quarterly and other meetings of the governing body, the wardens are assistants to the master, and succeed to that office by rotation. A member when elected on the court of assistants pays a fine or fee of 3*l.* 3*s.* 0*d.* on admission. No member of the governing body receives any salary or remuneration for his services.

4. Under the circumstances stated the business transacted by the governing body is principally in relation to the internal affairs of the company of the ordinary character, and is transacted in the usual way of all such meetings. The opinion of the governing body is taken by show of hands in the usual way. The publication of the resolutions depends on the nature of the question before them whether it is of a public character or affecting only their own concerns. No application has ever been made by any member of the company for information as to the proceedings of the governing body, and therefore the question has never arisen whether the proceedings would be accessible to any. There is no doubt any member would be furnished with all proper information if required.

5. They are removable for just and sufficient grounds in the discretion of the governing body, and such removal would be effected by the resolution of the majority of the members present.

6. This question is already answered in Return D., Part I.

Part II.—B.

Return B.—Admission to Membership.

1. State the qualifications for membership of the company, the several grades of membership of the company, and whether women are admitted to membership.
2. State the several modes in which the freedom of the company may be obtained, the circumstances entitling an applicant to admission under each mode respectively, and the fees payable in respect of admission under each mode respectively.
3. State whether persons exercising any particular trade are required by statute or otherwise to become free of the company. Is there any process by which members of such trade can become members of the company, and is there any process for compelling such persons to procure admission, and are such processes enforced, and to what extent? Is the freedom of the City of London in any and what way a condition precedent or subsequent to membership? Are there any members who are not free of the City of London? Do persons exercising any particular trade commonly become members of the company? If so, how many members of such trade are at present members of the company? What is the number of the members of the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the company, who are members of the company?
4. Are freemen liable to disfranchisement, and if so, for what reasons, and what is the mode of disfranchisement?

5. Is the livery of the company limited or unlimited in number? What are the qualifications for election to the livery, who are the electors thereto, and how do the elections thereto take place, and what fees are payable on election? Are liverymen liable to removal from the livery, and for what reasons?

1. The qualification for membership of the company is that the applicant must be a freeman of the City of London, and be proposed to and approved by the governing body for admission to the livery. Women are not admitted to membership.

2. The freedom of the company may be obtained by patrimony, by servitude, or by taking up the same by redemption. The fee payable, if admitted by patrimony, is 2*l*. 12*s*., if by servitude is 2*l*. 12*s*., and if by redemption is 5*l*. 8*s*. The City of London takes a fee of 5*s*. on each admission to freedom.

3. As already explained in Return H., Part I., the charter requires all persons engaged in the cardmaking trade to become free of the company, and it prescribes the penalties in default, but the matter has fallen into abeyance. In the time of some present members of the governing body several of the principal members of the trade were assistants, but there are none at present.

4. Cannot say.

5. The livery is limited to 100. The qualification for election on the livery is stated in Return B 1, Part 2, as also the mode of election, and who are the electors. The fine on election is 15*l*. 15*s*. 0*d*.

PART II.—C.

Return C.—Number of Members.

State (1) the present number of freemen, (2) the present number of the livery, (3) the present number of other members, (4) the number of admissions to the freedom by each mode respectively, and (5) the number of calls to the livery which have respectively taken place during each of the last preceding ten years.

1. The number of freemen is one.

2. The present number of the livery is 23.

3. There are no other members.

4. All but four (who were admitted by patrimony) of the present members have been admitted by taking up their freedom by redemption.

5. In 1870 the number called to the livery was - None.
„ 1871 „ „ „ - None.
„ 1872 „ „ „ - None.
„ 1873 „ „ „ - Two.
„ 1874 „ „ „ - Ten.
„ 1875 „ „ „ - Four.
„ 1876 „ „ „ - None.
„ 1877 „ „ „ - None.
„ 1878 „ „ „ - One.
„ 1879 „ „ „ - One.

PART II.—D.

Return D.—(1) State the number of apprentices bound at the Company's Hall, or otherwise under the auspices of the company during each of the last ten years. (2) State how many have been bound during each of the last ten years to members following the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the company. (3) In what cases and to what extent have the fees or premiums of such apprentices been paid by the company?

None.

PART II.—E.

Return E.—Profits and Privileges.

1. State with fullness what are the advantages, pecuniary or otherwise, incident to the position of a member of the company in each grade of membership, as (1) a freeman, (2) a liveryman, (3) master, warden, or otherwise a member of the governing body.

2. State the sums paid on an average annually for the preceding ten years by the company to the members according to the grades of membership mentioned above, and of what such sums consisted, whether (1) fees, and of what nature, (2) pensions, or (3) other payments, specifying the nature of the same respectively.

3. What circumstances are in practice held to constitute a claim to a pension or donation? State the number of present pensioners and donees respectively, and the amounts paid to them as such respectively. How many pensioners and donees are connected with the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the company?

4. (1) What is the average standing of a member when he becomes a member of the governing body, and (2) what is the average time for which a member continues on the governing body?

5. Does the company carry on any and what trade or manufacture with which its title is directly or indirectly connected? If so, what is the capital and from what sources is it derived, and how are the profits (if any) divided or dealt with?

1. There are no pecuniary advantages whatever attached to the position of a member of the company in any grade; on the contrary it entails an expense. The only substantial advantage is the Parliamentary and Corporation franchise.

2. None, except comparatively small occasional donations to decayed members or the families of deceased members.

3. This return does not apply to the circumstances of the company.

4. This depends on such a variety of circumstances that it is difficult if not impossible to answer the question.

5. No.

PLAYING CARD MAKERS' COMPANY—continued.

PART III.—OFFICERS AND SERVANTS.

A, B, and C.

RETURN A.—A list of the officers of the company, with a statement of the duties of each, the amount of his salary and emoluments, and whether or not he is a member of the company.

RETURN B.—A list of the servants of the company, with a statement of the duties of each, and of the amounts of their wages and other emoluments.

RETURN C.—A statement as to the mode in which the officers and servants of the company are respectively appointed.

A. The clerk is the only officer, and his duties may be best explained by stating that in the circumstances of this company they are the same as are usually performed by a secretary. The present clerk is not a member of the company. The amount of salary is nominal.

B. None.

C. The only officer is the clerk, who is elected by the court of assistants.

PART IV.—A.—LANDED PROPERTY.

A. 1 to A. 14. The company do not possess any real or leasehold estates of any tenure or description.

PART IV.—B.

RETURN B. 1.—List of moneys belonging to the Makers of Playing Cards Company invested in Government or other stocks, shares, funds, or securities.

None.

B. 2. A return of the balance of moneys in the hands of the company unappropriated in their accounts on the 31st December in each of the last preceding ten years.

B. 3. A return of the estimated value of the plate, pictures, furniture, and other property at present on the premises of the company, or in their possession elsewhere.

No other property is possessed by this company of any description save a sum of 500*l.* invested in India Government Stock in the names of the treasurer and the two senior members of the court. It has entirely originated from the fines and payments contributed by the members of the court and livery.

PART IV.—E.

RETURN E.—Internal sources of Income.

A list of the annual amounts received in each of the last 10 years in respect of (1.) fees paid on admission to the freedom of the company, specifying the amounts paid in respect of each mode of admission thereto; (2.) fines or fees paid on admission to the livery of the company; (3.) fines or fees paid by members on coming on the court of the company; (4.) fines or fees paid on promotion to the offices of warden, &c.; (5.) any other internal sources of income, specifying the same.

5. Quarterage	—	—	—	0 8 0	2 4 0	0 16 0	—	—	0 4 0	0 4 0

PART IV.—F.

RETURN F.—(1.) The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them what has been the amount of the increase or decrease, from year to year, of the company's income during the last 10 years, and whether there is reason to expect any increase or decrease during the next 10 years, together with a statement of the reasons for such expectation.

RETURN F.—(2.) The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them whether there is reason to expect any permanent increase or decrease in value in any of the estates or properties of the company, and if so, to what extent, together with a statement for the reasons for such expectation.

F. 1. For the reasons stated in Return B. this Return is inapplicable to this company.
The company do not anticipate any increase or decrease save what may arise from the fees by the admission of new members. But an actual increase has taken place during the last twelve months.

F. 2. This return does not apply to this company.

PART IV.—G.

Return G.—The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them—

1. What is the system of management of the company's estates and property?
2. In what way, and by whom, the several receipts and payments are taken and made, and under what control?
3. In what way the company's accounts are audited?
4. Whether the company's accounts are published, or are accessible to all or any, and which, of the members of the company?

1 and 2. This return is not applicable to this company.

3. The company's accounts are audited by a committee appointed by the court.

PART IV.—H.

Return H.—A detailed statement of the income from all sources of the company during each of the preceding 10 years, a detailed statement of the company's expenditure during each of such 10 years, and a detailed statement of the assets and liabilities of the company at the end of each of the last 10 years.

This return is not applicable to this company.

Part V.—Reform.

The Commissioners, being bound to report to Her Majesty "what measures (if any) are, in their "judgment, expedient and necessary for improving or altering the constitution of the companies, or the "appropriation or administration of the property or revenues thereof," respectively invite the attention of the officers of the companies to this part of the Commission.

The Commissioners will be very glad to receive and consider any suggestions respecting this part of the Commission with which the officers of the companies may do the Commissioners the honour of favouring them.

In responding to this invitation, in reference to its own case the company consider that any reform could not do otherwise than inflict serious injury upon an institution which though possessing but small means is yet the instrument of great indirect advantage to the State and to individuals. And this company respectfully but decidedly objects to any interference with the funds belonging to it, on the ground that the same are strictly private property, and unclothed with any public trust or obligation.

APPENDIX A.

The Company gave full information to the Municipal Commissioners appointed in 1834. Their property at the time of the inquiry consisted of 700*l.* consols.

PLUMBERS' COMPANY.

The Returns were accompanied by a statement that, except in the matter of charitable trusts, the Company "respectfully protest against any claim of the Commissioners to interfere with the constitution or privileges of "the Company."

PART I.—FOUNDATION AND OBJECT.

A to H.

RETURN A.—A statement of the date, ascertained or probable, of the foundation of the Company, and of the circumstances, so far as they can be discovered from its documents of foundation or archives, in which the Company had its origin.

RETURN B.—A list of the charters, charters of inspeximus, and other instruments of a similar nature, whether originals or copies, which have been at any time in the possession of the Company, together with an abstract of the purport of each, regard being specially had to any evidence which it may contain as to the object of the foundation of the Company.

RETURN C.—A list of any trust deeds "founding, regulating, or affecting" the Company, with the date of each, the names of the parties thereto, and an abstract of the purport of each.

RETURN D.—A list with dates of any "decrees of Court," whether of the Courts of Common Law or of Chancery, or of any acts of the Court of Aldermen or of the Court of Common Council, "regulating or affecting" the Company, with a statement of the effect of each decision.

RETURN E.—A list of any other documents, not included in the descriptions in the preceding returns, which "found, regulate, or affect" the Company, with dates and an abstract of the effect of each.

RETURN F.—A concise history of the Company, from the time of its foundation to the present day, with special reference to the inquiry contained in the Commission as to "the objects for which the Company was founded," and "how far those objects are now being carried into effect."

RETURN G.—Has the Company a licence in mortmain? When was such licence granted (referring to the document by description)? What is its extent, and to what extent is it now unexhausted?

RETURN H.—Is there vested in the Company and how, whether by charter, statute, order of the Court of Aldermen, act of Common Council, or otherwise, any right of exercising superintendence over, or any duty or discretion to encourage in any way, any or what art, trade, or business? State the nature and local limits of such control. In what manner and to what extent is such control now exercised? If such control is not now exercised, state the circumstances under which its exercise has fallen into desuetude.

A.—The Company had existence as a body from a very early period, as shown by ordinances passed in the reign of King Edward III. 1365, previously to receiving their charter in the reign of King James I., 1611.

B.—The charter of the Company mentioned in the preceding return is believed to be the only charter in existence, and by it they were granted and declared to be for ever one body, corporate and politic, in deed, fact, and name, by the name of the "Master, Wardens, and Commonalty of the "Freemen of the Mystery of Plumbing of the City of Lon-"don," for the better ordering, rule, and government of the men of the mystery and Company aforesaid, and of all those who then exercised and used or thereafter should exercise and use the art and mystery of plumbing, or the materials, works, merchandizes, or things whatsoever to the said mystery relating, and for the utility, advantage, and relief of the good and honest, and for the terror and correction of the evil, deceitful, and dishonest. And that the mystery and their successors were then and for all time to come should be persons able and in law capable to have, purchase, receive and possess manors, messuages, lands, tenements, liberties, privileges, jurisdictions, franchises, and hereditaments whatsoever of what kind, nature, or species whatsoever they might be, to them and their successors in fee and perpetuity, or for term of year or years, or otherwise in any other manner. And also goods and chattels whatsoever and other things of what name, nature, quality, or species soever they may be. And also to give, grant, demise, alienate, assign, and dispose of the manors, messuages, lands, tenements, and hereditaments. And by the name aforesaid to do and execute all and singular other deeds and things. And also that the said mystery should and might be able to plead and be impleaded, and to answer and be answered, to defend and to be defended, in whatsoever courts and places, and before whatsoever judge and justices and other persons and offices of him or of his heirs or successors.

And also that the said mystery should have for ever a common seal to serve for the common business of them, their heirs and successors. And further, that it should be lawful for them, their heirs and successors to break, change, and make anew the said seal at their pleasure.

And also that one of the mystery should be elected as master or governor of it in manner thereinafter mentioned.

And also in like manner to elect further two other members of the mystery to be named wardens of the same.

And for such master and wardens so elected, together with the freemen of it, to retain and appoint a certain council house within the said City and the liberties thereof. And also that the master, wardens, and freemen should have full and absolute power and authority to frame, constitute, ordain, and make from time to time whatsoever reasonable laws, statutes, decrees, ordinances, and constitutions in writing which to them should seem good, wholesome, useful, honest, and necessary for the good rule and governance of the said mystery and all other persons exercising the art or trade of the said mystery in the said City and the precincts and suburbs thereof. And that such laws and statutes, &c. having been duly made, the said master, wardens, and freemen should be able to make, limit, and provide such and the like pains, punishments, and penalties by corporal punishment, or by fines, or amerciaments, or by either of them, against and upon all delinquents against such laws, rights, statutes, &c. And to enforce and receive the same without let or hindrance from the king, his heirs and successors for ever. And also that they might have, make, and exercise the superior scrutiny, correction, and government of all and singular the freemen of the mystery, as also all other persons using or exercising the art or mystery in the limits aforesaid, and of their servants and apprentices. And also the supervision, scrutiny, correction, reformation, emendation, government, the assaye, touch, and the trial of all and singular workings, works, weights, beams and scales, lead, solder, materials, wares, matters, merchandizes, and of all things whatsoever touching or concerning the aforesaid mystery in the limits aforesaid. And also to seize, take, and place in safe custody such materials, &c. aforesaid from time to time so found deceptive, false, insufficient, unapproved and unlawful, there to remain until it should be determined thereof according to the laws of the realm of England. And further also that it should not be lawful for any person or persons of the art and mystery, or any other person or persons whomsoever using or who might use the art and mystery to make work or expose for sale any solder or leaden weights within the limits aforesaid or within three miles thereof, unless the same be first proved and tried by the master and wardens whether they are good, sufficient, true, and lawful according to the laws of the realm and the customs of the City or not. And upon such trial to impress or mark with the impression, image, or sign of St. Michael the Archangel upon the same before their use or employ.

C.—The Company have not any.

D.—To the Company's knowledge there are not any.

E.—The Company are not aware of any.

F.—The objects of this Company as set forth in the charter may be generally stated to be to exercise a supervision of the interests and practice of the art and mystery of plumbing in the City of London and its suburbs, and the City of Westminster and its suburbs, and within three miles compass thereof. To secure good workmanship and the employment of the best materials in the trade, and to enforce the use of proper weights and measures in transactions of commerce. In the course of time, and by the effect of legislative changes, and substitution of iron and other metals for lead in the manufacture of weights and measures, the exercise of these functions may be said to have fallen into desuetude, but with this limited exception the Company have always devoted their best energies to discharge the other and far more important duties devolving upon them by the charter, i.e., regulating the price of lead, also the purity and commercial value of the solder, also the character of workman employed in this important branch of the building trade, and by binding apprentice. In recent years the Company has taken the lead in the important movements which have recently taken place in technical education and the progress of sanitary service has demonstrated the important relations which the art of plumbing holds to the health, comfort, and social elevation of the people. In furtherance of those objects the Company have agreed to subscribe out of their limited revenue an annual grant of 50*l.* to the City of London Guilds Institute, and with the same view it has made arrangements for conferring the freedom of the Company on those workmen who obtain first class prizes from the above institute, the examiner for the plumbing department of which the Company are happy to acknowledge is Mr. George Shaw, a late member of the Company, and one of the acting members of the governing body.

G.—The charter contains the Company's licence in mortmain: they are not aware of any other.

H.—The Company respectfully refer to the preceding Return F in reply to this inquiry.

PART II.—A.

CONSTITUTION AND PRIVILEGES OF MEMBERSHIP.

RETURN A.—Governing Body.

1. State the present constitution of the governing body of the Company, whether such constitution is according to the charter, and if not, in what respects such constitution varies therefrom, and when and how such alteration was made.

2. State the qualifications for membership of the governing body of the Company, the time and periods of election, and the qualifications of the voters at elections to the governing body.

3. State the functions of the governing body, and of the different members of the same respectively, and whether the members of the governing body pay any and what fees or fines on admission thereto, and whether they are paid any and what salaries or amounts in respect of their services respectively.

4. State the nature of the business which comes before the governing body of the Company, the method adopted in transacting it, the times at which the governing body meets for business purposes, the way in which the opinions of the members are taken, and whether the resolutions and decisions of the governing body are published, or are otherwise accessible to any or all, and which of the members of the Company.

5. State whether the members of the governing body are liable to suspension, or removal, on any and what grounds, and by what method such suspension or removal is effected.

6. Has the Company any byelaws sanctioned by the Courts of Law or Chancery, or by the Courts of Aldermen or of Common Council, or otherwise. State the effect of such byelaws.

1. The constitution of the governing body is at present the master, two wardens, and six other members of the commonalty.

2. The qualification for membership of the governing body is to be a freeman and liveryman, and to have served or compounded by fine for the office of steward. The time of election is as stated in the charter, as also the qualification of the voters.

3. (1 & 2) The functions of the governing body and those of its different members are those as described in the charter as stated in Part I.

(3.) Each member of the governing body in addition to the fees which they have paid on being admitted to the freedom and afterwards to the livery, and on serving or fining to be excused serving the office of steward, and the quarterage of 1*s.* 8*d.*, pays on admission to the governing body a fee of 16*l.* No salaries are paid to any of the governing body, but each member thereof on attending any court and remaining thereat receives a fee of three guineas in lieu of every other privilege.

4. The nature of the business transacted by the governing body is that which is referred to in the charter.

The method adopted in the transactions before the governing body is first to read the minutes of the previous meeting to ascertain if they be correctly entered, if so, the master signs his name at the end. All matters before the governing body are proceeded with in the order in which they have been received, all documents referring thereto being read aloud and the matters severally discussed, decisions being taken thereon by show of hands (except at elections for members of the governing body, or for master, or wardens, or other officers, when it is by ballot). Minutes are taken of the proceedings by the clerk and by him entered and preserved. They are accessible to every member of the governing body, and also to the commonalty on application to the said body, but beyond that they are not published. The governing body meets eight several times in the year, in the daytime, at stated dates, and at other times when necessary. There are also committees which meet from time to time as urgency may require for the furtherance of business referred to them by the governing body, the members of the said committees receiving no fees.

5. Members of the governing body are liable to removal for improper conduct.

The removal is effected by following the rules as set forth in the Company's byelaws.

6. The Company have byelaws dated 11th November 1812, perused, read, examined, and approved by Thomas,

Lord Ellesmere, Lord Chancellor of England; Robert, Earl of Salisbury, Lord Treasurer of England; Sir Thomas Flemynge, Knight, Chief Justice of the Pleas before His Majesty to be then holden; and Sir Edward Coke, Knight, Chief Justice of His Highness' Court of Common Pleas, under and by virtue of the Act of Parliament holden at Westminster 25th day of January in the 19th year of Henry VII.

The effect of the byelaws is to set forth the regulation of the proceedings of the Company, those as to the election of masters, wardens, freemen, liverymen, stewards, auditors, and for binding apprentices and in other respects the governing of the commonalty and the other objects referred to in the charter.

Besides the above referred to the Company have no others.

PART II.—B.

RETURN B.—Admission to Membership.

1. State the qualifications for membership of the Company, the several grades of membership of the Company, and whether women are admitted to membership.
2. State the several modes in which the freedom of the Company may be obtained, the circumstances entitling an applicant to admission under each mode respectively, and the fees payable in respect of admission under each mode respectively.
3. State whether persons exercising any particular trade are required by statute or otherwise to become free of the Company. Is there any process by which members of such trade can become members of the Company, and is there any process for compelling such persons to procure admission, and are such processes enforced, and to what extent? Is the freedom of the City of London in any and what way a condition precedent or subsequent to membership? Are there any members who are not free of the City of London? Do persons exercising any particular trade commonly become members of the Company? If so, how many members of such trade are at present members of the Company? What is the number of the members of the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the Company, who are members of the Company?
4. Are freemen liable to disfranchisement, and if so, for what reasons, and what is the mode of disfranchisement?
5. Is the livery of the Company limited or unlimited in number? What are the qualifications for election to the livery, who are the electors thereto, and how do the elections thereto take place, and what fees are payable on election? Are liverymen liable to removal from the livery, and for what reasons?

1. The qualification for membership is "by birthright," "by apprenticeship," and "by purchase."

The several grades of membership are "freemen out of which the livery is elected, and from the livery the governing body are elected. Women are eligible to the freedom.

In addition to the above the attention of the Commissioners is requested to the statement herein-after set forth as to the admission of working plumbers to the freedom of the Company.

2. The preceding answer also applies to this question, and the fees payable in respect of admission under each method respectively are as follows:—

	£	s.	d.	£	s.	d.

3. Persons exercising any particular trade are as far as the Company have knowledge not yet required by statute or otherwise to become free of the Company.

Members of the trade and persons born free or who have served an apprenticeship as before is stated, and desirous of becoming freemen, can do so by application to the governing body on proving that he is entitled to the same, and should he be refused there is no special process other than by the ordinary legal proceedings.

The Company have no instance of any such proceedings having been enforced.

The freedom of the City of London is in no way a condition precedent or subsequent to membership.

The Company are unable to state whether all its members are free of the City, but consider it may be certified that some are not. It is of no importance to the Company whether its members be free of the City or not.

The Company are not aware of persons exercising any particular trade becoming members.

The number of the members of the Company having relation to the mystery of the same are more than one half.

4. Freemen are liable to disfranchisement for felony, not otherwise.

The livery is unlimited.

The qualification for election to the livery is being a freeman of the Company and the election is by the governing body.

The elections take place on nomination at a Court of Assistants by ballot.

The fees on election are:—

	£	s.	d.	£	s.	d.

Liverymen are liable to be removed for misconduct.

PART II.—C.

RETURN C.—Number of members.

State (1) The present number of freemen. (2) The present number of the livery. (3) The present number of other members. (4) The number of admissions to the freedom by each mode respectively; and (5) The number of calls to livery which have respectively taken place during each of the last preceding ten years.

(1.) The present number of freemen is believed to be about 50.
(2.) The present number of the livery is 50.
(3.) The present number of other members, none.
(4.) The number of admissions to the freedom by each method respectively during the last ten years were as follows, viz.:—
1870, one by patrimony; 1871, nil.; 1872, 14 by redemption and two by patrimony; 1873, two by redemption; 1874, three by redemption; 1875, eight by redemption and one by servitude; 1876, two by redemption and two by patrimony; 1877, nil.; 1878, two by redemption; 1879, nil.; 1880, nil.
(5.) No calls to the livery have taken place during the last ten years.

PART II.—D.

RETURN D.—(1) State the number of apprentices bound at the Company's Hall, or otherwise under the auspices of the Company during each of the last 10 years. (2) State how many have been bound during each of the last ten years to members following the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the Company. (3) In what cases and to what extent have the fees or premiums of such apprentice been paid by the Company?

The number of apprentices bound during each of the last ten years is as follows, viz.:—

In 1870	1	In 1876	Nil.
„ 1871	Nil.	„ 1877	Nil.
„ 1872	Nil.	„ 1878	Nil.
„ 1873	1	„ 1879	Nil.
„ 1874	Nil.	„ 1880	Nil.
„ 1875	2

The preceding have all been bound to members following the trade of the Company, and in no case were the fees or premiums paid by the Company.

PART II.—E.

RETURN E.—Profits and privileges.

1. State with fullness what are the advantages, pecuniary or otherwise, incident to the position of a member of the Company in each grade of membership, as (1) a freeman, (2) a liveryman, (3) master warden, or otherwise a member of the governing body.
2. State the sums paid on an average annually for the preceding ten years by the Company to the members according to the grades of membership mentioned above, and of what such sums consisted, whether (1) fees, and of what nature, (2) pensions, or (3) other payments, specifying the nature of the same respectively.
3. What circumstances are in practice held to constitute a claim to a pension or donation? State the number of present pensioners and donees respectively, and the amounts paid to them as such respectively. How many pensioners and donees are connected with the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the Company.
4. (1) What is the average standing of a member when he becomes a member of the governing body, and (2) what is the average time for which a member continues on the governing body?
5. Does the Company carry on any and what trade or manufacture with which its title is directly or indirectly connected? If so, what is the capital and from what source is it derived, and how are the profits (if any) divided or dealt with?

1. The advantages incident to the position of a freeman were to enable him to carry on his art and mystery as a plumber within the City of London and the City of Westminster and the suburbs and liberties thereof, and within seven miles' compass thereof, without which he could not carry out such privilege, and when in adversity he is eligible to receive pecuniary aid, to be obtained either in a single amount, or spread over a term of quarterly payments or otherwise, as may appear most suitable to the governing body. This privilege extends to his widow and family.

As a liveryman, the advantages are to vote for election of members of Parliament, and the further right of voting at all elections for the lord mayor and sheriffs of the City of London and Middlesex, and the officers thereof, namely, the chamberlain, the bridge masters, and of attending to record their opinions and votes at every common hall.

Those of the master, wardens, or other members of the governing body are precisely similar to those of the livery, with the exception of the fees before referred to.

2. No sums are paid annually to freemen, liverymen, master, warden, or otherwise a member of the governing body, except as herein-before or herein-after mentioned. The fees or payments to the master, wardens, or other members of the governing body are those stated in Return Part II., A. 3, and average annually for the preceding ten years about 280*l.*

And the payments to freemen and women or for their benefit as aforesaid, average for the preceding 10 years 88*l.* and extra casual gifts to an average of 9*l.*

3. The circumstances constituting a claim for pecuniary aid to be granted are sickness and want. Since 1870 those receiving relief are all widows of freemen who have been during their lifetime connected with the Company amounting to ten in number. The amount paid to them respectively quarterly varies from one to five guineas, besides special donations under special circumstances.

4. The average standing of a member previous to his election on to the governing body averages from 15 to 25 years. He remains a member of the governing body for life, unless he resigns or is removed.

5. The Company does not carry on any trade or manufacture.

PART III.—OFFICERS AND SERVANTS.

A, B, and C.

RETURN A.—A list of the officers of the Company, with a statement of the duties of each, the amount of his salary and emoluments, and whether or not he is a member of the Company.

PART IV.—F.

RETURN F.—(1) The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them what has been the amount of the increase or decrease, from year to year, of the Company's income during the last 10 years, and whether there is reason to expect any increase or decrease during the next 10 years, together with a statement of the reasons for such expectation.

RETURN F.—(2) The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them whether there is reason to expect any permanent increase or decrease in value in any of the estates or properties of the Company, and if so, to what extent, together with a statement of the reasons for such expectation.

F. (1) In answer to this inquiry the Commissioners are respectfully referred to the several returns made in reply to the inquiries under Part 4, Return E., as showing the amount of increase and decrease from year to year during the last 10 years, and as to the expectation of any increase or decrease during the next 10 years the Company are not in a position to express any opinion upon.

F. (2) In reply to this inquiry the Company have no grounds whatever save those which are open to the general public to form any expectation of any permanent increase or decrease in value of the house in Bishopsgate Street aforesaid or in any investments which from time to time they have made.

PART IV.—G.

RETURN G.—The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them—

1. What is the system of management of the Company's estates and property?
2. In what way, and by whom, the several receipts and payments are taken and made, and under what control?
3. In what way the Company's accounts are audited?
4. Whether the Company's accounts are published, or are accessible to all or any, and which of the members of the Company?

1. The system of management is as already stated by the governing body.
2. The clerk receives all moneys paid to the Company and pays the same into the Company's credit at their bankers.
3. The Company's accounts are audited by an audit committee appointed annually for that purpose.
4. The Company's accounts are not published, but are accessible to the members of the Company on application.

PART IV.—H.

RETURN H.—A detailed statement of the income from all sources of the Company during each of the preceding 10 years, a detailed statement of the Company's expenditure during each of such 10 years, and a detailed statement of the assets and liabilities of the Company at the end of each of the last 10 years.

The following are detailed statements of the Incomes and Expenditure of the Company during each of the last 10 years dating from 1870 to 1880 inclusive, the accounts being made up to the 30th of September in each of the said years, that date being the fixed date by the Company.

PART IV.—M.

RETURN M.—GENERAL AND TECHNICAL EDUCATION.—A statement as to whether the Company does anything to subsidise or encourage education, whether general or technical, and a return of the means (if any) so employed, and of the amount expended on such objects during each of the last preceding ten years.

It is confidently submitted that this Company has been and continues to be earnest and careful in employing the funds at its disposal most suitably for the interests of the trade it represents. Beyond that, and perhaps still more usefully, the leading members of the governing body have gratuitously exerted themselves to improve the present system of the London guilds, and of their own in particular, extending the "freedom" to members of the trade who after due examination prove themselves worthy of it, and spreading instruction to the plumbing trade in a manner advantageous not only for the trade but for the public at large, whose health and comfort are so directly dependent upon competent skill and care in the art and practice of plumbing.

The attention of the Commissioners is respectfully invited to the accompanying pamphlet, intitled "Revived Guild Action," by George Shaw, Esq., one of the past masters of the Company, the views contained in which express those of the Company, and form an epitome of their principle of action. See Appendix A (1).

PART V.—REFORM.

PART V.—Reform.

The Commissioners, being bound to report to Her Majesty "what measures (if any) are, in their "judgment, expedient and necessary for improving or altering the constitution of the Companies, or the "appropriation or administration of the property or revenues thereof," respectively invite the attention of the officers of the Companies to this part of the Commission.

The Commissioners will be very glad to receive and consider any suggestions respecting this part of the Commission with which the officers of the Companies may do the Commissioners the honour of favouring them.

Interests of Trade.

For several years the Plumbers' Company have given their consideration to the matters above referred to with a view to promoting the interests of the trade and its craftsmen, and with concomitant advantages to the public.

As the result of such prior consideration and discussion the subject was brought before the governing body in November 1875, when a committee, was appointed "to inquire into "and report to the court thereon how far technical edu-"cation can be promoted among the workmen of the "trade, and to ascertain the mode or modes by which it "can be best attained," which committee reported inter alia as follows :—

Our opinion is that any attempt on the part of the Company to interfere with the workmen's societies or clubs will fail. No inducement which can be offered them will influence them to alter their rules, and unless these rules are altered we fear the Company's efforts will be of very little use, and that the next thing to be considered is what is to be done in support of the apprenticeship system; that which at present exists is a system not only detrimental to the trade, but inasmuch as good plumbers' work in any building, whether public or private, is most essential to the comfort and health of the occupants, and indeed ultimately touches the question of public health, we are of opinion that it is desirable that an effort should be made to secure as far as possible a supply of properly trained workmen.

For years past in London the apprenticeship system may be said to have fallen into desuetude, and instead of which labourers who, after having attended for two or three years on a plumber, get to know what they think enough of the trade, and just enough to impose upon those who know less. This class of labourers get employment by many builders to do work beyond their capacity, hence the many complaints of bad plumbers' work not only in houses run up by speculative builders, but also those of a much better class, and unless something be done to check this the public health will drift into a very bad state. The real question being, how is this state of things to be altered or modified? We confess that the difficulties appear, if not insurmountable, such as require the most careful consideration, and we therefore suggest that the subject may be referred back to us for further consideration. All of which we respectfully submit to the consideration of the court, this 24th day of May 1876.

(Signed) GEORGE SHAW.
PHILIP WILKINSON.
WILLIAM DENT.

Since that time the Plumbers' Company have directly co-operated with the City Guilds Institute, and have agreed to make an annual grant in its support, and have obtained a recognised place for plumbing among the industries which "the Institute" is designed to elevate, instruct, and promote.

This interest on our part and our competence to superintend this branch of instruction has been acknowledged by the representatives of the institute, who have appointed one of the past masters of this guild to be examiner for the institute throughout this kingdom.

Re Charities.

With respect to these we respectfully refer the Royal Commissioners to the report of the Commissioners appointed in pursuance of an Act of Parliament made and passed in the 5th and 6th years of King William the Fourth, chapter 71, intituled, "An Act for appointing Commissioners" to continue the "Inquiries concerning Charities in England and Wales until the 1st day of March 1837," and presented to both Houses of Parliament by command of His Majesty.

Under these Acts the said Commission had full powers to inspect all documents having relation to the charities referred to, as well as to send for and examine on oath all persons whose evidence they considered necessary to assist them in making the inquiries. The said Commissioners exercised all the powers given to them by the said Acts, and upon the evidence which they so obtained founded their report, of which the following is a copy:—

North's Charity.

Samuel North, by will dated 28th February 1645 (amongst other bequests) reciting that his deceased wife had bequeathed towards the relief of the poor widows and fatherless children of persons free of the Company of Plumbers of the City of London the sum of 40*s.* per annum, for the better performance of the said bequest, as of the gift therein-after mentioned, gave unto the master, wardens, and commonalty, freemen of the mystery of plumbery of the City of London, whereof he was a member, and their successors, his messuage or tenement situate in Bishopsgate Street, in the parish of St. Helens, and then in his own occupation, in trust to dispose of the rent and profits thereof as follows, viz.:—

40*s.* per annum thereof for the payment of the said 40*s.* per annum which was by the said last will of his late wife bequeathed as aforesaid.

And the like yearly sum of 40*s.* per annum for the use of the said Company towards the augmentation of their stock.

And 40*s.* per annum for a further relief of the poor widows and fatherless children of poor persons who were free of the said Company.

And 4*l.* per annum towards the relief of the poor of the parish of St. Mary Somerset, London, wherein he was born, to be paid to the churchwardens and collectors of the poor of the said parish, to the intent that they should in their good discretion distribute and dispose of the same 4*l.* per annum unto the poor of the said parish, viz., 12*d.* thereof weekly for bread, and 3*s.* 4*d.* per annum thereof to the clerk of the said parish for the time being, to see the same bread delivered upon every Lord's Day, and the residue of the said 4*l.* for coals to be delivered yearly at Christmas.

And 40*s.* per annum more thereof towards the relief for ever of the poor distracted creatures within the hospital of Bethlehem, to be by the said Company duly paid to the use aforesaid, to the hands of the treasurer of the hospital of Bridewell, whereof he was one of the governors, and after directing that all the same yearly payments, amounting in the whole to the sum of 12*l.* per annum, should be paid by the master, wardens, and assistants of the said Company quarterly, in equal portions; he gave the rest and overplus of the said rents and profits of the said messuage or tenement unto the use and behoof of the said Company, as the 40*s.* per annum to them given as aforesaid was to be applied.

The messuage or tenement mentioned in the will of the said Samuel North is situate No. 41, Bishopsgate Street, and is now on lease to Miles Beales, chemist, for 21 years from Michaelmas 1834 at a rent of 100*l.* per annum.

A fine of 105*l.* was also paid by the tenant, the house was rebuilt by the Company in 1755 at the expense of 606*l.* and is now in substantial repair.

The Company in respect of this gift pay to Bethlehem Hospital annually, deducting 4*s.* for the land tax, 2*l.*

And to the parish of St. Mary Somerset, deducting 8*s.* for land tax, 4*l.* annually.

The bequest of 40*s.* by the testator's wife, to the widows and fatherless children of freemen of the Company, and the further gift of 40*s.* per annum for the same purpose, are considered to be included in the payments made to the poor of the Company in pensions and casual relief.

The amount of payments to the poor during the 10 years preceding Michaelmas 1836 in pensions and casual relief is 288*l.* 7*s.* 6*d.*, being on an average 28*l.* 16*s.* 9*d.* per annum.

The residue of the rent is carried to the general funds of the Company.

APPENDIX A (1).

REVIVED GUILD ACTION. SUGGESTIONS TO THE WARDENS AND COURT OF THE PLUMBERS' COMPANY.

THE trade guilds or companies which hold so important a position in the City of London were established for a most useful purpose, and have done a great and useful work in the past. But circumstances have changed, and the question now is, how to maintain or promote the usefulness of those institutions, by bringing their action into harmony with the altered circumstances of trade and of society at large?

The trade guilds of London were originally established to organise industry, to provide for excellence of craftsmanship, and also to unite the workers in each craft in a fraternity, a corporate industrial body, wherein individual merit obtained a corporate recognition, while the contributions of the wealthier members of each craft were devoted to mitigate the misfortunes of the feebler or less fortunate members. In fact, these guilds to a great extent did the work of the trades unions and benefit societies nowadays established by the working classes themselves; while at the same time they united all members of each craft, both high and low, both masters and employés, in a corporation which paid regard to the interests of all, instead of the modern system or disorganisation of labour, by which the employers and employed are sundered into antagonistic classes.

When these guilds were originated, and for long afterwards, excellence in craftsmanship could best, if not only, be attained by hereditary training, by the accumulated knowledge and experience being transmitted in families from sire to son, and from master to pupil; for in those times, and until quite recently, there were no books, or lectures, or "technical schools" for conveying knowledge of any craft to those who desired to acquire it. Hence the apprentice system, by which each guild provided for competent knowledge and practical skill on the part of its members. And these apprentices in due time, if showing adequate efficiency, became masters, rising into the higher grades of the craft. Thus, while industrial skill was ensured, each craft was organised as a corporate body in which all its members had an interest. It was for a similar reason that the sons of a craftsman or guildsman were accorded certain privileges from the corporation to which his father belonged. And, in fine, by means of those guilds, the individual workman was not left to struggle on single-handed in the battle of life, but became a member of a fraternity, containing well established grades, and which was ever ready to protect the interests of the whole craft, with a power far surpassing that of a mere aggregation of individuals, and also to give timely succour to its less fortunate members when suffering from the numerous "ills which flesh is heir to." Thus these guilds, represented by the London companies, were of vast benefit as an organisation of trade and labour, effecting harmoniously for each craft what is now done discordantly by the various unions and societies established by the employers and the employed as rival and totally unconnected bodies.

During the last hundred years these old organisations of trade have been gradually falling to pieces, and are being replaced by a number of minor organisations in lieu of the old corporate unity. To a great extent this change is owing to the "subdivision of labour" itself, conjoined with the vast increase of our population, and, consequently, of the industrial classes, which gives a magnitude to each class or grade, such as enables it to be more or less self-supporting, and therefore independent in the pursuit of its own separate interests. One result of this change is, that the apprentice system, which was an essential part of the old guilds, has during the present generation almost, if not entirely, disappeared.

But although these modern circumstances have now rendered the old corporate system of trade guilds inapplicable, it is curious and instructive to observe that the principle of this system, although no longer established in each trade or craft as a whole, is being revived in separate parts of each trade. Not a few of the larger class of trade establishments now constitute a partially corporate body, with special rules and arrangements, and privileges or advantages for the employés or members. In a few of these establishments the employés, who are nearly a permanent body, obtain a per-centage on the increased profits of the business; in some of them (e.g., in some of the larger banks), a bonus is periodically given to them, and in many of them the employés live on the establishment, being provided with lodgings and food; while in others, e.g., in the Times' office, all the employés are required to belong to a mutual benefit society pertaining to the particular establishment. In fact, the large establishments by which trade is now carried on find it advantageous, both for the employers and employed, to revive, each one for itself, the corporate system, whereby the members of the establishment are advantaged under the direction of the employers. It may safely be predicted that this corporate system will more and more gain ground, and be still further extended. And thus, although the old system of guilds is not likely to be re-applied to whole trades, its past existence will be justified anew, and with great benefit to the community, by its adoption, with appropriate modifications, in the gigantic establishments by which industry is now carried on.

The trades unions, be it said, are good institutions in the main; in fact, they are necessary in substitution for the benefits which used to be secured to the less fortunate members of the old guilds. They help to maintain the independence of the working class as a body, by compelling all the members to subscribe to a fund for the relief of sickness or old age. In addition to this, it need not be said, these funds are employed for the support of "strikes," in the contest between employers and employed now so often waged, yet which, I venture to believe, is destined to disappear when industrial organisation has passed through its present interregnum, and when the old corporate principle will be revived in new forms suited to the times.

Unfortunately, while thus maintaining exclusiveness, the trades unions, in their conditions of membership, make no provision for what was the prime, if not the sole, object of the regulations of the old guilds, namely, efficiency on the part of the workman. In some trades, it is true, the apprentice system still exists; but in so far as it is systematically maintained, this is done by the artisans themselves for their own interests,—the conditions or restrictions in connexion with it being maintained, not to secure efficiency of craftmanship, but to prevent over-competition in the particular trade, by restricting the number of entrants to the extent which the union or society thinks sufficient for the existing demand for labour in the particular trade. To a certain extent, no doubt, this system of restriction is both justifiable and useful, but it is a wholly one-sided arrangement, the limitation of entrants being imposed by the men themselves, who are naturally desirous to keep down the supply of labour in their own trade as much as possible. It is simply a part of the old exclusive system, now maintained by a section of each trade, i.e., by the employés, instead of being, as in old times, regulated by the whole craft as a corporate body, while the prime object of the old apprentice system, viz., to secure good and efficient craftsmen, is now wholly lost sight of. In the interests, not only of the masters, but of the community at large, it has become a matter of urgent importance to supply the defects in the existing system, by reviving in some form or other the ancient principle of training craftsmen for their work, so as to secure a supply of skilled labour, in order that each trade may progress, not only by the increase of scientific knowledge and invention, but by ensuring a supply of workmen well trained to their trade, and competent to apply to their work the knowledge or practical lessons which science is so widely teaching.

The Plumbers' Company is the one of all others which is most urgently required to take action in this matter. Beyond the motive of self-interest which we, in common with the masters in all trades, have for obtaining skilful workmen, the Plumbers' Company is under a responsibility to the public, to society at large, which can hardly be exaggerated. Much the greater part of the "economy" of a household depends upon the plumbers. It is upon them, far more than upon any other trade, that the public are dependent for comfort and health in their households—in other words, for probably at least twenty out of every twenty-four hours of their life. It is we who have to do the work of supply in houses for water, and also for the drainage or sewerage by which the waste and offensive materials of household life are got rid of.

I. The first of these operations—namely, the arrangements for the supply of gas, may be briefly passed over, because it is now in the hands of a separate trade, the gas-fitters, for which the Plumbers' Company are nowadays in no way responsible. But it may be stated that so serious and frequent are the mishaps arising from defective workmanship in this branch of business, that in some parts of the kingdom the gas companies refuse to permit their gas to be laid on except by certain gasfitters who engage to comply with their rules, and to whom the gas companies give official recognition, in fact a diploma for good workmanship.

II. The second head—namely, the arrangements in connexion with water in houses, is one for which the plumbers are entirely responsible; and it is needless to say how important it is that these arrangements should be well planned, and carefully executed by the workmen employed. The old proverb says truly that, like fire, "water " is a good servant but a bad master;" and the plumbers have a twofold work with respect to this element, namely, both to keep it out of houses, and to arrange for its safe and convenient supply within the house.

We have first to protect the house against the rainfall. All the weak points of the roofing are in the hands of the plumber, who has to guard these points.

As regards the interior arrangements for the supply of water, a great responsibility rests with the plumbers, especially because the larger portion of their work is covered up, so that any defect in the jointing or other parts of the workmanship eludes detection till the consequences reveal it. The fundamental or starting point is the position of the cisterns, for this determines to a great extent the course of the pipes. And so far as possible—in order to lessen the disasters arising from accidents or defects—the cisterns should be kept away from the body of the house, and, where possible, placed in projecting or outlying parts of the premises where an overflow would occasion the least amount of damage. The cistern, also, should be most carefully disconnected from the sewer drainage, in order to keep the water pure or uncontaminated, a point to which I shall afterwards further allude.

The importance of obtaining a supply of good workmen for carrying out these arrangements is obvious. A defect in the roofing, an ill-fitted cistern, or a bad joint in the water pipes, may produce a flooding of the house which those only can fully appreciate who have suffered from such an infliction, ceilings destroyed, wall papers, carpets, and other furniture damaged, with both pecuniary loss and prolonged discomfort to the household.

III. The third head, however, is the most important of all, at least as regards the health of the family; and upon this subject—namely, the internal drainage or sewerage—the public of late years have very naturally taken the alarm. Besides the minor evils of bad smells in the house, and enfeebled vitality from exposure to unhealthy effluvia, the ravages of typhoid fever are directly traceable to bad internal sewerage. The highest medical authorities maintain that this fearful disease cannot arise except from breathing the poisonous sewer gas, or else from imbibing it in water which has absorbed, in cisterns or otherwise, some portion of this deadly vapour. The exceeding frequency of this form of fever, and the fact that it has appeared almost as much in the mansions of the wealthy as in the hovels of the poor, has attracted an unusual amount of attention to it, and to the causes which produce it. This, in truth, may be called a new difficulty; for although the evil must have been long in existence, it is only as yesterday that the serious facts of the case have become publicly known. It is also the fact that some of the very improvements in the sanitary arrangements of households, the universal existence of the water-closet, and the wide introduction of fixed baths and bathrooms, have actually created a new source of danger, owing to the facilities which these arrangements afford for the entrance into our houses, our living and sleeping rooms, of the poisonous sewer gas.

It is to the plumbers that the public now look for measures to remedy this evil; and undoubtedly it behoves our company to do everything in its power to meet the requirements of the public and of the medical profession in this vitally important matter.

The water-closet is, of course, the prime seat of the mischief, although every sink or other outlet for waste water is capable of admitting the sewer gases into the house. It is true that all these outlet pipes are trapped; but it is an utter mistake to fancy that the ordinary trap will suffice to prevent the uprising of the sewer gases from the drains below. Even when the trap is undisturbed the gases will at times rise through it, especially when the barometer is low, the rising and escape of the sewer gas on such occasions taking place from exactly the same cause as the escape of gas in coal mines at times when the ordinary pressure of the atmosphere is reduced. But the chief fact to be attended to is, that whenever the trap is disturbed, whenever water is poured down, sewer gas, or the air in the drains, will rise up. This fact is but little known or thought of, but it is one of no small importance to the health and comfort of a household. At times, when the drains have been inadequately flushed, or when, as already said, the barometer is low, anyone may verify the fact easily by simply noticing the offensive odour which follows the pouring of water down a sink. At other times, as when the drains have been fully flushed by a heavy rainfall or otherwise, and when consequently the air in the drains is but lightly charged with the sewer gases, the effluvium may not be perceptible. But the fact remains that, if the drains are largely charged with sewer-gas, whenever water is poured down the sewer gas will rise up through the trap, be the trapping what it may.

These facts explain only too clearly the remarkable circumstance that typhoid fever, boils, and other symptoms of blood-poisoning from sewer gas occur not less frequently in the mansions of the wealthier classes than in the dwellings of the poor.*

In these mansions there is a profuse arrangement for the supply of water, an unusual number of water-closets, sinks and baths, and, as already said, wherever water goes down the sewer gas may, and frequently does, rise up into the house. In regard to fixed baths and bath rooms, it is to be observed that these are almost always placed among the bedrooms; frequently the bath forms part of the dressing room, adjoining the bedroom, and the intervening door is frequently kept open, the consequence being that any rising of the sewer gas contaminates the air of the sleeping room, where the doors and windows are usually closed, and where we pass about one-third of our whole life, and also in a state of unconsciousness, which renders us for the time insensible of the sewer effluvium, which otherwise, by its offensive odour, might warn us of the danger.

Accordingly, the first thing to be attended to is to remove all closets, sinks, and bath-rooms, as far as possible from the living rooms, and especially from the sleeping rooms. There are also many cases, especially in the badly built villas of the suburbs, where an offensive odour is perceptible in the rooms under which the drains pass, and which is especially perceptible in the morning, when the doors and windows have been closed for some hours. This arises, of course from some leakage of sewer air from the drains, which too often are carelessly constructed.

The fundamental point of all, and one without which these minor arrangements will be inadequate for their purpose, is to provide an outlet whereby the sewer gases may escape into the external air, and not into the house. This can readily be done by an air pipe, so fixed that the sewer gas may thus find an outlet in a harmless manner, where, in short, it cannot enter the house, and where it will be immediately diluted by the ever-moving atmosphere. Save under exceptional circumstances, the sewer gas will always ascend this outlet pipe instead of breaking through the water seal in the traps in the interior pipes, on the well-known principle that gases will always escape in the direction where there is the least pressure or resistance against their passage; and thus the sewer gases will pass up these outlet pipes, where they have free passage, instead of having to force a way up through the water traps.

* SANITARY CONDITION OF THE ADMIRALTY SPRING GARDENS.—Universal regret is felt in all the departments of the Admiralty at the death of Deputy Inspector-General Mackay from typhoid fever. He was one of the ablest and most valued of all the servants of the Government at the Admiralty, and his experience and special knowledge were such that it will be well-nigh impossible to adequately supply his place. This feeling of sorrow is much increased by the well-authenticated fact that Dr. Mackay's death is directly traceable to the insanitary condition of the offices which he occupied in Spring Gardens. It was his custom to drink water freely during the progress of his work at the office, and since his death it has been discovered that the water was procured from a cistern which also supplied the conveniences, and that the waste pipes from it communicated directly with the sewers. Not only has the insanitary condition of these buildings and the neglect of proper sanitary precautions thus robbed the public service of one of its most valuable and efficient servants, but to this cause is due the serious illness of another illustrious official, Sir Francis Festing, K.C.M.G., who has just recovered from typhus fever, and who occupies offices in an adjoining building. In addition to the above cases, the messenger and his wife, in charge of the Accountant-General's Office, have both suffered from typhoid fever, which in the wife's case proved fatal. On the opposite side of New Street, especially at the offices Nos. 22, 23, and 24, much illness has occurred among the staff, and boils and other evidences of blood poisoning have, we are informed, attacked more than one of the officials, who are or have been absent on sick leave. The sanitary conditions and health arrangements of the majority of the offices occupied by the Admiralty in Spring Gardens are such as reflect little credit on the Commissioner of Works. The character of the buildings, the overcrowding, the absence of proper ventilation, the evident pressure of sewer-gas, and the complexity of passages and chambers certainly rival, if they do not surpass, the characteristics of the condemned War Office building.—Sanitary Record.

The superior convenience of water-closets over all other such appliances has led to their almost universal introduction into country houses; while in not one in a hundred cases is there a free drainage, which can only exist when the house closely adjoins a running stream. The almost universal case is, that the closets in these houses drain down into a covered cesspool, a hot bed of putrefaction, where the poisonous sewer gas is generated to the fullest possible extent. Any one who has used such water-closets in country houses knows that every time water is let down, there is an outburst of sewer gas of the most offensive kind. Frequently, too, there is a fixed bath, which drains down into the same pit of corruption. The consequence of these arrangements is, that not only does a most offensive effluvium rise into the house whenever water is poured down, but even when the trap is at rest, the sewer gas will tend to escape into the house, sometimes very perceptibly, at other times almost imperceptibly, except by the close, heavy, foul smell produced when the doors and windows have been closed. Another drawback upon the use of the water-closet in this form is, that sometimes the pipes or drains leading from the closets are carried below the flooring of the living rooms, in which case the slightest leakage or defect will produce an unwholesome atmosphere in the rooms, if not also a most offensive one.

For all these cases, viz., where water-closets are used in country houses, the ordinary outlet pipe from the drains, already mentioned, whereby the sewer gases are allowed to escape into the external atmosphere at the roof of the house, is not sufficient; for in these cases the drains and cesspool are constantly filled with the foulest form of sewer gas, and under a comparatively high pressure. The cesspool, in fact, is perpetually generating the foulest gases of decomposition, and these must escape somewhere; and they do and must escape entirely into the house, unless special means be taken to avert the mischief. Therefore, besides the outlet pipe attached to the outer wall of the house, the cesspool itself ought to be well ventilated, and the constantly accumulating sewer gas ought to be allowed to escape from it directly, by affixing a pipe, open at the top, and rising some 20 feet above the ground.

When so much of the health and comfort of the public depends upon the operations of the plumbers, and when the public are becoming fully alive to such sanitary questions, it is desirable that our trade should take whatever means are possible for securing a supply of clever and trustworthy craftsmen, without which it is hardly possible to ensure the efficiency of construction which is so indispensable in plumbing operations. At present, since the disuse of the apprentice system, we cannot find out a good workman or a bad one except after a considerable, and sometimes most disagreeable, experience. Men come to us from the country of whom we can know nothing, nor can we usually obtain adequate information even about workmen who have been employed in the metropolis. And beyond all that, there are now no regular means of adequately and thoroughly instructing the workman in his craft, or of giving to the skilled craftsman the position or recognition which were attainable by him in the old times, when the guild system was in full operation.

What then should be done in the circumstances? The Plumbers' Company now possess but a small portion, a mere fragment of their old powers and opportunities; but how ought we to employ these powers to the best advantage for the benefit of the public as well as of our own trade? Undoubtedly the old apprentice system was the best for the attainment of the object which we have now in view; for under that old but almost vanished system not only was the workman trained in succession to each part or stage in his business, but alike his personal character and his workmanlike ability necessarily became thoroughly known to his employer; he obtained a "character" proportionate to his merits, and that character was readily ascertainable by the trade at large; and thus, if a good workman, the system was ultimately highly advantageous to the workman himself. Some of the London companies prize this old system so much that within the last few years they have begun to offer a bonus, a money gift, to lads who are willing to engage as apprentices, and who adequately adhere to the engagement. Our own company is not a rich one, like some of its neighbours, and we must carefully employ our resources to the best advantage; nevertheless, I think it right to submit this statement of what some other companies are doing, in order that the court may judge whether our procedure should not be the same, or at least whether this encouragement to the apprentice system may be included as a part of our operations.

But there is another course of procedure which may be suggested, namely, the conferring of the membership of our company, as a premium and diploma, to craftsmen who prove themselves worthy of it. Firstly, as to the inducement which would thus be afforded to the craftsman himself. The membership would be equivalent to a diploma, alike of character and efficiency, which could not fail to be not only an honour to the workman, but also a "character," a voucher, which he could carry with him wherever he went. Also, the membership would render the holder of it eligible for the receipt of those small pensions or gratuities which it is the custom of this company to confer in cases of sickness or old age, or to the widows and children of our less fortunate brethren. Upon these grounds it can hardly be doubted that such a premium for good craftsmanship and good character would be an object of honest ambition, and also of pecuniary advantage to workmen. It may be said that every man has the strongest of all motives, that of self-interest, to perfect himself in his craft. But we all know the value of an external or special stimulus to exertion and self-improvement; and the membership of this company would be a stimulus of the very best kind. Besides the small, yet not unimportant pecuniary advantages so attainable, it must be remembered that, in this work-day world, it is not enough that a man should be a good craftsman, it is almost equally requisite that he should be known to be so, and this would be most efficiently done by the diploma (if I may so call it) afforded by membership of this company.

Next, as to the manner of our own procedure, the measures to be taken for ensuring that the applicant for membership is fully worthy and competent. No doubt this would impose some extra work and duties upon your executive; yet not such, we think, as the members would shrink from undertaking. The applicant would have to pass an examination before the master, or a committee appointed for the purpose; but this would only be the last stage. The proof of worthiness for membership would be mainly given in the course of previous employment,—as a rule under one of the members of our company, or, if not, under some employer of undoubted character and position in our trade. The application for membership must be endorsed by an employer, under whom the workman has served for a certain number of years; or, if he has served in succession under different members of our company, the required term might be made to apply to their successive periods of service, provided his application were endorsed by each and all of the employers (being members of our company) under whom he has worked. The applicant would then come before our master, or examining committee, upon obtaining whose approval he would be enrolled as a member of the company, and would receive a token or certificate which he could conveniently preserve, as a passport to employment in any quarter to which he might thereafter transfer his labour.

The details of this scheme, or the further conditions of membership, would present little difficulty. The term of the probationary service, upon which the "character" or testimonial of efficiency from an employer is to be based, and which the applicant for membership must adduce, might safely be left to your executive; so also the character of the examination which the applicant must undergo before the master or examining committee.

Such are the suggestions which I respectfully submit to the Court. Doubtless, other plans and other considerations may be suggested equally worthy of your attention. My sole object and motive in submitting these suggestions to the Court is, by making some modifications of our long-existing arrangements and practice, to bring the operations of our company as far as may be into harmony with the greatly altered circumstances of the time. The Plumbers' Company of London is the only organized body of the kind in the kingdom; and, limited as are now our powers and sphere of action, it is desirable that we should do our best in offering an example that may not be lost upon the trade at large. In this season of sanitary legislation, and of advancing sanitary knowledge in all branches of trade, the Plumbers' Company of London may reasonably be looked to at setting an example, with the twofold object of meeting the progressive requirements of the public, in regard to the health and comfort of the household, and at the same time, and as a necessary concomitant, of promoting a supply of efficient and trustworthy craftsmen, which is likewise a gain for our own trade.

I am, Gentlemen,

Your obedient Servant,

GEORGE SHAW.

King Edward Street, October, 1878.

APPENDIX A (2.)

ORDINANCES OF THE PLUMBERS.

38 Edward III., A.D. 1365. Letter Book E. (Norman-French.)

"May it please the honourable men and wise, the Mayor, Recorder, and Aldermen of the City of London, to grant unto the plumbers of the same city the points that here follow:—

"In the first place, that no one of the trade of plumbers shall meddle with works touching such trade within the said city, or take house or apprentices, or other workmen, in the same, if he be not free of the city; and that, by assent of the best and most skilled men in the said trade, testifying that he knows how well and lawfully to work, and to do his work; that so the said trade may not be scandalized, or the commonalty damaged and deceived, by folks who do not know their trade.

"Also, that no one of the said trade shall take an apprentice for less than seven years; and that he shall have him enrolled within the first year, and at the end of his term shall make him take up his freedom, according to the usage of the said city.

"Also, that every one of the trade shall do his work well and lawfully, and shall use lawful weights, as well in selling as in buying, without any deceit or evil intent against any one; and that for working a clove of lead for gutters, or for roofs of houses, he shall only take one halfpenny; and for working a clove for furnaces, tappetroghes, belfreys, and conduit pipes, one penny; and for the waste of a wey of lead when newly molten [he shall have an allowance of two cloves], as has been the usage heretofore.

"Also, that no one for singular profit shall engross lead coming to the said city for sale, to the damage of the commonalty; but that all persons of the said trade, as well poor as rich, who may wish, shall be partners therein at their desire. And that no one, himself or by another, shall buy old lead that is on sale, or shall be, within the said city or without, to sell it again to the folks of the said trade, and enhance the price of lead, to the damage of all the commonalty.

"Also, that no one of the said trade shall buy stripped lead of the assistants to tilers, laggers, or masons, or of women who cannot find warranty for the same. And if any shall do so, himself or by his servants, or if any one of them be found stealing lead, tin, or nails, in the place where he works, he shall be ousted from the said trade for ever, at the will and ordinance of the good folks of such trade.

"Also, that no one of the said trade shall oust another from his work undertaken or begun, or shall take away his customers or his employers to his damage, by enticement through carpenters, masons, tilers, or other persons, as he would answer for the damage so inflicted, by good consideration of the masters of the said trade.

"And if anyone shall be found guilty under any one of the Articles aforesaid, let him pay to the Chamber of the Guildhall, in London, for the first offence, 40 pence; for the second half a mark; for the third, 20 shillings; and for the fourth, 10 pounds, or else forswear the trade."

APPENDIX B.

The Company gave information to the Municipal Commissioners appointed in 1834.

POULTERS' COMPANY.

The Returns of the Company were made under protest.

PART I.—FOUNDATION AND OBJECT.

A. to H.

RETURN A.—A statement of the date, ascertained or probable, of the foundation of the company, and of the circumstances, so far as they can be discovered from its documents of foundation or archives, in which the company had its origin.

RETURN B.—A list of the charters, charters of inspeximus, and other instruments of a similar nature, whether originals or copies, which have been at any time in the possession of the company, together with an abstract of the purport of each, regard being specially had to any evidence which it may contain as to the object of the foundation of the company.

RETURN C.—A list of any trust deeds "founding, regulating, or affecting" the company, with the date of each, the names of the parties thereto, and an abstract of the purport of each.

RETURN D.—A list, with dates, of any "decrees of Court," whether of the Courts of Common Law or of Chancery, or of any acts of the Court of Aldermen or of the Court of Common Council, "regulating or affecting" the company, with a statement of the effect of each decision.

RETURN E.—A list of any other documents, not included in the descriptions in the preceding returns, which "found, regulate, or affect" the company, with dates and an abstract of the effect of each.

RETURN F.—A concise history of the company, from the time of its foundation to the present day, with special reference to the inquiry contained in the commission as to "the objects for which the company was founded," and "how far those objects are now being carried into effect."

RETURN G.—Has the company a licence in mortmain? When was such licence granted (referring to the document by description)? What is its extent, and to what extent is it now unexhausted?

RETURN H.—Is there vested in the company, and how, whether by charter, statute, order of the Court of Aldermen, act of Common Council, or otherwise, any right of exercising superintendence over, or any duty or discretion to encourage in any way, any and what art, trade, or business? State the nature and local limits of such control. In what manner and to what extent is such control now exercised? If such control is not now exercised, state the circumstances under which its exercise has fallen into desuetude.

A.–H.—The Poulters' Company existed by prescription as early as 1345. It was, however, incorporated by Royal Charter in the 19th year of Henry VII., on 23rd February 1504. The Charter was renewed by Queen Elizabeth, 22nd February, in the 30th year of her reign, confirmed by Charles II., on 13th June, in the 6th year of his reign, and also by James II. subsequently, but these Charters, like those of many of the companies, were destroyed in the Fire of London in 1666. The Charter under which the company now acts was granted by William and Mary, 6th May 1692.

In the year 1763 the Charter was supplemented by an Act of the Corporation of London and by another Act of the Corporation in 1820. The Charter gives power to the company to inspect the poultry brought to market, but that power has long since been suspended by the Acts of the Legislature.

PART I.—RETURN I.

RETURN I.—A list of the Charities, eleemosynary, educational, or otherwise, which are under the management of the company, stating in each case the name of the founder, the date and nature of the benefaction, its original and its present value as regards both capital and income, and the purposes to which the funds have been applied for each of the last preceding ten years.

All the information asked for under this head is duly furnished by the company yearly to the Charity Commissioners, to whom the company refers the Commission for information. This will apply to the whole of the term from 1870 to 1880.

PART II.—A.

CONSTITUTION AND PRIVILEGES OF MEMBERSHIP.

RETURN A.—Governing Body.

1. State the present constitution of the governing body of the company, whether such constitution is according to the Charter, and if not, in what respects such constitution varies therefrom, and when and how such alteration was made.
2. State the qualifications for membership of the governing body of the company, the time and periods of election, and the qualifications of the voters at elections to the governing body.
3. State the functions of the governing body, and of the different members of the same respectively, and whether the members of the governing body pay any, and what, fees or fines on admission thereto, and whether they are paid any, and what, salaries or amounts in respect of their services respectively.

4. State the nature of the business which comes before the governing body of the company, the method adopted in transacting it, the times at which the governing body meets for business purposes, the way in which the opinions of the members are taken, and whether the resolutions and decisions of the governing body are published, or are otherwise accessible to any or all, and which, of the members of the company.

5. State whether the members of the governing body are liable to suspension, or removal, on any, and what grounds, and by what method such suspension or removal is effected.

6. Has the company any byelaws sanctioned by the courts of law or Chancery, or by the courts of aldermen or of common council, or otherwise? State the effect of such byelaws.

1–6. The governing body consists of the master, wardens, and court of assistants of the company, who are elected by the court as vacancies occur, and who pay the fees on their admission as prescribed by the Charter and byelaws governing the company. The court meets quarterly for the transaction of business at Guildhall. The nature of the business depends upon circumstances, and it is impossible to give any more specific reply to these questions, except to say that the apprenticing of children and relief of necessitous members of the company form a considerable part of the business transacted.

PART II.—B.

RETURN B.—Admission to membership.

1. State the qualifications for membership of the company, the several grades of membership of the company, and whether women are admitted to membership.

2. State the several modes in which the freedom of the company may be obtained, the circumstances entitling an applicant to admission under each mode respectively, and the fees payable in respect of admission under each mode respectively.

3. State whether persons exercising any particular trade are required by statute or otherwise to become free of the company. Is there any process by which members of such trade can become members of the company, and is there any process for compelling such persons to procure admission, and are such processes enforced, and to what extent? Is the freedom of the City of London in any and what way a condition precedent or subsequent to membership? Are there any members who are not free of the City of London? Do persons exercising any particular trade commonly become members of the company? If so, how many members of such trade are at present members of the company? What is the number of the members of the trade (if any), the name of which is borne by the company, who are members of the company?

4. Are freemen liable to disfranchisement, and if so, for what reasons, and what is the mode of disfranchisement?

5. Is the livery of the company limited or unlimited in number? What are the qualifications for election to the livery, who are the electors thereto, and how do the elections thereto take place, and what fees are payable on election? Are liverymen liable to removal from the livery, and for what reasons?

1–5. The grades of membership are freemen, liverymen, and assistants. The qualification is being of age; and respectable women can be admitted as freewomen. Freemen are admitted by patrimony, servitude, marriage, or purchase. The fee varies according to circumstances. The company has no power to force any poulterer or other person to join the company. The freedom of the city is generally taken up by a freeman of the company after being admitted, and it rests with themselves whether they take up the freedom of the city or not. A large proportion of the members of the company exercise the trade of poulterer, but of course there are others who are not in the trade or have retired from its pursuit. The question of freemen being disfranchised does not apply, as they cannot obtain the franchise till they have become liverymen. There is no limit to the livery. The election of liverymen rests with the court of the company at the quarterly meetings, and the fees payable are those prescribed by the Charter byelaws, &c. Liverymen can only be removed for misconduct or by their own request.

PART II.—C.

RETURN C.—Number of members.

State (1) the present number of freemen, (2) the present number of the livery, (3) the present number of other members, (4) the number of admissions to the freedom by each mode respectively, and (5) the number of calls to the livery which have respectively taken place during each of the last preceding ten years.

Present number of freemen, only 48.
Do. of liverymen, who are of course free, 57.
Other members, who are assistants, 18.
It is very difficult to give any information of the number of admissions to the freedom and livery during each of the past 10 years, but the total of freemen admitted during that time have been 68; most of these took up their livery at the same period.

PART II.—D.

RETURN D.—(1) State the number of apprentices bound at the company's hall, or otherwise under the auspices of the company, during each of the last ten years. (2) State how many have been bound during each of the last ten years to members following the trade (if any), the name of which is borne by the company. (3) In what cases and to what extent have the fees or premiums of such apprentice been paid by the company?

None on the company's account, but there have been 42 apprentices bound to different persons and various trades from the trust funds, of which the company is trustee under the Charity Commissioners.

PART II.—E.

RETURN E.—Profits and privileges.

1. State with fullness what are the advantages, pecuniary or otherwise, incident to the position of a member of the company in each grade of membership, as (1) a freeman, (2) a liveryman, (3) master, warden, or otherwise a member of the governing body.

2. State the sums paid on an average annually for the preceding ten years by the company to the members according to the grades of membership mentioned above, and of what such sums consisted, whether (1) fees, and of what nature, (2) pensions, or (3) other payments, specifying the nature of the same respectively.

3. What circumstances are in practice held to constitute a claim to a pension or donation? State the number of present pensioners and donees respectively, and the amounts paid to them as such respectively. How many pensioners and donees are connected with the trade (if any), the name of which is borne by the company?

4. (1) What is the average standing of a member when he becomes a member of the governing body, and (2) what is the average time for which a member continues on the governing body?

5. Does the company carry on any and what trade or manufacture with which its title is directly or indirectly connected? If so, what is the capital and from what source is it derived, and how are the profits (if any) divided or dealt with?

1–5. The advantages a member of the company possesses is the right of assistance in poverty by granting pensions, or by assistance as may be required. He has a vote for the City of London, if living within 25 miles from London. It is impracticable to answer the inquiries 2 and 3, except by saying there are now about 16 pensioners, many of them widows, receiving annual sums of various amounts from the company by reason of poverty, which pensions amount to about 100*l.* per annum from the company's private resources. These payments do not include exceptional donations. A large number of pensions are paid to persons formerly connected with the trade and company.

The average standing of a member is undefinable, he continues on the governing body for life, unless he resigns or is disqualified. The company does not trade.

PART III.—OFFICERS AND SERVANTS.

A, B, and C.

RETURN A.—A list of the officers of the company, with a statement of the duties of each, the amount of his salary and emoluments, and whether or not he is a member of the company.

RETURN B.—A list of the servants of the company, with a statement of the duties of each, and of the amounts of their wages and other emoluments.

RETURN C.—A statement as to the mode in which the officers and servants of the company are respectively appointed.

The officers of the company are master, upper warden, and renter warden, who hold their offices for 12 months, being elected annually. They receive no emoluments by virtue of their offices. There is also a clerk, elected annually, who has a small salary, and a beadle, elected annually, with a small salary. The election of the parties referred to takes place on Ash Wednesday, and they are elected by vote of the Court.

PART IV.—RETURN A.

Amount of Stock, &c.	Description of Stock.	Source from whence arising, e.g., gift with name of donor, bequest with name of testator, sale of lands and which, &c.	In what name standing—e.g., Company, Chancery, Division of High Court of Justice, &c.	To what Account belonging—e.g., any particular fund or trust account.	Net Annual Receipt.	Remarks.
3,000*l.*, or thereabouts.	New 3 per Cents.	Savings out of income for years	Company - - -	Private - - -	90*l.*, less income tax	This is the company's private property.

PART IV.—B.

RETURN B 2.—A return of the balance of moneys in the hands of the company unappropriated in their accounts on the 31st December in each of the last preceding 10 years.

RETURN B 3.—A return of the estimated value of the plate, pictures, furniture, and other property at present on the premises of the company, or in their possession elsewhere.

The company does not make up its annual account in December, but at the audit day held some time in March. To give the balances asked for is impracticable. The balance at the end of the last financial year was about 273*l.* The company possesses no plate, pictures, or furniture.

PART IV.—C.

RETURN C (1).—A list of any properties of which the company is trustee, with the names of the cestui que trust in each instance, the nature of the trust, the nature and description of the property, and a statement of the sums received by the company in respect of the same, and of the manner in which such sums have been expended or disposed of during each of the last 10 years.

RETURN C (2).—A list of any properties of which the company is cestui que trust, with the names of the trustees in each instance, the nature of the trust, the nature and description of the property, and a statement of the sums received by the company in respect of the same during each of the last 10 years.

The company is trustee of properties called Nepton's Trust Estate, and of three or four other charities. The whole of the accounts connected with these charities are duly furnished yearly to the Charity Commissioners, from whom all information can be obtained by this Commission, if necessary.

PART IV.—D.

RETURN D.—A list of properties of any other description than those included in the preceding classes, together with a statement of the incomes derived therefrom by the company during each of the preceding 10 years.

A small amount of about 4*l.* 7*s.* received annually from the Vintners' Company, interest on 80*l.* advanced by the company in respect of Irish estates under management of the Vintners' Company.

PART IV.—E.

RETURN E.—Internal sources of income.

A list of the annual amounts received in each of the last 10 years in respect of—(1) fees paid on admission to the freedom of the company, specifying the amounts paid in respect of each mode of admission thereto; (2) fines or fees paid on admission to the livery of the company; (3) fines or fees paid by members on coming on the court of the company; (4) fines or fees paid on promotion to the offices of warden, &c.; (5) any other internal sources of income, specifying the same.

	£	s.	d.
Ten years' admission fees on freedoms	95	10	0
The like livery	800	0	0
The like court of assistants	275	0	0
Quarterages	35	17	0

The company receives no fees on admission to the office of warden.
The above amounts are all included in the receipts for the 10 years.

PART IV.—F.

RETURN F.—(1) The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them what has been the amount of the increase or decrease, from year to year, of the company's income during the last 10 years, and whether there is reason to expect any increase or decrease during the next 10 years, together with a statement of the reasons for such expectation.

RETURN F.—(2) The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them whether there is reason to expect any permanent increase or decrease in value in any of the estates or properties of the company, and if so, to what extent, together with a statement for the reasons for such expectation.

The income of the company for the past 10 years has varied from year to year, some years increased and other years decreased, according to circumstances over which the company has had no control, it depending upon the number of new members elected to the various positions of the company.
The company can give no opinion as to future increase or decrease.

PART IV.—G.

RETURN G.—The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them—

1. What is the system of management of the company's estates and property?
2. In what way, and by whom, the several receipts and payments are taken and made, and under what control?
3. In what way the company's accounts are audited?
4. Whether the company's accounts are published, or are accessible to all or any, and which, of the members of the company?

As the company's property in houses is let on lease, there are only the rents to receive, which are paid to the clerk, who accounts to the renter warden and pays money into the banking account of the company.
The company's accounts are duly audited by the audit committee annually.
The accounts are not published, but are open for inspection by any member of the court.

PART IV.—H.

Return H.—A detailed statement of the income from all sources of the company during each of the preceding 10 years, a detailed statement of the company's expenditure during each of such 10 years, and a detailed statement of the assets and liabilities of the company at the end of each of the last 10 years.

As it would be a matter of great trouble and inconvenience to prepare a detailed statement of the receipts and expenditure of the company for each of the past 10 years, a synopsis of the whole 10 years' receipts and payments, 1870 to 1880, is given. The company has no liabilities.

	£	s.	d.		£	s.	d.
Receipts for the 10 years from 1870 to 1880 - - - -	6,065	19	5	Payments for the 10 years from 1870 to 1880, including investments - - - -	5,887	17	7

PART IV.—M.

Return M.—General and Technical Education.

A statement as to whether the company does anything to subsidize or encourage education, whether general or technical, and a return of the means (if any) so employed, and of the amount expended on such objects during each of the last preceding 10 years.

At present the company has no assets available for technical education, and consequently has been unable to assist in this way. The company considers it to be its first duty to assist its poor and indigent members.

PART V.—REFORM.

Part V.—Reform.

The Commissioners, being bound to report to Her Majesty "what measures (if any) are, in their judgment, expedient and necessary for improving or altering the constitution of the companies, or the appropriation or administration of the property or revenues thereof," respectfully invite the attention of the officers of the companies to this part of the Commission.

The Commissioners will be very glad to receive and consider any suggestions respecting this part of the Commission with which the officers of the companies may do the Commissioners the honour of favouring them.

The company has no suggestions to offer on this head.

APPENDIX A.

The Company gave considerable information to the Municipal Commissioners appointed in 1834.

APPENDIX B.

City of London Livery Companies Commission,
2, Victoria Street, Westminster, S.W.,
18th July 1882.

Sir,

Referring to the circular addressed by the Commissioners to the Court of the Worshipful Company of Poulters on the 15th February last, I am directed to respectfully ask the court to oblige the Commissioners with the following additional information:—

1. The Commissioners would be greatly obliged to the court if they would make a return of their charities for the year 1879. The Commissioners learn from the Charity Commission that the trust income of the Company is upwards of 400*l.* a year. They would prefer to receive a list of the benefactions, with their respective amounts, from the Company itself.

2. Are the Commissioners right in assuming that the trust income of the Company is not included in the receipts and payments mentioned in the return to Part IV. H? If otherwise, will the court kindly inform the Commissioners what amount of trust income is so included?

The Commissioners will be much obliged both to the court and to yourself for this information.

I am, &c.
H. D. Warr,
Secretary.

H. W. Sadgrove, Esq.,
Clerk to the Poulters' Company.

64, Mark Lane, London,
20th September 1882.

Sir,

In reply to your communication of the 18th July last, I am instructed by the Court of the Poulters' Company to forward to you copies of the accounts rendered to the Charity Commissioners for the year 1879, which will supply the answer to par. 1 of your letter. (1)

In reply to par. 2, the receipts and payments mentioned in the return to which you refer include the trust properties, with the exception of Nepton's trust.* (2)

Yours, &c.
(Signed) A. W. Sadgrove.

H. D. Warr, Esq., Secretary,
City of London Livery Companies Commission,
2, Victoria Street, Westminster, S.W.

SADDLERS' COMPANY.

The returns of the company were accompanied by the following protest:—

The Saddlers' Company, in forwarding the annexed returns to Her Majesty's Commissioners of the City of London Livery Companies Commission, in compliance with their letter of the 14th August 1880, beg to inform them that the returns furnish full particulars of all the Company's property, both trust and private.

The governing body of the Company are advised that they might legally, and as a matter of right, decline to furnish the information sought by the Commissioners, but are not disposed to insist upon their strict rights.

With reference to the trust properties under the control and in the hands of the Company, the governing body beg to observe that annual returns of those properties are made to Her Majesty's Charity Commissioners by the Company, and therefore suggest that they might have been spared the unnecessary labour of preparing such returns; the governing body, however, have complied with the request, and those returns are sent herewith.

With reference to the private property of the Company, the governing body cannot help expressing the great surprise they feel at such demands being made as those contained in the Commissioners' letter, and consider it their duty to protest, in the strongest way, against the inquisitorial tone therein assumed. The governing body, while willing, as a matter of courtesy, to afford the Commissioners the assistance requested, and to put them in possession of the facts, reserve all rights to which they would be entitled in any legal proceedings instituted against the Company. It must be distinctly understood that the annexed returns are made under this protest.

The governing body, in fact, claim to retain on behalf of the Company the uninterrupted possession of their private property, and the right to deal therewith in the same way as though it belonged to any one of Her Majesty's subjects.

The governing body further desire to say that though in their belief every item of the Company's property which is subject to any trust has been returned under its appropriate heading, and the private property most carefully distinguished, yet if any question should arise as to whether they have or have not made accurate returns in this respect, such question must only be determined in a court of law where the Company can be heard by counsel.

PART I.—FOUNDATION AND OBJECT.

A to H.

Return A.—A statement of the date, ascertained or probable, of the foundation of the Company, and of the circumstances, so far as they can be discovered from its documents of foundation or archives, in which the Company had its origin.

Return B.—A list of the charters, charters of inspeximus, and other instruments of a similar nature, whether originals or copies, which have been at any time in the possession of the Company, together with an abstract of the purport of each, regard being specially had to any evidence which it may contain as to the object of the foundation of the Company.

Return C.—A list of any trust deeds "founding, regulating, or affecting" the Company, with the date of each the names of the parties thereto, and an abstract of the purport of each.

Return D.—A list with dates of any "decrees of court," whether of the Courts of Common Law or of Chancery, or of any Acts of the Court of Aldermen or of the Court of Common Council, "regulating or affecting" the Company, with a statement of the effect of each decision.

Return E.—A list of any other documents, not included in the descriptions in the preceding returns, which "found, regulate, or affect" the Company, with dates and an abstract of the effect of each.

Return F.—A concise history of the Company from the time of its foundation to the present day, with special reference to the inquiry contained in the Commission as to "the objects for which the Company was founded," and "how far those objects are now being carried into effect."

Return G.—Has the Company a licence in mortmain? When was such licence granted (referring to the document by description)? What is its extent, and to what extent is it now unexhausted?

Return H.—Is there vested in the Company, and how, whether by charter, statute, order of the Court of Aldermen, Act of Common Council, or otherwise, any right of exercising superintendence over, or any duty or discretion to encourage in any way, any and what art, trade, or business? State the nature and local limits of such control. In what manner and to what extent is such control now exercised? If such control is not now exercised, state the circumstances under which its exercise has fallen into desuetude.

A.—The date of the formation of the Company, and the circumstances under which it was founded, are unknown. It existed at a very remote period. There is now preserved in the archives of the Collegiate Church of Saint Martins-le-Grand a parchment containing a letter from that foundation, in which reference is made to the then ancient customs of the Guild. This document is believed to have been written about the time of Henry II., Richard I., or John, most probably in the first of these. In this letter reference is made to "Ernaldus, the Alderman of the Guild." This Ernaldus is stated by Mr. Alfred John Kempe in his work "Historical notices of the Collegiate Church of Saint Martins-le-Grand" to have lived before the Conquest, by which it may be inferred that the Company is of Anglo-Saxon origin.

B.—King Edward I., A.D. 1272, granted a charter. King Edward III., by his charter, 1st December 37 Edward 3, A.D. 1363, granted that as well in the city of London as in every other city, borough, or town where the art of Saddlers is exercised, one or two honest and faithful men of the craft should be chosen and appointed by the Saddlers there dwelling to superinted and survey the craft. This charter was exemplified and confirmed by Henry VI., Henry VII., and Henry VIII.

Richard II., by charter 20th March, 18th Richard II., A.D. 1374, granted to the men of the mystery of Saddlers of the city of London, that for the good government of the mystery they may have one commonalty of themselves for ever, and that the men of the same mystery and commonalty may choose and appoint every year four keepers of the men of the commonalty to survey, rule, and duly govern the same. Furthermore, that the keepers and commonalty, and their successors, may purchase lands, to the yearly value of twenty pounds, for the sustentation of the poor old weak and decayed persons of the mystery, and this charter was exemplified, ratified, and confirmed by Edward IV.

Queen Elizabeth, by charter 9th November, 1 Elizabeth A.D. 1558, exemplifies, ratifies, and confirms the previous charters, and re-incorporates the Company by the name of the wardens or keepers and commonalty of the mystery or art of Saddlers of the city of London. The charter names and appoints four wardens to hold office from the date of the charter until the 14th August then following, and authorises them to keep within their common hall an assembly of the wardens or keepers or freemen of the same mystery, or the greater part of them, or of the wardens, and of eight of the most ancient and worthy freemen, being of the assistants of the mystery, and that the wardens and eight of the assistants at least being present shall have full power to treat, consult, and decree upon the articles and ordinances touching the mystery or art aforesaid, and the good rule, state, and government of the same. Power is given to elect four wardens on the 14th August yearly. Power of giving two votes is given to the master at doubtful elections. Powers are also given for the government and regulation of the trade.

This charter is exemplified, ratified, and confirmed by James I. (20th March 4 Jac. 1. A.D. 1606.)

Charles II. granted a charter (24 Dec. 36 Chas. 2, A.D. 1684), which recites the surrender of all the franchises, &c., of the Company to the King. The King, therefore, on the petition of the Company, as for avoiding deceitful workmanship in the said mystery or art, and for the better government thereof, granted that the Company shall from thenceforth be a body politic and corporate, and one perpetual commonalty, incorporated by the name or style of wardens or keepers, and commonalty of the mystery or art of saddlers of the City of London. It is granted that there shall be four freemen of the mystery who shall be called wardens or keepers, and twenty assistants. First wardens are nominated to hold office till the 14th August then next from thence until four others be elected according to charter, and twenty assistants are also named to hold office during their natural lives, or until amoved, and for the future election of wardens, it is granted that the wardens and assistants of the mystery shall have full power and authority, on the 14th August, if it be not the Lord's Day, and if it be then on the Monday following annually, to choose and nominate four of themselves to be and stand wardens or keepers of the mystery for one whole year then next following, with power of amoval on misbehaviour by majority of wardens and assistants. It is further granted that on death, retirement, or amoval of an assistant or assistants, it shall and may be lawful for the wardens and rest of the assistants, then being, or the majority, one of whom must be one of the wardens from time to time, and at all times thereafter, to choose one or more of the commonalty of the art or mystery aforesaid, for the time being, in the place or places of him or them so dying or removed. The charter grants that they shall have a clerk. It is declared that no person shall be elected who is not in communion with the Church of England, or who does not take the sacramental test. All the lands, &c., then held by the Company are confirmed to them, and power given to purchase lands, &c., to sell, buy, and lease; also full powers for the government of the trade.

C.—Not any.

D.—1697, July 27th. Order of Court of Common Council of this date. That for the future no person be called to take upon him the cloathing of any of the 12 companies, unless he have an estate of 1,000*l.* And that no person be called to take upon him the livery of any of the inferior companies, unless he have an estate of 500*l.*

E.—Not any.

F.—The history of the Company is contained in the returns A. and B., and in the returns herein-after made.

G.—No. Under the charter of Charles II., set out in return B., all the lands, &c. then held by the Company were confirmed to it, and power to acquire additional lands, &c., was given, which is not wholly exhausted.

H.—The Company has the right of exercising superintendence over the trade of a saddler, and searches in accordance with the charter are still made. No duty is imposed by charter or otherwise of encouraging any art, trade, or business, but the Company exercises its own discretion in encouraging many out of its own funds.

RETURN I.—A list of the Charities, Eleemosynary, Educational or otherwise, which are under the management of the Company, stating in each case the name of the Founder, the date and nature of the Benefaction, its original and its present Value, and the purposes to which the Funds have been applied for each of the last preceding Ten Years.

Ewer, Sarah -	22nd April 1765	To apply interest yearly in putting out any poor boy belonging to the parish of St. Catherine Coleman, in Fenchurch Street, London, that they should deem an object of charity apprentice to some proper master of the trade of a saddler belonging to the Company. In consequence of there being no duly qualified applicants for the benefit of this charity, the funds accumulated. The High Court of Chancery, by a scheme dated the 13th January 1841, enlarged the scope of the charity, but there still not being sufficient applicants to exhaust the funds, the Company applied to the Charity Commissioners for, and obtained their sanction to, a scheme of its own, dated 3rd December 1874, which allows it, if no applicant for primary purposes, to apprentice poor boys belonging to the city of London (including any boys who may have been scholars in the city of London Freeman's Orphan School) to some useful trade.	—	—	—	200 0 0 Consols, now increased by investment of accumulations to 1,655*l.* 15*s.* 7*d.* Consols.	—	See above, Note 1. See above, Note 2.

Gunton, Samuel	30th March 1768	To sell and dispose of stock, and apply same to put out 16 poor boys to saddlers. Eleven boys were put out, but there being no applicants for the benefit of the charity, the funds accumulated. The Company applied to the Charity Commissioners for, and obtained their sanction to, a scheme which allows it, if there be not sufficient applicants for trade of a saddler, to apprentice boys to any useful trade, premium not to exceed 80*l.* in any case.	—	—	—	£ s. d. 400 0 0 new 3*l.* per cents., now increased to 700*l.* new 3*l.* per cents.	—	See Note 1, page 4. See Note 2, page 4. 3. The Company has supplemented this charity largely out of its own private funds.
Gunton, Samuel	30th March 1768	To pay and distribute half yearly the yearly interest among eight poor freemen of the Company of the age of 50 or upwards, of sober life, and members of the Church of England, not in receipt of alms or other pension of the said Company. There being an insufficient number of duly qualified applicants, the funds accumulated. The Company applied to the Charity Commissioners for, and obtained their sanction to, a scheme of its own, dated 5th November 1876, which allows it, failing duly qualified recipients, to apply, at discretion, from time to time any money then in hand, being accumulations, and also future income, in gifts to widows and unmarried daughters of freemen and other poor deserving persons of the trade of a saddler or harness maker, although not free of the Company.	—	—	—	1,000 0 0 Consols, now 1,481*l.* 9*s.* 7*d.* Consols.	—	See Note 1, page 4. See Note 2, page 4.
Honnor, Young George.	10th November 1769.	To pay 30*l.* per annum to any past master come to decay, and members of the court of assistants so much as the Court should adjudge. There being an insufficient number of applicants for this charity, the funds accumulated. The Company therefore applied to the Court of Chancery and obtained their approval to a scheme of its own, dated 28th February 1855, which provides as follows:—234*l.* per annum to be set aside out of dividends to answer the following pensions:—Master, 104*l.*; warden, 78*l.*; assistant, 52*l.* The balance unexpended in each year to be carried back to credit of the general fund. Almshouses to be built, and the furniture, repairs, &c. to be paid for out of funds; allowance to inmates not to exceed 12*s.* per week; medical attendance, medicine, candles, and fuel to be provided. Inmates to be decayed freemen or women of the Company, or widows of freemen 50 years of age or upwards, not in receipt of parochial relief, and not pensioners under any of the former clauses of the scheme. The almshouses were built, and beyond the 3,000*l.* allowed for that purpose by the scheme the Company expended out of its own private funds the sum of 981*l.* 19*s.* 9*d.* They are known as Honnor's Home, Spring Grove, Isleworth, and contain eight suites of apartments consisting of three rooms, and a large wash-house common to all. The number of inmates is eight. In addition to the allowance from this fund the Company pay each inmate 2*s.* per week out of its own private funds.	—	—	—	2,823 10 5 3*l.* per cent reduced annuities, increased by investment of unappropriated revenue to 17,136*l.* 6*s.* 1*d.* 3*l.* per cent. reduced annuities.	—	See Note 1, page See Note 2, page
Cradock, Thomas	27th June 1859	Annually, at such time and in such manner as the Company should, in its discretion, think fit, pay the dividends to and among such of the inmates of the Company's almshouses, called Honnor's Home, as it should think fit. In case of deficiency or want of objects, then to pay same among such of the poor members of the Company as it should think fit.	—	—	—	450 0 0 new 3*l.* per cent. annuities.	—	See Note , page 4.
Cradock, Charles	14th August 1861	Same as above	—	—	—	500 0 0 new 3*l.* per cent. annuities.	—	See Note 1, page 4.
Williams, Benjamin Bacon.	22nd October 1870.	To pay the dividends to the poor of the Company	—	—	—	540 10 10 reduced annuities.	—	See Note 1, page 4.

PART II.—A.

CONSTITUTION AND PRIVILEGES OF MEMBERSHIP.

RETURN A.—Governing Body.

1. State the present constitution of the governing body of the Company, whether such constitution is according to the charter, and, if not, in what respects such constitution varies therefrom, and when and how such alteration was made.
2. State the qualifications for membership of the governing body of the Company, the time and periods of election, and the qualifications of the voters at elections to the governing body.
3. State the functions of the governing body, and of the different members of the same respectively, and whether the members of the governing body pay any and what fees or fines on admission thereto, and whether they are paid any and what salaries or amounts in respect of their services respectively.
4. State the nature of the business which comes before the governing body of the Company, the method adopted in transacting it, the times at which the governing body meets for business purposes, the way in which the opinions of the members are taken, and whether the resolutions and decisions of the governing body are published, or are otherwise accessible to any or all, and which of, the members of the Company.

5. State whether the members of the governing body are liable to suspension or removal on any and what grounds, and by what method such suspension or removal is effected.

6. Has the Company any byelaws sanctioned by Courts of Law or Chancery, or by the Courts of Aldermen or of Common Council, or otherwise? State the effect of such byelaws.

1. The governing body of the Company called the Court consists of four wardens and 20 assistants, according to the governing charter.

2. A liveryman who has served the office of steward is qualified for membership of the governing body of the Company, but no liveryman who has been declared bankrupt or insolvent, or who has compounded with his creditors and has not paid his debts in full, and in case of bankruptcy has not obtained such a certificate as shall be satisfactory to the majority of the governing body, or who has been guilty of misconducting himself, or who, when thereunto required, refuses or is unable to prove to the satisfaction of the governing body, or the greater part of them, that he is able to pay his debts in full, is capable of being elected. Times are whenever vacancies occur. The method of election is according to the governing charter. The qualifications of the voters are to be members of the governing body and present at the time of such election.

3. The governing body of the Company, consisting of the wardens and assistants, attend to and transact the whole of the business of the Company. The senior warden presides at all meetings, and has a casting vote, in addition to his vote as a member, in cases of equality of votes. Fees or fines on admission are 111*l.* 6*s.* The members of the governing body are paid in the form of fees for actual attendance at the various courts, &c., which amounts to a sum averaging 109*l.* per annum to each member.

4. The nature of the business which comes before the governing body is to manage the estates and other property, charities, and all matters directly or indirectly connected with the Company. The governing body is summoned to the hall to attend the several courts and committees for all business purposes. The opinions of the members are taken by show of hands. The resolutions and decisions of the governing body are not published, but are accessible to all the members of the same.

5. The members of the governing body are liable to be removed in case of bankruptcy, insolvency, or misconduct. The method is by the withdrawal of the member himself, or by the decision of the majority of the governing body.

6. The Company has byelaws or ordinances, allowed and approved by the Lord Keeper and and chief justices of the King's Bench and Common Pleas on the 12th day of July, 21. Car. 2. A.D. 1669, which were continued by the governing charter. A copy is sent herewith.

PART II.—B.

CONSTITUTION AND PRIVILEGES OF MEMBERSHIP.

RETURN B.—Admission to Membership:—

1. State the qualifications for membership of the Company, the several grades of membership of the Company, and whether women are admitted to membership.

2. State the several modes in which the freedom of the Company may be obtained, the circumstances entitling an applicant to admission under each mode respectively, and the fees payable in respect of admission under each mode respectively.

3. State whether persons exercising any particular trade are required by Statute or otherwise to become free of the Company. Is there any process by which members of such trade can become members of the Company, and is there any process for compelling such persons to procure admission, and are such processes enforced, and to what extent? Is the freedom of the city of London in any and what way a condition precedent or subsequent to membership? Are there any members who are not free of the city of London? Do persons exercising any particular trade commonly become members of the Company? If so, how many members of such trade are at present members of the Company? What is the number of the members of the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the Company, who are members of the Company?

4. Are freemen liable to disfranchisement, and if so, for what reasons, and what is the mode of disfranchisement?

5. Is the livery of the Company limited or unlimited in number? What are the qualifications for election to the livery, who are the electors thereto, and how do the elections thereto take place, and what fees are payable on election? Are liverymen liable to removal from the livery, and for what reasons?

6. State the number of apprentices bound at the Company's Hall or otherwise under the auspices of the Company during each of the last 10 years, and state how many of such apprentices have been bound to members following the trade, if any, the name of which is borne by the Company. Has the Company in any and what cases paid the fees or premiums of such apprentices, and what has been the amount, if any, so expended in each of the last 10 years?

7. Is the freedom of the City of London in any way a condition, precedent or subsequent of membership of the Company? Are there any and how many members of the Company who are not free of the City of London?

1. The qualification for membership is respectability and responsibility of position, and upon the recommendation of a member of the governing body. Applicant must be of full age, and a British subject by birth or naturalization. Three grades—freemen, liverymen, and the governing body. Women are admitted to the freedom only.

2. By patrimony.—Applicant is admitted on making application, accompanied by certificates of the marriage of his or her parents, and his or her own birth or baptism or registration, to prove that applicant is legitimate, and born after the parent acquired the freedom. Fees, 12*l.* 19*s.* 6*d.*

By servitude.—Applicant is admitted on making application, upon certificate of his master (a freeman of the Company) that he has served his term of seven years as an apprentice. Fees, 12*l.* 19*s.* 6*d.*

By redemption.—A signed application is made, which must be presented by some member of the governing body, and need assign no reason beyond the applicant's desire to become a member. The question of admission is decided by the governing body.

Fees, if of the craft, 47*l.* 19*s.*

„ if not of craft, 58*l.* 9*s.*

3. By an Act of the Common Council, made 6th February 1722, persons carrying on the trade of a saddler in London were required to become members of this Company. There is no process for compelling such persons to procure admission, or any process by which such persons themselves are able to procure admission except as set out in Return B.—2. Yes, frequently. Twenty-two members of the Company are saddlers by trade.

4. No.

5. Unlimited. The qualifications for election to the livery are,—Applicant must be a freeman of the Company, in business on his own account or independent, having 1,000*l.* in possession or reversion, or having an income of not less than 100*l.* per annum if the income be derived from a salary, having been in receipt thereof for at least three years. The governing body. On application from a duly qualified freeman, at the discretion of the governing body. Fees, by patrimony or servitude, 49*l.* 12*s.*; by purchase, 84*l.* 10*s.* 6*d.* Liverymen are not liable to removal.

6. 1870. Four bound; two to saddlers.
1871. One bound to a saddler.
1872. Two bound; one to a saddler.
1873. Two bound; none to a saddler.
1874. One bound; do.
1875. Six bound; three to saddlers.
1876. Twelve bound; none to saddlers.
1877. Eleven bound; do.
1878. Fourteen bound; five to saddlers.
1879. Seven bound; three to saddlers.

In all the foregoing cases the special charitable funds of the Company have paid the fees or premiums of such apprentices. The Company has invariably waived its fees, and has paid the costs of the indentures and stamps out of its own private funds.

SADDLERS' COMPANY—continued.

PART IV.—F.

RETURN F.—(1.) The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them what has been the amount of the increase or decrease from year to year of the Company's income during the last 10 years, and whether there is reason to expect any increase or decrease during the next 10 years, together with a statement of the reasons for such expectation.

RETURN F.—(2.) The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them whether there is reason to expect any permanent increase or decrease in value in any of the estates or properties of the Company, and, if so, to what extent, together with a statement for the reasons for such expectation.

1. An increase averaging for the last 10 years 255*l.* per annum.
2. The increase or decrease is too uncertain for the Company to give an opinion.

PART IV.—G.

RETURN G.—The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them—

1. What is the system of management of the Company's estates and property?
2. In what way and by whom the several receipts and payments are taken and made, and under what control?
3. In what way the Company's accounts are audited?
4. Whether the Company's accounts are published or are accessible to all or any and which of the members of the Company?

1. The whole is managed by the governing body.
2. By the governing body.
3. By the governing body.
4. They are accessible to every member of the governing body.

PART IV.—H.

RETURN H.—A detailed statement of the income from all sources of the Company during each of the preceding 10 years, a detailed statement of the Company's expenditure during each of such 10 years, and a detailed statement of the assets and liabilities of the Company at the end of each of the last 10 years.

PART IV.—K.

Position in relation to Universities.

RETURN K.—(1.) Has the Company any relations with the Universities, or with any of the colleges in them? State the nature and extent of such relations. (2.) Has the Company any scholarships or exhibitions tenable at any of the Universities in its gift? (3.) Give a list of such scholarships or exhibitions, with their respective values, and the periods for which they are respectively tenable; and state how the same are awarded, whether the competition is limited to relations of members, or whether persons so related have any preference.

1. No.
2. Yes.
3. Three scholarships of 40*l.* a year (payable out of the private funds of the Company) for three years, tenable at either University. Usually upon the recommendation of the City of London School Committee. The competition is limited to pupils of the City of London School. No preference is given to any person whatsoever.

PART IV.—M.

General and Technical Education.

RETURN M.—A statement as to whether the Company does anything to subsidise or encourage education, whether general or technical, and a return of the means (if any) so employed, and of the amount expended on such objects during each of the last preceding 10 years.

In the year 1874 the Company offered premiums for the improvement of military saddles, admitting foreign competition. The governing body appointed a committee of some of its members. An exhibition was held in the Hall, which lasted over several weeks. His Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge, the Field Marshal Commanding-in-Chief, and his staff at the Horse Guards, inspected the same, and General Sir Richard Airey, G.C.B., Adjutant-General of the Forces, Colonel the Honourable H. H. Clifford, V.C., C.B., Assistant Adjutant-General, Colonel Oakes, C.B., Inspecting Officer of Auxiliary Cavalry, members of the staff of His Royal Highness, in conjunction with the Senior and Junior Warden of the Company, were appointed to act as judges. Fourteen saddles were selected, and were sent to several military stations for trial. On receipt of the reports, and upon the recommendation of the judges, the Company awarded certain premiums.

Pursuant to the recommendation of the judges, in the following year the Company again offered premiums, supplemented by an offer of 100 guineas from the Senior Warden, Mr. Deputy Harris, for the same object. A second exhibition was held in the Hall, under the same auspices, for the like time; and a similar trial of selected saddles was made; and, on receipt of the reports, and upon the recommendation of the judges, the Company awarded further premiums.

The Company expended on the above work a sum of about 500*l.* out of its own private funds.

The Company has also, as set out in these returns, applied its charity funds to the apprenticeship of boys having, where these were too limited, at its own expense, out of its own private funds, obtained schemes enlarging their scope so as to enable it to expend the whole of the income, both from the original fund and the accumulations thereof; has also founded and maintained the scholarships set out in Return K, and a scholarship in the National Training School for Music to the amount of 40*l.* a year for five years.

PART V.—REFORM.

The Commissioners, being bound to report to Her Majesty "what measures (if any), are, in their judgment, expedient and necessary for improving or altering the constitution of the companies, or the appropriation or administration of the property or revenues thereof," respectfully invite the attention of the officers of the companies to this part of the Commission.

The Commissioners will be very glad to receive and consider any suggestions respecting this part of the Commission with which the officers of the companies may do the Commissioners the honour of favouring them.

The Saddlers' Company has no suggestions to make.

APPENDIX A.

The Company gave considerable information to the Commissioners appointed in 1834. The Commissioners state, "The Company are possessed of freehold estates in Cheapside, Wood Street, Aldersgate Street, the borough of Southwark, Milford Lane, Strand, Maidstone (Kent), Stistead (Essex), and Harrow (Middlesex), as well as money in the funds, but they decline giving any further particulars of their property or of the application of their funds."

The Court took into consideration the replies to be sent to the Livery Companies Commissioners in answer to their inquiries into the City Companies as settled by the Special Committee to whom the subject was referred.

And, after discussion, it was resolved, that the returns prepared in answer to the inquiries instituted by the Commissioners appointed by Her Majesty to inquire into the City companies now laid on the table by the clerk of the company be approved.

It was further moved and resolved, that the same returns be forthwith transmitted to the Commissioners. And that this Court being of opinion that the Company is not bound to furnish such returns, the same be transmitted without admitting that the Commissioners are entitled thereto. And that the Clerk of the Company be and he is hereby directed to transmit such returns accordingly. And that a copy of this resolution be forwarded to the Commissioners with the returns.

PART I.—FOUNDATION AND OBJECT.

[A to I, both inclusive.

Return A.—A statement of the date, ascertained or probable, of the foundation of the company, and of the circumstances, so far as they can be discovered from its documents of foundation or archives, in which the company had its origin.

Return B.—A list of the charters, charters of inspeximus, and other instruments of a similar nature, whether originals or copies, which have been at any time in the possession of the company, together with an abstract of the purport of each, regard being specially had to any evidence which it may contain as to the object of the foundation of the company.

Return C.—A list of any trust deeds "founding, regulating, or affecting" the company, with the date of each, the names of the parties thereto, and an abstract of the purport of each.

Return D.—A list, with dates, of any "decrees of court," whether of the Courts of Common Law or of Chancery, or of any acts of the Court of Aldermen or of the Court of Common Council, "regulating or affecting" the company, with a statement of the effect of each decision.

Return E.—A list of any other documents not included in the descriptions in the preceding returns, which "found, regulate, or affect" the company, with dates and an abstract of the effect of each.

Return F.—A concise history of the company from the time of its foundation to the present day, with special reference to the inquiry contained in the commission as to "the objects for which the company "was founded," and "how far those objects are now being carried into effect."

Return G.—Has the company a licence in mortmain? When was such licence granted (referring to the document by description)? What is its extent, and to what extent is it now exhausted?

Return H.—Is there vested in the company, and how, whether by charter, statute, order of the Court of Aldermen, act of Common Council, or otherwise, any right of exercising superintendence over, or any duty or discretion to encourage in any way, any and what art, trade, or business? State the nature and local limits of such control. In what manner, and to what extent, is such control now exercised? If such control is not now exercised, state the circumstances under which its exercise has fallen into desuetude.

Return I.—A list of the charities, eleemosynary, educational, or otherwise, which are under the management of the company, stating in each case the name of the founder, the date and nature of the benefaction, its original and its present value, and the purposes to which the funds have been applied for each of the last preceding 10 years.

A.—The company now known as the Scriveners' Company had existed from a very early period as the Fraternity or Mistery of the Scriveners or Writers of the Court Letter of the City of London, and was "time out of mind" a society or company by prescription. The company has no document showing the probable date of the foundation of this society, but their records extend back to 47 Edward III., being the year 1374.

The company cannot say what were the exact circumstances in which it had its origin, but presumes that the Scriveners of London formed themselves into a society for the purpose of more effectually protecting their own interests and those of the occupation or craft which they carried on, but in order to afford the Commissioners all the information which the company now possesses the company submits herewith a copy of a printed report* from a committee of a court of assistants of the company made to the master, wardens, and assistants of the company at a court holden on the 23rd June, 1748, such committee having been appointed to inquire as far back as was possible into the nature or constitution of the Art or Mystery of Scriveners, and the particular laws and regulations by which they were anciently governed as making one of the free companies of the City of London.

At the time of the great fire of London all the archives of the company were burnt except the ancient book called their common paper, and which book is still extant. See the copy report. The Commissioners will find that this report deals very exhaustively with the subject of the foundation and object of the company.

B.—(1.) The charter of the Company of Scriveners granted by King James I., dated the 28th January, 1617, of which the following is an abstract:

Ordained and declared (1) that the Scriveners of the City of London and the suburbs thereof should be one body corporate and politick, and one perpetual society and community by the name of the Master, Wardens, and Assistants of the Society of Scriveners of the City of London, that by this name they should have perpetual succession, and should be capable in law to have, purchase, and possess, give, grant, sell, and dispose of all manner of real and personal estate, and to do and execute deeds and writings and things necessary about the same. And by the said name they should appear and be represented in all courts of law, and in all suits, and that they should have a common seal.

(2.) That there should be one master, two wardens, to rule and govern the society and its affairs.

(3.) That there should be 24 assistants of the society to assist the master and wardens.

(4.) That one William Dodd should be the first master.

(5.) And that two other persons should be the first two wardens.

(6.) That 24 other persons named should be the first assistants.

(7.) That the master, wardens, and assistants should have power to appoint and have a clerk and beadle, and to remove them for reasonable cause.

(8.) That all strangers and foreigners as well aliens or natives, and all other persons within the City of London, the liberties and suburbs thereof, and within a circumference of three miles of the City, and exercising the mystery aforesaid, who should not be freemen of any other mystery or company of the said City, should be contributors with the freemen of the said society in all payments as well to the Crown as in maintenance and support of the said mystery, and should pay the like charges as the freemen of said society pay.

(9.) That all men of the said society, and all other men dwelling within the limits aforesaid, and exercising the mystery aforesaid, should yearly pay to the master, wardens, and assistants a yearly payment of 2*s.* 8*d.* by quarterly payments, and that the master, wardens, and assistants should have full power to receive and enforce payment of such amount.

(10.) That the company should have a common hall or council house, in which it should be lawful for the freemen of the society, and all persons within the limits before mentioned exercising the art aforesaid to meet. And that the master wardens, and assistants of the society should enjoy all their ancient customs and ordinances, and should have power to make new rules and ordinances, and to put them in execution without molestation by the Crown or any justices or ministers, any statute to the contrary notwithstanding, and to annul such rules, &c.

(11.) That the master, wardens, and assistants should have power to impose taxes upon the several persons of the society, and all other persons exercising the said science within the limits aforesaid who are not freemen of any other company of the City, for the support of the society.

(12.) That if any person of the society, or exercising the art aforesaid within the limits aforesaid, should be summoned by the master and wardens to appear at any court, and should not appear without having reasonable excuse, or if any such person should refuse to pay all sums reasonably imposed upon him, or should not fulfil or otherwise infringe any of the rules of the society, that the masters, &c. [used for abbreviation in this abstract for the master and wardens and the rest of the assistants] should have power to impose a fine. And that it should be lawful for them to assess and distrain and levy and collect the fines aforesaid, and all other impositions without interruption by the Crown or any justices.

(13.) And that the master, &c. should have power, upon the Tuesday next after the Feast of St. James, or at any other more convenient time, to choose one of the assistants to be master and two others to be wardens, and that when chosen they should hold their office for one year.

(14.) That if the master and wardens, or any of them, should die or be removed from office, it should be lawful for the master, warden, or wardens or assistants, within 14 days after the death or removal, to nominate some other person of the assistants in the place of the person dead or removed, and that such person should hold the office till the end of the year, and till some other person should be nominated.

(15.) That when one or more of the assistants of the society should die or be removed, it should be lawful for the master, &c., within three months after such death or removal, to elect one or more persons of the freemen of the society in the place of the persons so dead or removed, and that person, when duly elected should be an assistant for life or until removal.

(16.) That the master, &c., and their successors, should thereafter and for ever have and enjoy all the goods and chattels, lands, tenements, possessions, and hereditaments, which they then had and enjoyed.

(17.) That the masters, &c., and their successors, should have power to purchase and obtain, as well of the Crown as of any other person, any messuages, burgages, lands, tenements, liberties, privileges, jurisdictions, franchises, rents, rectories, tithes, revenues, and other possessions and hereditaments, which should not be held of the Crown in capite by knight's service, nor of the Crown or of any other person in socage, without licence of the Crown, so that such lands, &c. so to be purchased do not exceed the clear yearly value of 200 marks per annum over and above all charges and reprizes, and that the master, &c., should have power to demise, let, grant, sell, charge, and dispose of such hereditaments, &c., the statute of mortmain or any other statute to the contrary notwithstanding.

(18.) The master, &c., should hold and enjoy all lands, hereditaments, franchises, privileges, jurisdictions, ordinances, or reasonable custom which they then or theretofore had held or enjoyed by reason of any Royal charters or letters patent, or by any other legal manner.

(19.) That the master, &c., or six of them at least, of whom the master or wardens, or any of them, should be one, might have, enjoy, and exercise within the Cities of London and Westminster, the liberties and suburbs thereof, the borough of Southwark, the precinct of St. Catherine by the Tower, and in all other places within three miles round the said City, the full survey, examination, correction, punishment, and government, as well of all freemen of the said city as of all and singular other men, foreigners within the places aforesaid, in any manner using and frequenting the said science or mystery, or publicly making and writing any evidences, charters, deeds, or writings to be sealed within the places aforesaid. And that the master, &c., should have power to punish and correct all persons as well freemen of the city as strangers using the science aforesaid within the limits aforesaid for their offences in insufficiently executing the science aforesaid, and to correct any defects if found and to impose reasonable fines.

(20.) To do as the master, &c. should see to be for the greater utility of the society and the people in respect of matters where express mention of the true annual value, or of the certainty of the premises, or of any of the gifts or grants made by the Crown, was in no wise mentioned by the present charter.

Consequent on a writ of quo warranto issued against the company by the Crown in 1684, the company's charter was surrendered on the 18th February 1684, and a new charter granted to the company by James II. On the 22nd November 1688, the instrument of surrender of the old charter was delivered back to the company, and the charter granted by James II. was cancelled. The charter granted by Charles I. was restored to the company by a statute passed in the reign of William and Mary.

The company have not the charter granted by James II., nor any copy of it, and cannot therefore give any abstract of it.

C.—The company does not possess any such deed.

D.—The company, to the best of their knowledge, have no "Decrees of Court," either of the courts of common law or chancery, and the only act of the courts of aldermen or common council of which they have any record is the following: "Act for regulating the "Company of Scriveners of London, made at a Court of "Common Council held for the City of London, the "6th day of May 1752"; the following is an abstract of it:—

Enacted, that after the 24th June then next every person not already free of the City of London who should exercise the science of Scriveners should take up the freedom of the Company of Scriveners, and that no person who should exercise the said science within the City or its liberties should, after the 24th June next, be admitted into the freedom or liberties of the City, or of or in any other company than the said Company of Scriveners.

Proviso as to admission into the company upon payment of certain fees.

Further enacted, that every person practising as aforesaid without being admitted into the freedom of the said company should pay a penalty of 5*l.*

Proviso, that nothing in this Act, or in any other law or custom of the City, should extend to charge any freeman of the City exercising the said trade within the said City or its liberties for employing any writer, or to charge any such writer for or under any such freeman so exercising the said trade within the said City or the liberties.

Enacted further, that the forfeitures and penalties so imposed should be recovered in the manner thereby prescribed and likewise disposed of.

E.—Ordinances made in the year 1390 (see page 752, Appendix A.) by the company, called "The New Ordinances," prescribing an oath to be taken by every one who should be enfranchised.

That no one should practise the mystery on Sundays or feast days; that every one taking the oath should on certain days in the year be "apparyled in one sute."

That every freeman should come on certain days to discuss among themselves concerning the "Mysterye," and to make ordinances for the government thereof; that the old wardens should make their account on a certain day, and that the common paper and treasury should be delivered to the new wardens.

That every one being chosen warden and refusing to act should pay a fine.

That none of the company should have any foreigner to "keep shoppe" under him on pain of a fine.

That none should take any servant in the mystery unless the same had been apprentice.

That none should take an apprentice with the intent of releasing him part of his term; that every apprentice be entered in the paper.

That no one should be made free or enfranchised of the company except by apprenticeship or by way of birth, with penalties for any infringement of this article.

Articles (see page 754, Appendix A.) made in the year 1497 by the Company of Scriveners ordaining—

First, that every person taking an apprentice in "the said science" should present him to the wardens to be examined as to his "Congruity of Grammar," and that if the apprentice is found not to have his congruity, his master should have him instructed upon pain of a fine of 100 shillings, and that every master taking such apprentice should deliver to the wardens to the use of the treasure of the fellowship a spoon of silver, value 3*s.* 4*d.*, or 3*s.* 4*d.* in money instead.

Ordinance (see page 754, Appendix A.) subscribed to the above and made in the year 1557, prescribing that the time within which an apprentice should be presented for examination should be 6 weeks after being apprenticed. And, further, that no person of the said mystery should allow any apprentice to witness the sealing or delivery of any writing unless he had been bound apprentice for at least one year on pain of a fine; first offence, 10 shillings; second offence, 20; and third, 40 shillings.

Form of oath for those that are enfranchised in other misteries and use the mistery of Scriveners of the Court Letter (see page 755, Appendix A). (The date of this is not known; it is believed to have been framed in the 14th century.)

The various regulations of the company not formally entitled bye-laws are spread over the whole of the books containing the minutes and proceedings of the court, and to extract these would, considering the time during which the company has existed, be a labour which it is not supposed the Commissioners require the company to undertake.

F.—Appendix A.

G.—The only licence in mortmain is that granted by the charter. See section 1 of same.

H.—By the statute 41 Geo. III. cap. 69, sec. 13, the right of exercising superintendence over all persons carrying on the business of notaries within the limits mentioned in the Act is given in the following words: "And whereas the Incorporated Company of Scriveners "of London, by virtue of its charter, hath jurisdiction "over its members being resident within the City of "London, the liberties of Westminster, the Borough "of Southwark, or within the circuit of three miles of "the said City, and hath power to make good and "wholesome laws and regulations for the government "and control of such members and the said Company "of Scriveners practising within the aforesaid limits, "and it is therefore expedient that all notaries resident "within the limits of the said charter should come into "and be under the jurisdiction of the said company: "Be it therefore enacted, that all persons who may "hereafter apply for a faculty to become a public notary "and practise within the City of London or the liberties "thereof or within the circuit of 3 miles of the same "City, shall come into and become members and take "their freedom of the said Company of Scriveners "according to the rules and ordinances of the said "company on payment of such and the like fine and "fees as are usually paid and payable upon the admis-"sion of persons to the freedom of the said company, "and shall, previous to the obtaining such faculty, be "admitted to the freedom of the said company, and "obtain a certificate of such freedom duly signed by "the clerk of the same company for the time being, "which certificate shall be produced to the Master of "Faculties and filed in his office prior to or at the time "of issuing any faculty to such person to enable him to "practise within the jurisdiction of the said company."

The authority and powers conferred by the above Act are now strictly carried out by the company. No notary can practise in London without being a member of the company and satisfying the company that he is legally qualified and fit and competent to perform the duties of a notary.

The nature and local limits of such control appears from the above extract, and the manner and extent of such control also appears from the extract above, with the addition that the company require every person to pass an examination in various subjects before taking up the freedom of the company, in order to be able to practise as a notary within the limits mentioned in the Act.

Founder's Name.	Date of Foundation.	Objects of Benefaction.	Present Income.	Original Income.	Application of Income.	Remarks.
Nicholas Reeve.	27th February 1625.	The poor brothers and sisters of the company.	£ 10	£ 6	The 10*l.* is added to a much larger sum granted annually by the company out of their own private funds for the same purpose, and is so distributed, and has been for a much longer period than each of the last 10 years.	Nicholas Reeve (a Scrivener) by will dated the 27th February 1625, gave to the Scriveners' Company 159*l.*, for the purpose of buying land &c. with it, and willed that the rents should be distributed among the poor brothers and sisters of the company, at the discretion of the master, wardens, and assistants. With this 159*l.* and 21*l.* added by the company out of their own private funds, a piece of meadow land, containing 6¾ acres, in Legfield, West Ham, Essex, was purchased. This field produced a gross rental of 10*l.*, but a net rental of only 6*l.*, and was sold in January 1701 by the company for 235*l.* This sum was applied by the company in part discharge of a mortgage on their hall, and in order to maintain the charity by a declaration and charge, dated January 1701, reciting in the deed that the net income of the property did not exceed 6*l.* per annum on average of years, the company charged their front houses in Noble Street, London, with the annual payment of 10*l.*, to be applied for the purposes of the charity, which was considered a fair equivalent for the rent, and this sum was always paid and applied accordingly.

PART II.—A.

CONSTITUTION AND PRIVILEGES OF MEMBERSHIP.

RETURN A.—Governing Body.

1. State the present constitution of the governing body of the company, whether such constitution is according to the charter, and if not, in what respects such constitution varies therefrom, and when and how such alteration was made.
2. State the qualifications for membership of the governing body of the company, the time and periods of election, and the qualifications of the voters at elections to the governing body.
3. State the functions of the governing body, and of the different members of the same respectively, and whether the members of the governing body pay any and what fees or fines on admission thereto, and whether they are paid any and what salaries or amounts in respect of their services respectively.
4. State the nature of the business which comes before the governing body of the company, the method adopted in transacting it, the times at which the governing body meets for business purposes, the way in which the opinions of the members are taken, and whether the resolutions and decisions of the governing body are published, or are otherwise accessible to any or all, and which, of the members of the company.
5. State whether the members of the governing body are liable to suspension or removal on any and what grounds, and by what method such suspension or removal is effected.
6. Has the company any byelaws sanctioned by the Courts of Law or Chancery, or by the Court of Aldermen or of Common Council, or otherwise? State the effect of such byelaws.

A.—1. The governing body of the company consists of the master, two wardens, and twenty-four assistants; such constitution is according to the charter, and is now and always has been maintained according to the regulations thereof.

As the company is closely connected with the public notaries of London, a majority of the assistants consists of notaries public.

2. The qualification for the office of master and wardens is that the candidate should be an assistant, and for the office of assistant that the candidate should be a freeman of the company. The time for election of the master and wardens is the Tuesday next after the feast of St. James the Apostle; they are put in nomination, and elected by vote. The assistants are elected at the meeting next after the meeting at which a vacancy is announced, and are elected by ballot. The only qualification of the voters at elections to the governing body is that of being an assistant.

3. The functions of the governing body are to manage the affairs of the company. The master's duty is to preside at all meetings, to give directions and advice when required, and generally to act as president of the governing body. The senior warden has no special duties. The junior warden's duty is to keep the accounts of the company and to act as treasurer. It is the duty of the master and both the wardens to sign the minutes of the proceedings at all meetings. Latterly, the office of stewards has not been filled, the junior warden taking upon himself the performance of their duties.

The master and wardens do not pay any fees or fines on election to their respective offices. A liveryman on being elected an assistant pays a fee to:—

The Company of - - -	£34	2	6
,, Clerk - - - - -	2	2	0
,, Beadle - - -	0	10	6

each member of the governing body receives 2*l.* at each quarterly meeting of the company during which he must be present.

4. The ordinary business which comes before the governing body consists of the consideration of applications for admission to the freedom of the company, and in every case in which the applicant desires to be admitted for the purpose of practising as a public notary it carefully considers the proof laid before it that he has served the apprenticeship required by law, to which has recently been added a requirement of a certificate from the examination committee of his having passed a satisfactory examination. The court deals also with questions relating to the property, accounts, pensions, charitable gifts, and any business connected with the matters and generally any matters affecting the rights, duties, and interests of the company.

The clerk of the company reads the minutes of the last meeting and brings forward any new business or matters requiring attention.

All questions, &c. are decided by vote in case of difference.

The governing body meet for business purposes four times a year (quarterly), and if any special business requires it, a special meeting is called in respect of which each assistant receives only 1*l.* for his attendance.

The opinion of the members is taken by vote.

The resolutions and decisions of the governing body are not published for the benefit of the members of the company, but are only accessible to the members of the court.

5. The members of the governing body are by the charter liable to be removed for any reasonable cause by the master, wardens, and assistants, or a majority of them. No instance of this is on record, except in the case of certain members of the governing body having been arbitrarily removed by James II.

6. Ordinance of the Lord Mayor and Aldermen, dated the 38th year of Edward III. (1365), applying generally to "all occupations of the Citie of London," ordaining that all occupations should be lawfully ruled and governed, and providing penalties and punishments for infringements of the ordinance.

Articles or ordinances made in 1374 by the Lord Mayor and Aldermen for the benefit of the Company of Scriveners, ordaining that "none should kepe shoppe "within the Citie unless he be free of the Citie and "enfranchised in the said mystery;" that no one should be received into the frannchesy without being first examined and found able; that every Scrivener should put his name to his writings, and that certain fines should be paid for not keeping the order.

Articles approved of in 1440 by the Lord Mayor and Aldermen, ordaining:—

First, that no man of the craft (i.e. of Scriveners) should make evidences or muniments unless first examined and found able; and that no man, unless he had served by apprenticeship, should keep shop without being so examined and then enfranchised.

That no person enfranchised should employ in the said craft any person who had not been apprentice or enfranchised in the craft without a special licence of the wardens on pain of a fine of 100 shillings.

That no person should be enfranchised without licence of the wardens, nor keep more than one shop, on pain of a fine of 100 shillings.

That every person of the craft "holding open shoppe" should, when required by the wardens, attend at any appointed place on pain of a fine of 12 pence.

Ordinances or bye-laws made in 1619 by the company, and examined and approved by the then Lord Chancellor and the Lord Chief Justice of the King's Bench and the Chief Justice of the Common Pleas, by whom it was ordained—

1. To the same effect as provided by clause 13 of the charter.
2. Ditto ditto by clause 15 of the charter.
3. That the master, wardens, and assistants, as they should think fit, should choose and admit into the livery such of the freemen as they should think fit persons on payment of certain fees.

4. To the same effect as provided for by clause 14 of the charter.

5. That there should be kept yearly two dinners, one for the master, wardens, and assistants, and the freemen; and the other for the master, wardens, assistants, and livery of the company, with provisions for the election of two stewards as to payment of fees for the dinners.

6. Provision as to the company keeping a chest, and as to the custody thereof.

7. Provision as to the fines to be paid by members elected to be master and wardens or assistant and refusing to act.

8. As to failure by the accomptant warden to give a true and correct account of the moneys, &c. come to his hands.

9. As to the clerk and beadle.

10. As to the expulsion and exclusion from office of a dishonest or offending master, warden, or assistant.

11. As to the holding of quarter days, and the attendance of members thereat.

12. As to the holding of a court monthly or oftener by the master, wardens, and assistants, for the transaction of the company's business.

13. To the same effect as clause 8 of the charter.

14. That the members of the society and persons practising as Scriveners within the City and its precincts should make an annual payment to the society of 2*s.* 8*d.* for quarterage, and as to the power of levying same (clause 9 of charter).

15. That the master, wardens, and assistants might impose taxes upon the members of the society and all other persons practising as Scriveners.

16. To the same effect as clause 12 of the charter.

17. That the master, wardens, and assistants should have power to remove any master, warden, or assistant for reasonable cause.

18. To the same effect as clause 19 of the charter.

19. That no person should be admitted into the freedom of the society to make profession of the science without being duly examined as to his sufficiency.

20. That no person should practise as a Scrivener within the City and its suburbs without being first admitted into the freedom of the society and enfranchised into the liberties of the City, and take a prescribed oath.

21. As to taking the oath on being enfranchised.

22. That no person practising as aforesaid should employ anyone in his business (except his apprentice) who should not be free of the said society on pain of a fine.

23. That no one should take an apprentice for less than seven years, or release him any part of the term for which he should be bound, on pain of a fine.

24. That every apprentice should be enrolled in the chamber of London, and his indenture of apprenticeship there entered.

25. That no one should set over his apprentice to any other person using any other trade or using the same science who should not be free of the said society without the licence of the master, wardens, and assistants.

26. That no one once made free of the said society should change his company or become free of any other company within the City without the consent of the master, wardens, and assistants, on pain of a fine, except on such person's election to a capital office or chief place of magistry within the City.

27. Against the use of bad language by any member of the society.

28. As to disobeying any summons by the society to appear for certain purposes and fines for so doing.

29. As to disobeying any of the foregoing ordinances.

Here follows the form of every freeman's master, and warden's assistant clerk, and beadle's oath.

Ordinances made and approved by the then Lord Keeper of the Great Seal, and the Lord Chief Justice of the King's Bench, and the Lord Chief Justice of the Common Pleas, in the year 1635.

That the stewards shall be chosen yearly as well out of the generality as out of the assistants, and every person refusing to pay 10*l.*

That every person chosen assistant and refusing shall pay 20*l.* fine, and yet be liable to be chosen steward.

PART II.—B.

ADMISSION TO MEMBERSHIP.

1. State the qualifications for membership of the company, the several grades of membership of the company, and whether women are admitted to membership.
2. State the several modes in which the freedom of the company may be obtained, the circumstances entitling an applicant to admission under each mode respectively, and the fees payable in respect of admission under each mode respectively.
3. State whether persons exercising any particular trade are required by statute or otherwise to become free of the company. Is there any process by which members of such trade can become members of the company, and is there any process for compelling such persons to procure admission, and are such processes enforced, and to what extent? Is the freedom of the City of London in any and what way a condition precedent or subsequent to membership? Are there any members who are not free of the City of London? Do persons exercising any particular trade commonly become members of the company? If so, how many members of such trade are at present members of the company? What is the number of the members of the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the company, who are members of the company?
4. Are freemen liable to disfranchisement, and, if so, for what reasons, and what is the mode of disfranchisement?
5. Is the livery of the company limited or unlimited in number? What are the qualifications for election to the livery, who are the electors thereto, and how do the elections thereto take place, and what fees are payable on election? Are liverymen liable to removal from the livery, and for what reasons?
6. (1.) State the number of apprentices bound at the company's hall, or otherwise under the auspices of the company, during each of the last 10 years. (2.) State how many have been bound during each of the last 10 years to members following the trade (if any), the name of which is borne by the company. (3.) In what cases, and to what extent, have the fees or premiums of such apprentice been paid by the company?

B. 1.—The qualifications for membership of the company are the same as those for obtaining the freedom, which will be found in the answer to Question 2 of this return.

The several grades of membership of the company are master, wardens, assistants, liverymen, and freemen.

As would appear from the ancient records in former days, women were occasionally admitted to the freedom, but not to the livery of the company; nothing of this kind has taken place for many years past.

B. 2.—The freedom of the company is obtained by patrimony, apprenticeship, and redemption.

The circumstances entitling a person to the freedom by patrimony are his birth while his father is an actual freeman of the company.

On admission to the freedom in this right the ordinary practice is to require a certificate of the marriage of the parents, the certificate of the baptism of the person claiming, and evidence of the identity of the parties.

For admission in right of apprenticeship, proof is required of actual service for seven years to a member of the company, and it is not necessary that the apprentice should have been bound to any particular trade.

As regards the admission to the freedom in right of apprenticeship to a notary under 41 Geo. III. cap. 79, or 6 & 7 Vict. cap. 90, the applicant is considered to be entitled to the freedom of the company by purchase, provided that the requisitions of the Notaries' Act (supra) have been complied with, and the court requires to be satisfied by evidence on this point before allowing the applicant to take up his freedom.

There are no circumstances which entitle a person as of right to be admitted by redemption, as the admission to the freedom of persons other than those applying under the Notaries' Act, or in right of patrimony or apprenticeship, is a matter of discretion with the court; such applicants are usually permitted to become redemptioners if the court is satisfied of their suitability. The applicant is proposed and seconded, and then a vote of the court takes place.

The fees payable on admission to the freedom by apprenticeship or patrimony are, to the company, (including the stamp duty of 1*l.*), 4*l.* 5*s.* 4*d.*, to the clerk 2*l.* 8*s.* 8*d.*, to the beadle 2*s.* 6*d.*, making in all 6*l.* 16*s.* 6*d.*

The fees payable on admission by redemption are, to the company (including the stamp duty of 3*l.*), 11*l.* 15*s.* 4*d.*, to the clerk 2*l.* 16*s.* 2*d.*, to the beadle 2*s.* 6*d.*, in all 14*l.* 14*s.*

B. 3.—By 41 Geo. III. cap. 79, sec. 13, it is provided that all persons who may apply for a faculty to become a notary public, and practise within the city of London and the liberties thereof, or within the circuit of three miles of the same city, shall become members and take their freedom of the Scriveners' Company, and shall, previous to the obtaining such faculty, be admitted to the freedom of the company.

There is no process for compelling such persons to procure admission, but there is the most effectual result that they cannot obtain a faculty to practise within the limits prescribed by the Act of Parliament without first becoming members of the company, and if any person attempted to practise without first obtaining his faculty, he would be liable to heavy penalties under the Act.

There is no process prescribed for enabling persons to procure admission to the company, if legally entitled to do so, but it is presumed a mandamus could compel the company to admit such persons. The company is not aware of the case having arisen.

There are 33 notaries who are at present members of the company.

B. 4.—Freemen are liable to disenfranchisement by the same means by which, according to the common law, a forfeiture of civil rights is incurred.

Offences against the corporation which tend to its damage or destruction are also causes of disenfranchisement. As no instance of disenfranchisement has occurred, as far as the company is now aware, and as no mode is specified by the charter or bye-laws, the company is unable to say what is the mode of disenfranchisement.

B. 5.—The livery of the company is unlimited in number. The qualifications for election to the livery are that the applicant should be a freeman of the company, that he should be willing to accept the livery, and that he should, in the opinion of the master, wardens, and assistants, or the major part thereof, be considered good, honest, meet, skilful, and able thereunto.

The electors of the livery are the governing body.

The elections thereto take place as follows:—

The livery is usually granted to freemen on their application, and the bye-laws provide that the master, wardens, and assistants, or the major part of them, as they shall think fit and see cause, shall and may from time to time call, nominate, choose, and admit into the livery or clothing of the said society such and so many of the freemen of the company being willing to accept the same, as they shall think good, honest, meet, skilful, and able thereunto, and according to the ordinary course a freeman may come upon the livery as soon after his admission to the freedom as he thinks proper to apply. Freemen become liverymen by being clothed with the livery gown and hood, and are usually proposed and seconded.

The fees payable on election are, to the company 15*l.* 2*s.*, to the clerk 10*s.* 6*d.*, to the beadle 2*s.* 6*d.*, in all 15*l.* 15*s.*

The livery cannot be lost after having been granted, except by the same means as the freedom (as to which, see answer 4, Return B. of Part II.)

B. 6.—The number of apprentices bound under the auspices of the company during each of the last 10 years is as follows: 1870, 1; 1871, 1; 1872, 1; 1873, 1; 1874, 1; 1875, 4; 1876, 0; 1877, 1; 1878, 2; 1879, 3; 1880, 0; but during the above years it is possible apprentices may have been bound to members of the company not being notaries, of whom the company may not have received information. It is a question what now constitutes a scrivener. No apprentices are bound to any member of the company as such.

The company has in no case paid the fees or premiums of such apprentice.

B. 7.—The freedom of the City of London is not in any way a condition precedent or subsequent of membership of the company.

There are 32 members of the company who are known to be free of the city of London, and there may be also other freemen of the company who are free of the City of London, but to ascertain how many would require an exhaustive search of the books of the City of London.

PART II.—C.

RETURN C.—Number of members.

State (1) the present number of freemen, (2) the present number of the livery, (3) the present number other members, (4) the number of admissions to the freedom by each mode respectively, and (5) the number of calls to the livery which have respectively taken place during each of the last preceding 10 years.

C.—(1.) The present number of the freemen on the roll is 40, but the company have no means of knowing with accuracy exactly how many of these are now living.

(2.) The present number of the livery is 22.

(3.) There are no other members.

(4.) The admissions to the freedom during each of the last 10 years, and of the calls to the livery, are as follows:—

	Admission to Freedom by Servitude.	Patrimony.	Redemption.	Calls to Livery.
1871	—	2	—	1
1872	2	—	2	1
1873	—	—	2	—

PART II.—D.

Return D.—Profits and Privileges :—

1. State with fullness what are the advantages, pecuniary or otherwise, incident to the position of a member of the Company in each grade of membership, as (1.) a freeman, (2.) a liveryman, (3.) master, warden, or otherwise a member of the governing body.
2. State the sums paid on an average annually for the preceding 10 years by the company to the members according to the grades of membership mentioned above, and of what such sums consisted, whether (1.) fees, and of what nature, (2.) pensions, or (3.) other payments, specifying the nature of the same respectively.
3. What circumstances are in practice held to constitute a claim to a pension or donation? State the number of present pensioners and donees respectively, and the amounts paid to them as such respectively. How many pensioners and donees are connected with the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the company?
4. (1.) What is the average standing of a member when he becomes a member of the governing body and (2.) what is the average time for which a member continues on the governing body?
5. Does the company carry on any and what trade or manufacture with which its title is directly or indirectly connected? If so, what is the capital, and from what sources is it derived, and how are the profits (if any) divided or dealt with?

D. 1.—A freeman and liveryman does not acquire any pecuniary advantage from being a member of the company. Each member of the governing body receives (as before stated) 2*l.* for each quarterly meeting and 1*l.* for each special meeting at which he attends, and no other pecuniary advantages. There are no other advantages of any kind, whether as freemen, liverymen, master, warden, or otherwise, as a member of the governing body, except possibly, though not probably, in one or two instances, the right of voting for members for the city which the member of the company might otherwise not be able to exercise.

D. 2.—The sums (being fees only) paid annually for the preceding 10 years by the company to the members of the governing body have been :—

1871	174	1876	170
1872	188	1877	202
1873	190	1878	186
1874	180	1879	188
1875	176	1880	170

D. 3.—The circumstances held to constitute a claim to a pension or donation are that the person should be a destitute freeman of the company, or the wife or child or children of a freeman, or in some shape connected with the company, who are left destitute or in very impoverished circumstances.

The present number of pensioners is three, and they receive respectively 40*l.*, 40*l.*, and 30*l.* per annum.

There are no regular donees.

A certain sum is annually distributed among different charitable institutions.

There are now no persons known as Scriveners, and so there are no pensioners or donees members of this trade. Neither are there any pensioners or donees who are notaries.

D. 4.—(1.) The average standing of a member of the company, when made a member of the governing body, is, as regards the present governing body, at the present time 6 $\frac{2}{3}$ years' membership of the company from the time of his becoming a liveryman.

(2.) A member remains a member of the governing body for his life or until, for any reason, he resigns. This does not often happen, however.

D. 5.—No. The Commissioners are referred to the report made to the court of the company on the 23rd day of June 1748, which explains, as far as can be done, what a Scrivener was.

PART III.—Officers and Servants.

Return A.—A list of the officers of the company, with a statement of the duties of each, the amount of his salary and emoluments, and whether or not he is a member of the company.

Return B.—A list of the servants of the company, with a statement of the duties of each, and of the amounts of their wages and other emoluments.

Return C.—A statement as to the mode in which the officers and servants of the company are respectively appointed.

A. The only officer of the company is the clerk.

The duties of the clerk are to attend to all correspondence relating to the company, to keep minutes of all business transacted by the company at their meetings, to attend to the apprenticeship of persons to members of the company, and to enter all apprenticeships in the proper books, to issue summonses for meetings of the company, to take charge of all the archives and documents of the company.

The clerk also now keeps the accounts of the company; in fact, attends to the whole business of the company.

His salary is 52*l.* 10*s.* per annum. All his other emoluments or fees have been stated, with the exception of those paid by persons on becoming apprenticed to a member of the company, which is 1*l.* 11*s.* 6*d.*

The present clerk is a member of the company.

B. The only servant of the company is the beadle. His wages are 15*l.* per annum. His other emoluments (being fees) have been stated in answer to previous questions, except the fee paid by persons on being apprenticed to a member of the company, which is 2*s.* 6*d.*

C. By election of the court.

Part IV.*

Return A. 4.—List of Houses let at Rackrent, belonging to the Scriveners' Company.

Place where situated.	Name of Street, and Number of House.	Description of House.	Name of Tenant, and whether a Member.	Commencement of Lease, if any.	Term of Lease.	Rent.	Fixed Deductions, if any, and by whom paid.	How and when acquired.	Date of Documents of Title and Parties.
City of London.	Noble Street, Nos. 12, 13, 14, and 15.	The houses are described in the lease thereof as follows:—"All those four messuages or tenements situate and being in Noble Street, in the parish of St. Mary Steyning, in the city of London, fronting towards the west on the said street, two of which said four messuages or tenements are situate on the north side and two on the south side of the great gateway or entry leading out of Noble Street aforesaid to Coachmakers' Hall, and one of which said messuages or tenements extends over the said gateway."	Henry Thos. Tubbs and Joseph Lewis, who are not members of the company.	Dec. 25th, 1864.	24 years.	210*l.*	Landlord's income and property tax, which are paid by the lessor.	The company acquired the land on which the four houses are now erected in 1631, by purchase for their own use from Charles Bostock for 810*l.*, such moneys being the private funds of the company which came out of their own pockets. The land was not acquired on any conditions, being an ordinary purchase with private moneys, and for the private purposes of the company.	The Commissioners are referred to the attested copy of the conveyance to the company, dated 11th October 1631, the original deed not being in their possession.

Part IV.—B.

Return B. 1.—List of Moneys belonging to the Scriveners' Company, invested in Government or other Stock, Shares, Funds, or Securities.

Amount of Stock, &c.	Description of Stock.	Source from whence arising, e.g., gift with name of donor, bequest, with name of testator, sale of lands, and which, &c.	In what Name standing, e.g., Company, Chancery Division of High Court of Justice, &c.	To what account belonging, e.g., any particular fund or trust account.	Net Annual Receipt.
£ 7,800	Reduced Three Per Cent. Annuities.	This amount is derived from the surplus of its income which the company has saved and accumulated, extending over a long series of years, and which has been invested as above.	The Master and Wardens of the Scriveners' Company.	The General Account of the Company.	£ s. d. 228 3 0

Return B. 2.—A return of the balance of moneys in the hands of the company unappropriated in their accounts on the 31st December in each of the last preceding 10 years.

Return B. 3.—A return of the estimated value of the plate, pictures, furniture, and other property, at present on the premises of the company, or in their possession elsewhere.

B. 2.—The company balances its books and accounts on the 31st July in each year, which is, therefore, substituted for the 31st December, the date in the question.

The balances on the accounts for each year are carried on.

	£ s. d.
Year ending 31st July 1871, including a balance of 472*l.* 8*s.* 5*d.* for the year 1870 - -	354 16 7

,, ,, 1880 - -	584 19 5

B. 3.—The estimated value of the plate (being the company's loving cup) is probably from 20*l.* to 25*l.* It was the gift of former members of the company. That of the master's badge is 50*l.* The company have no other such property.

* The Company has no property of the descriptions specified in several of the tables comprised in Part IV.

1881.

PART IV.—C.

RETURN C (2).—A list of any properties of which the company is cestui que trust, with the names of the trustees in each instance, the nature of the trust, the nature and description of the property, and a statement of the sums received by the company in respect of the same during each of the preceding 10 years.

C. 2.—The Ironmongers' Company are the owners of the manor of Lizard, in the county of Londonderry, which they acquired in 1618 for 5,000*l.*, but of which sum that company paid rather less than one half. The balance was contributed by several smaller companies. The Scriveners' Company contributing 570*l.*, which sum was obtained by compulsion from the private resources of the various members of the company, amongst them John Milton, the father of the poet.

He and other contributors passed a resolution subsequently that the contributions referred to in the resolution should thereafter belong to the company and not to themselves. Hence the possession of the share in the Ironmongers' estate. This estate produced but little to the company until after the then existing lease granted for a long term of years to the lessees fell in about the year 1843. From 1832 to 1840 it produced to the company only 95*l.* 17*s.* 7*d.*, and probably much less before; indeed the rent when paid seems to have been paid irregularly.

The Scriveners' Company is therefore entitled to and receives a proportionate part of the rents. The property will, it is presumed, be described in the returns of the Ironmongers' Company.

The company has received as their proportion of rent the following amounts :—

PART IV.—F.

RETURN F.—(1) The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them what has been the amount of the increase or decrease, from year to year, of the company's income during the last 10 years, and whether there is reason to expect any increase or decrease during the next 10 years, together with a statement of the reasons for such expectation.

RETURN F.—(2) The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them whether there is reason to expect any permanent increase or decrease in value in any of the estates or properties of the company, and if so, to what extent, together with a statement of the reasons for such expectation.

F. 1.—In the last 10 years ending July 31 the income of the year (deducting the balance carried forward from the previous year) was as below, showing an increase or decrease over the previous year's income of the amount set opposite to the income of each year :—

	Income. £	s.	d.	Increase. £	s.	d.	Decrease. £	s.	d.
1871	734	5	5	33	0	5	—
1872	893	4	10	158	19	5	—

1876	831	12	6	—			260	1	7
1877	1,131	1	8	299	9	2	—
1878	907	7	8	—			223	13	1
1879	878	7	2	—			29	1	5
1880	855	6	10	—			23	0	4

The apparent variation in the increase which is seen above arises from the fact mainly that the income arising from the Irish estate has not been regularly received, as will appear on reference to the accounts in Return H.

The company do not expect any increase in their income during the next 10 years, but rather a decrease on account of the probable difficulty in getting in the Irish rents. There is also a suit pending, instituted by the Ironmongers' Company, for partition of the Irish property, by which the income of the company will be affected.

F. 2.—The company does not expect any permanent increase or decrease in value of any of its property, and cannot say whether the Irish property is likely to yield increased or decreased rents, but from the present disturbed aspect of affairs a decrease may fairly be anticipated.

PART IV.—G.

RETURN G.—The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them—

1. What is the system of management of the company's estates and property?
2. In what way, and by whom, the several receipts and payments are taken and made, and under what control?
3. In what way the company's accounts are audited?
4. Whether the company's accounts are published, or are accessible to all or any, and which, of the members of the company?

G. 1.—The company have no property to which the question can apply.

G. 2.—The rents of the houses in Noble Street are received by a collector, who hands them over to the clerk, who accounts for them to the company.

G. 3.—The accounts and vouchers are submitted by the clerk to the court every quarter, and signed and approved by the master and wardens, and the balance appearing reported to the court. The year's accounts, which are copies of the quarterly accounts, and are entered in the ledger of the company made up to 31st July in every year. The year's account is then audited by the committee of privileges and signed by them and approved.

G. 4.—The company's accounts are not published. They are accessible to all the members of the court. No other member of the company, as far as the company knows, has ever asked for production or inspection of the accounts of the company. It is presumed the court would not admit the right of any other member to examine or question the accounts.

PART IV.—H.

RETURN H.—A detailed statement of the income from all sources of the company during each of the preceding 10 years, a detailed statement of the company's expenditure during each of such 10 years, and a detailed statement of the assets and liabilities of the company at the end of each of the last 10 years.

H.—The income and expenditure of the company for the last 10 years is set out in the following pages.

The company has no liabilities at the end of each year, except the annuity of 10*l.* charged on the Noble Street houses, and its assets are its real property, which is always the same, the 7,800*l.* reduced annuities, and the balance of the account, which varies, as has been shown in a previous return.

These liabilities and assets have been the same for the last 10 years, except that the reduced annuities were only 7,000*l.* until 1877, when more were bought, making the amount 7,800*l.*, which it still is.

Part IV.—Return M.

Return M.—General and Technical Education.

A statement as to whether the company does anything to subsidize or encourage education, whether general or technical, and a return of the means (if any) so employed, and of the amount expended on such objects during each of the last preceding ten years.

M. The company has set apart 105*l.* towards the building fund of the City of London College, to be paid to the college as soon as it is ready to commence the erection of proposed new buildings. The company have also resolved to contribute 10*l.* 10*s.* towards the expenses incurred on every examination of persons applying for admission to the company, with a view to practising as public notaries in London, and 100*l.* to the Society of Public Notaries of London, towards the expense of providing a reference library for the use of the members of the society and their articled clerks.

PART V.—REFORM.

Part V.—Reform.

The Commissioners being bound to report to Her Majesty "what measures (if any) are in their "judgment expedient and necessary for improving or altering the constitution of the companies, or the "appropriation or administration of the property or revenues thereof," respectfully invite the attention of the officers of the companies to this part of the Commission.

The Commissioners will be very glad to receive and consider any suggestions respecting this part of the Commission with which the officers of the companies may do the Commissioners the honour of favouring them.

The company does not feel called on to offer any suggestions for improving or altering its constitution, or the appropriation or administration of its property or revenues.

It considers itself to be a private association or body, without any public duties to the outside world, except in so far as the provisions of the Act 41 Geo. 3. c. 79. s. 13 render it necessary for persons applying for a faculty to become notaries within the jurisdiction of the Scriveners' Company to become members of the company before applying for a faculty, which the company considers to entail upon them the duty of ascertaining whether such persons are properly qualified.

As the whole of its income (except fees paid by members) arises, so far as is now ascertainable, mainly, if not entirely, from the savings and investment of its private moneys, the company considers itself to be at liberty to dispose thereof in any legal manner which it thinks fit, in the same way as any other private person or body.

If the company should at any time desire to make any particular disposition of any part of its income it considers that it has the power to do so under its charter and ordinances without any authority from the legislature; and to ask for further power, or to ask for a change in the constitution of the company, would be to ask for powers which it already has, or for changes which it can make for itself. It will also be seen from the foregoing returns, that the company has only one very small charity in its trust, which cannot increase or diminish in amount. With respect to this, the company feel confident that the intention of the trust is liberally carried out.

The company, for the above reasons, regrets that it cannot furnish the Commissioners with any suggestions.

APPENDIX A.

The Report from the Committee of Assistants of the Company of Scriveners, London, appointed to take into consideration and carry into execution the Company's charter, constitutions, and ordinances against persons exercising the art, mystery, or occupation of Scriveners in the City of London and elsewhere, within the limits of the said charter, who are neither free of the Company nor of the City: to the Master, Wardens, and Court of Assistants of the said Company, delivered the twenty-third day of June 1748.

The Report of the Committee.

Your Committee, with a view effectually to answer the purposes for which they were appointed, having thought proper to inquire, as far back as was possible, into the nature and constitution of the art or mystery of Scriveners, and the particular laws and regulations by which they were anciently governed, as making one of the free companies of the city of London, find that the scriveners of London have been time out of mind a society or company by prescription, and were originally called common scriveners or writers of the court letter of the city of London, and that the proper business of a scrivener was to make charters and deeds concerning lands, tenements and inheritances, and all other writings which by the common law or custom of the realm were required to be sealed.

It likewise appeared to your committee that the business of a scrivener was reputed and esteemed such a craft, art, occupation, mystery, or trade, as no one, by the custom of the city of London, could or ought to follow or exercise therein without being free of the city, and that none could be bound apprentice to a scrivener of London for any less time than the term of seven years, in like manner as apprentices are bound to other trades or mysteries within the said city.

This being the original constitution upon the foot of which they became a free company of the city of London, your committee find, by an ancient book belonging to the company, yet extant, called their common paper, that the common scriveners of London in ancient times before their incorporation by charter, made sundry applications to the Lord Mayor and aldermen (in whom was vested the chief rule and government of the several mysteries or companies of the city) for written ordinances to confirm to them the regulation of all persons professing or exercising the art or mystery of scriveners within the city of London and the suburbs thereof, as by themselves were from time to time deemed necessary and conducive to the common good of their art, and the public utility. Of these written ordinances your committee think proper to lay before you as many as have come to their knowledge, and by way of introduction thereto, they are of the opinion it may be necessary for them, in the first place, to set forth an ancient general ordinance of the Lord Mayor and aldermen, for the regulation of the companies of all the several arts or mysteries within the city which was made so long ago as in the time of Adam de Bury, mayor, in the thirty-eighth year of King Edward the Third; and entered in the chamber of the Guildhall, London, in book G. fol. 135, under the title of General Articles for all the Mysteries of London, as hath appeared to your committee, by means of a transcript of it in your ancient book, the Common Paper, the original of which being in old law French, your committee lay before you an old English translation of it as follows, viz. :—

Item,—It is ordeyned, that all occupations of the citie of London shall be lawfullie ruled and governed every one in his nature, in due manner, so that no falshoode or deceipt be founde in any manner of occupations aforesaid, for the honour of the good company of the said occupations, and for the common profit of the people; that of every occupation there be chosen and sworne fower or six, or more or less as the occupation shall require necessarily; which parsones so chosen and sworne have full power of the maior, the same well and truly to doo and perfourme. And if any of the said occupations be rebellious, contrarious, or disturbyng, so that they cannot perfourme duely their office, and there of be found faultie, that the same parsone shall abyde in prysone by the space of tenne dayes, and shall paye to the comynaltie for the contempt tenne shillings; for the second tyme shall abyde in pryson twenty dayes, and shall paye to the comynaltie twenty shillings; and for the third tyme shall abyde in pryson by thyrtie dayes, and shall paye to the comynaltie thyrtie shillings; and for the fourth tyme shall abyde in prysone fortie dayes, and shall pay fortie shillings.

In a very few years after this general ordinance, as your committee find by an extract from the chamber of the Guildhall in book G, fol. 307, the common scriveners of the court letter applied themselves to the Lord Mayor and aldermen, in manner following, viz. :—

JOHN PYELL, Mayor, the 26th day of September in the 47th year of the reign of King Edward the Third after the Conquest.

There came honest persons, the common scriveners of the court letter within the city of London, and the suburbs of the same, and did deliver unto the maior and aldermen a certain bill, after this form:

To the honorable sirs, the maior and aldermen of the city of London;

Prayen the scryveners of the court letter of the said city, That where their mistery is very necessary within the said citie, especially if it be uprightly and sagely by men expert in the same mysterye ruled and used. And for default of good rule many mischiefs be and often rise in the said mistery by them that come out of dyverse countreys into the said citie, as well chapleyns as other that have no knowledge of the customes, fraunchesies and usages of the said citie, and cause themselves to be called scryveners, and take upon them to make testaments, charters, and all other things belonging to the said mysterye: whereas they be foreiners, and not knowne, ne knowing so much as the foresaid scryveners which be free of the said city, which of long time have been learned in the said mysterye, and have geven great sums for their learning and fraunchesies to the great loss and disinherytyng of many people, as well of the citie as of many places within the realme; and also to the great damage and sclaunder of all the honest and true men of the said mistery. In consideration whereof the said honest company of scryveners, prayen, that it may please your honorable and discreet lordship, to graunt unto them, and to establyshe for the public weale of the said citie, and of the other countries, as also for the honesty and amendment of their estate, that they and their successors for ever may be ruled and enjoy their fraunchises in their degree, according to the articles ensuing, viz.

Imprimis, they desier that none be suffered to kepe shoppe within the said cittie, neither within the suburbs of the same, unless he be free of the said citie, and enfraunchised in the said mystery by the company of the said mystery.

Item, that none be receaved into the said fraunchesy unlesse he be first examined and found hable by them of the said mystery, which for the tyme by you or your successors shall be assigned and appointed thereunto, and be wardens of the said mistery.

Item, that every scryvener of the said citie and of the suburbes of the same put their name to the writings which he maketh, that they may be knowne as their dedes.

Item, that every one that doth against this order and establishment shall paye unto the chamber for the first time forty pence, at the second time six shillings and eight pence, and at the third time ten shillings.

Item, that these articles be enrolled in the said chambre to be fyrme and sure for ever, which bill red and herd, and advice thereupon had by the maior and aldermen, it is agreed amongst them and granted, that the articles aforesaid from henceforth shall be kept, and the offenders thereof shall be punished in the penaltie aforesaid, in form before-written.

And your committee also find, that in the year 1390, the following ordinances were made and assented to by the then masters, or wardens, and the other freemen of the mistery of scriveners, which your committee observe are in the said Common Paper, called, the New Ordinances, and are therein entred, as follows, viz.:

Imprimis, that every one that shall be duly enfraunchised in the said mistery of scriveners shall make specially the othe following, chargyng therewith himself in the presence of the wardeyns of the same mysterye; and whosoever will refuse so to doo, and will ne make the same othe shall be taken as suspect of falsehood; and also presented to the maior for a rebel, which oath ensueth here in this forme.

I, N., of my own proper will do swear uppon the holy evangelist, to be true in myne office and mysterye, and to do my diligence that all the feates that I shall make to be sealed shall be well and lawfully made after my learnyng and connyng, and especially I shall not wryte, nor suffer to be written by none of myne, to my power and wittyng any manner dede ne wrytyng to be sealed, bearing date by long time before the makyng of the same, nor by long time after, nor no blanke charter, nor other dede sealed before the writing thereof, nor closed letters of date to farre, nor of long tyme, where through any falshod may be perceyved in my conscience, nor no coppie of dede sealed but worde by worde by good examination, and neither for hast nor for covetuouse I shall take upon me to make any dede touching enheritance, nor other dede of great charge (whereof I have no conyng), without good advisement and information of counsaile. And all the good rules and ordynaunces of the said craft, I shall well and truly kepe and observe unto my power as much as God will give me grace.—So help me God, and the holy contents of this booke.

Item, that every one that shall have made the foresaid special othe, shall witness the same othe to be made by the wrytyng of his hand to be entred in the Common Paper of the said mysterye in time to come. And when that he shall be a notary to set his sign or mark that liketh him.

Item, that none of the said mystery shall on Sondayes, nor on dayes of doble feasts kepe open shoppe for no busynes nor gayne of covetyyse, nor shall wryte openly nor prively, onless it be in cause of greate necessitie, which maye be delayed by none means uppon payne of doble paieng the same gayne and lucre to the behoof and use of their mysterye, and he that shall keep any open shop of the said mysterye to make any open shewe of his said mysterye to the sight of the people uppon any Sondaye or festyvall daye aforesaid, shall incurre the payne to paye to the chamber of the Guyldehall of London, for the first tyme six shillings and eight pence, the second tyme thirtene shillings and foure pence, and the thirde tyme twenty shillings, and so forthe.

Item, that every one that shall make the said othe shall at one tyme be enclothed or apparayled in one sute, and that at the feast of Pentecost by the ordynnances of their wardeyns. And that every one of them for that shall paye a noble, at the begynnyng of Lent, before the buyeing of the clothe, and the rest of the money for the same as sone as it well may after the lyvreyng of the said clothe, And that the same vesture be pryncipallye used on the daye of the feast of Pentecyst, in the honour of God, which hathe geven all knowledge. And that after it be used honestly by twoo yeres at the least; that is to say, the first yere on holydayes, the second yere on holydayes, and that their feast be kept on the daye of the Holye Trynytie, in honour of the same feast.

Item, that every one free of the said mysterye shall come in proper parsone fower tymes every yeare at a certen hower and tyme within the same citie, where shall be appoynted by the commaundement of the wardeyns to move, declare and dyspute amongest themselves the myschieffs, perills and doubts in their mysterye, for their learnynge bothe for the kepyng of their said othe, and also to make ordynaunce for the good rule and governement of their said mysterye, that is to say, the first Sondaye after the daye of Christmas, the next Sondaye after the daye of Easter, the next Sondaye ensuing the nativitie of Saint John Baptist, and the first Sondaye after the daye of Saint Michaell the Archaungell. And that every one that is absent at any of the said foure termes, without reasonable excuse, and that maye be dulye proved shall paye for everye tyme to the chamber of the Guildhall fortie pence.

Item, that the old wardeyns shall make their accompt uppon a certen daye lymytted and assigned by the newe wardeyns, after that the same newe wardeyns have taken their charge at the Guyldehall. And that then there shall be delyverye made unto them of the common paper, and of the common treasourye if any be.

Item, that every one being duly chosen to be wardens, and shall refuse the said office, shall be presented to the maior, or to the chamberlain of the Guildhall for a rebell, and shall pay for such rebellion forty shillings, the one moiety thereof to the chamber aforesaid, and the other half to the use of the said mistery, without having any pardon for the payment thereof. And that without any tarrying one other be chosen in his place. And that the new wardens be presented at the mayor's court to receive their charge, as the manner is within eight days after the said election is made.

Item, that none of the said company of scrivenership shall have any forreyner to keep shoppe of the said mysterye under hym, upon payne of forty shillings, to be paid to the chamber of the Guildhall, and forty shillings to the use of the said occupation, and to avoid such manner shoppe, or such forreyne parsone upon pain of tenn pounds to be paid to the said chamber.

Item, that none of the said occupation take any servant allowed in the same mistery, onlesse the same person allowed hath been apprentice in the said mistery within the said citie, upon payne also to pay forty shillings to the said chamber of the Guildhall, and other forty shillings to the use of the said mistery, and to avoide such manner servant, uppon payne of tenn pounds to be paid to the chamber aforesaid, onless it be by the favour and licence of the whole mistery.

Item, that none of the said mistery shall take any apprentice of the said mistery to the intent to release him part of his term by deceipt uppon paine also to pay forty shillings to the said chamber, and forty shillings to the use of the said mystery. And that every apprentice be entered in the said paper after the enrollment of the indenture of his apprenticeship. And that the wardeyns take good heade to knowe who be apprentice, and who be allowed persons.

Item, it is ordained and established by the common consent of all that be of the said mysterye that every person of what estate and condition he be, for or by any manner, instance, request, prayer, commandment, favour or reward, shall accept or receive as a free parsone of the said mystery, or enfranchise within the said mistery by any means by the maisters and wardeyns, or by any parsons belonging to the said mistery, but only by rightfull manner and way of apprenticeship; and that when the same parsone hath bene apprentice, well and truly hath deserved and performed with his master, to whom he was put to be apprentice, or with his executors or assignes the term of his apprenticehood, or by the way of birth, as the custom of the said city of London in that case doth require; and that specially for the common profit of the realm, and honesty of the said mystery; and also for the avoiding and eschewing of disorder, especially the like mischiefs and dangers which happened in the tyme past by straungers ignorant and unknown of their good behaviour and good fame; and also nothing expert in the said mistery make free contrary to this article. And if any master, wardeyns, or other parsone whatsoever he be in the said mistery, shall do hereafter in any poynt against this article, ordynance and establishment which duly may be proved by the honest company of the said mystery that he at any time hath done in any poynt against this ordinance shall pay for every time that he shall be so found to have done contrary, or to be culpable to the chamber of the Guildhall ten pounds; and to the common use of the said mistery six pounds thirteen shillings and four pence; and upon that he shall be found and accompted in that his so doing as a rebell to the maister and wardeyns of the said mystery, and of the good governaunce of the same, without any pardon or remission to be by any means to be made in that case at any time to come.

Your committee also find, that agreeable to the before-mentioned ordinances, this company for several hundred years before their incorporation by charter, used from time to time to choose certain persons to be wardens or masters for the better government of their art or mistery who upon their being so chosen were presented and sworn before the mayor and aldermen of the city of London, as an instance of which your committee think proper to set forth an extract from the chamber of the Guildhall in Book H, fol. 267, in the time of John Heende, mayor; and which is therein entered in manner following, viz.:—

The seventeenth daye of Maye, in the fifteenth year of King Richard the Second, there came hither into the Guildhall of the citie of London, the honest companye of the Scryveners of Courte Hand in the citie of London, and did present unto the maior and aldermen of the same cittie, Martyn Seman and John Cossiar, scriveners, by them chosen to be maisters of their mysterye aforesaid for the yere following. On which daye the said Martyn and John were sworne to governe well and truly their mystery aforesaid, and to spare no man for love, nor to burden or grieve any for hatred; and to present faithfully to the maior and aldermen and chamberlayne of the citie aforesaid all defaults that they shall knowe in their said mysterye, &c.

Your committee also think proper to lay before you the following extracts taken from an entry, in a book at Guildhall, of the acts and ordinances of the lord mayor and aldermen of the city of London, entitled Letter K, fol 182, viz.:—

> The thirteenth day of the month of January, in the eighteenth year of the reign of King Henry the Sixth, after the Conquest, came here into the chamber of the Guildhall of the city of London, before Robert Large, mayor, John Rainwell, John Godney (and eleven others), aldermen of the same city, the good men of the mistery of writers of the court letter, and presented to the mayor and aldermen, a certain bill or supplication containing the following order, or form of words:—
> To the full honourables lord and sovereigns, maior and aldermen of the city of London.
> Full meekly beseechen the good folke of the craft of scryveners of courte letter in the said city, that it please unto your full wise discretions tenderly to consider the great parrils and mischiefs that ofte tymes have fallen, and yet dayly fallen, by diverse persons not conyng, ne expert in the said craft which take upon them for to make diverse feates, as well touching enheritance as other feates of charge, such as belong to the said craft: Whereas indede they are neither expert ne conyng, and so thorough their ignorance and unconyng hurt greatly and deceive the common people, as well to their disherytyng as in other cases personals to great hurt and disclaundre of the good true folk of the said craft; and thereupon graciously to graunt in eschewing of such parrills and mischieves in tyme hereafter, that the points and articles hereafter following may be had and admytted for fyrme and stable, and to be entred and enrolled in the chambre of the Guildhall, so that the good rule may be observed and kept in the said craft for their partie, lyke as it is within other crafts of the said city.
> First, that no manner man of the said craft, of what condition soever he be, take upon him to make any evydences or mynyments that concern mens enheritance, ne other great charges, such as might fall to great hurte of the king's people, unless that he be first duly examined and found able by the wardeyns of the said craft for the tyme being and by six or four persons enfranchised in the said craft, or by the maior and aldermen of the said citie, and also that no man, other than such as have served within the said craft, by way of apprenticialte from hence forward hold any shoppe of the said crafte within the said citie, ne in the suburbs thereof, lesse then he be by the wardeyns of the said craft for the tyme being; and by such six or foure persons of the said craft, or else by the maior and aldermen of the said city have been examined and founden able, and so for able by them presented; and thereupon be enfranchised in the craft of scriveners aforesaid.
> Item, that no person enfranchised in the said craft from henceforward within his shoppe, ne in none other place occupie. set on work, ne colour in the said occupation and craft of scriveners any person lesse than the same person so set on work, before that time have been apprentice or enfranchised in the said craft, without consent and special licence of the wardeyns of the said craft; and such six or four persons enfranchised in the said craft, or of the maior and aldermen of the said city for the tyme being, upon the payne of one hundred shillings to be arrered of every such person so founden defectyve in doing the contrary of this ordynaunce, and that as oft as he shall thereof be convict. And the foresaid one hundred shillings to be divided in the fourme ensuing, that is to say, the one half thereof to remayn to the use of the chamber of the Guildhall, and that other half to the use of the company of the said craft.

Item, that from hensforthe no parsone be enfraunchysed of the same craft without licence of the wardeyns of the same craft for the tyme being, and of six or foure of the most sufficient persons of the same craft, ne occupie, ne holde open within the said city ne suburbes thereof, but onely one shoppe, for the great perrills and mischieffs that negligently have fallen, and hereafter may fall through ignorance and unconyng of their servants or apprentices, the said craft so occupieing, or kepyng any shoppe under his master; in which the maister at all tymes cannot be present to the oversight and examynation of all feates made by his servant or apprentice in a shop so discevered from his maister, upon payne of one hundred shillings to be arrered of every parsone doing the contrary of this article at any tyme that any so be founde defectyve, and to be divided in the fourme aforesaid.

Item, that every parson of the said craft holdyng open shoppe in this said city, and suburbs from this tyme forward, when and as often as he there be warned by the bedell, or servant, of the said craft in the name of the wardeyns of the said craft, for the tyme being, be ready and attendaunt at houre and place to hym assigned, upon payne to pay at every tyme that he thereof do the contrary, twelve pence, to be arrered and divided in manner and form above rehearsed.

Which said bill being ready before the said maior and aldermen, and by them fully understood, because it seemed to them that all the articles in the said bill contained are agreeable to reason, redounding to the profit and honour of the state of the commonwealth, with unanimous consent have ordered, decreed and sentenced, that the said articles here among others may be entered of record, in the manner and form in which they are prayed, for the future firmly to be observed, reserving to themselves power to add, diminish, and correct, according to the variation of tymes and circumstances as to them shall seem expedient.

And that the Company of Scriveners of the court letter were accustomed to make orders and regulations of themselves for the government of their mystery, your committee apprehend will farther appear by the following entry which your committee found in the company's said Common Paper, and which they think proper also to lay before you, viz:—

Be it remembred, that the seventh day of January, in the year of our Lord God 1497, and the thirteenth year of the reign of King Henry the Seventh, the whole company of the fellowship or mistery of scriveners of court letter of the city of London, in good and honest manner assembled themselves together in the mansion or dwelling place of Henry Woodcock, then one of the wardens of the said fellowship or mistery, and then and there by good deliberation heard read openly amongst them, the articles, rules and ordinances concerning them and their said mistery being written and contained in their Common Paper, and besides to the better ordering, comfort and relief of the said fellowship, then and there they ordained, made and established amongst them certain other new articles to the which they have agreed to be kept, and put in execution as under specified; (that is to say),

First, they have ordained and established continually from henceforth to endure, that for as much as diverse apprentices have been taken, continued and served their apprenticehood within the said fellowship that have not had their perfect congruity of grammar, which is the thing most necessary and expedient to every person exercising and using the scyence and faculty of the said mistery; and in default whereof they cannot have the perfect knowledge and cunnyng of the said scyence, wherethrough oftentimes they err, and their acts and feates been incongruous, and not perfectly done to the great reproach and slaunder of the said fellowship. It is therefore ordained and enacted by the common assent abovesaid, that every person of the said fellowship which at any time hereafter shall take any apprentice to the said science shall bring and present the same apprentice to the wardens of the said fellowship for the time being, the name of the said apprentice to be written in the book of the said fellowship, and then to be examined by them, or their assigns, if the same apprentice have his congruity or not. And if it be found him that he hath not his said congruity, that then the master of the said apprentice to be monished and charged by the said wardens that the same apprentice be set and founden to grammar school, unto such tyme as he have, or by reasonable capacity may have positive grammar, or at least that he be competently erudite and learned in the books of genders, declensions, preterits and supines, equivox and sinonimes with the other petty books; and that within four the first years of his term, upon pain that every master of every such apprentice which doeth or suffer to be done the contrary to this act being monished as is aforesaid shall forfeit and pay at every time that he so doeth the contrary one hundred shillings sterling, to be applied to the use here under written, that is to say, the one half thereof to be equally divided between the chamber of the Guildhall of London, and the body of the same fellowship, and the other half to the use of the said apprentice if he or his friends will thereof complain, and make due proof of the same. And that also every master taking such apprentice shall give and deliver to the wardens of the said fellowship for the time being to the use of the treasure of the said fellowship, a spoon of silver, price of three shillings and four pence, or three shillings and four pence in money for the same spoon.

Relative to which last written ordinance, your committee found another subscribed thereto in manner following:—

And forasmuch as it is not plainly prescribed at the making of the order last afore specified within what time every person of the said fellowship should bring and present the name of his said apprentice to be written in the book of the said fellowship, and also to be examined by them or by some of the said fellowship, whether the said apprentice have his congruity in the Latin tong or not, to the intent that reformation and redress may be had and taken therein accordingly. It is now therefore decreed, condiscended and fully agreed, by the assents and consents of Thomas Went and William Pierson, now wardens of the said company; and by the consents and agreements of William Blackwell, John Lee the elder, John Welsham, Richard Mansell, Thomas Pierson, Barthelmey Brookby, Thomas Atkinson, Thomas Wytton, and John Warden, at a meeting at the Wax Chandlers' Hall in London, the sixteenth day of March, anno Domini 1557. That every person or persons of the said mistery or fellowship which from henceforth shall take and have any apprentice or apprentices shall within six weeks next and immediately after he or they shall so take and have any such apprentice or apprentices bound unto him or them bring and present the same apprentice to the wardens of the said mistery or fellowship for the time being, to the intent to have his and their names entered in the common book of the said fellowship, and to be examined in form aforesaid, according to the effect and true meaning of the said first recited order, upon such pains and penalties as in the same first order is declared. And further, that no person or persons of the said mistery or fellowship shall at any time or times from henceforth willingly suffer any his apprentice or apprentices, to certify or witness the sealing or delivery or any deed, evidence, bond, writing, or conveyance whatsoever, unless he or they have been bound apprentice, without fraud or covin, with his master by the space of one whole year at the least, upon pain for the first offence contrary to this order ten shillings; and for the second offence twenty shillings; and for the third offence forty shillings, to be levied to such like uses as in the said first recited order is limitted for not presenting of apprentices, as in the same first order more plainly appeareth.

After your committee had traced out the original constitution and ordinances of the company, and found the same to be in manner above set forth, they thought proper to inquire how far, and in what instances the company have conformed thereto; and they find that ever since the year 1390, in the reign of King Richard the Second, till the time of obtaining the company's charter, all the free scriveners in London and the suburbs thereof took an oath for the due exercise of their art or mistery in substance the same as the form prescribed by the new ordinances mentioned to be made in the year 1390, and which is very little different from the form now in use prescribed by the by-laws made in consequence of the company's charter under which they now act.

And your Committee also find, that such scriveners did all along upon their respective admissions into the company likewise enter in the book called the Common Paper, subscriptions of their own handwriting, testifying their having made such oath and undertaken to conform themselves to the rules and ordinances of the said mistery. And if any scriveners happened to be publick notaries, as many of them appear to have been, they prefix'd their notarial signs, or particular marks, to such subscriptions, agreeable to the said rules and ordinances.

And upon examining an antient book of the company, wherein are entered the accounts of the several wardens, from the year 1565, which your Committee find to be the only book before the time of the charter now extant, besides your Common Paper, the rest having been burnt, together with the company's hall at the fire of London, it appear'd to your Committee by a great number of entries in the said antient account book, that there were many persons who were scriveners by trade that were free of the City of London by some other companies, but that such persons, on account of their profession and exercise of the art of a scrivener were in respect of such their art, subject to the cognizance and jurisdiction of the wardens or rulers of the Scriveners' Company, and also to the like regulations and payments with the actual freemen of the same company. As an instance of which, besides a multitude of entries in the said antient account-book, your Committee think proper to set forth an entry they have met with in your Common Paper, purporting to be the form of an oath of such as were enfranchised in other misteries, and used the mistery of scriveners, which oath together with the title thereof, is there entered in old law French, but here rendered into English as follows:—

> The OATH for those that are enfranchised in other Misteries, and use the Mistery of Scriveners of the Court Letter.

YOU shall swear that you will be faithful in the office and mistery of escrivenry of court letter which you shall use, and that all the deeds which you shall make to be sealed, shall be well and faithfully done; and especially that you shall not write nor suffer to be written by any of yours any manner of deed or writing to be sealed bearing date for long time before the making thereof, nor for a long time after, nor any blank charter, nor other deed sealed before the writing thereof, nor any close letter dated in any far distant place or time, wherein any falsity may in your conscience be conceived, nor any copy of deed sealed, if not word for word by good examination, nor for haste nor covetuousness you shall take upon you to make any deed touching inheritance, nor any other deed of great charge, wherein you are not knowing, without good advice and information of council.—So help you GOD and all the Saints.

When this oath was first instituted your Committee have not been able to discover, but they imagine it to have been framed some time in the fourteenth century. As they observe it to be nothing different from the form set forth in the before-mentioned new ordinances, unless it be that one was to be administered in the first person, and the other in the second. And, that there is omitted in the last-mentioned oath the latter part of the former, by which such as were freemen of the Scriveners Company bound themselves, all the good rules and ordinances of the said craft well and truly to keep and observe.

And your Committee also find, that besides the regular scriveners, freemen of the same company, there used to be some few others who practised the art of a scrivener that were called brethren at large; and also some few foreigners that were called strangers, both which, viz., brethren at large and strangers, seem to have been licenced or allowed by the company to practise the art of scriveners, though not regularly of the company: And it seems that the brethren at large were either such scriveners as were free of the City of London by some other companies, or else such as were non-freemen and lived in the suburbs out of the freedom of the city; and that those scriveners, who were called strangers, were such as were foreign notaries publick, who, in regard they were aliens born, could not be free of the city, and yet were licenced or allowed, as well by the city as the Scriveners' Company, to practice the art or business of a notary and scrivener for the benefit of trade in transacting affairs in the way of their art, between the citizens of London and traders abroad in foreign countries.

It also appears as well by a great number of entries in the said antient account-book, as by the other book your Common Paper, that the Company of Scriveners anciently, before their incorporation by charter, were first governed by two persons who were called wardens, or masters; and afterwards by a master and two wardens, together with certain others called assistants, who had a clerk and a beadle. And that they used to collect and receive not only of such persons as were free of their own company, but also of all other persons that practised the art of a scrivener in London and the suburbs thereof, whether they were foreigners or freemen of the same, or of any other company of the City of London, an annual customary payment of 2*s.* 8*d.* a year, called quarterage, at 8*d.* a quarter; and that they also used to assess and impose sums of money upon strangers practising their art in London, as well as their own freemen, towards the raising of subsidies granted to the Crown and sums charged upon the company by the Lord Mayor and court of aldermen upon publick occasions concerning the city; and that before their incorporation they used time out of mind, to go visitations in and about the City of London, and the suburbs thereof, twice every year to search and take account of all persons that publickly used their art for the purposes aforesaid: And to the intent that they might be under due regulation and government in respect to their exercising the same; and as often as any scriveners refused to pay quarterage, and other duties, and to attend upon summons, or otherways misbehaved themselves, they used to cause such defaulters to be committed to one of the compters by the Lord Mayor's officers, one of which usually attended at the quarter-courts of the company to assist the beadle of the company for that purpose. And sometimes the master and wardens used to fine persons for defaults as there was occasion.

The Company of Scriveners having been in possession of their antient and accustomed rights and privileges, in the manner that has been stated, your Committee find, that in the fourteenth year of the reign of King James the First, the then master, wardens and assistants obtained, with the consent and approbation of the Lord Mayor and court of aldermen of the City of London, the company's charter of incorporation, whereby the freemen of the science, art, or mistery of scriveners of the City of London, were incorporated by the name, style or title of, The Master, Wardens and Assistants of the Society, or Company of Scriveners of the City of London, consisting of a master, and two wardens, and twenty-four assistants.

And upon inspecting the company's charter, your Committee find, after a preamble reciting: Whereas the freemen of the City of London using the art or mistery of scriveners within the same city and suburbs thereof, commonly called, writers of the court letter of London, in times past, and for time out of mind had been and then were an antient company and fraternity of the said city, and the men using that art within the said city had increased to a greater number, and many of them were frequently used and employed in weighty affairs, and matters of great moment and trust within the said city, that therefore for the amendment of the estate of the people of the society or fraternity aforesaid, and for the good rule and better government of all men using the science, art or mistery of scriveners within the City of London, and the liberties and suburbs thereof, as also within the circumference of three miles of the said city, his said Majesty King James the First did grant full power and authority to all his liege people and subjects, the freemen of the science, art or mistery of scriveners of his City of London and suburbs thereof, to be one body corporate and politick, by the name of, The Master, Wardens and Assistants of the Company of Scriveners of the City of London. To whom he granted power to plead and be impleaded, possess goods, hold lands in mortmain, have a common seal, and make rules and ordinances for the better support and government of the said company, and all others using their art.

And it being material for your Committee, as they apprehend, to mention in particular, the eighth, ninth, eleventh, twelfth, and nineteenth clauses, the same are to the effect following, viz.:—

VIII. That all persons using the art of scriveners within the city and suburbs of London, and within three miles compass of the said city, who were not freemen of any other company, should be contributors with the freemen of the mistery of scriveners in all payments.

IX. That all persons whatsoever using the art of scriveners within London and three miles thereof, should pay to the master, wardens and assistants 2*s.* 8*d.* per annum at 8*d.* a quarter, mentioned to be an antient payment and duty called quarteridge, by the freemen of the society or fraternity of writers of the court letter of the City of London, to the master and wardens of the said fraternity in times past due and paid.

XI. That the master, wardens and assistants should have power to tax all using the art aforesaid, who are not freemen of any other mistery, for the supportation and maintenance of their society.

XII. And also power to assess fines upon all persons using the art aforesaid (without exception) for non-appearance upon summons, or for fulfilling the orders, and them to levy by distress.

XIX. And also power to search and oversee within the City of London, and the distance of three miles every way round the same, as well freemen as foreigners using the art aforesaid, and offenders to punish by assessing fines and amerciaments, and them to levy by distress.

These are the heads of some of the principal clauses of the charter, but as the nineteenth clause, not only describes the several places within which it was intended by the charter, the master, wardens and assistants should take cognisance of and exercise a jurisdiction over all persons using and frequenting the science, art or mistery of a scrivener, but also expressly defines what that art or mistery is, your Committee think it may be of use to set forth this last-mentioned clause in the words thereof, which being translated into English, is as follows, viz.:—

And moreover of our more abundant grace, and of our certain knowledge and mere motion we will, and by these presents grant for us, our heirs and successors to the said master, wardens and assistants of the society of Scriveners of the City of London and their successors full and whole power and authority, that they the said master, wardens and assistants of the said society, and their successors, or six of them at the east, of whom the master or wardens of the said society, for the time being, or any of them always to be one, we will for ever may have, and shall have, enjoy and exercise within our said City of London, the liberties and suburbs thereof, and within our City of Westminster and the liberties thereof, the borough of Southwark, the precinct of Saint Catharine by the Tower of London, and in all other places within three miles everywhere round about the said City of London, the full and whole survey, search, examination, correction, punishment and government, as well of all and singular freemen of the said City of London, as of all and singular other men forreigners within the said Cities of London and Westminster, and the liberties and suburbs of the same, the borough of Southwark, and precinct of Saint Catharine, as well within liberties as without, in any manner using and frequenting the said science, art or mistery of scriveners, or publickly or openly making and writing any evidences, charters, deeds or writings, to be sealed within the said cities, liberties and suburbs of the same, and suburbs of the same, and the places aforesaid, or any of them, or elsewhere in any other place, not distant from the said City of London above three miles; and that the master and wardens of the society aforesaid, and the rest of the assistants of the same society for the time being, or the major part of them, from time to time for ever may and shall have the full power and authority of punishing and correcting all as well freemen of the said City of London as strangers and foreigners as aforesaid, frequenting and using the science, art or mistery of scriveners, as well within the said City of London and suburbs thereof, and the places aforesaid, as within the aforesaid limited distance of three miles everywhere round about the said City of London for their offences, in insufficiently executing, doing and using the science, art or mistery aforesaid, and the defects in the same science, art or mistery (if any shall be found) to correct and amend according to their sound discretions; and reasonable fines and amerciaments upon whatsoever offences, according to the exigency of their offences to tax, and to the proper uses of themselves and their successors by distresses to levy, collect and take.

Upon your Committee's taking into consideration these several clauses of the charter, they observed it had in view, and consequently was intended, to make provision for all sorts of persons, who did at that time, or might afterwards exercise the art or mistery of scriveners within its limits, which your Committee conceive to be reducible under these three general heads, viz.:—

I. Such as practised as scriveners, and were free of the Company of Scriveners.

II. Such as practised as scriveners, and were freemen of some other company of the City of London.

III. Such as practised as scriveners, and were non-freemen, either aliens born, or persons dwelling out of the freedom of the City of London, within the limits of the charter.

Having also inspected the company's ordinances or by-laws since their incorporation by charter, and which appear to have been made in the sixteenth year of King James the First, and to have been duly examined and approved by the then Lord Chancellor, and the two Chief Justices, according to the Act of the nineteenth of King Henry the Seventh, your Committee find, that the antient ordinances, as well as the several clauses of the charter, are in effect revived and confirmed by those by-laws; And particularly, that it is ordained as follows: viz.:—

XI. That there should be four meetings called quarter days, to which were to be summoned the whole number of the freemen of the said society, and all other persons using the said art as well Englishmen as strangers within London, and the compass of three miles thereof; and that whosoever should not appear, having no reasonable excuse, or after appearance should depart without licence should forfeit three shillings and fourpence.

XII. That there should be meetings monthly or oftener for hearing and determining controversies of any of the society, or any others using the said science, denizen or not denizen, free or foreign, English or stranger, as also for the correction and reformation of stubborn apprentices, or other persons acting contrary to the by-laws.

XIII. That all persons using the art of a scrivener not being free of any other company should be contributory in all payments with the scriveners, to the King, and otherwise, and every person refusing so to do to pay forty shillings.

XIV. That all persons of the said society, and all others dwelling within the City of London, the liberties and suburbs of the same, or within three miles of the said city, using the art of a scrivener should pay 8*d.* every quarter for quarterage, to the master, wardens and assistants, to be levied by distress, upon refusal to pay.

XVIII. That the master, wardens, and assistants of the company, or any six of them at the least whereof the master, and wardens, or any of them to be one, should have power to search and survey all persons whatsoever using the art of a scrivener in London, and three miles' compass, and punish them by fines, and to levy the fines by distress.

XIX. That no person thereafter should be enfranchised, or admitted into the freedom or liberties of the said society, to make open profession of the aforesaid scyence or art, until such time as he should first have been duly examined touching his sufficiency and hability to use and exercise the same art or mistery before the master, wardens, and assistants of the said society, or any six of them, and should be by the said master, wardens, and assistants, or such six of them as aforesaid, upon such examination declared and approved to be of sufficiency and hability, and should have taken an oath as is thereafter appointed.

XX. That no person thereafter should publickly use or exercise the art, mistery or scyence aforesaid, and make it his profession, or means of living, within the City of London, the surburbs or liberties thereof, or within three myles of the said city, unless he should be first admitted into the freedom of the said society, and enfranchised into the liberties of the said city, (as the case might happen to be of such persons living within the limits of the charter, either within or out of the freedom of the City of London) and should have taken such an oath before the master and wardens of the said society, or any two of them, as the freemen of the same company should usually take at the time of their admissions, according to the ancient usage, and according to the form therein in that behalf prescribed.

XXI. That every person which should thereafter be duly enfranchised into the said society, should upon his admission take an oath before the master and wardens of the said society, or any two of them, according to the form therein, in that behalf prescribed. And that every one, which should take the said oath, should witness the same to be by him taken, by writing under his proper hand to be by him entered into the common book of the said society.

XXII. That none keeping shop, and using the art should keep in his service, or imploy, in the same art, any person, but such as should be free of the company, upon pain to pay forty shillings a month.

XXIII. That none take an apprentice for less time than seven years, nor agree to release any part of his time, upon pain to forfeit five pound for every of the said offences.

XXIV. That every apprentice should be inrolled in the chamber of London, and presented to the wardens of the company, within six months, upon pain to pay six shillings and eightpence for every offence.

XXVIII. If any person whatsoever using the art of a scrivener should have a summons left at his house for his appearance at any court or meeting appointed, and should not appear, every such person so offending should pay three shillings and fourpence for every such offence; and every person obstinately refusing, or disdaining to pay should pay ten shillings for every such offence.

To these by-laws is subjoined the oath thereby required to be taken by every person upon his admission into the freedom of this company, which your Committee think proper to set forth in the words thereof, as follows, viz.:—

> I, N.D., do swear upon the Holy Evangelist, to be true and faithful unto our Sovereign Lord the King, his heirs and successors, kings and queens of England, and to be true and just to mine office and scyence, and to do my diligence that all the decrees, which I shall make to be sealed, shall be well and truly done after my learning, skill and scyence, and shall be duly and advisedly read over and examined before the ensealing of the same. And especially I shall not write, nor suffer to be written, by any of mine to my power or knowledge, and deed or writing to be sealed, wherein any deceit or falsehood shall be conceived, or in my conscience suspected to lye, nor any deed bearing date of long time past before the ensealing thereof, nor bearing any date of any time to come, neither shall I testify, nor suffer any of mine to testify to my power or knowledge, any blank charter or deed sealed before the full writing thereof; and neither for haste nor for covetuousness I shall take upon me to make any deed touching inheritance of lands, or estate for life, or years, nor any deed of great charge, whereof I have not cuning, without good advice and information of councel; and all the good rules and ordinances of the Society of Scriveners of the City of London, I shall well and truly keep and observe to my power, so far as God shall give me grace. So help me GOD, and the holy contents of this book.

As this oath, in regard to the nature and form of it, had the sanction of being considered and approved by the heads of the law at the time the company's by-laws were confirmed, and, it may well be imagined those learned judges considered it with more than ordinary attention, since the subject-matter of it concerned an art, mistery, or occupation, in the due exercise of which, they themselves had been often consulted, as council, and over which they at that time, in point of judgment, presided; so your Committee are of opinion, that no form of words could be better adapted to provide against every species of misbehaviour which persons exercising the art of scriveners, could possibly be guilty of, to the prejudice of the publick, either from their dishonesty, or want of skill.

Your Committee also found by inspecting the several books of the company since their incorporation by charter, that the master, wardens, and assistants, to the number of six had from that time, for a great number of years, been used, agreeable to the company's by-laws to go their visitations constantly and regularly twice every year, to take an account of persons using the art of a scrivener within the City of London, and the circuit of three miles round the same; and they used to collect quarterage money, and other duties from strangers and persons free of other companies, as well as their own freemen, according to antient custom and prescription used time out of mind, before their charter and by-laws were obtained.

And your Committee likewise found, that the master and wardens, &c. since the company's incorporation by charter generally applied themselves either to the Lord Mayor, or to the Lord Mayor and Court of Aldermen for redress against such scriveners as were refractory, in order to oblige them to pay their quarterage, and other duties to this company, and this appeared to your Committee from several entries in the company's books, some of which your Committee think material here to set forth at length, viz.:—

16th Octob. 1632. A petition was preferred, in the name of the master, wardens, and assistants of this company, to the Right Honourable the Lord Mayor and Court of Aldermen, to be relieved against strangers using the profession of scriveners in London, and yet refusing to bear any charge with their company. Upon which the court of aldermen this day made the order following, viz.:—

This day upon hearing the matters petitioned unto this court, by the master, wardens, and assistants of the Company of Scriveners of London against the strangers using the petitioners' profession, for refusing to bear part of the burdens of their taxations, it is thought fit, and so ordered by this court, with the consent of the said master and wardens, and of John Emans, and Joshua Maynet, publick notaries here present, that Mr. Alderman Freeman and Mr. Alderman Moulson shall hear and consider of the demands of the said master and wardens, and of the propositions of the said Emans and Maynet, and thereupon to make a friendly reconciliation of the parties, and of all difference between them, and to certify unto this court in writing under their hands how they find the same, together with their doing and opinions, and John Tyther to warn and attend them.

Per Robertum Michel, Dep. Com. Clerc. Civitatis Londinensis.

The said order being presented to the said aldermen, they appointed a day, and hearing both parties, made this certificate following, viz.:

According to an order of the sixteenth of this instant October, made at a court of aldermen, we this day called the master and wardens of the company of scriveners of London; and John Emans and Joshua Maynet, publick notaries before us, and heard and considered of the demands of the said master and wardens, and of the answers and propositions of the said Emans and Maynet, and for that the said master and wardens did make it appear unto us, that by their ordinances confirmed by Act of Parliament, all strangers and others not free of their company, using their art within the City of London, and three miles' compass of the same, ought to pay quarterage, and other duties unto the said company; and that not only divers strangers, and other publick notaries (not free of their company) had heretofore paid and contributed towards the taxations imposed upon the said company, but also the said Emans and Maynet themselves had divers times paid the like; whereupon, and upon the offer of the said John Emans and Joshua Maynet freely to remit to the said company all sums of money whatsoever by them formerly paid to the said company towards the Irish plantation, provision of corn, or otherwise, and never to claim any benefit thereby, or restitution of any part thereof, we thought meet to abate part of the arrearages demanded by the said master and wardens of the said Emans and Maynet, and to order the said John Emans for his part to pay forthwith unto the said master and wardens, the sum of one pound seven shillings and fourpence; and the said Joshua Maynet likewise for his part to pay unto them the sum of one pound nine shillings and fourpence, in full satisfaction of all arrearages for the time past until this day due and owing by them to the said company: and that hereafter the said Emans and Maynet shall pay unto the said company quarterage, and be contributory towards the charges and taxations which shall be imposed upon the said company in reasonable manner, as the said company shall rate and assess themselves: and we hold it fit, that other persons of the same quality do the like. All which we thought good to certify under our hands this 26th day of October 1632.

Raphe Freeman,
Thomas Moulson.

Jovis 17. Januarii Anno Regni Caroli Octavo.

Which report being then read only at a court of aldermen was allowed of, and ordered to be entered into the repertory, and to be accordingly performed.

Per Robertum Michel, Dep. Cler. Civit. Lond.

According to the said report and order thereupon, the said Emans and Maynet paid their moneys to Mr. Warden Smith, and since Thomas Dewatchler, alias Walters, by order of the Lord Mayor, paid ten shillings for all arrearages, and is hereafter to be contributory to this company for quarterage and other taxations.

7th Octob. 1633. Whereas Edward Singleton and Anthony Porter, of Lymehouse, William Paramore, of Ratcliffe, Robert Watson of Wapping, Edward Collins, of Covent Garden, John Morgan, of Shadwell, and Roger Miller, in West Smithfield, all using the art of scriveners, and not free of this society, appeared at this court, and promised to appear quarterly, and some of them desirous to be of this company admitted; and thereupon all but the said Collins paid eight pence apiece for this quarter, and promised to continue the same hereafter, and at the next quarter to come and subscribe their names and signatures in a book to be provided for that purpose, as they do to all deeds and evidences for the better testimony thereof; Collins also promised to deliver his 8*d.* to the beadle.

4 July 1654. It was ordered, that the notaries strangers should be spoken to for their quarterage, which if they refuse to pay, they are to be convened before the Lord Mayor about the same.

17 January 1655. Also, it was ordered, that the visitation days should be observed, the third week in Lent; and the master and wardens are desired to call such of the assistants as they please to accompany them in their perambulation, and to meet at Mercers' Chappel by eight of the clock in the morning for the eastern perambulation, on Tuesday the 11th of March next; and for the western perambulation, on Thursday the 13th of March next. And for the better reducing the Dutch notaries, and others using the art to conformity to the company's charter and ordinances, Mr. Bromley, or some other of the Lord Mayor's officers is also to be spoken unto to attend them.

According to order of the last court the two visitation days were observed, and on Tuesday the 11th of March 1655, being the day of perambulation for the eastern circuit, there were warned before the Right Honourable John Dethick, Lord Mayor of the city of London, against Monday the 17th of this instant March, for refusing to pay quarterage, Mr. Marius, Mr. Daniel, notaries, on the backside of the Exchange, Mr. John Rolfe, free of the company of Goldsmiths, Mr. John Bland, free of this company; Henry Lewis, free of the Merchant Taylors; John Butler, jun. free of the Fletchers, near Aldgate; William Williamson, free of the Fletchers, in Peter's Alley, Cornhill.

17th March 1655. This day the six persons first-mentioned appeared before his lordship, but Mr. Williamson appeared not.

The said Mr. Bland condiscended to pay quarterage, but Mr. Rolfe, Mr. Lewis, and Mr. Butler, for refusing to do it, were then bound over to appear at the next court of aldermen, there to answer the matters complained of by the company. At which time Mr. Marius and Mr. Daniel, being notaries, were respited till the next court to be holden at Scriveners' Hall.

18th March 1655. The said Mr. Rolfe, Mr. Lewis, and Mr. Butler coming this day to make their appearance before the Right Honourable the Lord Mayor and court of aldermen, did before Mr. Francis Mosse, Mr. Bromley, the Lord Mayor's officer and others, consent to pay quarterage to the Company of Scriveners for the future, and so desired to be spared from further trouble. And thereupon, upon their promise of conformity, were dismissed from further attendance.—Mr. Maynet, notary, and divers scriveners free of other companies, viz., Mr. Colston, Mr. Parry, Mr. Poulteney, Mr. Tattershall, Mr. Broom, Mr. King, Mr. Mills, Mr. Spalding, and Mr. Retorick, paid quarterage to our company, and conformed themselves to this society.

And your Committee observed, in the course of their examination, in the company's books, that the master, wardens and assistants continued their customary visitations, and to collect quarterage money, &c. of all persons, as well foreigners as freemen who practised the art of scriveners within the City of London, and three miles' compass thereof, till about the year 1705, when, as appeared to your Committee, the company first discontinued their visitations, and no longer collected quarterage money of any persons whatsoever; which discontinuance, as your Committee apprehend, was in great measure occasioned by the clerk of the company's being at that time superannuated, and by the misfortune which befel the company soon afterwards, not only of losing several of the old books of the acts and proceedings of the company, which had been saved at the fire of London (when some of them were destroyed, as has been mentioned before), but also, losing several of their other books of entries since that time, which the company within these few years last past have had the good fortune to recover.

And here your Committee think proper to take notice, that it manifestly appears by a great number of instances, of which there are many entries in your recovered books, that notaries and attornies were considered as scriveners, in as much as they practised as such, and accordingly paid quarterage money to this company, and were deemed subject to visitation and summons; but your Committee find no entries, in any of your books, of persons paying quarterage, to the company by the description of attornies, before the year 1665, about which time attornies actually paid quarterage, and then first began, as your Committee apprehend, to concern themselves in the practice of the art or mistery of scriveners, and as such were then called upon to make the customary payments of quarterage, &c. to this company; for till then your committee have reason to believe the regularly-bred scriveners (that is to say) such as had been bound to free scriveners, and had served seven years apprentice to the art, according to the custom of London, were the only persons that were employed, and whose proper business it was, to make and engross deeds of any kind to be sealed, such as bonds, bills of sale, charter-parties, releases, indentures, and all sorts of written conveyances affecting estates real and personal; but of late years attornies in the courts of law and sollicitors in the courts of equity, tho' their respective professions and business are in strictness very different from that of scriveners have become innovators upon the latter, and have taken upon them to exercise the proper art or mistery of scriveners as well within the City of London, as elsewhere, within the limits and jurisdiction of the company's charter and by-laws, without the inspection and regulation of the master, wardens, and assistants of this company; and there is also a great number of other persons, within the Cities of London and Westminster, and the circumference of three miles from the City of London, who take upon them to use the art of scriveners, without having either served an apprenticeship thereto or been admitted into this company and taken the scriveners' oath, or any otherwise qualified to use such art within the cities of London and Westminster, &c. agreeable to the custom of London, and the company's charter and by-laws.

With regard to attornies, it may be observed, that although within a few years before the Act of 2 Geo. II. cap. 23. for the better regulation of attornies and sollicitors, which passed in the year 1729, there was a great number of persons that practised as attornies who were in fact no attornies upon record, in either of the courts at Westminster, there being but very few really such at that time, and those were properly called entering clerks, which all together made not one in a hundred in comparison with the number of attornies at present; yet so small was their number who practised as attornies in this city about forty or fifty years ago, that, as your Committee have been credibly informed, they did not amount to above five or six in the whole City of London, besides such as were attornies of the city courts. Therefore, as all who are now attornies have been admitted under the above-mentioned Act, their qualification for the practice of such their profession must depend merely upon that, which only authorised them to practise in the manner that entering clerks, or such as had been regularly admitted attornies upon record, had done, before that Act was made, their business being, strictly speaking, nothing more than prosecuting and defending suits for their clients, in the respective courts to which they belonged; upon which account it is, that attornies, in construction of law, are considered as always present in those courts, in the nature of proxies for the suitors there, and are therefore privileged with an exemption from all offices, civil as well as military, where any personal service is required, so long as they confine themselves to their proper profession; whereas the free scriveners, and others exercising the art or mistery of a scrivener only, have always been considered, in those respects, upon the foot of tradesmen, artists, or persons of manual occupations, and are equally liable to serve all such offices, with any other citizen or subject of the commonwealth.

Besides, that the branch of business, which the attornies have of late years taken from the scriveners by innovation and incroachment, is properly the business of a scrivener, and not of an attorney, your Committee presume sufficiently appears, not only from the tenor of the before-mentioned Act, but also from the different course of proceeding, which attornies take in recovering such bills as are due to them for the prosecution of suits in law, and such other bills for making deeds and other the proper business of a scrivener, for as to the first-mentioned bills they are liable to be taxed, and must be delivered one month before an action can be brought for their recovery; whereas the latter are a sort of bills which are not liable to be taxed, and actions may be brought for the recovery of debts due for transacting the proper business of a scrivener, without delivering any bills, or being obliged to stay any time afterwards, (in case the same should be delivered) before a suit be commenced. And by the statute of 2 Geo. II. cap. 23, no provisions are made, nor is any notice taken of attornies in any other capacity or respect, but merely as they are employed in carrying on and defending suits in the courts of law at Westminster, the oath directed to be taken by every attorney upon his admission being no more than this:

> I, A.B., do swear that I will duly and honestly demean myself, in the practice of an attorney, according to the best of my knowledge and ability.

It is well known that many attornies, for want of experience, are to seek in several instances relating to the proper business of scriveners, though almost all attornies take upon them to practice the same; and indeed it is scarce possible that the service of a clerkship for five years only should furnish attornies with a competent knowledge of all the three several branches of business proper to attornies, sollicitors, and scriveners, it seldom or never happening that attornies have an equal share of business, in every one of those branches, to qualify their clerks for the practice of all; hence it is that persons after they have served out their clerkships with attornies are for some time obliged to employ agents to transact for them the proper business of a scrivener, till by after experience they have acquired that knowledge, which the short time of their clerkship is by no means sufficient for; this must necessarily tend greatly to the prejudice of the regular scriveners who confine themselves merely to the practice of conveyancing, and other particulars, of the scriveners' business or trade; and who serve a seven years' apprenticeship solely to that alone: upon which account your Committee are of opinion, it would be a very great and manifest hardship and injustice to the free scriveners that attornies or any others, who have been but transiently, and, as it were, accidentally conversant in some parts of the business of a scrivener, should take upon them to act as scriveners, without that regular education, and sufficient knowledge and experience, as well as those expensive qualifications, which the free scriveners of London have acquired, and are subject and must submit to, in common with the freemen of any other art, mistery, or occupation.

Your Committee likewise observe that the Act which passed in the year 1729, for regulating attornies, has confined that profession to particular persons in exclusion of all others. And that though before the making that Act, scriveners or any persons whatsoever might and did practise as attornies, without being admitted; yet no scrivener can now practise as an attorney for want of the proper qualification required by that act, in serving a five years' clerkship to some attorney entered upon record: the grievance therefore here taken notice of would be so much the greater if the free scriveners had no means of restraining the attornies from practicing as scriveners, or at least of obliging them to conform to the like qualifications for the exercise of that art, to which the free scriveners are liable.

Your Committee for the reasons before-mentioned apprehend there is a material and essential difference between the two kinds of business or professions of attorney and scrivener, and that neither attornies nor sollicitors merely as such ought to use the art of scriveners within the limits of the City of London, and extent of the company's charter, nor ought any person whatsoever, unless they conform to the custom of London, and the rules and orders prescribed by your charter and by-laws, agreeable to the antient custom and usage of the company, in that behalf, which from the whole tenor of the several entries in your books were apparently calculated for the publick utility: and your Committee apprehend, that inasmuch as it was conceived in former times to be highly fitting for the public good, that persons so largely concerned as scriveners in transferring men's legal properties from one to another, should be under proper regulations for the due exercise of their art; therefore the oath of a scrivener was framed and instituted for that purpose, and was required to be taken by every one that in any manner practised the art or mistery of a scrivener in those times: and by the same antient policy of this company, it was likewise provided that all persons using the art of scriveners, by making any deeds, &c., to be sealed, should set their names to such deeds to denote the same to be made by persons who had taken the scriveners' oath, and were otherwise duly qualified to use such art or mistery, as the means of preventing and detecting forgeries and other frauds and abuses which might attend the making and execution of deeds; and also to the intent that the persons interested therein might be the better enabled to prove the same, in regard scriveners, and others acting as such usually were subscribing witnesses to the execution of the deeds they made; and for the purpose of proving any deeds, as often as there should be occasion, the places of abode of such scriveners (by means of their having taken the oath, and made the subscription, and paid the accustomed quarterage) might easily be known by applying to the clerk or beadle of the company who were used to collect the quarterage of all persons practising as scriveners within London, and three miles round the same; and if any free scrivener happened to be dead, his handwriting was likewise capable of being proved with the same ease, at whatever distance of time, by having recourse to the company's subscription book, where all scriveners entered of their own handwriting, an acknowledgment of their having taken such oath as aforsaid.

The Company of Scriveners having been from time immemorial a free company of the City of London, your Committee apprehend that the antient custom, for strangers and persons free of other companies using the art of scriveners, to pay quarterage money and other duties to the Scriveners' Company, was originally instituted, to the intent, that all persons in general who used the art might be subject to the regulation of this company in all matters respecting the use and exercise of that particular art or science, in the regard the same is widely different, and of quite another nature from any other art, mistery or science exercised within the City of London; and therefore scriveners neither were nor could be under any other laws or regulations whatsoever concerning their art, than the regulations and provisions from time to time made and in use among the Company of Scriveners, in consideration of which it was but reasonable that such other persons should pay quarterage, &c., as was the custom with the freemen of the company, in the nature of a duty or acknowledgment of their being subject thereto, in respect of their art, and as some satisfaction for the charge of summoning them to court, and also to the intent that all persons using or exercising the art or profession of a scrivener within London and the suburbs thereof, as well strangers as such as were free of other companies might meet together as occasion required to confer with the master, wardens and assistants, and other freemen of the Scriveners' Company, touching the regulation of an art which they all exercised in common.

By the known custom of London, no person whatsoever, not being free of the City of London, shall by any colour, way or mean whatsoever, directly or indirectly, by himself or any other, keep any shop or any place whatsoever inward or outward for putting to sale of any wares or merchandises whatsoever, by way of retail, or use any trade, occupation, mistery or handicraft, for hire, gain, or sale, within the said City of London. And by an act of common council, or by-law of the said city, founded upon the customs of London, every person not free of the city that shall use any trade, occupation, mistery, &c. within the same, is liable to an action of debt at the suit of the Chamberlain of London for the penalties of five pounds, in the manner stated in the famous case of the City of London, Hill. 7. Jac. reported by Lord Coke, who (as your Committee find upon inspecting the same) expressly says, "That it is "no question, but that in truth the business of a "scrivener is an art, mistery, or manual occupation."

Upon considering of which custom, your Committee thought it material to take notice that scriveners and all persons using that profession, art, trade, or mistery are liable to Acts of Bankruptcy, by means of which several attornies, in regard they have practised as a scrivener, have had commissions of bankrupt awarded against them and have been adjudged bankrupt, which your Committee presume to think is no inconsiderable argument to show that the business of a scrivener is an art, mistery, occupation, or trade and such a one as by the custom of London, none can or ought to carry on or exercise within the city without being free, upon the foot and determination of the above-mentioned case of the City of London.

Besides, scriveners in London originally became a free company in right, and by reason of the particular craft, or mistery they exercised, different from others; And this, in the opinion of your Committee, might serve further to demonstrate, that the proper business of a scrivener, in the nature of it, is and always was esteemed an art, trade or mistery within the custom of London; the use and exercise of which within its limits would naturally oblige every (sic) to become free.

Your Committee also proceeded to consider the statute of 5 Eliz. cap. 4. §. 31. wherein it is enacted as follows, viz.: That after the first day of May (then) next coming, it shall not be lawful to any person or persons, other than such as now do lawfully use or exercise any art, mistery, or manual occupation, to set up, occupy, use or exercise any craft, mistery or occupation, now used or occupied, within the realm of England, or Wales, except he shall have been brought up therein seven years at the least, as an apprentice, in manner and form abovesaid, nor to set any person on work in such mistery, art, or occupation being not a workman at this day, except he shall have been apprentice as is aforesaid, or else having served as an apprentice shall or will become a journeyman or hired by the year, upon pain that every person willingly offending or doing the contrary shall forfeit, and lose for every default forty shillings for every month.

Upon this, your Committee thought it likewise material to observe, that scrivenership was a craft, mistery, or occupation, in use, at and for several centuries before the time of making that Act, and therefore your Committee presume, that the Company of Scriveners might put the same in force in favour of such of their own freemen as had served a regular apprenticeship, against persons that had neither served an apprenticeship, nor were otherwise qualified to practise as scriveners by being free of the City of London, and of this company.

And this leads your Committee to consider, that such scriveners as have been regularly qualified for the proper business of such profession, by having served an apprenticeship, and taken the oath, and made the subscription required, by your by-laws and antient prescriptions, have, for several years last past, decreased in their number, as the business itself proper to scriveners has increased, and that such decrease has been occasioned by the continual encroachments of attornies and others, who, nevertheless, have at the same time been under none of those obligations necessary to qualify them for the due exercise of the science, art, or mistery of scriveners, above-mentioned.

How much more numerous, the practisers in the art of scriveners are become of late, in comparison of what they were formerly, especially if all persons whether notaries, attornies or others are to be considered as scriveners that use the art or mistery of a scrivener, as your Committee apprehend they ought; and how much more business of that kind, is transacted now a days, from the great increase of trade and much greater circulation of property than heretofore is obvious and well known to every one; your Committee, therefore, are inclined to think, that there are many reasons respecting the good of the publick in general, as well as the interest of this company, in particular, why so large and considerable a number of men as persons, using the art of a scriveners should be subject to the like regulations and qualifications with the free scriveners of London, belonging to this company, for that the proper business of a scrivener is generally of a secret nature, whereby, the dishonesty and incapacity of scriveners many remain, till past remedy concealed in the deeds they make, so as not to be readily known or discovered by the parties to or interested in the effect and operation of such deeds; for which reasons and in regard persons acting as scriveners are often solely intrusted in the drawing and settling of deeds of great consequence, particularly, in cases of purchases of real estates, mortgages, wills, and family settlements upon marriage, and otherwise, wherein, they are capable of great frauds and misbehaviour in favour of some or one of the parties in prejudice of others, they ought, more than persons of any other art, business, or profession whatsoever to be under the obligation of an oath the highest, if not the only restraint that human policy is capable of laying men under in transactions of so private a nature; and especially as the law has obliged attornies to take the before-mentioned oath for the due discharge of such their profession, altho' they are less capable of frauds in the management of causes, which are of an open and publick nature, and, any misbehaviour in them relating thereto, must soon come to the knowledge of their clients by the immediate consequence thereof, and are punishable for the same in a summary way by application to the courts where such causes are depending.

And if the scriveners' oath, in the manner prescribed by your by-laws was once effectually established, and required to be taken by all persons exercising the art within the limits of your charter, except serjeants and barristers-at-law, who as council are necessarily exempted by the tenor and implied sense of the oath itself, your Committee conceive, it might not only serve as a rule to such persons for their conduct in the due exercise of the science or art of a scrivener, but might likewise prove a more influencing caution and restraint against their misbehaviour, in the violation of it, than any other means that could be thought of, and if it were to be universally known, that every person practising as a scrivener was under the restrictions contained in the scriveners' oath, your Committee apprehend, there would not be near so many fraudulent deeds and conveyances to give occasion for parties injured to apply to the courts of equity for relief; for it being probable, that persons acting as scriveners are generally privy to the considerations, and other leading circumstances preparatory to, or accompanying, the execution of deeds between the principal parties by whom they are employed, therefore, in cases of collusion and deceipt, to the prejudice of any of the parties, as often as the same should happen to be discovered, it would render the persons so acting in the capacity of scriveners abundantly more obnoxious to censure and reproach, if not, punishment, in as much as they would be publickly known to have acted in direct violation of an oath, by which they had previously obliged themselves, in the most solemn manner, not to write, nor suffer to be written, by any of theirs, to their power and knowledge, any deed or writing to be sealed, wherein any deceipt or falsehood should be conceived, or in their conscience suspected to lye. And what more likely means could be invented to deter persons, which exercise the art of a scrivener from being accomplices, or privies, in the contrivance of fraudulent deeds, than this of the scriveners' oath? which, if duly attended to, and observed, by all that practise the art, would, tho' possibly not in all, yet in most instances, prevent the ill designs of the principal parties to deeds, from imposing on the confidence of others, in affairs where persons professing the art or mistery of a scrivener are usually employed.

Your Committee further considered, that it would be of very great use and service to all the inhabitants of these two great and populous Cities of London and Westminster, and the suburbs thereof, to be able upon all occasions of trial or controversy in any courts of judicature, to prove such of their deeds, evidence and writings as are usually sealed, which is oftentimes attended with very great difficulty, and people frequently sustain great loss and damage, as well as expence, in matters of title, for want of knowing the places of abode of persons using the art of scriveners, who are usually subscribing witnesses to the deeds they make, or of being able to prove their handwriting, if dead.

Both which inconveniences might effectually be provided against, in case all persons that use the art or mistery of a scrivener, within the limits of the Company's charter were obliged to take the scriveners' oath, and make the usual subscription in the company's books, in like manner as the Free Scriveners of London have always done, and still do, upon such their admission into this company, since to those books all people whatsoever might readily resort for such information and evidence; and it is well known that they have actually been made use of in many instances for the proof of deeds, by a similitude of hands, where a free scrivener of this company, a subscribing witness has been dead, and, from the nature of the case, no better evidence could be obtained.

These observations, your Committee presume, sufficiently evince the good use and tendency of the company's by-laws, to the regulation of persons exercising its art within the limits of your charter; and that the publick utility is concerned, in your endeavours, to procure the establishment of your constitution and ordinances, in a manner the most effectual for the good purposes intended by them.

For these reasons, as also in justice to the free scriveners of this company, whose rights and privileges have been invaded by notaries, attornies and others, your Committee are desirous of inforcing, as far as possible, the ancient and customary rights and privileges of the Free Scriveners of the City of London, confirmed and established by your charter and by-laws: To the end, that no persons whatsoever, whether a freeman of this society, or of any other company of the City of London, or a stranger, or native, might use or exercise the art, science, or mistery of a scrivener, within the cities of London, and Westminster, the Borough of Southwark or elsewhere, within three miles of the City of London, (except serjeants and barristers at law), unless they should be examined, by the master, wardens, and assistants of this company, for the time being, or any six of them, of which the master and wardens, or any of them to be one, touching their sufficiency and ability to use and exercise the said art or mistery, upon the foot of the nineteenth by-law, and should make the oath and subscription aforesaid, agreeable to the twentieth and twenty-first by-laws. and, by a publick testimonial under the common seal of this company should be allowed and admitted to use and exercise the science, art, or mistery of scriveners, under a fine or penalty for their default; by which means, many persons, illiterate and unskilful, and such as have had no regular education or experience in the said art, and were of bad fame might be prevented from the undue exercise of it.

This, as your Committee conceive, would be exercising no greater power than what is put in force by several other free companies of this city, such as the surgeons, brewers, innholders, joyners, and many others, which oblige non-freemen, using their respective arts or trades, to become free of the city, and of their particular companies, to qualify them for the exercise of such arts.

Having proceeded thus far, in tracing out and collecting the information and materials above stated from the company's books, and otherwise, as they were able, and made what observations occurred to them thereon, your Committee came to a resolution that your clerk should form a case with proper queries, and lay the same before council, that your Committee might be enabled to give you further satisfaction, and inform you with greater certainty, (among other particulars) whether persons living out of the City of London, who use or exercise the craft, mistery, or occupation of a scrivener, and have not served an apprenticeship thereto for seven years, are liable to the penalty of forty shillings a month upon the statute of 5 Eliz. cap. 4. And also, whether persons not being free of the City of London, who use or exercise the trade, art, mistery, or occupation of a scrivener, within the city, are liable to the penalty of five pounds, upon the city's custom and by-law before-mentioned.

In consequence of which resolution, your clerk having prepared such case and laid the same before several eminent council learned in the law, it appears, that, they have thereupon concurred in the opinion, "That the business of a scrivener is a trade, craft, "mistery, or occupation, within the meaning of the "31st section of the said statute 5 Eliz. cap. 4. And "consequently, that any person who shall set up, occupy, use, or exercise the craft or mistery of a "scrivener, without having served seven years thereto, "according to that Act, will be liable to the penalty "therein mentioned."

And the council likewise agree in giving it as their opinion: "That by the custom of London, any person "not being free of the city, who shall use or exercise "the trade, art, mistery, or occupation of a scrivener "within the limits of the city, will be liable to an "action of debt, at the suit of the Chamberlain of "London, in the Mayor's Court, for the penalty of five "pounds, upon the city's by-law, in the manner stated "in the case of the City of London, reported by Lord "Coke."

And, here, your Committee think proper to declare, that, as they would be far from aiming to exclude all who are not already of their own immediate corporation or society, from exercising the proper business of a scrivener, so, they would not, otherwise, recommend it to you, to avail yourselves of those advantages, which your Committee are advised, you are entitled to by law, than, as the means of enlarging your own body, by bringing into your society all others using and frequenting the science, art, or mistery of a scrivener, within the limits of the company's charter: to the end, that they may all be under the like regulations with the regular scriveners of this company; and that it may be, as much incumbent upon such other persons using the art of scriveners, within the limits of your charter, to be admitted into the Scriveners' Company, as it is necessary for such of them who are attornies, or sollicitors, to be admitted or sworn as such, to qualify themselves for their acting in those capacities.

And as the expence of admission into the freedom of this company is inconsiderable, your Committee imagine, such admission would not be unacceptable to the generality of the attornies, and solicitors within the limits of the company's charter, in as much as, by this means, they might very soon become, in effect, an incorporated body of themselves, which, at present they are not; and thereby, might more effectually hinder schoolmasters, petty stationers, and others who have had neither education nor experience, from intruding upon them, as well as the regular scriveners, which are already members of this company, in respect of the proper business, art, or mistery of a scriveners.

Your Committee have now laid before you the progress they have made, in the prosecution of the ends, for which, they were appointed, and they can with truth assure you, that no pains have been wanting in them, to do the utmost in their power to promote the welfare and prosperity of the company: and tho' your Committee are sensible the methods they have taken have been attended with a considerable expence, yet, they flatter themselves, they shall be justified in the satisfaction it will be the means of giving, not only the present, but all future members of the company, by informing them, what have been the original constitution and customary rights of the company, and how far the same are valid and effectual in law.

And your Committee submit it to your consideration, whether any, and what other steps can be taken, than what have been already pursued, and are herein-after proposed, by your Committee, with a view, of advancing the state of the company, and adding to the number of its members: But your Committee cannot help expressing the concern it gives them, not only, as they are members of this company, but also, as they are citizens of London, to think, that so great a number of persons as practice the art or mistery of scriveners, in this great city, should be lost to both, by means of non-freemen, being suffered to encroach upon the proper trade or business of one of the free companies of this city, without being free of the same, or of any other free company whatsoever. And as this encroachment has occasioned the present great decrease in the number of free scriveners, so is it likely, in a very few years, to sap and destroy the very being of the company itself, unless some effectual remedy be provided against it, by the legislative power of the City of London, which, your Committee presume to think, is no less concerned in this company's preservation, than the particular members of the company themselves, as the scriveners have ever been one of the free companies or misteries of the city; and till within these forty or fifty years last past, no less than fifty or sixty apprentices used annually, to be bound to freemen exercising the art of scriveners, and near the same number of scriveners used, one year with another, to take up their freedom of the city, and there used to be, generally, about twenty regular-bred scriveners free of other companies, who, in regard, they practised the art, did upon that account pay quarterage-money to the Scriveners' Company; whereas within these last thirty years there has not been more than about the like number of regular-bred scriveners bound or made free in all; and it is well known that, at present, there is not in the whole City of London, above fifteen or twenty such free scriveners, which, as your Committee have before observed, has been manifestly occasioned by foreigners being suffered to use the art of scriveners, within the city, in direct violation of the rights and priviledges of this company, and of the City of London; and particularly, of the known custom of London, herein-before set forth; which custom, if it be valid and effectual in respect of any trades, arts, or manual occupations exercised within the city, must be so in all, but more especially in the case of such of the trades and arts now in being, which from their nature and antiquity did originally denominate and constitute the free companies of this city, of which the business, trade, or art of scriveners must necessarily be taken to be one; and consequently, all persons whatsoever who take upon them to practise as scriveners, within the City of London, ought in pursuance of the said custom to take up their freedom of the city; and such persons being notaries, attornies, or sollicitors, neither is nor ought to be a sufficient qualification for their practising as scriveners within the city, unless they are likewise free of it, any more than it would be for their occupying or exercising the art, mistery, or science of surgeons, apothecaries, musicians, or innholders, or any other free art, trade, or mistery, in, and belonging to any other free company of the City of London.

As the number of people is esteemed the wealth and strength of the kingdom, so is the number of freemen the wealth and chief support of this its metropolis: And as this city can no otherwise subsist in its political state, but by its free companies, so in as much as they fall off and decline, for want of a due attention to their continuance and support, in right of the several arts and misteries, from the occupation or exercise of which the several companies derive their particular constitutions, it becomes no less the concern and interest of the city, than of the companies, to contribute as much as possible to the preservation of their rights and privileges, by preventing all incroachments from foreigners, in the exercise of any of the arts, proper to the free companies of the city.

These considerations having given your Committee occasion to make inquiry into the causes of the decline of their own, and some others of the free companies of the City of London, they are of the opinion that some of those other companies, such as the Bowyers, Fletchers and Lorriners, &c., owe their decline, as free arts exercised within the city, to quite different causes from each other as the arts themselves are different, for the Bowyers and Fletchers, the proper arts of whose companies were to make bows and arrows to be used in war, are, in a manner, ceased, in respect of such their particular arts, ever since the invention and use of gunpowder, and the Lorriners' Company, as your Committee have been informed, have lost all the freemen exercising the proper art of their company, by means of such persons choosing rather to become members of the Company of Sadlers, whose art, that, of lorriners or bitmakers, bears a near relation to, and has a natural connection with; so that tho' the city may in a small course of years be likely to lose the Company of Lorriners, for want of members of it exercising their particular art, upon which alone the necessary existence of any company must absolutely depend, yet the city in general can have no loss as to the number of freemen exercising that art, since such as are lorriners, by occupation, are free of the city, by some other companies; but there is no remedy or certain means for preserving and continuing the Fletchers and such like companies, whose arts, from their nature, are subject to cease and become useless, so as to lose their very being, which gives your Committee occasion to observe the great difference there is between the Company of Scriveners, and those other companies above-mentioned; for that the decline of the free scriveners is owing to neither of the two causes above taken notice of is clear and obvious, since it is well known that the proper art or business of the Scriveners' Company flourishes more, and is become much more in use at this time than ever, and that there is no other free company of the city which bears any the least relation to, or connection with it, in respect of the nature of the art itself, so as to induce any of its professors to take up their freedom of the city by any other company, to qualify them for the practice of such art as freemen of London; nor is there any reason to apprehend that the art of scriveners in its nature will or can ever cease or be lost in the use or exercise of it, because it must necessarily have continuance as long as the use of letters, and while there is any such thing as property remaining among the citizens of London under the protection and direction of the laws; this consideration will likewise serve to show that scrivenership is an art which must necessarily have had as early an existence as any of the free companies in the City of London, and indeed as early as the foundation of the city itself, since the use of letters and the art of writing must be allowed to be necessary to the establishment of all civil society; and as it may reasonably be imagined that the City of London, upon its original institution or foundation, comprehends within its limits or boundaries all the necessary and useful arts for the preservation of the whole body politic, and the use and accommodation of the several inhabitants within it, so it cannot be conceived but that the art of scriveners was as useful in ascertaining and securing the right of property among the first founders of the civil and political establishment of this great city, as it is universally known to be at this day, it being in a manner impracticable in the nature of things for the inhabitants of such a trading city as London to transact many particulars relating to commerce without entering into written contracts with each other as the necessary means of stipulating their several rights and interests for the avoiding all disputes and controversies; and for this purpose deeds or written instruments sealed by the contracting parties were found to be of the greatest use, as the most lasting, authentic, and unquestionable evidences of the transfer of any rights from one merchant or trader to another in such kinds of property, more especially as would admit of no actual delivery or partition; this, as your Committee conceive, was the original of charter parties, bills of sale, and such like deeds or sealed instruments concerning matters of trade, as well as of all kind of written conveyances relating to real estates, upon which account the persons who made it their peculiar art or mistery to deal in any such deeds or writings were called scriveners, who, as they increased together with trade and commerce, became necessarily formed into a regular society or company for their own and the public good in like manner as other arts or misteries of the city, and such scriveners were till of late years considered to be so far from having any connection with attornies that the art or mistery of the former was looked upon, and made use of as the means of preventing as much as possible all manner of occasion for applying to the latter.

Hence it was, as your Committee apprehend, that persons using the art of scriveners originally became one of the free companies of the City of London; and till within these forty or fifty years last past, as your Committee have before observed, all scriveners were obliged to the freemen of London, to qualify them for the use and exercise of their art within the city; and there were constantly not less than between two and three hundred free scriveners, but to the great loss and detriment of the city, as well as of this company, the free scriveners are now reduced to a very small and inconsiderable number by the continual encroachment of foreigners, who, under the pretence of being notaries public, attornies, or sollicitors, take upon them to occupy the art or mistery of scriveners within the city without being free, by which means the proper business, art, or trade of one of the free companies is got into the hands of foreigners at a time and under circumstances when the art itself is in the most flourishing condition, there being a much greater number of non-freemen who now practice the art of scriveners within the freedom than there used formerly to be of scriveners regularly bred, and infranchised into the freedom of the city, and who are so many members lost to the body of the city in general, as well as to the company in particular.

This loss to the city of London of its free scriveners has been occasioned merely, as your Committee apprehend, by neglecting to inforce the custom of London against non-freemen using the art of scriveners, in like manner as it is done almost every day against foreigners occupying the arts or trades proper to other free companies of the city; and your Committee are of the opinion that such neglect has been owing to the inability or want of sufficient power in the company of Scriveners to compel persons acting as scriveners within the city of London to take up their freedom of the city, by their own company, and, that if the Company of Scriveners was invested with the like power as the Companies of Innholders, Joyners, and some others of the free companies are possessed of by act of common council, so as to enable them to oblige persons who any ways use the art of scriveners, within the city, to become free of this, the only company proper to that art, as well as to take up their freedom of the city; this infringement upon the custom itself, in the instance of non-freemen exercising the art of scriveners, within the city, might in that case be effectually prevented, as the Company of Scriveners, would thereby be encouraged to inforce such power over all persons using the proper art of the company, which would be the certain means, not only of enlarging their own body, but likewise, of adding to the number of freemen of the city in general; whereas, should this company without such act of common council in their favour, attempt to inforce the custom of the city against the number of persons who now use the art of scriveners, without being free of the city, your Committee have great reason to apprehend, though the company should succeed in their endeavours to inforce the said general custom, yet that none of the persons subjected thereto would take up the freedom of the city by this company, but would rather seek to put themselves upon any other free company of the city, in resentment for the process against them for that purpose, in case the same should be begun and carried on, at the instance and by the means of this company, and consequently the ends proposed, both of increasing your members, and of bringing all persons exercising the art or mistery of scriveners, within the city, under the regulation, would be equally frustrated.

These are some of the reasons which have inclined your Committee to be of the opinion, considering the nature and constitution of this company and its particular art or mistery (by which it is distinguished from all other free companies of London), that nothing is likely to advance its welfare and prosperity (by gaining an increase of its members, at the same time that it must necessarily add to the number of freemen of the city in general, and greatly tend to the benefit and security of all the inhabitants of property within it) so much as an application by way of petition to the Right Honourable the Lord Mayor, aldermen, and commons, in common council, setting forth the particular hardships and disadvantages this company lies under, and the ill consequence to the city, from your want of sufficient encouragement to inforce the great custom of London, against non-freemen exercising the trade, art, or mystery of the Free Scriveners, within this city and liberties, and demonstrating the great danger this company is in of being lost to itself and the city, by the continual encroachment of foreigners upon the proper art or mystery of this company, and to pray the Court of Common Council, (as the protectors and guardians of the rights and privileges as well of this great city in general as of every particular company and the several freemen thereof,) to take the circumstances of this company into their consideration, and grant them an Act, by which all the freemen of this city, and the liberties thereof, using the art, mistery, or science of scriveners, may be obliged from time to time to be free of this company; to the intent, that they may become subject to the good laws and ordinances of it, and be brought under your search, view, and regulation, whereby, all frauds, unskilfulness, defaults and other offences, in the art, mistery, or science of scriveners, may more effectually be prevented or discovered and punished and that for the future no person or persons using or exercising the art, mistery or science of scriveners within this city or the liberties thereof, may be made free of this city, by servitude, patrimony, or redemption in any other company than the Company of Scriveners: or, that the said Court of Common Council will grant you such other assistance and relief as they shall think fit.

And though your Committee are sensible it would be too great a presumption in them to take upon them to say what success such an application would be attended with, yet they will venture to submit it as their opinion, that whatever the consequences may prove of these your endeavours, not only to retrieve the declining state of your company (whose welfare and prosperity is become your immediate concern as its court of assistants), by preventing such notorious instances of the encroachment of foreigners, in prejudice of the known rights and privileges of the free citizens of London, in what most essentially concerns their interest, the exercise of the particular trade or occupation, to which every citizen is entitled, in right of his freedom of the city in general, and of his proper company in particular; but also to render your constitution and by-laws of general benefit to the whole city, by subjecting thereto all persons who shall exercise within it the proper art of this company: you will, in all events, however, merit the grateful acknowledgments of every present and future member of your company, so long as it shall continue to have any existence, (if not the approbation of your fellow citizens in general,) by your commendable zeal in the efforts you have made with a view to such good ends, as well to promote the lasting welfare and prosperity of your company, as to prevent its speedy dissolution, which last-mentioned circumstance, your Committee have too much reason to fear is unavoidable (as far as they are able to judge upon the whole) without the protection and assistance of the chief power of the city, in the manner before-mentioned. All which your Committee submit to your consideration.

APPENDIX B.

The Worshipful Company of Scriveners gave full information to the Commissioners appointed in 1834; their average income for the seven years ending August 1830 was 429*l.* a year.

SHIPWRIGHTS' COMPANY.

The Company delivered their returns under protest.

PART I.—FOUNDATION AND OBJECT.

RETURN A.—A statement of the date, ascertained or probable, of the foundation of the company, and of the circumstances, so far as they can be discovered from its documents of foundation or archives, in which the company had its origin.

RETURN B.—A list of the charters, charters of inspeximus, and other instruments of a similar nature, whether originals or copies, which have been at any time in the possession of the company, together with an abstract of the purport of each, regard being specially had to any evidence which it may contain as to the object of the foundation of the company.

RETURN C.—A list of any trust deeds "founding, regulating, or affec ing" the company, with the date of each, the names of the parties thereto, and an abstract of the purport of each.

ETURN D.—A list, with dates, of any "decrees of court," whether of the Courts of Common Law or of Chancery, or of any acts of the Court of Aldermen or of the Court of Common Council, "regulating or affecting" the company, with a statement of the effect of each decision.

RETURN E.—A list of any other documents, not included in the descriptions in the preceding returns, which "found, regulate, or affect" the company, with dates and an abstract of the effect of each.

RETURN F.—A concise history of the company from the time of its foundation to the present day, with special reference to the inquiry contained in the commission as to "the objects for which the company "was founded," and "how far those objects are now being carried into effect."

RETURN G.—Has the company a licence in mortmain? When was such licence granted (referring to the document by description)? What is its extent, and to what extent is it now unexhausted?

RETURN H.—Is there vested in the company, and how, whether by charter, statute, order of the Court of Aldermen, act of Common Council, or otherwise, any right of exercising superintendence over, or any duty or discretion to encourage in any way, any and what art, trade, or business? State the nature and local limits of such control. In what manner, and to what extent, is such control now exercised? If such control is not now exercised, state the circumstances under which its exercise has fallen into desuetude.

A, B, E, F.—The precise year of the foundation of the company is unknown, but it is mentioned in 1428 in the city records, from which it appears that it existed as a fraternity, having a trade guild or mystery and a religious guild in connexion with it, at the early part of the 15th century; with a presumption in favour of its having existed by prescription for some time before that period, since in the year 1661 the company claimed to have been in existence for more than 400 years. In a parchment book belonging to the company there are ordinances of the religious society, the earliest of which is dated in 1456. Additions were made thereto in 1483, beginning "In Dei "nomine, Amen. It is not unknown to all the brethren "and sisters of the fraternitie of Saint Symon and Jude "hath been holden in London by the crafte of shipwrights "of tyme out of minde," &c. After which follow various ordinances relating to the taking of apprentices, and other matters, and more especially enjoining its members "to "viewe and serche that the brethren of that fraternitie "doe use in their said trades good and seasonable timber, "and doe their worke workmanlike as appertaineth."

The shipwrights of England, according to Stow, in his "Survey of London," obtained a charter of incorporation from James I. in the year 1605, dated 23rd April, by the title of the "Master, Wardens, and Cominaltie of Ship-"wrights, London."

In 1613 commenced a dispute between the company and the foreign shipwrights who carried on their craft on the opposite side of the river, at Redrithe or Rotherhithe. The foreign shipwrights (so called from being outside the liberties of the city) had, in the previous year, obtained a charter of incorporation, acting upon which they sought to exact fines from and impose duties upon the free shipwrights, at that time working hard by at Ratcliffe, having previously been compelled to leave the crowded part of the City by reason of the noise occasioned by exercising their trade, and from fear of fire. The free shipwrights resented this treatment, and presented their case before the Court of Aldermen. Their memorial sets forth that ordinances for the government of the Guild or Fraternity of Shipwrights were instituted in the 35th year, Henry VI. The City upheld the free shipwrights, and in 1620 their ordinances were approved by the Lord Mayor and Court of Aldermen.

In 1631, from continued opposition, their funds were reduced so low that they were allowed to make 12 persons free of the City by redemption; and this number was from time to time increased. In 1638 another attempt was made to free themselves from their rivals by representing their case before the King in Council, which resulted in their being granted by the King exemption from the jurisdiction of the new corporation. This order is dated Whitehall, 17th March 1638. In 1670 attacks were again renewed on the free shipwrights by the new corporation, and, their cases having been laid before the High Court of Admiralty by Charles II., the Attorney-General, on 18th March 1684–5, decided in favour of the company, which decision was approved by the King.

In 1782 a livery was granted to the company by the Court of Aldermen, the number being limited to 100 and the fine to 15 guineas; in 1830 the number was increased to 200 and the fine to 20 guineas.

C.—There are no trust deeds founding, regulating, or affecting the company.

D.—Act of Common Council, 25th February 1808, enacted all persons using the trade of a shipwright within the City and the liberties thereof were to become free of the company.

G.—The company has no license in mortmain.

H.—There is evidence up to 1746 of the company having exercised its influence over the shipping trade.

The orders and ordinances of the Company of Shipwrights of London were approved by the Lord Mayor and Court of Aldermen in 1620, and the following is an abstract:—

"Sir William Cokayne, Knt., Lord Mayor.

"The Court of Lord Mayor and Aldermen, having received a report from a Committee of Aldermen appointed to consider of certain ordinances preferred by the Free Shipwrights of London for the reducing the said company to the ancient form and government, were pleased to pass the following ordinances:—

"1st. That the men infranchised in the said company, for the time being, might once in two years, between Christmas and Candlemas-day, assemble and choose two able men, free of the said company, and using the trade of shipwrights, to be wardens for two years next ensuing, and the said wardens to be sworn in the Lord Mayor's Court.

"2nd. That within one month after such choice their old wardens give in their account to the new wardens, and to six or four persons of the said craft (such as the court shall appoint), and shall pay the balance to the new wardens, or, in default, to forfeit five pounds, one half to the Chamber of London, and the other half to the poor of the said company.

"3rd. All persons free of the said company shall make good and strong work, or, in default, pay such fine as the court of assistants shall think fit.

"4th. The wardens, in presence of two assistants, having their officer with them, to search into all yards and places of persons (being freemen of the City) to oversee their work; and persons making insufficient work to pay such fine as the Lord Mayor or Chamberlain shall reasonably impose; the one half to the use of the commonalty of the City, and the other half to the use of the poor of the company.

"5th. The wardens and commonalty to choose a clerk and beadle, with the appointment of such salary and wages as they shall think fit; and the wardens to levy and receive of the freemen of the company a competent sum of money, not exceeding one shilling per quarter for any one person.

"6th. Any freeman of the said company not appearing before the wardens when summoned by their clerk or beadle (not having reasonable excuse) forfeits to the poor's box eight pence.

"7th. Any freeman of the said company chiding and brawling with another to pay into the chamber and poor's box of the company thre shillings and four pence, in equal proportions.

"8th. Member not paying their several forfeitures to pay double; in default, the wardens to complain to the Lord Mayor or Chamberlain.

"9th. Freemen taking apprentices within one year afterwards to present them to the wardens, and to pay one shilling and six pence; and at the expiration of the term the said apprentices to be made free at their own expense.

"10th. Apprentices so bound not to be turned over to foreigners.

"11th. No freeman to keep above three apprentices at any one time (until he have served the office of warden), and then but four, upon pain of forfeiting twenty shillings.

"12th. Ordinances to be read on the four quarter days when the company is assembled.

"13th. Wardens neglecting to put these ordinances in force to be fined five marks; half to the chamber, the other half to the common box of the company."

To these ordinances the Lord Mayor and Aldermen (at the instance of the said shipwrights) caused the seal of the office of mayoralty to be appended the 16th day of May 1620.

At a quarterly court of the Assistants and Commonalty of the Free Shipwrights of London the said ordinances were taken into consideration upon the report of the wardens, who were appointed to inspect the same; which report, being twice read, was unanimously agreed to as follows: That the election of wardens shall be once in every two years, between Christmas and the second day of February following.

That the former wardens shall yield up their accounts within one month after the election unto the new wardens, and six or four other of the said craft.

That (upon their not finding any regular account kept of the quarterage received) the clerk be directed to keep a cash account of all money received, and to post the same into a ledger.

That the clerk do enter the names of all the freemen in a book stamped for that purpose.

That he do likewise enter the bindings of apprentices in another book for that use.

That the wardens meet the last Thursday in every month, to bind and make free apprentices, or to admit persons by redemption; and persons binding or making free at any other time to pay five shillings extra to the company's use; and the wardens, at their several meetings, not to put the company to any expense.

That the clerk be allowed three shillings per pound for collecting and keeping the accounts of the quarterage, and the money to be paid the wardens at their first meeting after every quarter day, and be by them locked up in the chest.

That the survey dinner for the assistants be the August after the election of the new wardens, and the other dinner for the assistants upon the day of election of new wardens; and that the expense of each dinner do not exceed ten pounds; and every person that come to dinner, and is not of the court of assistants, to pay two shillings and six pence.

That the accounts be audited as the ordinances direct, and the balance locked up in the chest; two of the keys to be kept by the present, and the other two keys by the wardens that went last out of the said office.

That every member translated from this to any other company do pay two pounds ten shillings to the company's use, and defray all other expenses attending the same.

[The above are extracts from "A short account of the Shipwrights' Company," by Mr. Sharpe, of St. John's College, Oxford.]

PART I.—RETURN I.—A list of the charities, eleemosynary, educational, or otherwise, which are under the management of the company, stating in each case the name of the founder, the date and nature of the benefaction, its original and its present value, and the purposes to which the funds have been applied for each of the last preceeding ten years.

None.

PART II.—A.

CONSTITUTION AND PRIVILEGES OF MEMBERSHIP.

RETURN A.—Governing Body.

1. State the present constitution of the governing body of the company, whether such constitution is according to the charter, and if not, in what respects such constitution varies therefrom, and when and how such alteration was made.
2. State the qualifications for membership of the governing body of the company, the time and periods of election, and the qualifications of the voters at elections to the governing body.
3. State the functions of the governing body, and of the different members of the same respectively, and whether the members of the governing body pay any and what fees or fines on admission thereto, and whether they are paid any and what salaries or amounts in respect of their services respectively.
4. State the nature of the business which comes before the governing body of the company, the method adopted in transacting it, the times at which the governing body meets for business purposes, the way in which the opinions of the members are taken, and whether the resolutions and decisions of the governing body are published, or are otherwise accessible to any or all, and which of, the members of the company.

5. State whether the members of the governing body are liable to suspension or removal on any and what grounds, and by what method such suspension or removal is effected.
6. Has the company any byelaws sanctioned by the courts of law or Chancery, or by the courts of aldermen or of common council, or otherwise? State the effect of such byelaws.

A. 1.—Present constitution: Master, 4 wardens, and 25 assistants, making 30 in all, which, according to the minutes of the company, 30th December 1777, was in future to be the number of the court.

The following are the present members of the court:—
Robert Foottit, master.
The Right Hon. Lord John Manners, G.C.B., M.P., warden.
T. Kyffin Freeman, warden.
Reginald Hanson, M.A., F.S.A., alderman and sheriff, warden.
James Perkins, C.C., warden.
Thomas Bevan, J.P., ex-sheriff.
Sir Thomas Brassey, K.C.B., M.P. (junior lord of Admiralty).
William Broomham.
George Burt, J.P., ex-sheriff.
Henry Carne.
Captain A. B. Cook, L.L.M.
James Crispe, F.R.G.S., deputy.

E. Talbot.
E. J. Talbot.
J. W. Talbot.
R. T. Tough.
W. W. Towse.
George Wood.
G. E. Wood, C.C.
W. S. Woolfe.
One vacancy.

A. 2.—Qualification for court arises by becoming a freeman and liveryman.

On vacancies arising the court proceeds to elect as follows:—

"Every vacancy is officially announced in writing to each member of the court. A list of 24 liverymen (the number to be increased or diminished from time to time as the court see fit) is taken according to seniority and laid on the table for inspection at the court next after the official announcement of every vacancy. At the succeeding court the same list is read twice, and on the second reading the master or presiding warden puts each name to the vote, and ultimately declares that liveryman elected who shall have the majority of votes. Every member of the court is at liberty to propose at the first of these two courts the addition to the list of any name or names from among the livery, in which case this addition is read and put to the vote at the second court as part of the list."

A. 3.—The governing body manage the affairs of the company, and pay on admission to the court 50*l.*, and receive no fees or salaries for their services. In addition each member pays when serving the offices of master and wardens 36*l.* 15*s.*

A. 4.—The general management and regulation of the affairs of the company. All debated matters are decided by show of hands. Minutes of proceedings are entered and subsequently submitted for confirmation.

There is practically no difficulty in any member of the company inspecting them.

A. 5.—No.

A. 6.—Vide Part I.

PART II.—B.

RETURN B.—Admission to Membership.

1. State the qualifications for membership of the company, the several grades of membership of the company, and whether women are admitted to membership.
2. State the several modes in which the freedom of the company may be obtained, the circumstances entitling an applicant to admission under each mode respectively, and the fees payable in respect of admission under each mode respectively.
3. State whether persons exercising any particular trade are required by statute or otherwise to become free of the company. Is there any process for compelling such persons to procure admission, or any process by which such persons are enabled themselves to procure admission, and are such processes enforced respectively, and to what extent? Do persons exercising any particular trade commonly become members of the company? If so, how many members of such trade are at present members of the company? State also (if the company bears the name of any existing trade) how many members of such trade are members of company.
4. Are freemen liable to disfranchisement, and if so, for what reasons, and what is the mode of disfranchisement?
5. Is the livery of the company limited or unlimited in number? What are the qualifications for election to the livery, who are the electors thereto, and how do the elections thereto take place, and what fees are payable on election? Are liverymen liable to removal from the livery, and for what reasons?

B. 1.—Patrimonial right, service to a freeman or freewoman of the company, and redemption or purchase by persons of full age and well-known respectability, members of or connected with the trade being preferred.

B.—2. For answer to the first part of this question see Return B. 1.

The fees payable are—

	£	s.	d.
Freedom by patrimony - -	2	12	6
Freedom by service - - -	2	12	6
Freedom by redemption - -	9	5	0

Mem.—The above include Government stamp duty. There are certain official fees in addition to above.

B. 3.—No; but a very large number of the trade have become members, possibly two-thirds of the total number of members.

B. 4.—No.

B. 5.—Limited to 200.

Freemen of the company are eligible to become liverymen, subject to the approval of the governing body, on payment of the fine directed by the court of aldermen.

Part II.—B. 6 and 7.

Return B. 6 and 7.

(1) State the number of apprentices bound at the company's hall or otherwise under the auspices of the company during each of the last 10 years. (2) State how many have been bound during each of the last 10 years to members following the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the company. (3) In what cases and to what extent have the fees or premiums of such apprentice been paid by the company?

B. 6.—

1870	None.
1871	1
1872	2
1873	None.
1874	1
1875	2
1876	10
1877	7
1878	8
1879	2

Most of the above are bound to members following the trade of the company. The company has not paid any premiums in respect of the above.

B. 7.—Every freeman of the company is expected to become a freeman of London, and nearly every member does so.

Part II.—C.

Return C.—Number of members.

State (1) the present number of freemen, (2) the present number of the livery, (3) the present number of other members, (4) the number of admissions to the freedom by each mode respectively, and (5) the number of calls to the livery which have respectively taken place during each of the last preceding 10 years.

C.—(1) About 400.
(2) 200.
(3) One honorary member.

Part II.—D.

Constitution and Privileges of Membership.

Return D.—Profits and privileges.

1. State with fullness what are the advantages, pecuniary or otherwise, incident to the position of a member of the company in each grade of membership, as (1) a freeman, (2) a liveryman, (3) master, warden, or otherwise a member of the governing body.

2. State the sums paid on an average annually for the preceding 10 years by the company to the members according to the grades of membership mentioned above, and of what such sums consisted, whether (1) fees, and of what nature, (2) pensions, or (3) other payments, specifying the nature of the same respectively.

3. What circumstances are in practice held to constitute a claim to a pension or donation? State the number of present pensioners and donees respectively, and the amounts paid to them as such respectively. How many pensioners and donees are connected with the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the company?

4. (1) What is the average standing of a member when he becomes a member of the governing body, and (2) what is the average time for which a member continues on the governing body?

5. Does the company carry on any and what trade or manufacture with which its title is directly or indirectly connected? If so, what is the capital and from what sources is it derived, and how are the profits (if any) divided or dealt with?

D. 1.—(1) Qualification to acquire livery.
(2 and 3) Social, charitable, municipal, and parliamentary.

D. 2.—(1) None.

Vide report herewith of competitive exhibition, 1877, the promotion of which cost the company upwards of 500*l.*, the total expenditure being over 1,100*l.*

The following is the Report:—

SHIPWRIGHTS' COMPANY'S COMPETITIVE EXHIBITION 1877.

Report of the Exhibition Sub-Committee.

To the Committee of the Whole Court of the Worshipful Company of Shipwrights.

We, your sub-committee appointed on the 17th day of February 1877, to carry out the details connected with the competitive exhibition, have the honour to report the measures adopted to promote and sustain the advancement of the art which it is the peculiar province of the Worshipful Company of Shipwrights to foster and encourage, and we are happy to state that it has been universally acknowledged that their recent endeavours have proved highly successful.

Although we have already had the honour of submitting a preliminary report to the court held on the 21st day of April last, setting forth the steps taken in connection with the exhibition, we have concluded that, in making this our final report, it would be more satisfactory to you to be furnished with the details of the exhibition from the commencement, thereby rendering its history complete, rather than that we should lay before you merely a continuation of our first report.

At the Court of Assistants held on Tuesday, the 21st day of November 1876, it was resolved unanimously to appoint a committee of the whole court to consider some scheme for the encouragement and advancement of the shipwrights' art; and at the first meeting of the committee, on the 14th day of February 1877, several schemes were submitted by different members of the court, and it was finally decided that prizes should be offered for the best models of ships of various classes, and that the system of classification submitted by Mr. A. D. Lewis should be adopted as the basis upon which to work.

This decision was slightly modified by the committee, and some additions were rendered necessary in consequence of the kindness of various members of the company, who in a most generous way assisted in the promotion of the scheme by offering special prizes for classes of vessels not included in the original programme.

Thus, prizes for models of yachts were presented by Capt. A. B. Cook and Messrs. Perkins and Saunders, and a prize for river tugs by Mr. G. E. Wood.

When the object of the exhibition became known, the Worshipful Company of Fishmongers also very liberally voted a sum of 50*l.* to be given in prizes for models of craft connected with their trade, and the chairman and directors of the London Steamboat Company offered 10*l.* for the model of a river passenger paddle steamer answering certain conditions, to which Mr. W. Wrench Towse, a member of the Shipwrights' Company and superintendent of the London Steamboat Company, added a sum of 5*l.*

We must not forget to mention that the following Livery Companies of London, viz., Mercers, Grocers, Drapers, Merchant Taylors, Skinners, Vintners, Clothworkers, and Pewterers, also assisted in the scheme by voting sums of money towards the expenses, and that the matter, too, was taken up by several private members of the Shipwrights' Company. A subscription list, likewise, was set on foot by Mr. Samuel Baxter, who collected the sum of 56*l.*, himself and his firm (Messrs. Harfield & Co.) subscribing very liberally towards it.

It having been determined that the competing models should be exhibited, the question arose as to where the exhibition could be held. The difficulty was happily and promptly solved by the Worshipful Company of Fishmongers, who in the most cordial manner granted the use of their magnificent hall for the purpose. On further consideration it was thought better to acquire the aid of some professional gentleman to undertake the management and arrangement of the whole exhibition, and with this view, a deputation, consisting of Mr. A. D. Lewis and Capt. T. Davies Sewell, the clerk of the company, was requested to call upon Mr. A. Sedgwick Woolley, the secretary of the Institution of Naval Architects, and inquire of that gentleman whether he would kindly accept the office of honorary secretary of the exhibition. Mr. Woolley expressed his willingness to accede to this request, and furthermore stated his desire to leave the matter of remuneration in the hands of the court.

A sub-committee of the following gentlemen was then appointed to carry out all further details in conjunction with the honorary secretary, viz., Messrs. W. Broomham (master), Page and Marshall (wardens), E. Talbot (treasurer), J. D'A. Samuda, M.P., H. Green, Capt. A. B. Cook, and Mr. A. D. Lewis.

The appointment of the judges was one of the first duties of the committee, who, after much anxious and careful deliberation, decided to solicit the following gentlemen to perform the duties of this onerous office in the respective classes.

Steam Ships Classes.

Nathaniel Barnaby, Esq., C.B., Director of Naval Construction of the Royal Navy, and Vice President I.N.A.

W. Froude, Esq., F.R.S., Vice President of the Institution of Naval Architects.

Bernard Waymouth, Esq., Member Council I.N.A., and Secretary to Lloyd's Register of British and Foreign Shipping.

Chas. H. Wigram, Esq., Member Council I.N.A.

G. Kelson, Esq., of Messrs. Samuda Bros.

Sailing Ships Classes.

William Broomham, Esq., A.I.N.A., Master of the Worshipful Company of Shipwrights.

Henry Green, Esq., J.P., Member Council I.N.A.

A. D. Lewis, Esq., Member Council I.N.A.

Lord Alfred Paget, Vice Commodore Royal Thames Yacht Club.

Bernard Waymouth, Esq., Member Council I.N.A., and Secretary of Lloyd's Register.

Dixon Kemp, Esq., A.I.N.A.

Andrew Thompson, Esq.

Tugs, Barges, and Smacks.

William Broomham, Esq., A.I.N.A., Master of the Worshipful Company of Shipwrights.

Samuel Williams, Esq., A.I.N.A., Conservator of the River Thames.

W. S. Page, Esq., A.I.N.A., Upper Warden of the Worshipful Company of Shipwrights.

Wm. M. Marshall, Esq., Junior Warden of the Worshipful Company of Shipwrights.

E. Talbot, Esq., A.I.N.A., Treasurer of the Worshipful Company of Shipwrights.

Robert Hewett, Esq.

George Hamilton Fletcher, Esq., of the "White Star Line."

Mr. J. D'A. Samuda, M.P., was also requested and consented to act as chairman of the judging committees.

The programme of the exhibition was advertised in all the leading journals in London and the seaport towns of the United Kingdom.

Copies of the letter marked B were sent to the Lord Provost of Glasgow, Lord Mayor of Dublin, Mayors of Liverpool, Portsmouth, Sunderland, Plymouth, Swansea, Bristol, Hull, Scarborough, Newcastle, Shields, Hartlepool, Whitby, Yarmouth, Harwich, Deal, Hastings, Cowes, Poole, Weymouth, Southampton, Torquay, Cardiff, Pembroke, Barrow-in-Furness, and Belfast, and the Provosts of Edinburgh, Aberdeen, and Greenock, from many of whom most courteous replies and offers of assistance were received.

Copies of the letter marked C were sent to over 200 heads of firms, and the exhibition was largely advertised by means of placards posted throughout the seaport towns of the country, and they were also affixed at the Mansion House, Royal Exchange, and Lloyds', and by permission of the London Steamboat Company upon their steamers and landing stages, and by the Trinity House on their wharves. The directors of the London, St. Katharine, Millwall, East and West India Docks, Royal Mail and General Steam Companies, and the Conservators of the River Thames, were good enough to have them posted in convenient places.

In consequence of the publicity thus given to the proposed exhibition, the honorary secretary received applications from upwards of 150 gentlemen for further particulars, and ultimately the number of models exhibited were as follows:—

Steam ships	Class 1.—Ocean steamers	28
	Class 2.—Cargo steamers	10
	Class 3.—Channel passenger vessels.	11
	Class 4.—River passenger paddle steamers.	3
Sailing ships		30
Yachts	Class 1.—Schooners	21
	Class 2.—Cutters	12
Fishing smacks		10
Tugs		3
River tugs		4
Barges		9
		141

The number of steam ships of all classes amounted to 59, and sailing ships to 82, making a total of 141 models entered for competition.

Besides this there was a large miscellaneous class of 112 models, comprising many models of ships not entered for competition, life-saving apparatus, boat-lowering gear, &c., the grand total exhibited amounting to no less than 253.

In order that these should be properly exhibited, application was made to Lord John Manners, who kindly consented to write to the authorities at South Kensington for the loan of some of the pedestals used at the Scientific Exhibition of 1876. This request was most courteously granted, and the accession of these pedestals helped in no slight degree to display the form and symmetry of the various models. As possession could not be had of the hall prior to about 10 days before the opening day, which was fixed for Monday the 28th of May, it was necessary to limit the days for the reception of models to the 18th, 19th, 22nd, and 23rd May.

Whit Monday being a Bank holiday, and occurring during this time, occasioned a great amount of inconvenience, as many cases of models arrived from the different railway stations on that day, and could with difficulty be received at the hall on account of the absence of workmen, who had taken advantage of the public holiday.

The delay was increased by some of the railway stations being flooded with cases from various parts quicker than they could deliver them. A plan of the hall, however, having been carefully prepared by the honorary secretary, and the pedestals placed in accordance therewith, each model had its locality assigned as soon as it was unpacked; and it was found possible, by dint of judicious arrangement, to keep the different classes fairly well together and distinct from each other.

It had, however, been necessary to draw out this plan simply from the dimensions of the models forwarded by the exhibitors themselves, and since in many cases the actual size of the models was found to be larger by some inches than what had been advised, a large amount of re-arrangement had to be made, which increased to no small extent the labour of compiling the catalogue, and rendered its revision continually necessary up to the Saturday before the opening.

The question as to who should officiate at the ceremony of opening the exhibition was one which was most anxiously considered by your sub-committee. H.R.H. the Prince of Wales was first applied to by Lord John Manners. H.R.H. replied that he could not undertake the duty, as he was not officially connected with the company.

Further obstacles occurred from the fact of its being the Whitsuntide Vacation. Neither Sir Charles Adderley nor Lord Hampton, to whom application was made as being so intimately connected with the shipping interest—the former as President of the Board of Trade, and the latter as President of the Institution of Naval Architects—could preside on the occasion.

The difficulty was finally solved by the kindness of the Right Honourable the Lord Mayor, who, with his usual urbanity, at the request of Mr. J. D'A. Samuda, most courteously consented to undertake the duty.

The distribution of prizes took place on Friday, the 22nd day of June 1877, by Lady John Manners.

Her Ladyship then distributed the medals, freedom certificates, and money prizes, to the successful competitors, and was graciously pleased herself to accept a medal in commemoration of the occasion; and after speeches by Sir Charles Adderley, M.P., Lord John Manners, M.P., Mr. E. J. Reed, M.P., Mr. C. M. Norwood, M.P., the Prime Warden of the Fishmongers' Company, Mr. Under-Sheriff Baxter, Mr. Wigram, Mr. J. Herbert Tritton, and others, the proceedings terminated.

The names of the successful competitors were as follows:—

LETTER TO MAYORS OF TOWNS.

SIR,

I AM directed by the Master and Wardens of the Shipwrights' Company of London to forward you the enclosed notice of the Exhibition which they propose to hold of ship models, and the prizes which are offered for the best models exhibited.

The master and wardens hope, by thus collecting together the best models of vessels of the different classes mentioned, to improve the existing type of ships. They would, therefore, esteem it a favour if you would kindly bring the matter before your council, and, by giving publicity to it in your town, assist in promoting the objects they have in view.

I have the honour to be, Sir,
Your most obedient servant,

REPORTS OF JUDGING COMMITTEES.

Fishmongers' Hall, London, E.C.
7th June, 1877.

To the Exhibition committee of the Shipwrights' Company's competitive Exhibition.

GENTLEMEN,

WE beg to report that we have awarded the prizes in the steamship classes as follows:—

Section A. Class 1.

First Prize.

To design No. 23, with the observation that, while the design fulfils the conditions laid down, the propriety of such conditions for commercial success is doubted.

Second Prize.

To design No. 4, but limited to 6,200 tons displacement.

Third Prize.

To design No. 1. Good design so far as shown, but particulars meagre.

Section A. Class 2.

First Prize.

To design No. 3.

Second Prize.

To design No. 7.

Section A. Class 3.

We are of opinion that, while there are many good designs, there are none where a scheme for the ship and suitable harbour accommodation for it is so laid down as to entitle the proposer to a prize.

Some of the vessels might be worked successfully, notwithstanding their large dimensions, in connexion with a suitable harbour scheme, but this is not established by the proposers.

Section A. Class 4.

Mr. G. Scott, of Glasgow, and Mr. G. C. Mackrow, of Blackwall, send designs having very good features in them, but no prize is recommended.

We are, Gentlemen,
Your obedient servants,
NATHL. BARNABY.
C. HAMPDEN WIGRAM.
GEORGE KELSON.
B. WAYMOUTH.
W. FROUDE.

Fishmongers' Hall, London, E.C.
6th June, 1877.

To the Exhibition committee of the Shipwrights' Company.

GENTLEMEN,

WE beg to report that we have awarded prizes to the exhibitors of the models of sailing ships as follows:—

First Prize.

No. 12. J. McMillan, jun.

Second Prize.

No. 28. C. H. Jordan.

We further recommend to the committee that the designs for sailing ships of the following exhibitors should be highly commended, viz.:

Messrs J. & G. Thomson; Henry Claughton; and T. R. Oswald.

We find the designs in this class to be generally of great merit, and the question as to which designers should have the prizes has given the judges considerable difficulty, more especially as there is little variation in the character of the lines shown.

We are, Gentlemen,
Your obedient Servants,
W. BROOMHAM.
CLIFFORD WIGRAM.
HENRY GREEN.
ALFRED D. LEWIS.

104, Palace Gardens Terrace,
Kensington, W., May 29th, 1877.

To the Exhibition committee of the Shipwrights' Company.

Gentlemen,

We beg to report that we have awarded prizes to the exhibitors of yacht models as follows:—

Section C. Class 1.

First Prize. No. 6. Model of a schooner yacht of 200 tons, exhibited by Mr. M. E. Ratsey.
Second Prize. No. 5. Model of a schooner yacht of 150 tons, exhibited by Mr. Fred. Curtis.

Class 2.

First Prize. No. 4. Model of a cutter yacht of 93 tons, exhibited by Mr. M. E. Ratsey.

We further recommend to the committee that the following models should be highly commended:—

Class 1.

No. 9. Model of a schooner yacht of 308 tons, exhibited by Mr. James Ash.
No. 19. Model of the schooner yacht "Miranda," exhibited by Mr. John Harvey.

Class 2.

No. 7. Model of a cutter yacht of 40 tons, exhibited by Mr. Fred. Curtis.

We are, Gentlemen,
Your obedient Servants,
Alfred Paget,
B. Waymouth,
Dixon Kemp,
And. Thomson,
Judges of Yacht Models.

Fishmongers' Hall, London, E.C.,
7th June, 1877.

To the Exhibition committee of the Shipwrights' Company's Competitive Exhibition.

Gentlemen,

We beg to report that we have awarded the prizes in the sections referred to as follows, viz.:—

Section D. Fishing Smacks.

The excellence of so many of the designs submitted made it extremely difficult to decide in favour of one specially. We, however, have finally agreed to award the prize to No. 5, T. Vernon Trew; but we would also recommend that No. 2, E. Hutton, be highly commended.

Section E. Tugs.

We have had no hesitation in awarding the prize to No. 3, G. C. Mackrow.

Section F. River Tugs.

After carefully examining the models and drawings submitted, we are of opinion that none of them fulfil the conditions for which the prize was offered.

Section G. Barges.

We have awarded the First Prize to No. 2, R. M. Surridge; and the second prize to No. 4, John Taylor.

We, are, &c., &c.,
W. Broomham.
W. S. Page.
W. M. Marshall.
Edwd. Talbot.
Saml. Williams.

In addition to the above effort the company are organizing a second competitive exhibition, which on this occasion will be international in its character; details of which are as follows:—

Models not intended for Competition.

Ventilation of Ships.

A sum of 50*l.* offered by Mr. Ex-Sheriff Burt will be also awarded for the best system proposed for the improved ventilation of passenger vessels. Conditions of competition will be hereafter announced.

Alfred D. Lewis,
Hon. Secretary,
Shipwrights' Exhibition Committee.

Fishmongers' Hall,
May, 1881.

It is probable that the awards may in certain classes be supplemented by money prizes, given by members of the Company and others.

Regulations as to Competition.

The competition will be open to either naval architects, ship builders, or ship owners (on behalf of the builders or designers), English or foreign.

No exhibitor may compete in more than two classes.

No model of a vessel to be entered for competition built more than five years ago.

Competitors to fill up and send in tabular forms (which will be supplied by the company) giving particulars and calculations of their designs, and to furnish such further information (if any) as the judges may require. The tabular forms to be sent with the models.

Exhibitors should as far as possible adhere to the scales for the models recommended for the various classes, as given in the programme of classification, as any considerable deviation may endanger the acceptance of the model.

The acceptance or rejection of models sent will rest with a committee of selection, and the awards of the judges in the various classes will be final. The judges will reserve to themselves full liberty to withhold any prize where the merit of the exhibits do not in their judgment warrant such recognition of excellence.

Each model should have a label attached specifying the section and class for which it is entered—thus, Section B., Class 2; and the same information must be plainly marked on the outside of each box or package.

Models should be delivered, carriage paid, to Fishmongers' Hall, London, on 20th, 21st, or 22nd April, 1882, addressed Alfred D. Lewis, Esq., Hon. Secretary, Shipwrights' Exhibition Committee, Fishmongers' Hall, London; and be removed from the hall within three days from 13th May, the date for closing the Exhibition. Every care will be taken of exhibits, but which, however, will be at sender's risk.

Intending competitors or exhibitors should return the "application form" not later than the 15th March, 1882, to the above-named Hon. Secretary, Fishmongers' Hall, London, giving the dimensions of their proposed exhibits for which they desire space.

APPENDIX A.

The company gave full information to the Municipal Commissioners appointed in 1834. Their property then consisted of 2,400*l.* in the funds.

SPECTACLEMAKERS' COMPANY.

The Company delivered their returns under protest.

PART I.—Foundation and Object.

A to H.

Return A.—A statement of the date, ascertained or probable, of the foundation of the company, and of the circumstances, so far as they can be discovered from its documents of foundation or achives, in which the company had its origin.

Return B.—A list of the charters, charters of inspeximus, and other instruments of a similar nature, whether originals or copies, which have been at any time in the possession of the company, together with an abstract of the purport of each, regard being specially had to any evidence which it may contain as to the object of the foundation of the company.

Return C.—A list of any trust deeds "founding, regulating, or affecting" the company, with the date of each, the names of the parties thereto, and an abstract of the purport of each.

Return D.—A list with dates of any "decrees of court," whether of the Courts of Common Law or of Chancery, or of any acts of the Court of Aldermen or of the Court of Common Council, "regulating or affecting" the company, with a statement of the effect of each decision.

Return E.—A list of any other documents, not included in the descriptions in the preceding returns, which "found, regulate, or affect" the company, with dates and an abstract of the effect of each.

Return F.—A concise history of the company, from the time of its foundation to the present day, with special reference to the inquiry contained in the Commission as to "the objects for which the company was founded," and "how far those objects are now being carried into effect."

Return G.—Has the company a licence in mortmain? When was such licence granted, (referring to the document by description)? What is its extent, and to what extent is it now unexhausted?

Return H.—Is there vested in the company, and how, whether by charter statute, order of the Court of Aldermen, act of Common Council, or otherwise, any right of exercising superintendence over, or any duty or discretion to encourage in any way, any and what art, trade or business? State the nature and local limits of such control. In what manner and to what extent is such control now exercised? If such control is not now exercised, state the circumstances under which its exercise has fallen into desuetude.

A.—The company is not traceable previous to the granting of its charter in 1629.

B.—The only charter of the company was granted by King Charles the First in 1629 for the better order, rule, and government of those using the art of spectaclemaking.

C.—None.

D.—Act of Common Council dated 1st July 1658, enacting that "all persons using the trade of a spectacle-"maker within this city or liberties thereof are requested "to become free of this company."

E.—None.

F.—The company was founded in 1629, but has no minute books before 1666 (Fire of London). Up to the end of the 18th century they exercised control over the trade. A livery was granted to them by the Court of Aldermen in 1809.

G.—The company has power under its charters to purchase, have, receive, and enjoy manors, messuages, lands, &c.

H.—There is power to exercise superintendence over the trade in the City and liberties or within 3 miles thereof. Such control is not now exercised in consequence of its being considered a restriction.

Part I.—I.

Return I.—A list of the charities, eleemosynary, educational, or otherwise, which are under the management of the company, stating in each case the name of the founder, the date and nature of the benefaction, its original and its present value as regards both capital and income, and the purposes to which the funds have been applied for each of the last preceding 10 years.

Legacy of 100*l.* given by the will of John Tarwell, dated 1711, to produce 5*l.* per annum to the uses following, viz.:—3*l.* 10*s.* for a dinner to the Company of Spectaclemakers, and 1*l.* 10*s.* to be given to six poor members of the company, now invested in the sum of 166*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*, New 3 per cent. Annuities, standing in the name of the corporation of the Spectaclemakers' Company.

N.B.—The whole income of 5*l.* per annum is given to the poor, and the accounts are so returned annually to the Charity Commissioners.

Gift of Sir William Tite in the year 1863 of 1,000*l.* 4 per cent. Debenture Stock of the London and South Western Railway Company, the dividends to be applied in pensions to four widows of liverymen of the company. They have been so applied since the receipt of the gift.

N.B.—The accounts are returned annually to the Charity Commissioners.

PART II.—CONSTITUTION AND PRIVILEGES OF MEMBERSHIP.

RETURN A.—Governing Body.

1. State the present constitution of the governing body of the company, whether such constitution is according to the charter, and if not, in what respects such constitution varies therefrom, and when and how such alteration was made.
2. State the qualifications for membership of the governing body of the company, the time and periods of election, and the qualifications of the voters at elections to the governing body.
3. State the functions of the governing body, and of the different members of the same respectively, and whether the members of the governing body pay any, and what, fees or fines on admission thereto, and whether they are paid any, and what, salaries or amounts in respect of their services respectively.
4. State the nature of the business which comes before the governing body of the company, the method adopted in transacting it, the times at which the governing body meets for business purposes, the way in which the opinions of the members are taken, and whether the resolutions and decisions of the governing body are published, or are otherwise accessible to any or all, and which of, the members of the company.
5. State whether the members of the governing body are liable to suspension or removal on any, and what, grounds, and by what method such suspension or removal is effected.
6. Has the company any bye-laws sanctioned by the Courts of Law or Chancery, or by the Courts of Aldermen or of Common Council, or otherwise. State the effect of such byelaws.

1. The Governing Body is in strict accordance with the Charter, which says there shall be a master, two wardens, and eight assistants. The governing body now is, viz :—

Master :—
The Rt. Hon. William McArthur, Lord Mayor, M.P.
Two wardens :
Chas. Hill, Esq., J.P.
R. S. Wilkinson, Esq., J.P.
Eight assistants :—
Alderman Sir Benj. S. Phillips.
Alderman Sir Thomas Dakin.
Mr. Alderman Stone.
Alderman Sir A. Lusk, Bt., M.P.
Mr. Alderman Fowler, M.P.
The Rt. Hon. G. J. Goschen, M.P.
C. N. Newdegate, Esq., M.P.
Vacancy for one assistant.

The following variation was made by resolution of the court on 26th March 1868, viz :—

"That when there shall be no member of the court who "has not served the office of warden, then that the court "on the day of election may out of the livery elect a fit "and proper person to serve the office of renter warden for "the year ensuing."

2. The qualifications for becoming a member of the governing body are :—

1st. Freedom of the company.
2nd. Admission on the livery of the company.

Whenever a vacancy on the court shall have occurred, the clerk shall formally notify the same at the next court, and at that or at a subsequent court the election shall be appointed to take place as and when may be thought fit, either at a quarterly or special court, and special notice of the appointment of the court for the election shall be given in the summonses for such court to each member of the court, and no election shall take place except at a court so especially appointed and upon a special notice.

It is necessary to be a member of the court of assistants to vote at elections of the governing body.

3. The governing body manage the affairs of the company.

The master and wardens are chosen annually, and some matters of detail are left to them to carry out. In the absence of the master, the upper warden or a past master presides at all meetings of the company. The assistants' duties are to attend all courts and consider the various affairs of the company brought before them. Fines for non-attendance were abolished some few years since.

The fees, &c., are as under :—

Payable on election as Assistant -	50
Do. do. Renter Warden -	6
Do. do. Upper Warden -	6
Do. do. Master - -	12
	74
Contribution to poor's box - -	4
	£78

Each member receives a fee of 1*l.* 1*s.* for punctual attendance at the court meetings.

4. The nature of the business which comes before the governing body of the company is such as relates to the general management and regulation of the corporation. There are five fixed courts annually at which all business which arises is considered, in addition to which special courts are held if necessary. All questions are decided by show of hands, but not in every case published. The minute books of proceedings are only open to members of the court of assistants.

5. The court may remove an assistant for "misbehaviour or any other reasonable cause" by resolution of a quorum consisting of the major part of the master, wardens, and assistants.

6. The byelaws were approved in accordance with Statute 19, Henry VII., by the Lord Chancellor and the Lord Chief Justices of the King's Bench and Common Pleas, to give effect in detail to the provisions of the Charter.

PART II.—B.

RETURN B.—Admission to membership.

1. State the qualifications for membership of the company, the several grades of membership of the company, and whether women are admitted to membership.
2. State the several modes in which the freedom of the company may be obtained, the circumstances entitling an applicant to admission under each mode respectively, and the fees payable in respect of admission under each mode respectively.
3. State whether persons exercising any particular trade are required by statute or otherwise to become free of the company. Is there any process by which members of such trade can become members of the company, and is there any process for compelling such persons to procure admission, and are such processes enforced, and to what extent? Is the freedom of the City of London in any and what way a condition precedent or subsequent to membership? Are there any members who are not free of the City of London? Do persons exercising any particular trade commonly become members of the company? If so, how many members of such trade are at present members of the company? What is the number of the members of the trade (if any), the name of which is borne by the company, who are members of the company.

4. Are freemen liable to disfranchisement, and if so, for what reasons, and what is the mode of disfranchisement?

5. Is the livery of the company limited or unlimited in number? What are the qualifications for election to the livery, who are the electors thereto, and how do the elections thereto take place, and what fees are payable on election? Are liverymen liable to removal from the livery, and for what reasons?

PART IV.—F.

RETURN F.—(1.) The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them what has been the amount of the increase or decrease, from year to year, of the company's income during the last 10 years, and whether there is reason to expect any increase or decrease during the next 10 years, together with a statement of the reasons for such expectation.

RETURN F.—(2.) The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them whether there is reason to expect any permanent increase or decrease in value in any of the estates or properties of the company, and if so, to what extent, together with a statement of the reasons for such expectation.

(1.) Average increase of income during the past ten years has been 219*l.*

The company is unable to form any accurate opinion as to its future income.

(2.) The freehold property of the company has been so recently acquired, that no opinion can be given.

PART IV.—G.

RETURN G.—The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them—

1. What is the system of management of the company's estates and property?
2. In what way, and by whom, the several receipts and payments are taken and made, and under what control?
3. In what way the company's accounts are audited?
4. Whether the company's accounts are published, or are accessible to all or any, and which, of the members of the company?

1. Rents received quarterly; and housekeeper, rates and taxes, and some repairs paid by the company.

2. The receipts and payments are taken and made by the clerk under the supervision of a finance committee of the court, who meet for that purpose. Rents are accounted for by the renter warden.

3. Quarterly by a finance committee, consisting of the master, wardens, and three other members of the court.

4. The company's accounts are not published, but are accessible to the inspection of any liveryman of the company.

PART IV.—H.

RETURN H.—A detailed statement of the income from all sources of the company during each of the preceding 10 years, a detailed statement of the company's expenditure during each of such 10 years, and a detailed statement of the assets and liabilities of the company at the end of each of the last 10 years.

This company declines to set out in detail the manner in which its own income has been expended during each of the last 10 years, or to give any detailed statement of its assets and liabilities at the end of each such 10 years, but the gross expenditure for that period is as follows:—

	£ s. d.
1870	859 8 6
1871	821 6 11
1872	1,000 16 4
1873	1,202 15 1
1874	1,315 7 1
1875	1,087 15 11
1876	1,130 1 1
1877	810 9 3
1878	1,288 18 1
1879	1,270 9 9

The outstanding liabilities are for the current expenditure.

The assets have been before stated. See Return B., Personal property, B. 1, and Return A., Landed property, A. 4.

Part IV.—M.

Return M.—General and Technical Education.

A statement as to whether the company does anything to subsidize or encourage education, whether general or technical, and a return of the means (if any) so employed, and of the amount expended on such objects during each of the last preceding ten years.

10*l.* 10*s.* was voted to the Society of Fine Arts for prizes in connection with the trade in the year 1873, besides which at a subsequent date three eminent members of the trade, belonging to the company, were requested to submit a scheme to the court for the purpose of encouraging emulation in the craft, but no joint scheme has yet been suggested.

PART V.—Reform.

Part V.—Reform.

The Commissioners, being bound to report to Her Majesty "what measures (if any) are, in their judgment, "expedient and necessary for improving or altering the constitution of the companies, or the ap- "propriation or administration of the property or revenues thereof," respectfully invite the attention of the officers of the companies to this part of the Commission.

The Commissioners will be very glad to receive and consider any suggestions respecting this part of the Commission with which the officers of the companies may do the Commissioners the honour of favouring them.

The property of the company is small, and has been accumulated from voluntary payments made almost entirely by the freemen and liverymen on their admission, and without any extraneous aid or gifts whatsoever. The income of the company is still largely dependent upon payments for the same purposes, in consequence of which the company have no suggestion to offer as to the disposal of their own funds.

APPENDIX A.

The Company gave full information to the Municipal Commissioners of 1834. The income of the Company then amounted on an average to 364*l.* a year.

STATIONERS' COMPANY.

The Returns of the Company were delivered under protest.

PART I.—FOUNDATION AND OBJECT.

A—H.

RETURN A.—A statement of the date, ascertained or probable, of the foundation of the company, and of the circumstances, so far as they can be discovered from its documents of foundation or archives, in which the company had its origin.

RETURN B.—A list of the charters, charters of inspeximus, and other instruments of a similar nature, whether originals, or copies, which have been at any time in the possession of the company, together with an abstract of the purport of each, regard being specially had to any evidence which it may contain as to the object of the foundation of the company.

RETURN C.—A list of any trust deeds "founding, regulating, or affecting" the company, with the date of each, the names of the parties thereto, and an abstract of the purport of each.

RETURN D.—A list, with dates, of any "decrees of court," whether of the Courts of Common Law or of Chancery, or of any acts of the Courts of Aldermen or of Common Council, "regulating or affecting" the company, with a statement of the effect of each decision.

RETURN E.—A list of any other documents, not included in the descriptions in the preceding returns, which "found, regulate, or affect" the company, with dates and an abstract of the effect of each.

RETURN F.—A concise history of the company from the time of its foundation to the present day, with special reference to the inquiry contained in the commission as to "the objects for which the company was "founded," and "how far those objects are now being carried into effect."

RETURN G.—Has the company a licence in mortmain? When was such licence granted (referring to the document by description)? What is its extent, and to what extent is it now unexhausted?

RETURN H.—Is there vested in the company, and how, whether by charter, statute, order of the Court of Aldermen, act of Common Council, or otherwise, any right of exercising superintendence over or any duty or discretion to encourage in any way any and what art, trade, or business? State the nature and local limits of such control. In what manner and to what extent is such control now exercised? If such control is not now exercised, state the circumstances under which its exercise has fallen into desuetude.

A.—The company was incorporated 1556. It is believed that a brotherhood or society existed upwards of a century previously, called the Brotherhood or Society of Textwriters.

B.—The original charter was destroyed in the Fire of London. It purported to establish a corporation to control the printing and publication of books. The company have a copy of the charter. The company have the original charter granted by William and Mary, confirming and regranting the privileges granted by the charter of 1556.

C.—None known.

D.—Various decrees of the Star Chamber were made affecting the company's ancient privileges, but they do not in any way regulate or affect the company.

E.—The company is regulated or affected by the byelaws set forth in the accompanying black letter volume,* and the various recorded proceedings of the courts of assistants from 1556 to the present time.

F.—The company has continued ever since its incorporation, and still is, a trade guild consisting exclusively of members of the trade of a stationer or bookmaker, and their children, and descendants born free. The greater number of printers' apprentices in the City of London are bound at Stationers' Hall, and the company's pensioners and the recipients of the charities under their control are principally journeymen printers, compositors, and pressmen.

The company was originally established for the purpose of fostering and encouraging the trade of a publisher and stationer, and from the time of its original foundation to this date a limited number of liverymen of the company have carried on at Stationers' Hall the trade of a publisher for their own benefit, and a division of profits has been annually made amongst the partners. Other portion of the profits has been distributed annually amongst poor freemen of the company, applied towards the necessary expenses of the company, and invested in the purchase of the hall and premises adjoining. The capital for this trade was originally subscribed by the members of the company in certain proportions or shares, and these shares have been regularly transmitted from time to time since 1605, as in the case of shares of trade companies.

* The company omitted to forward this volume.

STATIONERS' COMPANY—continued.

The copyright registry was first established by the company at the commencement of the 16th century or even earlier. It would appear from the ancient records that a register of copies had existed previous to the incorporation. In 1565 rules were made by the company regulating the transmission of copies upon the decease of the owner, and requiring them to be entered in the books of the company. In 1584 the Privy Council (through the Lord Mayor) ordered that all copies should be entered in the company's register, and copyrights were from time to time transferred by entries in these registers. Various orders were from time to time issued by the Lords of the Privy Council and High Commissioners, regulating printing. In 1660 a committee of the House of Commons of which Mr. Prynne was chairman was appointed to prepare a Bill regulating printing, and in 1662 the Bill prepared by the committee was passed, and was known as the Licensing Act. It required all printed works to be registered at Stationers' Hall. This Act expired in 1681, and in 1710 the first Copyright Act was passed, which has been superseded by the Act of 1842. The Act of 1710 required copies to be entered at Stationers' Hall before publication, and the Act of 1842 makes entry at Stationers' Hall a condition precedent to the title to sue for protection against infringements. For upwards of three centuries the company have without intermission continued to record at their hall the literary productions of the United Kingdom, and the usefulness of this register (originally established by the company for the convenience of their own members) was early recognized by the legislature, and, as the company still maintain their exclusive character of a trade guild, they desire, and are fully competent to retain, this privilege.

G.—Yes, in the charter. The extent is 20*l.*, and it is deemed to be exhausted.

H.—The company elect the registrar of copyrights under the provisions of the Copyright Act.

PART I.—RETURN I.—CHARITIES.

State the nature of the business which comes before the governing body of the company, the method adopted in transacting it, the times at which the governing body meets for business purposes, the way in which the opinions of the members are taken, and whether the resolutions and decisions of the governing body are published, or are otherwise accessible to all or any, and which, of the members of the company.
5. State whether the members of the governing body are liable to suspension or removal on any and what grounds, and by what method such suspension or removal is effected.
6. Has the company any byelaws sanctioned by the Courts of Law or Chancery, or by the Courts of Aldermen or of Common Council, or otherwise? State the effect of such byelaws.

1. Master, wardens, and court of assistants, according to charter.

2. Liverymen elected by the court at their pleasure.

3. To govern the company. The assistants pay on admission 80*l.* each. A fee of 2*l.* 2*s.* is paid to each member attending the court. Most of the business is transacted in committee, for attendance at which no fees are paid.

4. The court meets on the first Tuesday in the months of February, March, April, May, June, July, August, October, November, and December, and on the second Tuesday in January, also on the 1st and 26th March. Opinions are taken by show of hands or ballot. Resolutions are not published, and are not accessible to liverymen or freemen.

The business consists of binding apprentices, admitting freemen and liverymen, administering the charities, including the Stationers' School, and the company's affairs, and considering questions relating to copyright.

5. In case of bankruptcy members are not summoned.

6. Yes. See Part I.—E.

Part II.—B.

Return B.—Admission to membership.

1. State the qualifications for membership of the company, the several grades of membership of the company, and whether women are admitted to membership.
2. State the several modes in which the freedom of the company may be obtained, the circumstances entitling an applicant to admission under each mode respectively, and the fees payable in respect of admission under each mode respectively.
3. State whether persons exercising any particular trade are required by statute or otherwise to become free of the company. Is there any process for compelling such persons to procure admission, or any process by which such persons are enabled themselves to procure admission, and are such processes enforced respectively, and to what extent? Do persons exercising any particular trade commonly become members of the company? If so, how many members of such trade are at present members of the company? State also (if the company bears the name of any existing trade) how many members of such trade are members of the company?
4. Are freemen liable to disfranchisement, and if so, for what reasons, and what is the mode of disfranchisement?
5. Is the livery of the company limited or unlimited in number? What are the qualifications for election to the livery, who are the electors thereto, and how do the elections thereto take place, and what fees are payable on election? Are liverymen liable to removal from the livery, and for what reasons?
6. State the number of apprentices bound at the company's hall or otherwise under the auspices of the company during each of the last 10 years, and state how many of such apprentices have been bound to members following the trade, if any, the name of which is borne by the company? Has the company in any, and what cases, paid the fees or premiums of such apprentices, and what has been the amount if any so expended in each of the last 10 years?
7. Is the freedom of the city of London in any way a condition, precedent or subsequent, of membership of the company? Are there any and how many members of the company who are not free of the city of London?

1. Applicants for the freedom must either have been born free or else must be in the company's trade.

Women are not now admitted.

2. By service as apprentice to a member of the company.

By patrimony, being born free. Fee 5*l.*

By redemption, if in the company's trade, but not otherwise. Fee 30*l.*

3. Not now. Freedom of the city is not a condition precedent. It is believed some freemen of the company are not free of the city. The greater number of the principal printers and booksellers are members of the company. There are now upwards of 266 members of the trade members of the company.

4. Disfranchisement has not occurred this century.

5. The livery is unlimited; elections thereto are by the court; all freemen are eligible; the fee is 70*l.*

No recorded instance of removal from the livery is extant.

6. See Part II.—D.

7. (Se No. 3 above.)

PART II.—C.

RETURN C.—Number of members.

State (1) the present number of freemen, (2) the present number of the livery, (3) the present number of other members, (4) the number of admissions to the freedom by each mode respectively, and (5) the number of calls to the livery which have respectively taken place during each of the last preceding 10 years.

(1). Freemen, 445 on the books.

(2). Livery, 312.

(3). Honorary liveryman, the Right Honourable W. H. Smith, M.P., bookseller. Freemen are admitted to the livery on application, and upon payment of the fines and fees.

(5 & 6). Freemen admitted.

PART II.—E.

RETURN E.—Profits and privileges.

1. State with fullness what are the advantages, pecuniary or otherwise, incident to the position of a member of the company in each grade of membership, as (1) a freeman, (2) a liveryman, (3) master, warden, or otherwise a member of the governing body.
2. State the sums paid on an average annually for the preceding 10 years by the company to the members according to the grades of membership mentioned above, and of what such sums consisted, whether (1) fees, and of what nature, (2) pensions, or (3) other payments, specifying the nature of the same respectively.
3. What circumstances are in practice held to constitute a claim to a pension or donation? State the number of present pensioners and donees respectively, and the amounts paid to them as such respectively. How many pensioners and donees are connected with the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the company?
4. (1) What is the average standing of a member when he becomes a member of the governing body, and (2) what is the average time for which a member continues on the governing body?
5. Does the company carry on any and what trade or manufacture with which its title is directly or indirectly connected? If so, what is the capital, and from what sources is it derived, and how are the profits (if any) divided or dealt with?

1. (1) Freemen can bind apprentices, acquire livery by payment, are eligible for various charities in case of poverty, and can obtain their sons' education at the Stationers' school upon payment of the foundation fee of 24*s.* per annum.

(2) Liveryman can also after serving as renter warden, or being excused, become a member of the trading partnership; has a vote for the city if resident within the prescribed distance.

(3) Governing body members are entitled to hold increased shares in the trading partnership.

2. For pensions, see charity returns. 400*l.* per annum is distributed amongst poor freemen by the partners in the trading stock out of their property

No other sums are paid to freemen or liverymen.

The members of the governing body only receive the court fees according to their attendance.

3. Extreme poverty.

The number of pensioners is 168. All are or have been at some time connected with the trade either themselves or in the case of widows by their husbands.

4. Forty years. For the rest of his life.

5. No. A select body of liverymen, however, carry on the original trade of a publisher, which has been continued without intermission since the foundation of the company. The capital has always been provided by the members in certain proportions or shares, and the profits are divided amongst them as in the case of an ordinary trading partnership.

STATIONERS' COMPANY—continued.

PART III.—OFFICERS AND SERVANTS.

RETURN A.—A list of the officers of the company, with a statement of the duties of each, the amount of his salary and other emoluments, and whether or not he is a member of the company.

RETURN B.—A list of the servants of the company, with a statement of the duties of each, and of the amounts of their wages and other emoluments.

RETURN C.—A statement as to the mode in which the officers and servants of the company are respectively appointed.

Return A.—Clerk, Charles Robert Rivington, freeman by patrimony, liveryman.

His duties are very multifarious, and include issuing all summonses, attending all meetings, and recording the proceedings thereat, and generally conducting, under the direction of the master and wardens, the business of the company; salary 250*l.* per annum. The clerk has certain other duties to perform connected with the trading partnership, for which he is paid out of the trade profits.

Return B.—Servants. Beadle, Benjamin Manley, freeman.

His duties are to attend without the door of the council-room, as other beadles, his predecessors, have done, and not come into the council-chamber or court-room of this company while the court is sitting, except he be called by the bell, or otherwise as the company shall have occasion to use him.

Special care is to be taken by him for keeping the court private, and that no persons be suffered to come in until the bell be rung by the master or wardens, and then the court to be acquainted with the persons attending, and their business.

If a liveryman during the holding of his place of beadle, he is to go in the rank last of all; and if it happens that he leaves his place at any time he is to be ranked according to his antiquity as a liveryman.

He shall not presume to be covered in the presence of the master and wardens of the company, or any of them, without their particular order and direction.

He shall not presume to sit at table to dine with the master, wardens, assistants, committee of assistants, or stockkeepers of the company, when they meet as such.

He shall not presume to sit at table with the livery of the company when the master, wardens, assistants, and livery of the company shall dine with the Lord Mayor or either of the sheriffs of London, nor at any other public meeting.

He shall duly and constantly attend on the master and wardens of the company at their dwelling-houses three times in every week at least, and oftener, as they shall command him, or occasion require.

He is to go about and collect the arrears of quarterage of such of the members as have not paid it to the renter wardens.

And that no person except the livery be admitted to dine at the hall at the August and November dinners.

He is expected to attend upon the treasurer, in the warehouse, at all times as occasion may require, when not actually employed from home, with the treasurer's permission and appointment in the service of the corporation, and to behave himself therein at all times according to such directions as he shall receive from the treasurer.

The warehouse shall not be shut up on pretence of dinner, not only during the time of publication of the almanacks, but at all other times, that by an arrangement between the beadle and the porter one of them shall always be there from eight in the morning till six in the evening, or later, until the business of the day is done.

The office not to be shut on Saturday till three o'clock.

That as hitherto the beadle hath done many things by custom not prescribed by particular orders, so he is to submit to any further duty as a variation of circumstances may make an enlargement of his duty necesary.

Instructions relating to the office and duty of Porter.

He is to attend the master, wardens, &c. upon all court days, and upon all public processions, and to wear the company's silver badge upon those days. Also to attend the master, wardens, &c. upon all other occasions when they shall think fit to require it, and to carry and bring back the company's books to and from the hall to the clerk's house, and for which he shall take and receive the accustomed fees, &c.

He is to attend the stockkeepers at all meetings, to attend them also when books are to be looked out, and to bring the same from the warehouses, where they are kept, into the treasurer's warehouse.

He is to carry or cause to be carried the paper to the several printers, and to bring from them the impressions of all the company's almanacks and books; to gather, pile, and tie up the same; to give the account of impressions to the treasurer or stockkeepers who keep the warehouse accounts.

He is to open and shut the treasurer's warehouse morning and evening, to sweep out the same, and keep the fore-court and back garden clean.

He is to give attendance within the treasurer's call at all times during the office hours, and at all other times when wanted by the treasurer, and when he is not otherwise engaged in the company's business, to be judged of by the treasurer, and to be in all respects under the treasurer's directions.

Duties of Hall-Keeper.

The duties of the hall-keeper should be—

To keep the great hall, court, and stock rooms, with the lobbies and staircases belonging to them, and the furniture and stoves therein, perfectly clean.

To scour the hall, lobbies, and staircases, as soon as may be after every livery dinner, and to sweep and clean them at least once a week, and especially after every court day.

To clean the plate whenever it is used by the company.

To take care of the gowns belonging to the court of assistants.

To attend at all meetings of the court of assistants and stock board, and of the livery at the hall.

The salary of the hall-keeper is to be 50*l.* a year, and gratuities at Christmas supposed to amount to 10*l.* a year more.

The salary of the beadle is to be 120*l.* a year, besides gratuities at Christmas, and profits of printing livery list, supposed to average together 30*l.* a year.

All fees will be collected for and retained by the company.

Return C.—The officers and servants are appointed by the master, wardens, and court of assistants, at a special court held on the 26th March.

For Charity Accounts see Charity Returns.

B 2.—A return of the balance of moneys in the hands of the company unappropriated in their accounts on the 31st December in each of the last preceding 10 years.

B 3.—A return of the estimated value of the plate, pictures, furniture, and other property, at present on the premises of the company, or in their possession elsewhere.

B 2.—It is impossible to give this return, as the company's accounts are not made up to the 31st December in each year. The accounts are annually made up to the Friday before the Saturday after St. Peter's Day in each year. The cash balance varies from 100*l.* to 400*l.*

B 3.—No valuation has been made this century. The company's ancient plate and property was all destroyed in 1666. The plate now belonging to the company is not worth more than 250*l.*, and the other property may be stated at not more than 1,500*l.*

PART IV.—C.

RETURN C (1).—A list of any properties of which the company is trustee, with the names of the cestui que trust in each instance, the nature of the trust, the nature and description of the property, and a statement of the sums received by the company in respect of the same, and of the manner in which such sums have been expended or disposed of during each of the last 10 years.

RETURN C (2).—A list of any properties of which the company is cestui que trust, with the names of the trustees in each instance, the nature of the trust, the nature and description of the property, and a statement of the sums received by the company in respect of the same during each of the last 10 years.

The only property in the company's name not belonging to the company (beyond the charity property) is that belonging to the partners in the trading stock.

STATIONERS' COMPANY—continued.

PART IV.—E.

RETURN E.—Internal sources of income.

A list of the annual amounts received in each of the last ten years in respect of (1) fees paid on admission to the freedom of the company, specifying the amounts paid in respect of each mode of admission thereto; (2) fines or fees paid on admission to the livery of the company; (3) fines or fees paid by members on coming on the court of the company; (4) fines or fees paid on promotion to the offices of warden, &c.; (5) any other internal sources of income, specifying the same.

PART IV.—F.

RETURN F.—(1.) The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them what has been the amount of the increase or decrease, from year to year, of the company's income during the last 10 years, and whether there is reason to expect any increase or decrease during the next 10 years, together with a statement of the reasons for such expectation.

RETURN F.—(2.) The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them whether there is reason to expect any permanent increase or decrease in value in any of the estates or properties of the company, and if so, to what extent, together with a statement for the reasons for such expectation.

F 1.—The variation within the last 10 years depends upon the number of persons admitted to the company, and as the income mainly consists of the payments made to the company by freemen and liverymen on their admission, any future variation is quite problematic.

PART IV.—G.

RETURN G.—The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them—

1. What is the system of management of the company's estates and property?
2. In what way, and by whom, the several receipts and payments are taken and made, and under what control?
3. In what way the company's accounts are audited?
4. Whether the company's accounts are published, or are accessible to all or any, and which of the members of the company.

The estates are managed by the master, wardens, and court.
Receipts and payments are taken and made by the clerk through the company's bankers.
Accounts are audited by a committee.
They are not published, they are accessible to the members of the court.

PART IV.—H.

RETURN H.—A detailed statement of the income from all sources of the company during each of the preceding 10 years, a detailed statement of the company's expenditure during each of such 10 years, and a detailed statement of the assets and liabilities of the company at the end of each of such 10 years.

The company's income for the year 1879 consisted of:—

1. Fines and fees.
2. Rents of warehouses in the Stationers' garden.
3. Dividends on Government Funds and Metropolitan stock.
4. Rent of 3, Clement's Court.

The expenditure consisted of:—

	£	s.	d.
Rent and taxes	453	9	6
Salaries	315	0	0
Repairs	58	10	0
Bibles and prayer books for apprentices	15	8	4
Donations and subscriptions to charities	72	10	0
Printing	40	4	4
Entertainments	248	5	6
Miscellaneous charges	353	9	1

and sundry other small payments.

The receipts and payments for the preceding nine years are similar.

STATIONERS' COMPANY—continued.

PART IV.—M.

General and Technical Education.

RETURN M.—A statement as to whether the company does anything to subsidize or encourage education, whether general or technical, and a return of the means (if any) so employed, and of the amount expended on such objects during each of the last preceding 10 years.

The company educate upwards of 180 boys at their school in Bolt Court, Fleet Street.

APPENDIX A.

The company gave full information to the Municipal Commissioners appointed in 1834. From the report it appears that their income and expenditure for 1833, which are given in minute detail, were respectively 2,542*l.*, and 1,951*l.*

APPENDIX B.

City of London Livery Companies' Commission,
2, Victoria, Street, S.W.,
15th February 1882.

SIR,

THE Commissioners desire me to thank, on their behalf, the Court of the Worshipful Company of Stationers for the information which they have supplied to the Commissioners, but at the same time to state that that information is not in their judgment quite sufficient. I am, therefore, to draw attention to some points in the returns of the Stationers' Company, with regard to which the Commissioners must respectfully ask for further information. The points are mentioned in the schedule hereto, and the Commissioners will be much obliged to the court if they will let them have the additional particulars as soon as possible.

I am, &c.
H. D. WARR,
Secretary.

The Clerk of the Worshipful Company of Stationers.

SCHEDULE.

The Commissioners respectfully ask for further information with regard to the following point.

Part IV.—Circular 14, August 1880.

The return does not contain a detailed statement of the corporate income and corporate expenditure of the Company during the 10 years mentioned.

City of London Livery Companies' Commission,
2, Victoria Street, Westminster, S.W.,
18th July 1882.

SIR,

MAY I venture to remind you that the Worshipful Company of Stationers has not yet favoured the Commissioners with an answer to their circular of the 15th February?

I am directed to add that, apart from the point alluded to in that circular, viz., the absence of the particulars of the Company's income and expenditure, the Commissioners have had some difficulty in understanding the Company's returns. They therefore respectfully ask the Court to furnish them with answers to the following questions:—

1. What was the trust income of the Stationers' Company for 1879, and in what proportions respectively did such trust income arise from (1) rents and rentcharges, (2) dividends, (3) charges on the Company's general income?
2. Of what does the Wood Street trust estate consist, and what is the rental?
3. What is the application of such trust income, i.e., how much is applicable to the Company's school, how much to the relief of poor members, how much to other objects?
4. The premises, 3, Clement's Court, mentioned in the return of income for 1879, are not mentioned by name in the returns with respect to real property. What is the rent of these premises, and how does the Company claim to have acquired them?
5. In respect of what premises is the "rent" mentioned in the return of expenditure for 1879 paid, and what does it amount to?
6. Is any trust expenditure comprised in the return of expenditure for 1879, and, if so, what amount?
7. What is the rateable value of the Company's school?
8. At the end of the year 1879 was the Company to any, and what, extent in debt in respect of moneys lent to the Company?

The Commissioners will be much obliged both to the Court and to yourself for answers to the above questions.

I am, &c.
H. D. WARR,
Secretary.

C. R. Rivington, Esq.,
Clerk to the Stationers' Company.

No. 1, Fenchurch Buildings, E.C.,
20th July 1882.

SIR,

I BEG to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 18th instant. The return of receipts and expenditure applied for in February shall be accompanied with the further particulars you now ask for.

Yours, &c.
C. R. RIVINGTON,
Clerk.

H. D. Warr, Esq.,
&c. &c.

Stationers' Hall, E.C.,
23rd November 1882.

SIR,

I HAVE to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 17th instant, and regret to find that the Company's returns have been printed without previous communication, as I had informed you the Company would give the further particulars that the Commissioners required. The black-letter book, which appears to have been accidentally omitted from the parcel of returns, is sent herewith. I beg to enclose detailed statements of the Company's receipts and payments for the past 10 years. The dividends on charity funds are kept separate from the Company's dividends. I enclose a statement of the Company's income and expenditure, which may be of some use. With reference to the questions in your letter of the 18th July, I beg to state:—

1. The trust income for 1879 appears thus:—Dividends, 839*l.* 18*s.* 6*d.*; rentcharges, 31*l.* 9*s.* 7*d.*; rents, 462*l.* 11*s.* 2*d.*; charges on the Company's general income, viz., Cater, 36*l.* 17*s.*; Guy's Hospital, 125*l.*; St. Peter ad Vincula, 5*l.*; St. Martin Vintry, 2*l.* 12*s.*; and Guy's Charity, 72*l.*; together, 241*l.* 9*s.*
2. The Wood Street Estate consists of the freehold house, 11 and 12, Wood Street, let to S. Thompson at 480*l.* per annum, and 13, Wood Street, let to Messrs. Morley at 107*l.* per annum.
3. The Wood Street Estate income is divisible thus, 20/24ths to the school, 3/24ths for the purpose of Norton's Charity, and the remaining 1/24th for the Company.

The dividend trust income is divisible amongst poor members and poor of the trade, whether or not members. None of the trust income is given to other objects.

4. The premises, 3, Clement's Court, are the premises returned in List A. as let to S. Morley, M.P. They are built on the site of the first hall of the Company, but how acquired cannot be now stated with accuracy. The tradition is that they were purchased by the Company out of their corporate funds.
5. The rent is for some warehouses and part of the Court Room at the west end of Stationers' Garden, and is paid to the Corporation of London, the freeholders. The rent is 100*l.* per annum. 5*s.* per annum is also paid to the Corporation in respect of a small piece of land which cannot now be traced.
6. Payments in respect of charities and gifts will be found under separate headings, and distinct from other expenditure. The whole charity income received is expended each year, except in the case of Davis and Baden's Gift, in which there is a small accumulation.
7. The school building is not rated, and the rateable value of a portion of the premises would probably mislead. The school building, master's house, and playground were a short while since valued as worth 10,000*l.*
8. The Company was not in debt in respect of moneys lent at the date you mention.

If there is any further information the Commissioners require, I am directed by the Court to supply it, and should the Commissioners desire me to wait upon them for the purpose of giving any verbal information in explanation of the enclosures I shall be prepared to do so.

I am, &c.

CHAS. ROBERT RIVINGTON,
Clerk.

H. D. Warr, Esq.,
Secretary, City of London
Livery Companies' Commission,
2, Victoria Street, Westminster, S.W.

STATIONERS' COMPANY.

The income of the Stationers' Company, exclusive of charitable funds, is derived from six sources, namely:—

1. Dividends on Government annuities and a sum of Metropolitan Board of Works Consols.
2. Rents from freehold and leasehold property.
3. Gifts paid to the Company under the wills of deceased benefactors.
4. Quarterage paid by liverymen and freemen of the Company.
5. Fines and fees paid by members of the Company.
6. A voluntary contribution from the partners in the English stock towards the expenses of the Company.

Government Funds.—The Company possess the following sums:—100*l.* Consols and 50*l.* Consols and 277*l.* 18*s.* 1*d.* New 3*l.* per Cent., the origin of which cannot now be traced; 53*l.* 7*s.* 7*d.* Consols; the investment of a sum of 50*l.* cash, deposited with the Company by a liveryman at call without interest; 2,283*l.* 10*s.* 8*d.* Consols, residue of a bequest to the Company by Thomas Brown; and 3,655*l.* 18*s.* 4*d.* Consols in Chancery, being the proceeds of sale of a house which formerly stood in Dark House Lane, and was purchased by the Corporation of London under their compulsory powers for the improvement of Billingsgate Market. The house was bequeathed to the Company by Jane Keball in 1575, and was charged with the payment of 5*l.* per annum to the parish of St. Mary at Hill.

Metropolitan Board of Works Consols.—The sum of 5,128*l.* 2*s.* 3*d.* stock, which was purchased with the bequest of Thomas Holme to the Company.

Freehold and Leaseholds.—The Company possess a freehold house in Clement's Court, built on the site of the first hall of the Company, and which house is let to Samuel Morley, Esq., M.P., upon lease at the annual rent of 150*l.* 7*s.* 6*d.*

The Company hold of the Corporation of the City of London, upon an agreement for a lease, a piece of ground at the west end of Stationer's Hall, at a rental of 100*l.* per annum. Part of this ground is occupied by warehouses, which are let to yearly tenants at rents amounting to 95*l.* per annum.

The Company also possess a fee farm rent of 10*s.* per annum issuing out of houses in Wood Street, Cheapside.

Quarterage.—The liverymen and freemen of the Company pay to the renter wardens the ancient dues of a groat a quarter and upwards, but for some years past gentlemen joining the Company have been allowed to redeem the quarterage by one payment, and the present fine payable on taking up the freedom includes the consideration for the redemption of the quarterage.

Gifts.—The Company receive annually of Christ's Hospital Norton's Gift of 6*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*, of which 6*l.* is paid to the school and 13*s.* 4*d.* retained by the Company.

Also 1/24th of the net rental of the Wood Street Estate, the whole of which is retained by the Company.

Also 20/24ths of the net rental of the Wood Street Estate, out of which Bishop's Gifts of 6*l.* to the school, 6*l.* to Christ's Hospital, and 10*l.* for the preachers at Paul's Cross are annually paid, the balance being retained by the Company.

Also of the Clothworkers' Company, Lamb's Gift of 6*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*, of which 5*l.* 4*s.* is paid to the poor of the Company and the balance retained by the Company.

Also a rentcharge of 20*l.* less land tax issuing out of two houses in St. Paul's Churchyard under the will of Christopher Meredith, a portion of which is paid to the Stationer's School, 6*l.* to Kempsey Parish, and the residue is retained by the Company.

Fines.—These are the sums paid by masters binding apprentices, by persons joining the Company, and upon admission to the livery, and by liverymen connected with various offices in the Company.

Stock Contribution.—The partners in the English stock annually contribute to the expenses of the Company 500*l.*

The Expenditure of the Company may be classified under the following heads:—

1. Salaries paid to the clerk, beadle, out-door clerk, and hall keeper.
2. Taxes and Redeemed Land Tax and Ground Rent.—The hall is the property of the partners in the English stock. It was purchased by the partners out of their own moneys, and has ever since been used for their publishing business.

   The Corporation has the use of the Court Room and lobby, and of the hall on the occasion of livery dinners in consideration of paying out of their own funds the rates and taxes on the building. The hall is kept in repair by the partners in the English stock. The ground rent payable to the Corporation of London amounts to 100*l.* per annum.
3. Donations and Subscriptions.—The Company subscribe to some trade charities, and amounts are occasionally voted by the court to other charitable purposes. The partners in the English stock distribute a portion of their profits amongst the poor.
4. Gifts.—The Company distribute yearly on the 1st December out of their own funds 34*l.* amongst 34 poor men, and other small sums making up 36*l.* 17*s.*, in accordance with an obligation entered into with Theophilus Cater. They also pay 125*l.* per annum to Guy's Hospital, 5*l.* per annum to St. Peter ad Vincula, and 2*l.* 12*s.* to St. Martin, Vintry Parish, and 72*l.* per annum Guy's Charity to poor freemen of the Company.
5. Entertainments.—The livery of the Company dine in the hall twice a year, and there are four court dinners.
6. Printing.—Upwards of 100 apprentices are annually bound at Stationers' Hall to printers, bookbinders, and others carrying on some branch of the Company's trade, and to each a bible and prayer book is given.
7. Court Fees.—A small fee is paid to each member of the court attending. No fees are paid for attendance at any committee, although all details are investigated in committee.
8. Miscellaneous Expenses.—These comprise small sums varying every year, and ordinary establishment expenses.

The charities of the Company are administered without any expense to the charity funds.

TALLOW CHANDLERS' COMPANY.

These Returns were rendered under protest.

PART I.—Foundation and Object.

A. to H.

Return A.—A statement of the date, ascertained or probable, of the foundation of the Company, and of the circumstances, so far as they can be discovered from its documents of foundation or archives, in which the Company had its origin.

Return B.—A list of the charters, charters of inspeximus, and other instruments of a similar nature, whether originals or copies, which have been at any time in the possession of the Company, together with an abstract of the purport of each, regard being specially had to any evidence which it may contain as to the object of the foundation of the Company.

Return C.—A list of any trust deeds "founding, regulating, or affecting" the Company, with the date of each, the names of the parties thereto, and an abstract of the purport of each.

Return D.—A list, with dates, of any "decrees of court," whether of the Courts of Common Law or of Chancery, or of any acts of the Court of Aldermen or of the Court of Common Council, "regulating or affecting" the Company, with a statement of the effect of each decision.

Return E.—A list of any other documents, not included in the descriptions in the preceding returns, which "found, regulate, or affect" the Company, with dates, and an abstract of the effect of each.

Return F.—A concise history of the Company, from the time of its foundation to the present day, with special reference to the inquiry contained in the commission as to "the objects for which the Company was founded," and "how far those objects are now being carried into effect."

Return G.—Has the Company a licence in mortmain? When was such licence granted (referring to the document by description)? What is its extent, and to what extent is it now unexhausted?

Return H.—Is there vested in the Company, and how, whether by charter, statute, order of the Court of Aldermen, act of Common Council, or otherwise, any right of exercising superintendence over, or any duty or discretion to encourage in any way, any and what art, trade, or business? State the nature and local limits of such control. In what manner and to what extent is such control now exercised?—If such control is not now exercised, state the circumstances under which its exercise have fallen into desuetude.

A.—The first charter of incorporation of this Company bears date the 8th of March 1462, 2nd of Edward IV., wherein the then members of the Company are described as "our beloved and faithful subjects, the Free-" men of the Mystery or Art of Tallough Chandlers of "our City of London."

It is evident, however, that a company, guild, or other association of tallow chandlers existed in London before the date of the above charter, seeing that in the year 1426, or 36 years prior thereto, letters patent were granted by Henry VI. to the Mayor of the City of London, and the Master and Wardens of the Mystery or Craft of Tallow Chandlers of the same city for the time being, empowering them to search for and destroy all bad and adulterated oils.

Also in the year 1456, or six years prior to the said charter, a grant of arms and crest was made by John Smert, Garter King-at-Arms, to John Priour, John Thurlow, William Blakman, and Richard Grenecroft, sworn wardens or keepers (gardiens), and several other notable men of the trade and of the Company of Tallow Chandlers (Chandeliers de Suif) of the City of London, on behalf of and in the name of their whole confraternity, which is therein stated to be one of the members of the City of London, having sworn wardens or keepers and other officers authorised to make, constitute, and put in force among themselves rules and good ordinances for the conduct of their own trade entirely separate from that of others.

It does not appear, however, from the documents of foundation or archives of the Company, so far as we are aware, under what circumstances the Company had its origin, but doubtless it had its rise in the natural tendency of members of the same craft or trade to meet together from time to time to discuss matters connected with such trade, and to make regulations for its governance, and as difficulties and disputes no doubt arose respecting these matters, it was found necessary to get greater powers which could only be properly done by means of a charter.

B.—List of the Company's Charters, Charters of Inspeximus, and other Instruments of a similar nature.

15th October 1426. The before-mentioned letters patent of King Henry VI., granted by him to the Mayor of the City of London and the Master and Wardens of the Mistery or Craft of Tallow Chandlers of the same City for the time being, empowering them to search for and destroy all bad and adulterated oils.

8th March 1462. 2nd Edward IV. Being the Charter of Incorporation, of which the following is a translation, the original charter being in Latin.

2nd Edward IV., 8th March 1462. Edward, by the Grace of God King of England and France and Lord of Ireland. To all to whom these presents shall come greeting: know ye, that of our special favour, we, for ourself, our heirs and successors, have granted and given license to our beloved and faithful subjects, the Freemen of the Mystery or Art of Talough Chaundelers of our City of London, that they and all their successors, freemen of the said mystery, being citizens of the said City, and in the aforesaid City and the suburbs thereof, dwelling and to dwell from henceforth, may be in fact, deed, and name, one body and one commonalty for ever. And that the said commonalty, that is to say, the freemen of the said mystery, yearly may elect and make from themselves according to their custom amongst them before used or approved according to the advice and ordinance of the same commonalty from thenceforth therein to be made one master and four keepers or wardens for the management of their affairs, and to superintend, rule, and govern the mystery and commonalty aforesaid, and all persons both employed in the buying of stuff and the manufacture thereof, of the mystery and commonalty in the City and suburbs aforesaid for ever, and the defects of the same duly to correct, and cause to be corrected, and that the said master and wardens and commonalty aforesaid may have perpetual succession, and a common seal for the business of the mystery and commonalty aforesaid for ever, and that the same master and wardens and commonalty, and their successors for ever, may be persons able and competent in law to purchase, hold, and possess, for themselves and their successors, for ever in fee and perpetuity lands, tenements, rents, and possessions of what nature soever, as well within our said City and suburbs as elsewhere, and of what persons soever. And that the said master, wardens, and commonalty, and their successors, by the name of the master, wardens, and commonalty of the Mystery of Tallow Chandlers of the City of London, may plead and be impleaded before whatsoever judges, and in whatsoever courts and in whatsoever actions. And further, that the said master and wardens of the said mystery, and their successors, may have full power and authority for ever to search and endeavour to make and exercise due scrutiny in, over, and concerning all weights, measures, and stuff, by what persons and traders soever of the same mystery in the City and suburbs aforesaid, possessed, used, and employed, to the intent that just and faithful weights, measures, and stuff in the same mystery, and by what persons soever of the same there employed and used, and all and singular other goods and merchandises by what persons or traders of that mistery sold, and to be sold and exposed or to be exposed for sale, may be fitting, good, and legal, without deceit and fraud whatsoever, and the defects and deceits which in this particular they shall find to cause to be duly corrected, and all persons offending in this respect, according to their demerits and offences, duly to punish, or cause to be punished, before the mayor of our said City of London for the time being. And further, of our most abundant grace, we have granted that the same master, wardens, and commonalty, and their successors, lands, tenements, and rents, as well in possession as in reversion, within the City of London and the suburbs thereof, and of us in free burgage tenure of the value of 10 marks per annum or less, may purchase, have, and hold to them, and their successors, for ever, towards the assistance and support of the affairs, and the poor of the commonalty of the mystery aforesaid, to pray for our good estate so long as we shall live, and for our soul when we shall have departed from this life, and for the souls of all our progenitors, and for the benefactors of the said mystery, and for their souls when they shall have departed this life, according to the ordination and disposition of the said master, wardens, and commonalty, and their successors, in this matter to be made, the statute passed against the disposal of lands and tenements in mortmain, or any other Statute, Act, or Ordinance to the contrary, made or to be made, notwithstanding. In witness whereof we have caused these our letters to be made patent.

Witness ourself at Westminster, the 8th day of March, in the 2nd year of our reign.

MORLAND.

15th November 1517, 8th Henry VIII. Letters patent of this date, reciting the above charter, and confirming the same.

18th February 1549, 2nd Edward VI. Letters patent of this date, reciting the two above-mentioned charters, and confirming the same.

7th June 1557, 4th and 5th Philip and Mary. Letters patent of this date, reciting and confirming the three above-mentioned charters.

N.B.—Mention is made of this charter in some of those subsequently granted, but the original thereof cannot be found.

3rd March 1561, 3rd Elizabeth. Letters patent of this date, reciting and confirming the four above-mentioned charters.

15th April 1577, 19th Elizabeth. Letters patent, granted to the Company to search for, weigh, and measure, all soap, vinegar, barrelled butter, salt, oils, and hops, within the suburbs, and mark all good vessells with the Rose and Crown Imperial.

N.B.—These letters patent are recited in an indenture dated the 25th June 1559, in the Company's possession, between Roger Tyler and Sir George Carew, Knight.

6th March 1606, 3rd James I.—Charter of this date, reciting the before-mentioned charter of King Edward IV., grants to the Company to be a body corporate and politic by the name and title of the Master, Wardens, and Commonalty of the Mystery of Tallow Chandlers of the City of London, with perpetual succession and with power to sue and be sued by that name, to hold and dispose of lands, to have a common seal, with liberty to alter and change it. To elect a master and four wardens yearly at the accustomed time and manner, according to the ordinances. To make ordinances and byelaws for the government of the Company and the trade, and to inflict punishment for the non-observance thereof, not being contrary to the laws of England. Power to search for and destroy bad candles, tallow and stuff, within the City and two miles thereof. Master and wardens to appoint deputies to act in their absence. Confirmation of all existing rights and privileges.

6th March 1620 17th James I.—Letters Patent reciting and particularising the hereditaments and premises then held by the Company, and confirming their title thereto.

29th July 1677, 28th Charles II.—This charter recites the previous charters of Edward IV., James I., and that in consequence of the great increase of the buildings within the City and suburbs thereof, and in the number of persons employed in making candles, and of the falling off of old members of the Company, proper scrutiny cannot be made, grants that all tallow chandlers within the City and suburbs, and within three miles thereof, shall be free of the Company, or suffer such punishments as may be imposed by the Company's byelaws. That all freemen shall make their apprentices free of the Company upon the expiration of their service, or before exercising the trade. Extends the right of search to three miles from the City and suburbs, and gives power to the Company to make ordinances for the government of the Company, and for preventing frauds in the trade. Confirms all former charters and privileges.

27th June 1685, 1st James II.—A charter of this date was subsequently granted by King James II. in the first year of his reign, in consideration of the compulsory surrender by the Company of their privileges to Charles II. on the 9th of June 1684, but this surrender was afterwards declared void and was returned uninrolled to the Company by James II. on the 27th November 1688.

By the statute passed in the second year of the reign of King William and Queen Mary, chapter 8, entitled "An Act for reversing the judgment in a quo warranto "against the City of London, and for restoring the "City of London to its ancient rights and privileges," the said charter of James II. was declared void, and the Company was restored to all its former rights and privileges. The charters of James I., 1606, and Charles II., 1677, may be considered the governing charters under which, and the ordinances of Charles I., herein-after set forth, the affairs of the Company are managed.

C.—We are not aware of any trust deeds founding, regulating, or affecting the Company.

D.—We are not aware of any decrees of court, or acts of the courts of aldermen or common council regulating or affecting the Company.

E.—We are not aware of any other documents save and except those already mentioned, which found, regulate or affect the Company, except the before-mentioned ordinances dated the 19th September 1639, 15th Charles I., under which the Company's affairs are managed, as provided for by their said charters. [A copy of these ordinances is given below, although many of them are now obsolete and out of use.]

COPY ORDINANCES above referred to.

"To all people to whom these presents shall come. The Right Honorable Thomas Lord Coventrey, Lord Keeper of the Great Seal of England, Sir John Bramstone, knight, Lord Chief Justice of the Pleas, before his Highness and Sir John Finch, knight, Lord Chief Justice of His Majesty's Court of Common Pleas, send greeting in our Lord God everlasting. Whereas, in the Parliament holden at Westminster in the nineteenth year of the reign of the late King of famous memory, Henry the Seventh, for the weal and profit of his subjects, it was amongst other things ordained, established, and enacted, that no master, wardens, and fellowships of crafts or mysteries, or any of them, nor any rulers of guilds or fraternities, should take upon them to make any acts or ordinances, nor to execute any acts or ordinances by them thentofore made in the disinheritance or diminution of the prerogative of the King, nor of other nor against the common profit of the people, unless the said acts or ordinances be examined and approved by the chancellor, treasurer of England, and chief justices of either bench, or three of them, or else before both the justices of assize in their circuit or progress in such shire where such acts or ordinances be made, upon pain of forfeiture of forty pounds for every time than they do contrary as by the said Act of Parliament mort plainly doth and may appear. Know ye, that the Master, Wardens, and Commonalty of the Craft or Mystery of Tallow Chandlers of the City of London, willing and desiring the said Act of Parliament in all things to be duly observed and kept, have presented unto us a book containing divers articles, acts, and ordinances by them made, ordained, and devised for the said Society and Fellowship of Tallow Chandlers and their successors, and for the consideration of the good estate thereof as for the better governing, ruling, and ordering of the said society, together with their suit to have the same settled and established. And thereupon they have instantly desired us that we all and every of their said acts and ordinances hereafter mentioned and by them to us so exhibited would examine, and these and every of them correct and amend, and so approve them in convenient manner and form as the said recited Act requireth, we well perceiving and considering the said supplication to be good and reasonable according to their desires and by the authority in and by the said Act of Parliament to us given All and every their said Acts, oaths, and ordinances so to us exhibited have perfectly seen, read, and well understood, and all and every of them have examined, corrected and reformed, the tenor whereof hereafter followeth, viz.:

"The Statutes, Orders, Acts, and Ordinances made by the Master, Wardens, and Commonalty of the Mystery of the Tallow Chandlers of the City of London for the well governing of the said Society."

The Company may assemble together.

"1. Imprimis, it is ordained, constituted, and established by these presents, that the Master, Wardens, Assistants, and Commonalty of the said Craft or Mystery of Tallow Chandlers within the City of London and suburbs of the same, and Southwark, as well within places privileged and exempt as not privileged and exempt within the said City and suburbs, and within two miles compass of the said City, and their successors, shall and may at all time and times hereafter and from time to time at their liberty and pleasure congregate and assemble themselves together at their common hall belonging to the said commonalty according to their old and ancient custom, or at any other convenient place within the said City of London, for good and reasonable causes, as well touching the said City as for needful and necessary causes touching and concerning the said mystery. And it is further ordered, that at such time as they or any of them shall come and repair to any such assembly, or to any court to be holden by the said master, wardens, and assistants for the time being, or the greater part of them, upon any warning or summons of the beadle or other servant or officer of the said Company, he, they, and every of them so summoned shall come and repair thither at the time appointed, orderly and decently, citizenlike, and whatsoever person or persons shall refuse or neglect so to do, and do the contrary, shall forfeit and pay for every such offence twelve pence without such lawful excuse as shall be allowed of by the greater number of the master, wardens, or assistants at a court of assistants."

Election of master.

"2. Item, it is ordained, ordered, and established that from henceforth yearly for ever the Master, Wardens, and Assistants of the Company of the said Craft or Mystery of Tallow Chandlers, or the more part of them for the time being, and their successors, on the feast day of the Nativity of St. John the Baptist, or within twenty days before or within twenty days after the said feast day of the Nativity of St. John the Baptist, by the appointment of the said master and wardens of the said Company, or any three of them, whereof the master or his deputy to be one, shall meet and assemble at their common hall, and then and there the master and wardens of the commonalty of the said craft or mystery, and such as have been master and upper wardens of the said Company, or the more part of them for the time being, shall first deliver over to so many of their assistants as shall be then present the names in writing of two meet and sufficient persons of the said Company by them to be nominated and appointed to the office of master of the said Company, of which two the said master and wardens for the time being and the said assistants, or the more part of them, shall by the most voices or pricks elect and choose one of those two persons so nominated to be master of the said Company for one year from thence next following, the youngest of the said assistants present at such election delivering up the first voice or prick in that election. And if it shall happen the said voices or pricks be even and equal in number, then the master for the time being shall have a double voice or prick for the final determination and election of the said new master, which person so elected and chosen, being sworn, shall rule and govern the said Company as master according to the ancient usage until a new master shall be elected and sworn in that place according to the tenor of these ordinances. And it is further ordained that if the said person so elected and chosen to be master of the said Company of Tallow Chandlers shall refuse or neglect to take upon him the said office, and to be sworn within twenty days next after such election according to an ordinance and to the oaths hereafter in these presents ordained and expressed for that office, having no reasonable or just let or impediment that shall or may then appear and be allowed by the said master, wardens, and assistants, or the more part of them for the time being for his sufficient excuse in that behalf, that then the said person so elected and refusing or neglecting shall forfeit and pay the sum of thirteen pounds six shillings and eight pence of lawful English money."

Fine for refusal to serve, 13*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*

Election upper w den.

3. "And it is further ordered and established that from henceforth yearly for ever on the said feast day of the Nativity of St. John Baptist, or within 20 days before or after the said feast day as aforesaid, immediately after the election of the new master of the Commonalty of the said Craft or Mystery of Tallow Chandlers, the said master and wardens of the said craft or mystery, and such as have been master and upper wardens of the said mystery or the more part of them for the time being, shall in like manner as before is prescribed, deliver over to so many of the assistants as shall be then and there present the names in writing of two meet and sufficient persons of the same commonalty by them to be nominated to the office of the upper warden of the said craft or mystery, of which two the master and wardens for the time being and the said assistants or the more part of them shall amongst themselves by the most voices or pricks elect and choose one to be the upper warden of the Commonalty of the said Craft or Mystery of Tallow Chandlers for one year, and from thence next following the youngest of the said assistants present at such election delivering up the voice or prick in that election. And if it shall happen that the said voices or pricks be even or equal in number, then the master for the time being shall have a double voice or prick for the final determination and election of the said upper warden, which person so elected and chosen shall continue in office until another person be elected and sworn to serve in the said office of upper warden in his place."

Election of second warden.

4. "And it is further ordered that at such time, and immediately after the said election of the said upper warden, the said master and wardens and such as have been master and upper wardens of the said mystery or the more part of them for the time being, shall also deliver over to the said assistants, or the more part of them for the time being, the names in writing of two meet and sufficient persons of the same Company by them nominated and appointed to the office of the second warden of the said mystery, of which two persons the said master, wardens, and assistants for the time being, or the more part of them, shall amongst themselves by the most voices or pricks elect and choose one to be the second warden of the said Company of Tallow Chandlers for one year from thence next following, the youngest of the said assistants present at such election delivering up the first voice or prick in that election. And if it shall happen that the voices or pricks be even and equal in number, then the master for the time being shall have a double voice or prick for the final determination and election of the said second warden, which person so elected and chosen shall continue in office until another person be elected and sworn to serve in the said office of second warden."

Election two youn wardens.

5. "And likewise it is further ordained and established by these present ordinances that at such time, and immediately after the said election of the said second warden, the said master and wardens and such as have been master and upper wardens of the said mystery, or the more part of them for the time being, shall deliver over to the said assistants, or the more part of them, the names in writing of four such meet and sufficient persons of the said Company as by them shall be thought fit to be nominated and appointed to the offices of the two younger wardens of the said Company, of which persons so nominated the said master, wardens, and assistants for the time being, or the more part of them, shall amongst themselves in manner aforesaid, elect and choose two to be younger wardens of the said Craft or Mystery of Tallow Chandlers for one year from thence next following; whereof one of them shall be renter-warden, according to an ordinance hereafter mentioned, which person so elected and chosen shall continue in office until a new warden or wardens respectively be elected and sworn to serve in his or their place or places. And it is further ordained that if any person or persons so elected and chosen to be warden or wardens, or any of them, shall refuse or neglect to take upon him or them the same office or offices, and to be sworn within 20 days after such election according to an ordinance and to the oath hereafter ordained and expressed for that office, having no reasonable or just let or impediment that shall and may then appear to and be allowed by the said master, wardens, and assistants, or the more part of them for the time being for his or their sufficient excuse or excuses in that behalf, that then every of the said wardens so offending shall forfeit and pay as followeth, viz.: the upper and second wardens ten pounds apiece, and the two younger wardens, if they be chosen of the livery, not having served in the place of steward, ten pounds apiece, and if they or either of them have served stewards, and not being an assistant of the said Company, five pounds apiece; and if he or they so chosen younger wardens be or are of the assistants, he and they shall pay for his and their refusal to take upon him or them the said office or offices the sum of five pounds of lawful money of England. And further, if any person shall be chosen into the office of younger warden of the said commonalty, not having served steward nor fined for it, and shall hold or accept the same place, he shall pay unto the said master and wardens of the said Company the sum of ten pounds of lawful money of England. At which election of master and wardens, or within twenty days after, there shall or may be a feast or dinner provided in the common hall of the said Company for the master, wardens, and assistants, and for the whole livery of the said Company, if the old master, wardens, and assistants of the said Company, or the more part of them, think fitting, at the costs and charges of the said Company, and then near about the end of the same dinner, if the old master and wardens think fitting publication shall be made of such election by delivery of garlands to such of the said new master and wardens as then shall be there present, and in their absence to other person or persons of the said Company then and there present, of the same or the like quality in the name or names of such as are absent, in such sort as hath been anciently used and accustomed in the said Company. And further, if one of the said two younger wardens, after he hath served renter-warden one year according to an ordinance hereafter mentioned, shall be chosen the next year after one of the younger wardens again, and shall not hold the same office, he shall pay for a fine for his not so holding the same, if the master, wardens, and assistants, or the more part of them, for the time being, think fitting to suffer him to go off by way of fine the sum of five marks of lawful money of England."

Fines for refusing serve.

6. "Item, it is further ordained and established that the said new master and wardens, and every of them that shall be so elected as aforesaid, from time to time within twenty days next after their election in their common hall or other place of meeting, shall take the oaths concerning the said master and wardens, or any of them hereafter for that purpose ordained and expressed in the presence of the old master and wardens, and of the more part of the assistants of the commonalty of the said Craft or Mystery of Tallow Chandlers for the time being, upon pain that every one refusing to take the same oath within the same time shall forfeit and pay for every time of such his refusal the sum of forty shillings."

7. "Item, it is ordained and decreed that immediately after the election of the two younger wardens it shall and may be lawful for the said master, wardens, and assistants of the said Company, or the more part of them for the time being, to nominate and appoint one of the same two younger wardens to be the renter-warden for the said Company of Tallow Chandlers for one year then next ensuing, to execute and perform that office in former time it hath been accustomed; and which of them so chosen to be renter-warden as aforesaid shall refuse to take upon him the same office, having no just cause or impediment that may appear to and be allowed by the said master, wardens, and assistants, or the more part of them for the time being, for his sufficient excuse or discharge in that behalf, that then either of the said two younger wardens so refusing shall forfeit and pay for such his refusal the sum of ten pounds of lawful money of England."

8. "Item, it is ordained and established that the renter-warden on the day he shall take his oath, if the master, wardens, and assistants, or the more part of them shall think fit, shall become bound to such two of the assistants as the said master and wardens or any three of them shall think fit for the time being, by obligation in the penalty or sum of two hundred pounds of lawful English money, conditioned for the true accounting and payment and delivery over unto the new master and wardens that shall succeed them in place of and for what money, plate, goods, and chattels soever shall come to his hands during the time of his renter wardenship, which, if any shall refuse to do, he shall forfeit and pay to the master and wardens for the time being the sum of twenty pounds for the use of the said Company."

Master, wardens, and assistants to govern the Company.

9. "Item, it is further ordered, decreed, and established that the master, wardens, and assistants of the said Company of the said Craft or Mystery of Tallow Chandlers for the time being, or the more part of them, or in the absence of the master or wardens, his or their sufficient deputy or deputies respectively from time to time and at all times hereafter for ever, shall have full power and authority hereby to perform, do, and execute any the laws, statutes, Acts, and ordinances comprised and mentioned in this book of ordinances, and all and every other thing and things for the common weal and conservation of the good estate of the said Company and the better government of them."

The old master and wardens to attend the swearing of the new.

10. "Item, it is ordered that the old master and wardens, or the more part of them, as often and when need shall require at any time hereafter, shall give their attendance, and be ready to receive and take the oath of the new master and wardens within the time before in these presents for that purpose limited, upon pain that every one of them being negligent and offending in this behalf shall forfeit and pay for every such offence, if it be demanded of them, the several sums hereafter following, viz., the master five marks and the wardens forty shillings apiece."

The master and wardens to make their accounts.

11. "Item, it is ordained that within one month after the election of the new master and wardens yearly, the old master and wardens in the common hall of the said Company, in the presence of the new master and wardens of the said Company, or the more part of them, and of such auditors of the new master and wardens or their assistants, or the more part of them, at a court of assistants shall think fit to appoint, or the more part of them, shall make a just, true, plain, perfect, and fair account in writing to the said new master, wardens, and auditors of all receipts and payments had and made by them or any of them during the time of their mastership and wardenship, and of and concerning all and all manner of jewels, plate, linen, pewter, and money, charters, writings, evidences, and other goods, chattels, and profits whatsoever remaining in his or their charge and custody belonging to the said Company of Tallow Chandlers, and then and there shall deliver up to the new master and wardens for the time being, or the more part of them, by an inventory thereof to be made, the said plate, jewels, linen, pewter, money, stock, charters, writings, evidences, and all other goods, chattels, implements, and things, whatsoever then being or remaining in his or their hands, custody, or possession, or which they or any of them may lawfully come by, or shall or may be duly or lawfully charged to have received to the use of the said Company of Tallow Chandlers or otherwise appertaining to the said Company, together with his and their key or keys, which account so as aforesaid made shall be perused, examined, and audited by the said auditors as anciently hath been accustomed. And if the said old master or any of the wardens shall refuse to make such account within the time before limited, he and they so refusing shall forfeit and pay to the new master and wardens to and for the use of the said Company the sum of one hundred marks apiece. And if any one of the said old master and wardens shall detain any of the premises in his and their hands after the time aforesaid, he and they and every of them so offending shall forfeit and pay forty shillings for every month that he or they or any of them shall detain any of the premises over and above the full value of all and every such thing or things as shall be detained, wanting, or decayed through his or their default or negligence. And it is further ordered that the said account being allowed by the master, wardens, and assistants, or the greater part of them, with the inventory and such other things as shall be delivered up, shall immediately be written by the clerk of the said Company in a ledger book, which shall remain and be kept by the said master and two upper warders for that purpose."

The master and warden to substitute deputies.

12. "Item, forasmuch as it may happen at sometimes hereafter that choice may be made of such person or persons to be master of the said Company of the said craft or mystery, as either by reason of sickness or business of importance may be often letted or hindered from being continually attendant on the said office or offices, it is therefore for the better government of the said Company and due execution of the said office and offices ordered, ordained, and decreed that every master and warden of the said Company for the time being may in such case where necessity shall require, with the assent of the greater part of the assistants, appoint some of the gravest and most ancient assistants to be deputy or deputies, substitute or substitutes to supply, in his or their absence, the office of being master or warden of the said Company. And further, it is ordered that it shall and may be lawful for every such deputy so assigned and appointed as aforesaid, and sworn to execute, do, and perform at all and every time and times hereafter in the absence of the said master and wardens of the said Company, or any of them for the time being, all and everything and things whatsoever, which by reason of the ordinances in this book contained shall concern or appertain to the office of master or wardens of the commonalty of the said craft or mystery in as large, full, and ample manner, and form to all intents and purposes as if the said master or wardens of the said commonalty, or any of them, were in their person or persons present, anything in these ordinances contained to the contrary notwithstanding."

Master and wardens dying, others to be chosen

13. "Item, it is ordered ordained and established that if any master, warden, or other officer before or hereafter by these present ordinances to be chosen, elected, or appointed to have any rule or government or any other charge by reason of his or their office or offices shall happen to die or decease or to be deprived or removed from the same before the end of such time as he or they are limited to continue in office, that then it shall and may be lawful for the master, wardens, and assistants of the said Company for the time being, or the more part of them, to choose and elect, nominate, and appoint some other person or persons of the said craft or mystery anew in the place of every such officer or officers so dying, deceasing, or being removed within thirty days after such decease, deprivation, or removal, to supply such office or offices in his or their stead or steads. And whatsoever person or persons so newly elected, chosen, or nominated as aforesaid shall refuse to take upon him or them any such office or offices as aforesaid, and to be sworn according to the oaths in this present book of ordinances for that purpose ordained, shall forfeit for every time so refusing such sum and sums of money as any the like officer or officers, in whose rooms or places he or they were elected, should have paid by virtue of the ordinances herein-before expressed, if he or they had refused to hold the same office or offices, anything in these present ordinances contained to the contrary notwithstanding."

Election of assistants.

14. "Item, it is ordained and established that the master, wardens, and assistants of the said commonalty, or the more part of them for the time being, shall and may at their free will and pleasure, so often and when as need shall require, nominate, elect, and choose such and so many honest, able, and discreet persons out of the livery or clothing of the said Company as they shall think meet to be assistants to the said master and wardens of the said mystery, which said persons so as aforesaid nominated and chosen to be assistants to the said master and wardens shall at the time of their admission into the assistants, and before they are sworn, if they have not been stewards nor fined for the same, pay unto the said master and wardens the sum of ten pounds of lawful money of England. But if they have served stewards or fined for the same, then they shall be admitted gratis, paying only to the clerk for registering his or their admissions three shillings and four pence, and to the beadle the sum of twelve pence. And if any person or persons which now or hereafter shall be chosen assistants to the master and wardens of the said Company shall refuse to make his or their appearance at any court or courts to be holden by the master, wardens, and assistants, or the greater part of them, or at any other assembly or meeting of the said master and wardens about the affairs and business of the said Company, and being thereunto duly summoned by the beadle or other officer of the Company, shall forfeit and pay to the said master, wardens, and commonalty for the time being, or if he come not at the hour appointed or depart thence without license of the court, for the first default or defect, twelve pence; for the second default or neglect, two shillings; and for the third default or neglect, three shillings, unless he have such a reasonable cause for his absence as shall be approved of by the master and wardens of the said Company for the time being or the more part of them. And if such person so elected and chosen to be an assistant shall refuse to be an assistant and to hold the same, he shall for such refusal forfeit and pay to the said master and wardens the sum of four marks of lawful money of England."

Choice the li

15. "Item, it is ordered, ordained, and established that the said Company of the said Craft or Mystery of Tallow Chandlers shall have a decent livery comely for themselves and meet to attend upon the lord mayor of the City of London and his brethren the aldermen of the said City from time to time and all times as need shall require, and shall likewise attend and be present with the master and wardens of the said Company at all such time and times hereafter as they shall be duly warned or summoned by the beadle or other servant or officer of the said Company so to do, or otherwise upon necessary occasions concerning the credit and worship of the said commonalty. And it is likewise ordered that when, and as often as occasion shall require, the said masters, wardens, and assistants, or the more part of them for the time being, shall and may call, choose, elect, and admit into the livery or clothing of the said Company such and so many persons of the yeomanry of the same Company as they shall think fit and meet to be of the said livery or clothing, and to assign them and every of them a day, hour, and place for their appearance with their livery, gowns, or hoods, to serve therein in such decent and comely sort as in the said Company is and hath been accustomed. And every person so called, elected, and chosen to be of the livery or clothing of the said Company which before that time hath been called to the place of warden of the yeomanry of the said Company, and hath not served the said place but fined for it, shall pay to the said master, wardens, and commonalty for the time being for his admission into the livery the sum of three pounds six shillings and eight pence of lawful money of England. And every person which shall be so called, elected, and chosen to be of the livery or clothing which had before that time served in the place of warden of yeomanry shall be admitted paying twenty shillings. And if any person or persons of the said yeomanry so called and chosen to be of the livery as aforesaid shall refuse to be of the same livery and refuse to take upon him the same, he or they shall forfeit and pay to the said master and wardens and commonalty, if he hath not served in the place of warden of the yeomanry nor fined for it, six pounds thirteen shillings and four pence. And if he hath fined for the said place, then to pay to the said master, wardens, and commonalty the sum of five marks of like money. And if he or they have served in the said place of warden of the yeomanry, then to pay for such his refusal the sum of one pound six shillings and eight pence of lawful money of England. And also if any person or persons being of the livery of the said Company shall refuse or neglect to give his or their attendance upon the said master and wardens in his and their livery, gowns, and hoods at such time or times and place as he or they shall be duly summoned by the beadle or any other officer of the said Company for the honour of the City or credit of the said Company, that then every such person so offending shall forfeit and pay for every such offence such sum and sums of money as by the master, wardens, and assistants of the said Company, or the more part of them, shall be assessed, so it exceed not the sum of twenty shillings."

16. "And it is further ordained and ordered that every person which shall be called or chosen to be of the said livery or clothing, and not having before that time served the place of warden of the yeomanry, nor fined for the same, shall give and pay to the master, wardens, and commonalty of the Company for the time being the sum of fifteen pounds of lawful money of England."

The liv to atte at buri

17. "Item, it is ordained and established that as well the said master, wardens, and assistants as so many of the said clothing or livery of the said Company as shall be summoned by the beadle or other officer of the said Company shall and may at all times hereafter when and as often as any of the livery or their wives shall die and be buried within the said City of London and suburbs of the same, Southwark as well within places privileged and exempt as not privileged and exempt within the said City, in their livery, gowns, and hoods (if it be required), accompany the corpse to church, where it is to be buried, and every person and persons then being of the livery or clothing of the said Company having been duly summoned by the beadle or other officer of this Company to be and attend at the said burial which shall make default and not be at the place and time appointed for that purpose before the corpse shall be carried to church, except he have a reasonable and lawful excuse, shall forfeit and pay to the master, wardens, and commonalty of the said Company for every such default five shillings. And it is further ordered that the executor or administrator of such liveryman so deceasing, or the husband of every such wife dying, shall pay unto the master and wardens for the time being to the use of the said commonalty for the same service and attendance the sum of three pounds."

18. "Item, it is further ordered and ordained that at the death of every one of the clothing or livery of the said Company the beadle of the Company for the time being shall have his livery hood, or six shillings and eight pence in lieu thereof."

19. "Item, it is ordered and established that it shall and may be lawful to and for the said master, wardens, and assistants, or the greater part of them, every year yearly on the day of the election of the new master and wardens of the said commonalty, or at some other time or times within the space of two months then next following, to nominate, elect, and choose two honest and sufficient persons of the livery or clothing of the said Company to be stewards to make and provide at their equal costs and charges such a fitting and competent dinner for the said master, wardens, and assistants, and whole livery of the said society, in their common hall on the day the lord mayor of the City of London shall take his oath at Westminster, as the said master and wardens, or any two of them, shall direct, towards the charges of which said dinner, if it be well performed, the master, wardens, and assistants of the said Company, or the greater part of them, shall grant such allowance to the said stewards out of the house stock as to them shall be thought meet. And if it shall happen that the said master, wardens, and assistants, or the greater of them, shall not think fitting in any year to have any feast or public dinner in their said hall, by reason whereof the said stewards shall not make and provide the said dinner, then the said stewards shall pay unto the said master and wardens for the time being, for not providing of the said dinner, for and towards the increase of the house stock, the sum of sixteen pounds of lawful money of England, viz., eight pounds apiece; and if any person or persons so as aforesaid elected and chosen to be steward or stewards shall refuse to give his consent of accepting the said place, and undertaking the charge thereof, he and they shall forfeit and pay for his refusal and not holding the same to the said master, wardens, and commonalty of the said mystery the sum of ten pounds of lawful money of England."

20. "Item, it is ordained and established that all such persons as now be or hereafter shall be free of the said Company, and which are not of the livery or clothing of the said Company, shall be called the yeomanry of the said Company, and that they shall be governed and ruled by the reasonable laws and ordinances herein comprised, and by such other reasonable laws and ordinances as shall be from time to time assigned them by the master, wardens, and assistants of the said Company for the time being, or the greater part of them; and that for the better rule and government of the said yeomanry there shall be a governor, two wardens, and such a number of assistants of the yeomanry as the governor and wardens of the yeomanry shall think fitting to be chosen according to the ordinance hereafter specified, which said governor, wardens, and assistants of the yeomanry, or the major part of them, shall and may at their will and pleasure congregate and assemble themselves together within the common hall of the said Company, according to their ancient customs, for the doing and performing such business and affairs as by virtue of their said office they are enjoined to do for the better rule and government of the same. And it is further ordered that yearly, upon every of the Feasts of St. James, St. Edward, the King, St. Paul, and St. George, or within fourteen days before or after every of the said feasts, there shall be holden by the governor, wardens, and assistants of the yeomanry, or the more part of them, a court or general assembly, commonly called the quarter days of assemblies, whereunto the whole yeomanry inhabiting within the City of London and the suburbs thereof, and the limits aforesaid, shall be summoned, and whosoever shall be summoned, or at whose house warning shall be given or left in writing to be at any such court or other meeting, and shall not appear, shall forfeit and pay to the wardens of the said yeomanry, for the use of the said commonalty, twelve pence for every such offence, and whosoever shall not appear at the hour appointed, shall forfeit and pay for every such offence sixpence, and whosoever shall appear at any such court or other meeting, and shall depart from thence without the licence of the governor and wardens of the yeomanry for the time being, shall forfeit and pay to the said wardens of the yeomanry for every such offence for the use aforesaid sixpence, without such lawful excuse as shall be allowed by the said governor and wardens."

Election of governor of the yeomanry.

21. "Item, it is ordained and established that the master and wardens, or any three of them, shall and may from henceforth every year yearly upon the feast day of St. George, or within twenty days before or within twenty days after the said feast, present to the assistants of the said commonalty the names in writing of two meet and sufficient persons of the assistants of the said commonalty, by them to be nominated and appointed to the office of governor of the said yeomanry, of which two so nominated the said master, wardens, and assistants of the said Company, or the more part of them, shall, by the most voices or pricks, choose one to be governor of the yeomanry of the said craft or mystery for one whole year following. The said governor of the yeomanry so chosen to take place immediately after the new wardens of the yeomanry are sworn for the due execution of their places. And if it shall happen that the voices or pricks be even, or equal in number, then the said master for the time being shall have a double voice or prick for the final determination and election of the said governor, which person being so elected and chosen, and taking upon him the said place, shall rule and govern the said yeomanry according to the ancient usage until a new election of a governor shall be made; and if he shall refuse to hold the place of government and to execute the same as hereafter is required, he shall forfeit and pay to the use aforesaid the sum of five marks."

Election of the first warden of the yeomanry.

22. "And it is further ordered and established by this present ordinance that within twenty days after the election of the said new governor the old governor and the wardens of the yeomanry for the time being, or any two of them, shall deliver over to the assistants of the yeomanry, or the more part of them for the time being, the names in writing, four meet and sufficient persons of the same yeomanry by them, nominated and appointed to the office of the first warden of the said yeomanry of the said craft or mystery, of which four the said old governor, wardens, and assistants for the time being, or the more part of them, shall, amongst themselves, by the most voices or pricks, elect, nominate, and choose one to be first warden of the said yeomanry for one year from thence next following, and if it shall happen that the voices or pricks be even or equal in number, then the old governor for the time being shall have a double voice or prick for the final determination and election of the said first warden, which person so elected and chosen shall continue in office until a new warden be elected and sworn in that place."

Election of the second warden of the yeomanry.

23. "And likewise it is further ordered and ordained that at such time, and immediately after the said election of the said first warden of the yeomanry, the said old governor and wardens of the yeomanry, or any two of them for the time being, shall deliver over to the said assistants of the yeomanry, or the more part of them for the time being, the names in writing of four able and sufficient persons of the same yeomanry, by them to be nominated to the office of second warden of the said yeomanry, of which four persons so nominated the said old governor, wardens, and assistants of the said yeomanry for the time being, or the more part of them, shall, by the most voices or pricks, elect and choose one to be the second warden of the said yeomanry for one year from thence next following. And if it shall happen that the voices or pricks be even and equal in number, then the old governor for the time being shall have a double voice or prick for the final determination and election of the said second warden, which persons so elected and chosen wardens of the said yeomanry for one year shall be by the old governor and wardens of the yeomanry presented to the Master, Wardens, and Assistants of the said Commonalty of Tallow Chandlers at their next court of assistants, to be holden after the said election, there to receive the approbation of that court, and to be sworn for the due execution of their said offices, according to the oath hereafter in these presents for that purpose ordained; and the said wardens of the yeomanry at the time of their admission and swearing shall pay to the master, wardens, and commonalty of the said Company for and towards breakfast or repast for the master, wardens, and assistants of the said Company, the sum of four pounds of lawful money of England, viz., forty shillings a piece; and the said new governor having accepted of the said place, and the said new wardens of the yeomanry being sworn, they, the said new governor and wardens, shall rule and govern the said yeomanry until a new election of governor and wardens of the yeomanry shall be made. And it is further also ordered by these presents that if either of the said persons so elected and chosen to be wardens of the yeomanry as aforesaid shall refuse to take upon him the same office, and to be sworn at the time above limited, according to the ordinance, and to take the oath in these presents hereafter for that office ordained and expressed, having no reasonable or just let or impediment that shall appear to the governor and wardens of the yeomanry for the time being for his sufficient excuse in that behalf, that then the said person and persons so elected and refusing shall forfeit and pay to the governor of the said yeomanry, for the use of the said commonalty, such fine as hereafter in these present ordinances is expressed. And it is further ordered and ordained by this present ordinance that the warden of the yeomanry shall not in anywise bear the name or names of Wardens of the Commonalty of the said Mystery of Tallow Chandlers, nor be accepted, reputed, taken, or deemed to be the wardens to rule and govern the whole commonalty or company of the said mystery, but only the yeoman and journeymen case, as heretofore hath been used and accustomed. And it is further ordered that from henceforth none shall be admitted an assistant to the governor or wardens of the said yeomanry until such time as he hath served or fined for the said place or office of warden of the yeomanry, and then and not before he shall be chosen to be an assistant to the governor and warden of the said yeomanry, and before them and the greater part of the assistants shall be sworn for the due execution of the said place according to the ordinance and oath hereafter for that office ordained."

Fine of the wardens of the yeomanry for refusing.

24. "And if any person or persons chosen to the place or office of warden of the yeomanry do or shall refuse, deny, or delay to take upon him or them the said place or office, and the oath hereafter in these present ordinances expressed for the due execution thereof within the space of six days then next following, then, and every such person so refusing, denying, or delaying shall forfeit and pay to the master and wardens and commonalty of the said Company for a fine the sum of twelve pounds of lawful money of England; and then the said governor, wardens, and assistants of the said yeomanry, or the major part of them, upon such refusal shall and may elect and choose other person or persons to be warden or wardens of the yeomanry aforesaid in stead and place of him or them so denying, refusing, or delaying to take upon him and to hold the same office as aforesaid."

Governor or wardens dying others to be chosen.

25. "And it is further ordered that if the governor of the yeomanry so chosen shall happen to die or depart this life before the end of one year after his election, it shall and may be lawful to and for the said master, wardens, and assistants of the said commonalty, or the major part of them, in manner aforesaid, to elect and choose one other honest and able person out of the assistants of the said commonalty to be governor of the said yeomanry in stead and place of him so dying for the remainder of the said year, which person so elected if he shall refuse to hold the said place of governor of the yeomanry in stead and place of him so dying, he shall forfeit and pay to the use of the said commonalty the sum of five marks of lawful money of England. And further, if it shall happen any of the wardens of the yeomanry so chosen shall depart this life within the said term of one year after his election then the governor and the surviving warden of the yeomanry, shall, within twenty days after such death in manner as before is prescribed, present unto the said assistants of the said yeomanry for the time being, or the major part of them, the names in writing of two meet and sufficient persons of the said yeomanry out of which the said governor, the said surviving warden, and the major part of the assistants of the yeomanry shall in manner before prescribed choose one to be warden of the said yeomanry to execute the office of him so deceasing within the said year for the residue of the said year then to come, and if any such person which at any time hereafter shall be chosen to the said place or office of warden of the yeomanry of the said Company do or shall refuse, deny, or delay to take upon him the said office and place, and the oath hereunder appointed for the due execution thereof, then every such person so denying, refusing, or delaying shall forfeit to the said master, wardens, and commonalty for a fine the sum of twelve pounds of lawful money of England."

Wardens of the yeomanry make their account

26. "And also it is ordained and established that the said wardens so to be chosen and sworn as aforesaid shall, within one month next after the end of their said year's wardenship, yield, give, and deliver up to the said master and wardens of the said commonalty for the time being, or to such auditors as by them shall be nominated and appointed to take the same, a plain, fair, just, and true account in writing of all goods, chattels, sum and sums of money, rents and payments which they or any of them received or paid, or which came to their or either of their hands while they were and did stand wardens of the said yeomanry, and shall thereupon make payment and deliver up to the new wardens of the yeomanry, in the presence of the said governor, all the books, money, plate, writings, implements, goods and chattels whatsoever, and arrearages which, upon the said account shall, in their or either of their hands or custody, who shall receive the same and charge themselves therewith by inventory or otherwise, upon pain that every one making default or failing therein shall forfeit and pay to the said master, wardens, and commonalty of the Company the sum of one hundred pounds of lawful money of England."

58. "Item, it is ordained and established that the clerk of the said Company for the time being for ever hereafter shall have the making of all indentures of and for every apprentice that hereafter shall be bound to any freeman or woman of the said Company, and that the same shall not be made by any other person or persons whatsoever; and it is further ordered and established that the master of every apprentice that shall be hereafter bound shall pay to the clerk of the said Company, for the making of his said apprentice's indentures, one shilling and sixpence, and if any person of the said Company shall make or cause to be made any indenture of apprenticeship otherwise or by any other than the clerk of the said Company, he shall forfeit and pay for every such offence the sum of ten shillings to the use of the said commonalty."

Turning over apprentice.

59. "Item, it is ordained and established that it shall and may be lawful to and for the said master and wardens, or any three of them, to set or turn over the apprentice of any person or persons now free or hereafter to be free of the said Company, by consent of such master and his apprentice, or by the consent of the executor or administrator of such freeman and the apprentice, to any other person or persons free of the said City of London using the trade of the master to whom the apprentice was first bound for the remainder of any term of apprenticeship, and that every apprentice that shall be at any time hereafter set over within his term to any other master for the remainder of his term shall either bring his first master or the executor or administrator of every such master to testify his or their consent for the turning over, or some freeman or note under his or their hands testifying the same, together with the master to whom such apprentice is to be bound over before the master and wardens of the said mystery for the time being, or any three of them, at their common hall, and bring with them the indentures of apprenticeship, to the end it may be known how many years he hath to serve, and the same turning over recorded in the hall by the clerk of the said Company, and the master that shall have the apprentice set over unto him shall pay to the said master and wardens to the use of the said commonalty for setting over of every such apprentice three shillings and fourpence, and to the clerk for recording the same, sixpence."

Appre running away.

60. "Item, it is ordained and established that from henceforth when any apprentice or apprentices belonging to any of the said Company shall go or run away and absent him or themselves from his or their master's or mistresses service above six days, the master or mistress of every such apprentice so gone shall bring him to the common hall of the said Company at some court to be there holden next after his return or coming again before the said master and wardens for the time being, at which time the cause and time of his departure may be by the said master and wardens examined and the offence punished, and further order taken for his service according to the discretion of the master, wardens, and assistants for the time being, or the greater part of them, so that no abuse be had or done about his freedom thereafter."

Apprent to be m free of t Compar before t be prese to the chamber lain.

61. "Item, it is ordained and established that no person or persons of the said Company from henceforth shall present any of his apprentices to the chamberlain of London or his deputy to be made a freeman of the said Company after the expiration of his apprenticeship, before he first present the same apprentice to the master and wardens of the said craft or mystery, or any three of them, at their common hall, there to be examined of his true service according to the use and custom of the said Company, and being by them found capable of his freedom, he shall then and there be sworn before the said master and wardens, or any three of them, in their common hall, according to the oath in that case hereafter in these presents provided and be admitted a free brother of the said mystery, for which his admission he shall lay down and pay to the master, wardens, and commonalty of the said mystery three shillings and fourpence, and to the clerk of the said Company, for registering his admission, twelvepence, and to the beadle of the said Company for summons, sixpence, and after such his admission, his master or mistress, or such as testify for his true service with one of the wardens of the said Company, shall and may present the said apprentice before the chamberlain of London or his deputy for the time being, and thereupon shall cause him to be admitted into the franchise of the said City and into the commonalty of the said craft or mystery, or else not nor otherwise to be presented upon pain that every master of such apprentice doing the contrary shall forfeit and pay to the said master, wardens, and commonalty the sum of six shillings and eightpence of lawful money of England."

Against hawking forestall.

62. "Item, it is further ordered and established that no person or persons, either free or foreign, within the said City of London and suburbs of the same Southwark, either within places privileged and exempt as not, and within two miles compass of the same, shall in anywise or manner sell or utter any wares or commodities such as are traded, used, or occupied in the said Craft or Mystery of Tallow Chandlers, by way of hawking or forestalling in any market, street, lane, or other byeplace or places within the compass aforesaid, but only in their own shops, dwelling-houses, cellars, sollars, warehouses, or storehouses upon pain of forfeiture of the same wares and commodities to the use of the said commonalty, and payment of such fine as the said master, wardens, and assistants, or the more part of them for the time being, shall think fit, so it exceed not the sum of twenty shillings."

63. "Item, it is ordained and established that no person or persons whatsoever, being free of the said Company inhabiting within the City of London suburbs of the same Southwark or within two miles compass of the same City, shall by any means teach or instruct or cause to be taught or instructed in the said craft or mystery, or in any part thereof, or in anything appertaining to the said craft or mystery, any other person or persons whatsoever not being a freeman of the said Company or an apprentice to some of the said Company, upon pain that every person and persons doing contrary to this ordinance shall forfeit and pay for every such offence such fine as the said master, wardens, and assistants for the time being, or the more part of them, shall think meet, so it exceed not the sum of five pounds."

64. "Item, it is ordained and established that no person or persons whatsoever within the precincts aforesaid using or occupying the said craft or mystery of candle making shall make any candles of any bad cotton or deceitful tallow mixed with the best tallow, but shall make the said candles of good cotton and good tallow, without mixture, upon pain that every person offending contrary to the true intent of this ordinance shall forfeit and pay for every such offence to the said master, wardens, and commonalty for the time being the sum of six shillings and eightpence."

65. "Item, it is ordained and established that the ordinances herein expressed, or so many of them as the master and wardens of the said mystery for the time being shall appoint, shall be once every year at the least, and oftener, if the said master and wardens shall think fit, publicly read in their common hall to the generality of the said Company, by the clerk of the said Company, or such other in his absence as the master of the said mystery for the time being shall appoint, to the intent every one of the said commonalty may take notice of what he was sworn to when he was first admitted into the freedom of this City, and the clerk shall have of the said Company for his pains for reading of the said ordinances six shillings and eight pence."

66. "Item, it is ordained and established that it shall and may be lawful to and for the said master and wardens, or any two of them, to administer the several oaths hereafter particularly expressed when and as often as to them it shall seem convenient."

"Item, it is further ordered that the oaths to be taken by the said master, wardens, and assistants from time to time shall be as hereafter followeth, viz:

"You and every of you shall swear that you and every of you shall be true to our Sovereign Lord the King's Majesty, and to his heirs and successors, Kings and Queens of England. And you and every of you shall endeavour yourselves the best you can justly and indifferently to execute and cause to be executed your offices in every respect to the benefit of the common weal of the King's Majesty's subjects and credit of the commonalty. And you shall likewise execute or cause to be executed all the good and lawful ordinances in this book of ordinances expressed without sparing any man for affection, reward, meed, dread, or promise of reward during the time you shall be in office of master and wardens. And of all manner of duties, forfeitures, fines, and of all and every such goods, plate, jewels, sums of money, and any other thing and things that by reason of your said offices shall come to any of your hands, you shall, according to the ordinance before specified, make a good and true account, or else pay such fines as ye be ordered to pay by the said ordinance for your not so doing. Ye shall not for malice, nor for love nor affection, assess any person or persons in any greater or less sum than after the quality or quantity of his offence, according to your discretion, and according to the ordinances of the commonalty of the said Craft or Mystery of Tallow Chandlers, so help you God."

"You shall swear that you and every of you shall be true to our Sovereign Lord the King's Majesty, and to his heirs and lawful successors, Kings and Queens of England, and you and every of you shall endeavour yourselves the best you can, as well for and concerning the giving and using of your faithful advice and counsels unto the master and wardens of the commonalty of the said Craft or Mystery of Tallow Chandlers when you shall be thereto required, and when need shall be, for the better execution of their said offices, and also to give and use your faithful advice and assistance in every respect as much as in you lieth for the due observation of all the good and lawful ordinances in this book of ordinances mentioned and expressed according to the intent and true meaning of the same without molesting or impeaching of any person or persons either for affection or malice, or for, or in respect of, any reward, meed, dread, or promise of reward, during the time ye shall be assistants touching the commonalty of the said Craft or Mystery of Tallow Chandlers."

Oath of supremacy.

"I, A.B., do utterly testify and declare in my conscience that the King's Highness is only supreme governor of this realm and of all other his Highnesses dominions and countries as well in spiritual and ecclesiastical things or causes as temporal, and that no foreign prince, prelate, state, or potentate hath or ought to have any jurisdiction, powers, superiorities, authorities, or pre-eminences, ecclesiastical or temporal, within his realms, and therefore I do utterly renounce and forsake all foreign jurisdictions, powers, superiorities, and authorities. I do promise that from henceforth I shall bear faith and true allegiance to the King's Highness, his heirs and lawful successors, and to my power shall assist and defend all jurisdiction, privileges, pre-eminences, and authorities granted and belonging to the King's Highness, his heirs and successors, or united or annexed to the Imperial Crown of his realms, so help you God."

"Item, it is further ordered that the oaths hereafter mentioned shall, by the several persons hereafter named, be likewise taken as after doth follow, viz:

Freeman's oath.

"You shall be true to our Sovereign Lord the King's Majesty, his heirs and successors, Kings and Queens of England, you shall well and truly observe, maintain, and keep to your power all the good laws, statutes, ordinances, and decrees already made, or hereafter lawfully to be made for the government of the commonalty of the said Craft or Mystery of Tallow Chandlers for the better skill of the said craft or mystery, and for the common profit and commodity of the said commonalty. Ye shall be obedient from time to time and at all times in lawful matters to the master, wardens, and assistants of the said commonalty. And ye shall come to them at all times, or any of them, upon a lawful summons either of the clerk or beadle, or of any other by them being lawfully enjoined or commanded so to do, having no lawful or reasonable excuse to the contrary, or else ye shall pay such penalties as ye shall forfeit by your disobeying according to the lawful ordinances of the commonalty of the said Craft or Mystery of Tallow Chandlers all the lawful counsel of the commonalty of the said Craft or Mystery of Tallow Chandlers at any time of assembly that shall be lawful in communication amongst the commonalty of the said Craft or Mystery of Tallow Chandlers, at your common hall, you shall keep secret, and not disclose the same to any person, being none of the commonalty of the said Craft or Mystery of Tallow Chandlers, and especially to any person whom the said matter doth concern and touch, so help you God."

The oath of the warden of the yeomanry.

"You and either of you shall swear that you shall be true to our Sovereign Lord the King's Majesty, his heirs and successors, and you and either of you shall endeavour yourselves the best you can justly and indifferently to execute your offices of wardens of yeomanry to the best benefit of this Company. And you shall likewise execute, as much as in you lieth, all the good and lawful ordinances touching the ruling and governing of the said yeomanry without sparing any person for affection, reward, dread, or promise of reward during the time ye shall be in your said offices, and of all manner of duties, fines, and of all and every such goods, plate, jewels, sums of money, and every other thing and things that by reason of your said offices shall come to either of your hands, you shall, according to the ordinance before specified, make a good and true account, or else pay such fines as ye be ordered to pay by the said ordinance for your not so doing; ye shall not for malice, nor for love or affection, assess any person or persons in any greater or lesser sum than after the quality or quantity of his offence according to your discretions and the acts and ordinances of this Company, so help you God."

The oath of the clerk.

"You shall be true to our Sovereign Lord the King, and to his heirs and successors, Kings and Queens of England, you shall be obedient to the master, wardens, and assistants of the commonalty of the said Craft or Mystery of Tallow Chandlers for the time being, their good and lawful secrets, rules, and ordinances you shall observe and keep, and so from time to time, and at all times, at their lawful directions and commandments concerning the said commonalty, you shall read all the ordinances and make due and true entries, when as the master and wardens shall command you without sparing any person for affection, lucre, or malice; you shall not show nor deliver the copies of any books or writings concerning the commonalty of the said Craft or Mystery of Tallow Chandlers, nor any articles whereby the commonalty of the same craft or mystery may take hurt, neither show the same books to any person or persons without the consent, commandment, and agreement of the said master or wardens or some of them for the time being, so help you God."

The oath of the beadle.

"You shall be true to our Sovereign Lord the King's Majesty, and to his heirs and successors, Kings and Queens of England, you shall be obedient to the master, wardens, and assistants of the commonalty of the said Craft or Mystery of Tallow Chandlers for the time being, and so from time to time you shall give your attendance upon them and use your diligence at all times according to the trust that shall be committed unto you in such affairs as you shall have to do for or concerning the said Company either in any messuage or other business that you shall be by them or any of them appointed within the City of London and suburbs of the same, Southwark and within two miles compass of the same city and suburbs, and also in summoning any of the commonalty of the said craft or mystery, at such time as you shall be thereunto commanded, so help you God."

Allowance of ordinances.

All which acts, ordinances, constitutions and oaths in manner and form before specified at the request of the said master, wardens, and commonalty of the said Mystery of Tallow Chandlers by virtue and authority of the said Act of Parliament, we, the said lord keeper and chief justices of either bench, have perused, examined, and fully considered. And the same for good and lawful acts, ordinances, constitutions, and oaths do accept, admit, and allow, and by these presents, as much as in us is, do ratify, confirm, and approve."

In witness whereof we have hereunto set our hands and seals the nineteenth day of September in the fifteenth reign of our Sovereign Lord Charles by the Grace of God King of England, Scotland, France and Ireland, Defender of the Faith, &c. Anno Domini, 1639."

Note.—Pursuant to the Promissory Oaths Act, 1868, a statutory declaration is now substituted for an oath in the case of all the oaths above mentioned, and the other alterations required by that Act in the form thereof are made and used.

F. This Company has not, like some others, had its history already written by some talented member of the court or other person, and we submit that it is almost impossible therefore to furnish this return and give the history of the Company from its foundation to the present time, regard being had to the fact that the Company dates back to the early part of the fifteenth century.

From the archives of the Company it appears, as before stated, that a society or company of tallow chandlers existed in the City of London as far back as the year 1426, and was then governed by a master, and wardens, or keepers, and that at that time the Company had powers committed to them to search for and destroy all bad and adulterated oils. In the year 1456 the Company had attained sufficient importance to entitle them to a grant of armorial bearings and six years later, viz., in the year 1462, they obtained their first charter of incorporation from King Edward IV. The Company held its course during the troublous times of the reformation, obtaining fresh charters from Henry VIII., Edward VI., Philip and Mary, Elizabeth, James I., Charles II., and James II. They appear to have had the same troubles and persecutions in respect of their estates as most other corporations of those times, and many attempts were made to seize and confiscate their property on the ground that it had been given either wholly or partially for superstitious uses. More fortunate, however, than many others they were able to make terms in respect thereof, and their title to such of their estates as remained vested in them in the year 1620 was finally confirmed by the before-mentioned letters patent of King James I., bearing date the 6th of March 1620, which are still in force.

In the year 1602, the Company applied for and obtained a grant of supporters to the coat of arms granted to them in the year 1456, as before mentioned. This grant of supporters which bears date the 29th January 1602, and is under the hand and seal of William Camden, the historian, then Clarencieux, king-at-arms, states "that the Company are to take their place after "their ancienty at all feasts and other solemn pro-"cessions as the seventeenth Company of the City, "which he (the said William Camden) found according "to the date of their patent to be antiently recorded." In the lists of the City Companies now in use, the Tallow Chandlers Company are stated as the twenty-first of the City Companies, and it is not known how they lost their proper position as the seventeenth Company.

The Company of course suffered severely by the great fire of London in 1666, which not only consumed their common hall in Dowgate Hill, but several other houses belonging to them. The hall was rebuilt upon the old site in 1672, and still remains nearly in the same state in which it was then erected. Fortunately, owing to the energy of the then master of the Company, the charters, title deeds, and other archives of the Company were all removed from the hall before it was burnt, and thus saved from destruction, and the same are still in the Company's possession, and in good condition.

Further troubles seem also to have been experienced in 1684, when the Company were compelled by Charles II. to surrender their charters and privileges to the Crown, but this surrender was, as before stated, afterwards annulled, and the Company's charters and privileges restored to them by the before-mentioned statute of William and Mary.

In the same year, 1684, the Company, upon the request of the lord mayor and aldermen of London, erected the statute of Henry VII. in the Royal Exchange, the cost of which appears to have been 52*l.* 3*s.*

It is very difficult to ascertain what may be termed the trading history of the Company from its foundation to the present time, but there is no doubt that in former times the Company exercised the powers given to them by their charters and letters patent for searching for, weighing and measuring, not only tallow and candles, but also soap, vinegar, barrelled butter, salt, oils, hops, and destroying such of those articles as were bad, adulterated, or unfit for use. These powers seem to have been exercised, so far as candles were concerned, as late as the year 1709, as in that year proceedings were taken against the Company in the Queen's Bench by some tallow chandler whose candles had been destroyed by the Company, and damages were obtained against the Company for the loss and damage thereby sustained by him. In consequence of this decision the right of search was discontinued, and does not seem to have been again exercised. In addition to the above powers there is no doubt that the Company also exercised jurisdiction over the members of the trade, who under the charters were compelled to be freemen of the Company, and thereby were, to some extent, under the jurisdiction of the master and wardens of the Company. It is not known for how long a period the Company enforced the powers given to them by the charter of King Charles II. of compelling all members of the trade to become free of the Company, but we may safely say that they have not been enforced for more than 100 years.

It appears from the Company's minutes that in the year 1783 several freemen were ordered to be prosecuted for refusing to pay the livery fine of 25*l.*, the result of the proceedings appearing to have been that some of the delinquents were excused upon payment of a mitigated fine, and others were excused altogether on account of old age.

This power of compelling the freemen to take up the livery of the Company is now never enforced; but, on the contrary, it is considered a privilege to be admitted on the livery, and such admission is by way of election by the court, proper inquiries being previously made as to the character, &c. of the freemen applying to be elected.

It only remains to be said in reference to this return, that the Company have down to the present time maintained, and still maintain, the mode of government prescribed by its charters and ordinances, so far as its own affairs are concerned, but for the reasons before stated it does not now control the trade or seek to enforce the powers over the trade given to it by its charters, although it would be quite willing to do so if thought desirable, and for the benefit of the trade they represent.

G.—The Company have three licences in mortmain, bearing date respectively the 3rd of August 1831, the 15th of December 1856, and the 13th of July 1865. These were obtained for the purpose of enabling the Company to purchase and hold certain freehold estates in addition to those confirmed to them by the before-mentioned letters patent of King James I.

H.—This return has already been made under Return F., wherein it has been stated that in former times the Company possessed, under their charters and ordinances, certain powers of searching for and destroying bad tallow, oils, and other articles, and also of comptrolling the trade; but for the reasons before stated these powers have long since fallen into desuetude and are not now exercised.

PART II.—A.

Constitution and Privileges of Membership.

Return A.—Governing Body.

1. State the present constitution of the governing body of the Company, whether such constitution is according to the charter, and if not, in what respects such constitution varies therefrom, and when and how such alteration was made.
2. State the qualifications for membership of the governing body of the Company, the time and periods of election, and the qualifications of the voters at elections to the governing body.
3. State the functions of the governing body, and of the different members of the same respectively, and whether the members of the governing body pay any, and what, fees or fines on admission thereto, and whether they are paid any, and what, salaries or amounts in respect of their services respectively.
4. State the nature of the business which comes before the governing body of the Company, the method adopted in transacting it, the times at which the governing body meets for business purposes, the way in which the opinions of the members are taken, and whether the resolutions and decisions of the governing body are published, or are otherwise accessible to any or all, and which of, the members of the Company.
5. State whether the members of the governing body are liable to suspension, or removal, on any and what grounds, and by what method such suspension or removal is affected.
6. Has the Company any byelaws sanctioned by the Courts of Law or Chancery, or by the Courts of Aldermen or of Common Council, or otherwise. State the effect of such byelaws.

1. The Company has always been, and still is, governed by the master, wardens, and court of assistants, pursuant to the charters and ordinances. The number of the court is not defined by the charters, and is at present limited to 21.

2. The qualification for membership of the governing body is being a freeman and liveryman of the Company. The election of an assistant takes place (after being duly nominated) at the monthly court, held on the first Thursday in June, and the election is vested in the members of the court then present, and is by ballot. The master and wardens are elected annually at the court held on the first Thursday in July, which is called the election court, and they are sworn in and take their places as the new master and wardens at the next court, held on the third Thursday in July.

3. The governing body or court is now composed of a master, deputy master, four wardens, and 15 assistants, making 21 in all. One of the junior wardens, usually the third warden, is styled the renter-warden, and has the charge of the Company's accounts, with the assistance of the clerk. A fine is paid by an assistant on his election to the court, and the members of the court receive a fee for their attendance, the amount of the fine and the fee being settled by the court.

4. The business which comes before the court or governing body consists of the entire management of the Company's own estates and affairs, and also its charities; the binding of apprentices to freemen of the Company, the admission of freemen, and the election of liverymen. Also the election of new assistants when vacancies on the governing body occur by death or resignation, and the annual election of the master and wardens; also the payment, quarterly, of the Company's own pensioners and Monk's pensioners.

The court meets for business purposes on the first Thursday in each month, called monthly courts, and on the third Thursday in the months of January, April, July, and October, quarterly courts. There is also an additional court in June, annually, called the view day, when the Company's estates in the City are inspected by the court, accompanied by the clerk. The opinions of the members of the court upon the matters brought before them are taken by a show of hands, and the resolutions and decisions come to are duly recorded in the court minute book, which is accessible to members of the court and the clerk, but not to any other members of the Company.

5. The members of the governing body are liable to removal on the ground of fraud or felony, bankruptcy, or insolvency. Each new assistant on election signs an undertaking to resign his seat on the court in any of the above events.

6. The Company have no byelaws sanctioned by the Courts of Law, or by the Courts of Aldermen or Common Council, or otherwise.

PART II.—B.

Return B.—Admission to Membership.

1. State the qualifications for membership of the Company, the several grades of membership of the Company, and whether women are admitted to membership.
2. State the several modes in which the freedom of the Company may be obtained, the circumstances entitling an applicant to admission under each mode respectively, and the fees payable in respect of admission under each mode respectively.
3. State whether persons exercising any particular trade are required by statute or otherwise to become free of the Company. Is there any process by which members of such trade can become members of the Company, and is there any process for compelling such persons to procure admission, and are such processes enforced, and to what extent? Is the freedom of the City of London in any and what way a condition precedent or subsequent to membership? Are there any members who are not free of the City of London? Do persons exercising any particular trade commonly become members of the Company? If so, how many members of such trade are at present members of the Company? What is the number of the members of the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the Company, who are members of the Company?
4. Are freemen liable to disfranchisement, and if so, for what reasons, and what is the mode of disfranchisement?
5. Is the livery of the Company limited or unlimited in number? What are the qualifications for election to the livery, who are the electors thereto, and how do the elections thereto take place, and what fees are payable on election? Are liverymen liable to removal from the livery, and for what reasons?

1. The grades of membership may be considered as (1) freemen and (2) liverymen. No special qualification is required for a freeman except that he be 21 years of age or upwards at the time of his admission. The qualification of a liveryman is being a freeman. We believe in former times that women were admitted to the freedom of the Company, but none have been so admitted for upwards of 60 years.

2. The freedom of the Company may be obtained in three ways, viz., first, by servitude; second, by patrimony; and third, by purchase or redemption. The parties entitled to the freedom by servitude are those who have been duly bound apprentice to a freeman of the Company, and have served under such apprenticeship for seven years. The parties entitled to the freedom by patrimony are those who were born free of the Company by being the lawful issue of persons who were freemen of the Company at the time of their birth. The parties admitted to the freedom by purchase or redemption are those who are permitted by the court to purchase the freedom, but are not entitled thereto either by servitude or patrimony. The fine and fees payable on admission to the freedom by servitude or patrimony are 4*l.* 16*s.*, which includes the stamp duty of 1*l.*, and those payable on admission by purchase or redemption are 19*l.* 11*s.*, which includes the stamp duty of 3*l.*

3. As before stated, the charter of King Charles II. required all tallow chandlers within the City of London and suburbs, and within three miles thereof, to be freemen of the Company, and also to make their apprentices free of the Company upon the expiration of their service, or before exercising the trade of a tallow chandler, or to suffer such punishment as might be imposed by the Company's byelaws. This punishment under the Ordinances of King Charles I. appears to have been the imposition of fines of various amounts at the discretion of the governing body, and enforceable by distress of goods, but the above powers have not been exercised for many years, and may be now considered obsolete. Many persons exercising the trade of a tallow chandler do become members of the Company, and out of the total number of persons who are now freemen of the Company, say 144, or thereabouts, about 45 are or were in the trade of tallow chandlers, from which the Company is named. The present master and about one third of the governing body are, or were, also members of the trade.

4. We are not aware of any mode of disfranchisement.

5. The number of the livery of the Company is unlimited. The qualifications for election to the livery are being freemen of the Company, and of good character. The election rests with the court of the Company for the time being, and takes places at one of the meetings of the court, and the votes are taken by a show of hands. The fine and fees payable on election to the livery are 27*l.* 5*s.* We are not aware of any power of removal.

PART II.—C.

Return C.—Number of members.

State (1) the present number of freemen, (2) the present number of the livery, (3) the present number of other members, (4) the number of admissions to the freedom by each mode respectively, and (5) the number of calls to the livery which have respectively taken place during each of the last preceding 10 years.

(1.) The present number of freemen of the Company is 144, or thereabouts.

(2.) The present number of the livery of the Company is 120, or thereabouts.

(3.) There are no other members.

(4.) The admissions to the freedom during each of the last 10 years have been as follow, viz.:—

Year.	Servitude.	Patrimony.	Redemption.
1871	None.	None.	None.
1872	1	2	1
1873	1	1	1
1874	None.	2	4
1875	1	4	3
1876	None.	1	1
1877	,,	2	1
1878	,,	5	2
1879	,,	None.	4
1880	2	1	1
Total	5	18	18

(5.) The elections to the livery in each of the last 10 years have been as follows:—

In the year 1871	None.
,, 1872	3
,, 1873	3
,, 1874	4
,, 1875	6
,, 1876	3
,, 1877	2
,, 1878	4
,, 1879	5
,, 1880	1
Total	31

PART II.—D.

Return D.

(1.) State the number of apprentices bound at the Company's Hall, or otherwise under the auspices of the Company during each of the last 10 years. (2.) State how many have been bound during each of the last 10 years to members following the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the Company. (3.) In what cases and to what extent have the fees or premiums of such apprentice been paid by the Company?

(1.) The number of apprentices bound at the Company's Hall during each of the last 10 years is as follows:—

In the year 1871	None.
,, 1872	2
,, 1873	1
,, 1874	3
,, 1875	3
,, 1876	3
,, 1877	1
,, 1878	3
,, 1879	3
,, 1880	5
Total	27

(2.) Of the above number, nine, or thereabouts, were bound to members of the trade of tallow chandlers.

(3.) The Company has not paid the fees or premiums of any of the above apprentices.

PART II.—E.

Return E.—Profits and privileges.

1. State with fulness what are the advantages, pecuniary or otherwise, incident to the position of a member of the Company in each grade of membership, as (1) a freeman, (2) a liveryman, (3) master, warden, or otherwise a member of the governing body.
2. State the sums paid on an average annually for the preceding 10 years by the Company to the members according to the grades of membership mentioned above, and of what such sums consisted, whether (1) fees, and of what nature, (2) pensions, or (3) other payments, specifying the nature of the same respectively.
3. What circumstances are in practice held to constitute a claim to a pension or donation? State the number of present pensioners and donees respectively, and the amounts paid to them as such respectively. How many pensioners and donees are connected with the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the Company?
4. (1) What is the average standing of a member when he becomes a member of the governing body, and (2) what is the average time for which a member continues on the governing body?
5. Does the Company carry on any and what trade or manufacture with which its title is directly or indirectly connected? If so, what is the capital and from what sources is it derived, and how are the profits (if any) divided or dealt with?

1. The only advantages derived by a freeman of the Company are (1), the right to bind one or more apprentices to him in the Company, and (2) the eligibility to a pension either for himself or his widow; in addition to the above advantages a liveryman is also invited to the livery dinners (usually two in the year), and also becomes entitled, if a freeman of London, to a vote for the City of London. He also becomes eligible for the election on the court in due course. The members of the court, in addition to the above privileges, have the right to attend all meetings of the court, and to receive the accustomed fees for such attendance and the performance of their duties as assistants. The only additional advantages enjoyed by the master and wardens over the other members of the court consist in their higher rank as the foremost members of the governing body, and in being ex officio members of all committees.

2. The amount paid on an average annually for the preceding 10 years in pensions is as follows, viz.:—

	£	s.
To liverymen and their widows -	51	10
To freemen and their widows -	220	13

The only pension paid to a member of the court during the above period is one of 40*l.* a year paid to a former member now destitute.

The above are called the Company's pensions, and are distinct from and in addition to Mr. Monk's pensions mentioned in Return I.

3. The circumstances which are in practice held to constitute a claim to a pension are, in the case of freemen or liverymen, or their widows, that they are of 10 years' standing and destitute, and not in receipt of parochial relief, and 55 years of age or upwards at the time of application for relief.

As regards pensions or donations to former members of the court or their widows, each case is dealt with on its merits, and no definite conditions or rules apply.

The present number of pensioners is 19, and the amount paid to them annually is 346*l.*

These pensioners are distinct from and in addition to Mr. Monk's pensioners, mentioned in Return I.

The number of donees of course varies from time to time, but during the last year 16*l.* 13*s.* seems to have been given to three persons.

As far as can be ascertained, about 10 of the above pensioners and donees are or were members of the trade of tallow chandlers. In addition to the above the sum of 131*l.* 5*s.* was given last year to charitable institutions.

4. The average standing of a liveryman of the Company when he is made a member of the governing body is about 35 years. When elected on the court he remains there for life, or until he resigns.

5. The Company in its corporate capacity does not carry on any trade or manufacture with which its title is directly or indirectly connected.

PART III.—Officers and Servants.

Return A.—A list of the officers of the Company, with a statement of the duties of each, the amount of his salary and emoluments, and whether or not he is a member of the Company.

Return B.—A list of the servants of the Company, with a statement of the duties of each, and of the amounts of their wages and other emoluments.

Return C.—A statement as to the mode in which the officers and servants of the Company are respectively appointed.

A.—The only officer of the Company is the clerk of the Company, who is also the solicitor. He is not required to be a member of the Company, and the present holder of the appointment, Mr. Edwin Bedford, was not a member when elected in the year 1860, although he shortly afterwards was admitted to the freedom and livery by redemption. The duties of the clerk of the Company are as follow:—

"To be a duly certificated attorney and solicitor of not less than five years' standing; to give security for 500*l.*; not to be clerk to any other Company; to attend all courts and committees when summoned; to prepare all reports and contracts; to enter the minutes of the proceedings of courts and committees, and keep an index thereto; to keep correct lists of the members of the court and committees, and of the freemen, liverymen, and apprentices; to write all letters, and enter copies in a letter book; to bind and turn over apprentices; to administer the oaths or declarations; to attend to all precepts; to get the admission of freemen stamped in due time; to attend the payment of the regular pensions; to get in all bills quarterly, or when required by the court; to require the beadle to furnish the quarterage accounts yearly; to keep the several account and other books above enumerated, regularly entered up; to furnish a rent-roll to every new renter-warden; to require the beadle to see to the punctual payment of the premiums upon the policies of insurance; to attend all views of the estates; to report to each court the state and progress of all law proceedings pending; to give his advice and assistance to the master, wardens, courts, and committees, on all occasions when required; to prepare all leases, underleases, and assignments, the charge for the same to be at the discretion of the court, no law charges to be made but for special business; to issue summonses for payment of rent into court; to read the ordinances and the standing orders yearly; the salary to be at the discretion of the court, in addition to the accustomed fees appertaining to his office."

The present salary of the clerk is 250*l.* a year, and the other emoluments appertaining to the office of clerk amount, on an average, to 13*l.* a year, or thereabouts.

The Company do not provide any offices or residence for the clerk.

B.—The only servant of the Company is the beadle, the present holder of the appointment being Mr. James Turner, who is a freeman of the Company.

The duties of the beadle are as follows:—

"To hold office during the pleasure of the court, and to be informed thereof on his election; always to reside in the hall, and be responsible for the care of it, and of the furniture and effects of the Company therein; to keep the hall, with the furniture, plate, knives, and forks, and other articles, in a clean and proper condition, and always fit for use (cleaning of windows excepted); to have the hall and the court rooms prepared for all meetings and dinners of the master, wardens, and assistants, and of the livery; to attend the court and dinners upon all occasions in his gown, until the chair be quitted; to prepare the hall and tables for the livery, election, and other dinners; to superintend the same, and see that the company are properly attended to; to take care that the wine be regularly placed on the tables, and that it be not improperly removed; to attend all common halls in his gown and with his staff, until the hall be dissolved; to fill up and post all notices of meetings of the master and wardens, courts, committees, or livery, not earlier than seven nor later than five days preceding the meetings; to collect the quarterage and fines, and to keep the receipt thereof properly entered in a book for the purpose, to be laid upon the table at all courts; to keep a correct list of the livery with their residences and occupations; to ascertain quarterly that the Company's houses are constantly kept insured, and in case of the premiums being unpaid before the last day, to pay the same or a deposit thereon, so as to keep the policies on foot, and to inform the clerk thereof forthwith; to make his report of such insurances to the following court; to provide, at his own costs, brushes, brooms, cloths, soap, and all other articles requisite for cleaning the hall, plate, and other things, with all necessary charing, service, and attendance (except a cook and waiters) upon the livery, election, and court dinners; to devote his whole time to the Company."

The present salary of the beadle is 125*l.* a year, and the other emoluments of the office amount, on an average, to 7*l.* a year, or thereabouts. The beadle is provided with a residence at the hall.

C.—Both the clerk and beadle are elected by the court of the Company for the time being, and are both subject to annual re-election at the election court in July.

PART.—IV.—External and Internal Sources of Income, Value of Property, Administration, and Expenditure.

N.B.—As to Returns A. to H. inclusive, see the concluding observations which accompany these returns.

PART IV.—M.

Return M.—General and technical education. A statement as to whether the Company does anything to subsidize or encourage education, whether general or technical, and a return of the means (if any) so employed, and of the amount expended on such objects during each of the last preceding 10 years.

The Company have voted 315*l.* to the City and Guilds of London Institute for the advancement of technical education, of which 105*l.* has been paid this year, and the balance is to be paid in equal instalments during the ensuing two years.

PART V.—Reform.

Part V.—Reform.

The Commissioners, being bound to report to Her Majesty "what measures (if any) are, in their judgment, expedient and necessary for improving or altering the constitution of the Companies, or the appropriation or administration of the property or revenues thereof," respectfully invite the attention of the officers of the Companies to this part of the Commission.

The Commissioners will be very glad to receive and consider any suggestions respecting this part of the Commission with which the officers of the Companies may do the Commissioners the honour of favouring them.

Considering the greatly altered circumstances, both of the Company and the trade it represents, it is very difficult to make any practical suggestions for its reform, and it would doubtless be still more difficult to carry out the suggestions, if made.

We venture, however, to suggest that it might be for the public good, if the powers of searching for and destroying bad and adulterated tallow, oils, and soap, given by charter to this Company, were revived under proper regulations, and extended to mineral oils and other substances now used in the manufacture of candles, or for the production of light in lamps. Whether such powers should also, as in former years, apply to vinegar, butter, salt, and hops, is a question we do not feel at present competent to express an opinion upon, although it is one worthy of consideration.

It might also be desirable, and for the benefit of the public and the trade, that all persons exercising it should as in former times be compelled to become members of the Company, and that the governing body thereof should, to a reasonable extent, have control of the trade and the members thereof.

Concluding Observations.

In making the above returns the Company have been anxious, as far as possible, to do their duty both to the Royal Commissioners, the public, and to themselves, and with this object in view they have to the best of their ability answered all the questions put to them relating to the history, constitution, and management of the Company, and other matters useful for the Commissioners and the public to know in connexion therewith.

They are, however, advised by eminent counsel that they are not legally bound to give the above information, but for the reasons before stated they have thought it right so to do, although it must be considered as given without prejudice.

With regard, however, to the returns required as to the external and internal sources of income, value of property, administration, and expenditure of the Company (Part 4, Returns A. to H. inclusive), the Company feel strongly that they would not be justified in giving the information asked for. The trust or charity property possessed by the Company is duly returned at Part 1., Return I., and has also for years past been returned to the Charity Commissioners; but with regard to all the other property of the Company in which they have a private and beneficial interest, or, in other words, which belongs to them in their own right, they respectfully submit that they are no more bound to disclose the particulars thereof, and its mode of administration, than are any other private members of the community.

They feel that to answer these inquiries, except under the authority or by direction of a court of law, would be unwise and contrary to their duty to themselves and the public, because it might become a dangerous precedent in case of any attempts to interfere with private property.

For these reasons the Company respectfully refrain from making the returns alluded to as to their private property, income, and expenditure, but they trust that the Royal Commissioners will believe that in so refraining they are not in any way wanting in respect to them collectively or individually.

Dated this 1st day of December in the year of our Lord 1881.

APPENDIX A.

The Company gave considerable information to the Municipal Commissioners appointed in 1834.

APPENDIX B.

City of London Livery Companies'
Commission,
2, Victoria Street, S.W.,
February 15th, 1882.

SIR,

THE Commissioners desire me to thank, on their behalf, the Court of the Worshipful Company of Tallow Chandlers for the information which they have supplied to the Commissioners, but at the same time to state that that information is not, in their judgment, quite sufficient. I am, therefore, to draw attention to some points in the returns of the Tallow Chandlers' Company, with regard to which the Commissioners must respectfully ask for further information. The points are mentioned in the Schedule hereto, and the Commissioners will be much obliged to the Court if they will let them have the additional particulars as soon as possible.

I am, &c.
H. D. WARR,
Secretary.

E. Bedford, Esq.,
The Worshipful Company of Tallow Chandlers,
1 and 2, Bucklersbury,
Cheapside, E.C.

SCHEDULE.

The Commissioners respectfully ask for further information with regard to the following point:—

PART IV. Circular, 14th August 1880.
The return contains no information as to the corporate property of the Company, and no detailed statement of the corporate income and corporate expenditure of the Company during the 10 years mentioned.

Tallow Chandlers' Company,
Clerk and Solicitor's Office,
1 and 2, Bucklersbury,
Cheapside, London, E.C.,
25th February 1882.

SIR,

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your letter herein of the 15th instant (which only reached me this morning), and to say that the same shall be laid before the Court of my Company at their meeting on Thursday next.

I remain, Sir,
Yours obediently,
EDWIN BEDFORD.

Tallow Chandlers' Company,
Clerk and Solicitor's Office,
1 and 2, Bucklersbury,
Cheapside, London, E.C.,
2nd March 1882.

SIR,

YOUR letter herein of the 15th ultimo was laid before the Court of this Company at their meeting this day, and I am directed by them to inform you that the reasons why this Company refrained from making any returns under Part IV. as to their own corporate property, income, and expenditure were fully stated in the observations at the foot of the returns sent in, and the Court have nothing to add to what is therein so stated.

I am, Sir,
Yours obediently,
EDWIN BEDFORD,
Clerk.

H. D. Warr, Esq.,
Secretary,
Livery Companies' Commission,
2, Victoria Street, S.W.

TIN PLATE WORKERS' (OR WIRE WORKERS') COMPANY.

This Company has supplied the Commission with the following particulars only; it gave no information to the Municipal Commissioners of 1834:—

Part I.—Foundation and Object.

The charter of this Company was granted by King Charles the 2nd on the 29th day of December, in the twenty-second year of his reign.

Its byelaws, containing the usual clauses and provisions, were issued on 1st January, in the 29th year of the same reign, having been previously submitted to and approved by the then Lord Chancellor and the Chief Justices of the Courts of Queen's Bench and Common Pleas.

Part II.—Constitution and Privileges of Membership.

The master, two wardens, and eight assistants now constitute the court. The master and wardens are elected from the court of assistants, and the court of assistants from the livery.

The master and wardens have the general control of the business of the Company during their year of office, and the renter warden is especially charged with the care of the finances and accounts. These functions are exercised subject to the approval and in conjunction with the court of assistants.

A fee of 31*l.* 10*s.* 0*d.* is payable on the election of a liveryman to the court of assistants, but no fees are payable on election to the offices of renter warden, upper warden, or master.

These latter, viz., renter warden, upper warden, and master, together with the clerk and beadle, are elected on the Wednesday in Easter week.

The courts average 6 in number during the year.

A fee of 1*l.* 1*s.* 0*d.* was formerly paid each member attending court, but at the present time the members do not receive any fee for attendance.

All matters connected with the Company, e.g., admission of new members, paying the pensioners, consideration of petitions from public institutions and poor members of the Company, the management of the finances, election of officers, and all other things relating to the business and government.

The business is conducted by the usual form of notice and amendment, which when seconded are duly put from the chair, and are carried or negatived by a majority, the decision being entered in the minute book.

The courts are generally held at 4 o'clock in the afternoon at the office of the clerk of the Company, the Company having no premises of its own.

The resolutions and decisions of the governing body are not published, and are not accessible to any members of the Company except the court.

The grades are freemen, liverymen, steward, member of the court of assistants, renter warden, upper warden, master.

Patrimony, servitude, redemption, and presentation.—A person whose father was a freeman of the Company before such person was born, on the Company's sanctioning his admission, can take up his freedom by patrimony.

A person duly serving indentures of apprenticeship to a member of the Company on taking up his freedom would take it by servitude.

Freedom by redemption is the ordinary case of a stranger joining the Company.

Presentation, when the freedom is conferred upon a person by the governing body without payment of fees.

	£	s.	d.
Freedom by servitude, livery, and fine for steward, including 1*l.* stamp to Government	19	0	0
Freedom by patrimony, livery, and fine for steward, including 1*l.* Government stamp	19	0	0
Freedom by redemption, livery, and fine for steward, including 3*l.* for Government stamp	21	0	0
Freedom by presentation for Government stamp	3	0	0

The number of the livery is now about 77.

The qualification for election to the livery is that a majority of the members of the court of assistants deem the applicant a fit and proper person for admission thereto, he having previously taken up his freedom under one of the denominations above stated.

The Company has applicable to pensions only one small fund of 245*l.* consols, bequeathed by the will of Mr. John Miers in 1870. This produces 7*l.* 7*s.* 0*d.* per annum, which is distributed at the quarter court holden on the 1st February in every year amongst such poor persons as the court should elect for that purpose, each one receiving 10*s.* 6*d.*

In addition to this pension the court generally gives to 12 of the recipients of Mr. Miers's pension 10*s.* per quarter out of the Company's private funds.

In the course of a short time it is hoped that the Company will be able to arrange for the erection of almshouses for some of the poorer members of the Company, as Vice-Chancellor Bacon has, by an order dated the 7th of July 1882, directed that the master, wardens, and court of assistants of this Company be at liberty to apply for a transfer out of court of the residue of 1,000*l.* consols, bequeathed by the will of John White, deceased, when they shall have obtained a site for the almshouses.

Part IV.—General and Technical Education.

The master, wardens, and court of assistants have been and are now endeavouring to promote the prosperity of the two trades represented by the Company, namely, tin plate working and wire working, by the holding of exhibitions of articles of tin and wire work.

The first of these was opened by the Lord Mayor and sheriffs of London at the Crystal Palace on the 29th June 1878, at a cost of several hundreds of pounds, partly contributed by the individual members of the court and partly by the Company.

The exhibition was highly successful, and the holding of another at the Agricultural Hall, Islington, in May next has been under consideration, and will in all probability be carried out.

TURNERS' COMPANY.

The returns of the Company were made under protest.

PART I.—Foundation and Object.

A to H.

Return A.—A statement of the date, ascertained or probable, of the foundation of the Company, and of the circumstances, so far as they can be discovered from its documents of foundation or archives, in which the Company had its origin.

Return B.—A list of the charters, charters of inspeximus, and other instruments of a similar nature, whether originals or copies, which have been at any time in the possession of the Company, together with an abstract of the purport of each, regard being specially had to any evidence which it may contain as to the object of the foundation of the Company.

Return C.—A list of any trust deeds "founding, regulating, or affecting" the Company, with the date of each, the names of the parties thereto, and an abstract of the purport of each.

Return D.—A list, with dates, of any "decrees of court," whether of the Courts of Common Law or of Chancery, or of any acts of the Court of Aldermen or of the Court of Common Council, "regulating or affecting" the Company, with a statement of the effect of each decision.

Return E.—A list of any other documents, not included in the descriptions in the preceding returns, which "found, regulate, or affect" the Company, with dates, and an abstract of the effect of each.

Return F.—A concise history of the Company, from the time of its foundation to the present day, with special reference to the inquiry contained in the commission as to "the objects for which the Company was founded," and "how far those objects are now being carried into effect."

Return G.—Has the Company a licence in mortmain? When was such licence granted (referring to the document by description)? What is its extent, and to what extent is it now unexhausted?

Return H.—Is there vested in the Company, and how, whether by charter, statute, order of the Court of Aldermen, act of Common Council, or otherwise, any right of exercising superintendence over, or any duty or discretion to encourage in any way, any and what art, trade, or business? State the nature and local limits of such control. In what manner and to what extent is such control now exercised? If such control is not now exercised, state the circumstances under which its exercise has fallen into desuetude.

A. Unknown, as most of the Company's books and documents were destroyed in the Great Fire of London, but the Company was in existence between 1400 and 1500, as ordinances of the Company of that time are mentioned in the Liber Albus, page 640.

B. The only charter which the Company now possess or have any knowledge of was granted by King James, and is dated the 12th June, in the year of his reign of England, France, and Ireland the 2nd, and of Scotland the 37th. The Company holds the original.

C. None.

D. None.

E. None.

F. The objects for which the Company were founded are necessarily now matters of surmise only, as their documents were destroyed. See Answer A.*

But so far as they were for regulating and benefiting the turner's trade the Company have for many years past instituted exhibitions of turning open to the whole trade.

The Company append to their returns a print of the conditions of competition for their exhibition for 1881, together with a print of the agenda used on the presentation of the prizes to the successful competitors by the Right Honourable the Lord Mayor of London at the Mansion House. They also encourage mechanical drawing by giving prizes in schools.

G. The charter empowers the Company to hold land in perpetuity, not exceeding the then clear yearly value of 20*l.* beyond all charges and reprises.

The Company, however, does not hold any land.

H. The charter gives the Company jurisdiction over the turner's trade within the City of London and five miles round.

The Company does not now exercise any control over the turner's trade. It fell into desuetude after the Corporation deprived the Company of its privilege of marking the dry measures, which was in the year . . . .†

APPENDIX.

Conditions of Competition.

The master, wardens, and court of assistants of the Worshipful Company of Turners, according to their custom, propose to give this year their silver medal, the freedom of the Company to, and (subject to the consent of the court of aldermen) will also obtain the freedom of the City of London for, any workman, whether master, journeyman, or apprentice, in the trade in England, who may send in the best specimen of hand turning in wood, pottery, and metal (not including horological specimens).

The competition in wood includes turning in both hard and soft wood. The qualities which will be considered in awarding the prizes will be the following; viz.:—

1. Beauty of design, symmetry of shape, utility, and general excellence of workmanship.
2. Exact copying, so that two objects produced (such as two cups, vases, boxes, or other articles) may be facsimiles in every part, or exact measures of capacity.
3. Fitness of the work and design for the purpose proposed (for instance, turned work for portions of domestic or church furniture).
4. Ability to turn, whether circular or oval, in both classes of wood.
5. Novelty in application of turning, or in design.
6. Carving and polishing are admissible, and, if skilfully done, any additional effect produced will be considered, but it must be subsidiary to the turning.

* See Appendix below; and Part IV., M.

† Date not given.

The candidate may make his own selection from the above conditions; but the one who best fulfils the largest number, including the most important qualities, will be preferred; but it should be observed that prizes may be gained by excellence of turning shown in the simplest objects for every day use.

The work must be all hand turning, produced in the lathe without special rest or tool apparatus, and the carving must be the work of the exhibitor.

Specimens must not exceed 24 inches in height and a foot in diameter.

A bronze medal will be given as a second prize, and certificates of merit, as well as money prizes, will be awarded in the wood competition, in the discretion of the judges.

There will also be extra prizes given for work in wood exhibited exclusively by apprentices, such work to be simple plain commercial turning, that is, objects in general use without ornamentation or inlaying.

The competition in pottery includes terra cotta, stoneware, earthenware, and porcelain.

Specimens of work under this heading will be divided into three classes:—

In Class A.—The freedom of the Company and a sum of money will be given, and the freedom of the City of London will (subject to the consent of the court of aldermen) be obtained for the best piece of pottery thrown on the wheel, in one piece, without joints, and not afterwards shaved or turned in any way, or glazed.

Form and execution will both be looked for by the judges.

In Class B.—A silver medal will be given for the best piece of pottery thrown and turned; the throwing and turning both to be the entire work of the same person.

In Class C.—A silver medal will be given for the best piece of turned or shaved pottery, ornamented by the runner or other hand tool; in this class incised work will be permitted, and the specimens may be glazed and coloured.

Execution and beauty of form must be equally attended to.

A bronze medal will be given to the competitor second in merit in each class, also certificates of merit and money prizes will be awarded, according to the discretion of the judges.

No competitor to send in more than two specimens, neither of which must exceed 30 inches in height.

In the competition in metal the chief medal and freedom will be adjudged to that object which the judges may decide to possess paramount merit as a specimen of pure turning.

The qualities which will be chiefly considered in awarding the prizes in metal are:

1. Truth in turning, accuracy in fitting, and finish.
   (a.) Truth: in diameter in the entire length of all cylindrical work, external or internal; and in turned surfaces, whether circular, rectangular, or of irregular margin.
   (b.) Accuracy of fitting: between pieces placed or moving within others, and also between those in permanent attachment.
   (c.) Finish: in addition to the above qualities, in optical, surveying, and other instruments, excellence in the finish of cylinders, adjustable tubes, screws, framing, milled heads, curves, &c. will be necessary; but any part of an instrument illustrative of the merit of the turner will be recognised.
2. Accuracy of copying.
   Duplicates exhibited as specimens of accurate turning should, if possible, be accompanied by some form of gauge as a test of diameters and lengths.
3. Due proportion for stability or strength. Elegance in form.

The specimens should not exceed two feet in any dimension. The use of the slide rest is not prohibited, but when used it must be so stated, and preference will be given to pure hand turning.

A bronze medal will be given as a second prize, and certificates of merit, as well as money prizes, will be awarded in this class, according to the discretion of the judges.

Amateur Turning.

Samuel Morley, Esq., M.P., has most kindly placed at the disposal of the Company a sum of 10*l.* 10*s.* to be awarded as prizes for the best specimens of amateur work in ornamental turning in any material executed during the period of competition. Any lathe apparatus may be used. No prize will be awarded unless there shall be six or more competitors. All exhibits to be distinctly marked or labelled "Amateur."

The Court has placed at the disposal of the competition committee a sum of 50*l.*, and the Baroness Burdett-Coutts has kindly given a sum of 50*l.*, Henry Collings, Esq., 5*l.* 5*s.* for special prizes for apprentices, and A. P. Bower, Esq., 3*l.* 3*s.*

The different objects must be delivered free at the Mansion House, London, during the week ending October 8th, and will be on view on Tuesday, October 11th; Wednesday, October 12th; and Thursday, October 13th.

They must be each marked with a private mark or motto, and numbered, and accompanied by a list, showing for each number the grounds on which the prize is sought, and if from an amateur or apprentice it must be clearly stated therein; also, in the pottery competition, the Class A, B, or C, in which the award is sought.

They must be accompanied by a sealed envelope marked with the same mark or motto, and containing the name and address of the competitor, and his age if an apprentice, and in all cases a certificate of good conduct, and a certificate or declaration that he is in the trade, and that the work is by his hands only, and has been completed during the period of competition; the competitor may be required to do in the presence of the judges a portion of the work similar to the successful exhibit.

The envelopes will not be opened until the judges have made their report.

The specimens sent will remain the property of the competitor. Care will be taken of them, but the court will not hold themselves responsible for their safety. The exhibitors must remove their specimens at their own cost, but the judges will be authorised to make such allowance, if called upon so to do, as they may think fit, in regard of the expenses of the carriage of the specimens.

No one who has already obtained the Company's silver medal, or a first prize, in any of the previous competitions will be eligible for a first prize this year, and the judges reserve to themselves the right of withholding any of the prizes, if they deem the objects not sufficiently meritorious.

All exhibitors are requested to remove their specimens immediately after the distribution of the prizes, but not until they have signed a receipt for them.

Those exhibitors who desire to sell their specimens should enclose in their sealed packet a note stating at what price they are willing to dispose of them.

The judges will be the following citizens and turners, and others:—

In wood—A. P. Bower, Esq.; John Jaques, Esq.; John Jones, Esq.; and T. B. Winser, Esq.

In pottery—J. J. Holtzapffel, Esq.; Assoc. Inst. C. E.; Horace Jones, Esq.; C. T. Newton, Esq.; C. B. (British Museum); George Wallis, Esq., F.S.A. (South Kensington Museum).

In metal—Sir Henry Bessemer; C. H. Gregory, Esq., C.M.G.; Col. W. Haywood; R. Price Williams, Esq.

The Right Honourable the Lord Mayor of London has kindly consented to present the prizes this year, on Thursday, October 13th, at 11.30 a.m.

By Order of the Court,

Richd. Loveland Loveland,

Hon. Sec. to the Competition Committee.

January, 1881. 4, Hare Court, Temple, London.

PART II.—A.—CONSTITUTION AND PRIVILEGES OF MEMBERSHIP.

RETURN A.—Governing Body.

1. State the present constitution of the governing body of the Company, whether such constitution is according to the charter, and if not, in what respects such constitution varies therefrom, and when and how such alteration was made.
2. State the qualifications for membership of the governing body of the Company, the time and periods of election, and the qualifications of the voters at elections to the governing body.
3. State the functions of the governing body, and of the different members of the same respectively, and whether the members of the governing body pay any and what fees or fines on admission thereto, and whether they are paid any and what salaries or amounts in respect of their services respectively.
4. State the nature of the business which comes before the governing body of the Company, the method adopted in transacting it, the times at which the governing body meets for business purposes, the way in which the opinions of the members are taken, and whether the resolutions and decisions of the governing body are published, or are otherwise accessible to any or all, and which, of the members of the Company.
5. State whether the members of the governing body are liable to suspension or removal on any and what grounds, and by what method such suspension or removal is effected.
6. Has the Company any byelaws sanctioned by the Courts of Law or Chancery, or by the Courts of Aldermen or of Common Council, or otherwise? State the effect of such byelaws.

1. The governing body consists of a master, an upper and a renter warden, and 24 assistants, The constitution is by charter.

2. Must be a liveryman. Must be elected by a majority of the court. No time is prescribed for such election.

3. The functions as prescribed by the charter are to make from time to time reasonable laws, statutes, ordinances, decrees, and constitutions, in writing, for the good rule and government of the master, wardens, and commonalty of the mystery or art and of all other the turners and all other persons of the mystery or art of the turners within the City of London and five miles of the City.

Each member upon being elected an assistant of the court pays a fine of 18*l.* to the Company, 5*s.* to the clerk, and 2*s.* 6*d.* to the beadle. The master pays a fine of 3*l.* on election to his office. They are not paid any sums for their services.

4. The business transacted by the governing body relates to the conduct of the Company's exhibitions of turnery in aid of technical education and the binding of apprentices, and admission of freemen and liverymen. The business is transacted in case of difference by a majority of the votes of the court present at the discussion. The court meets on the first Thursday in every month at 1 o'clock. The opinions are taken by show of hands. The resolutions and decisions are not published. The clerk records them in a minute book, which could be produced to any member of the Company.

5. The byelaws provide for removal from his office of assistant of any assistant who for 18 months neglects or refuses to attend in his place without reasonable excuse.

6. The Company's byelaws are dated 3rd June 1823, and were signed by John Earl of Eldon, Lord High Chancellor of England; Sir Charles Abbott, Knight, Chief Justice of the Pleas before His Majesty to be holden; and Sir Robert Dallas, Knight, Chief Justice of His Majesty's Common Pleas.

The byelaws regulated the fees payable to the Company.

TURNERS' COMPANY—continued.

PART II.—B.

RETURN B.—Admission to membership.

1. State the qualifications for membership of the Company, the several grades of membership of the Company, and whether women are admited to membership.
2. State the several modes in which the freedom of the Company may be obtained, the circumstances entitling an applicant to admission under each mode respectively, and the fees payable in respect of admission under each mode respectively.
3. State whether persons exercising any particular trade are required by statute or otherwise to become free of the Company. Is there any process by which members of such trade can become members of the Company, and is there any process for compelling such persons to procure admission, and are such processes enforced, and to what extent? Is the freedom of the City of London in any and what way a condition precedent or subsequent to membership? Are there any members who are not free of the City of London? Do persons exercising any particular trade commonly become members of the Company?—If so, how many members of such trade are at present members of the Company? What is the number of the members of the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the Company, who are members of the Company?
4. Are freemen liable to disfranchisement, and if so, for what reasons, and what is the mode of disfranchisement?
5. Is the livery of the Company limited or unlimited in number? What are the qualifications for election to the livery, who are the electors thereto, and how do the elections thereto take place, and what fees are payable on election? Are liverymen liable to removal from the livery, and for what reasons?

1. No qualification required for membership, and women are admitted to membership. The grades are freemen, liverymen, assistant, renter warden, upper warden, master.

2. By servitude, patrimony, redemption.

On completion of term of apprenticeship for seven years the apprentice is entitled to be admitted a freeman by servitude.

By patrimony if born after parent was made free of the Company.

By redemption if elected by the court.

The Company is entitled to a fee of 2*l.* in each case.

3. No persons are required by statute or otherwise to become free of the Company. Members of the turners' trade can only become members by patrimony, servitude, or redemption, and there is not any process for compelling such persons to procure admission. So far as the Company is concerned, the freedom of the city is not necessary. There are members who are not free of the city. There are not any persons exercising the turners' or any other trade who commonly become members of the Company. There are 42 members of the Company who are either turners only or use the turners' trade in their businesses

4. We think not.

5. The livery is unlimited.

The only qualification necessary is the freedom of the Company. The court elect the livery. Notice of motion has to be given to each member of the court of intention to propose a freeman for election on to the livery. The fees payable are 12*l.* to the Company, 5*s.* to the clerk, and 2*s.* 6*d.* to the beadle. There is no provision in the charter or byelaws for removal from the livery.

PART II.—C.

RETURN C.—Number of members.

State (1) the present number of freemen, (2) the present number of the livery, (3) the present number of other members, (4) the number of admissions to the freedom by each mode respectively, and (5) the number of calls to the livery which have respectively taken place during each of the last preceding 10 years.

1.—22 freemen.
2.—239 liverymen.
3.—9 honorary freemen who are not on the livery.
4.—1 by servitude, 2 by patrimony, 267 by redemption.
5.—

1870	None.	1875	26
1871	10	1876	43
1872	45	1877	8
1873	20	1878	14
1874	18	1879	18

PART II.—D.

RETURN D.—(1) State the number of apprentices bound at the Company's Hall, or otherwise under the auspices of the Company, during each of the last 10 years. (2) State how many have been bound during each of the last 10 years to members following the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the Company. (3) In what cases and to what extent have the fees or premiums of such apprentice been paid by the Company?

1. Five.
2. One.
3. Not in any.

PART II.—E.

RETURN E.—Profits and privileges.

1. State with fulness what are the advantages, pecuniary or otherwise, incident to the position of a member of the Company in each grade of membership, as (1) a freeman, (2) a liveryman, (3) master, warden, or otherwise a member of the governing body.
2. State the sums paid on an average annually for the preceding 10 years by the Company to the members, according to the grades of membership mentioned above, and of what such sums consisted, whether (1) fees, and of what nature, (2) pensions, or (3) other payments, specifying the nature of the same respectively.

3. What circumstances are in practice held to constitute a claim to a pension or donation? State the number of present pensioners and donees respectively, and the amounts paid to them as such respectively. How many pensioners and donees are connected with the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the Company?
4. (1) what is the average standing of a member when he becomes a member of the governing body, and (2) what is the average time for which a member continues on the governing body?
5. Does the Company carry on any and what trade or manufacture with which its title is directly or indirectly connected? If so, what is the capital and from what sources is it derived, and how are the profits (if any) divided or dealt with?

1. There are no pecuniary or other advantages to the freemen, nor to the livery, beyond the franchise. The court used to divide 2*l.* amongst themselves at each monthly court, but they have not so divided any funds of the Company since the 2nd May 1878.

2. The sums paid annually from 1870 to 1878 to the court averaged 22*l.*, and these were for court fees, but they have not since that time received any fees. There were no other payments to members.

3. There are no pensioners. The court distributes the contents of the poor box, which is derived from voluntary contributions, principally of new members, between poor widows or female relatives of members of the Company.

4. There is no average standing. The court have a right to and do exercise the right of electing such of the livery as they consider most for the benefit of the Company.

A member usually continues on the court until he resigns or dies.

5. No.

PART III.—OFFICERS AND SERVANTS.

RETURN A.—A list of the officers of the Company, with a statement of the duties of each, the amount of his salary and emoluments, and whether or not he is a member of the Company.

RETURN B.—A list of the servants of the Company, with a statement of the duties of each, and of the amounts of their wages and other emoluments.

RETURN C.—A statement as to the mode in which the officers and servants of the Company are respectively appointed.

Clerk.—A member of the Company. Attend the courts of the Company and keep the minutes; salary, 20*l.* a year and 5*s.* fee on admission of member to freedom, 5*s.* on taking up livery, 5*s.* on election on to the court.

Beadle.—A member of the Company. Attend the courts and summon the members; salary, 13*l.* a year and 2*s.* 6*d.* fee on admission of member to the freedom, 2*s.* 6*d.* on taking up livery, 2*s.* 6*d.* on election on to the court.

PART IV.—B.

RETURN B 1.—List of moneys belonging to the Turners' Company invested in Government or other stocks, shares, funds, or securities.

Amount of Stock, &c.	Description of Stock.	Source from whence arising, e.g., gift with name of donor, bequest with name of testator, sale of lands, and which, &c.	In what name standing, e.g., Company, Chancery Division of High Court of Justice, &c.	To what Account belonging, e.g., any particular fund or trust account.	Net Annual Receipt.	Remarks.
£ 1,787	Scinde Railway	Not known	Company	None	£ s. d. 87 9 8

B 2.—A return of the balance of moneys in the hands of the Company unappropriated in their accounts on the 31st December in each of the last preceding 10 years.

B 3.—A return of the estimated value of the plate, pictures, furniture, and other property at present on the premises of the Company, or in their possession elsewhere.

PART IV.—F.

RETURN F.—(1.) The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them what has been the amount of the increase or decrease, from year to year, of the Company's income during the last 10 years, and whether there is reason to expect any increase or decrease during the next 10 years, together with a statement of the reasons for such expectation.

RETURN F.—(2.) The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them whether there is reason to expect any permanent increase or decrease in value in any of the estates or properties of the Company, and if so, to what extent, together with a statement for the reasons for such expectation.

The Company expect a decrease of income for the reason that their fixed income is derived solely from the interest on 1,787*l.* Scinde Railway stock and quarterages. Their principal source of revenue during the last 10 years has arisen from the fees payable by persons joining the Company, and the numbers so joining are now much fewer than during the preceding 10 years.

F 2.—No increase or decrease expected in the Company's only property, namely, the 1,787*l.* Scinde Railway stock.

PART IV.—G.

RETURN G.—The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them—

1. What is the system of management of the Company's estates and property?
2. In what way, and by whom, the several receipts and payments are taken and made, and under what control?
3. In what way the Company's accounts are audited?
4. Whether the Company's accounts are published, or are accessible to all or any, and which, of the members of the Company?

1. There are no estates.
2. The receipts and payments are made by the upper warden.
3. Six members of the Company are appointed annually to audit the upper warden's accounts who, or any three of them, can audit same.
4. The Company's accounts are not published. They could be accessible to any member of the Company.

PART IV.—H.

Return H.—A detailed statement of the income from all sources of the Company during each of the preceding 10 years, a detailed statement of the Company's expenditure during each of such 10 years, and a detailed statement of the assets and liabilities of the Company at the end of each of the last 10 years.

PART IV.—M.

Return M.—General and Technical Education.—A statement as to whether the Company does anything to subsidise or encourage education, whether general or technical, and a return of the means (if any) so employed, and of the amount expended on such objects during each of the last preceding 10 years.

*The Company has for many years past instituted annual exhibitions of turning for the purpose of encouraging technical education in that trade, and gives as prizes :—

1st. The freedom of the Company and of the City.
2nd. Silver and bronze medals.
3rd. Certificates of merit.
4th. Holtzapffel's work on turning.
5th. Money prizes.

These prizes are also supplemented by gifts from the Baroness Burdett-Coutts and gentlemen members of the Company.

The exhibitions are held at the Mansion House in the month of October, and the prizes are presented by the Right Honourable the Lord Mayor.

* See Part I., Appendix

The Company has expended in the last 10 years the following sums upon these exhibitions; namely,— 1870. Nil. All expenses were defrayed by Mr. Secondary Potter, the master of the Company.

APPENDIX A.

The Company gave no information to the Municipal Commissioners appointed in 1834.

TYLERS AND BRICKLAYERS' COMPANY.

The returns of the Company were accompanied with a protest against the legality of the inquiry.

PART I.—Foundation and Object.

A. to H.

Return A.—A statement of the date, ascertained or probable, of the foundation of the Company, and of the circumstances, so far as they can be discovered from its documents of foundation or achives, in which the Company had its origin.

Return B.—A list of the charters, charters of inspeximus, and other instruments of a similar nature, whether originals or copies, which have been at any time in the possession of the Company, together with an abstract of the purport of each, regard being specially had to any evidence which it may contain as to the object of the foundation of the Company.

Return C.—A list of any trust deeds "founding, regulating, or affecting" the Company, with the date of each, the names of the parties thereto, and an abstract of the purport of each.

Return D.—A list, with dates, of any "decrees of court," whether of the Courts of Common Law or of Chancery, or of any acts of the Court of Aldermen or of the Court of Common Council, "regulating or affecting" the Company, with a statement of the effect of each decision.

Return E.—A list of any other documents, not included in the descriptions in the preceding returns, which "found, regulate, or affect" the Company, with dates and an abstract of the effect of each.

Return F.—A concise history of the Company, from the time of its foundation to the present day, with special reference to the inquiry contained in the commission as to "the objects for which the Company was founded," and "how far those objects are now being carried into effect."

Return G.—Has the Company a licence in mortmain?—When was such licence granted (referring to the document by description)? What is its extent, and to what extent is it now unexhausted?

Return H.—Is there vested in the Company, and how, whether by charter, statute, order of the Court of Aldermen, act of Common Council, or otherwise, any right of exercising superintendence over, or any duty or discretion to encourage in any way, any and what art, trade, or business? State the nature and local limits of such control. In what manner and to what extent is such control now exercised? If such control is not now exercised, state the circumstances under which its exercise has fallen into desuetude.

A.—The three last charters are mentioned in Return B. Previous thereto the Fellowship of Tylers and Bricklayers was governed and represented by the governing body of the Company, who were called "the master and custodes" or "warden of the fellowship," and who had been in the habit, time out of mind, of making divers ancient rules, ordinances, and orders for the conservation, rule, good order, and government of the "Fellowship."

B.—A charter of Queen Elizabeth, dated the 3rd August 1568, gave the master and wardens certain rights and privileges.

A charter of Queen Elizabeth, dated 14th July 1571, gave the master and wardens power to search and view bricks, tiles, and the materials whereof they are made, and to fine makers and holders of bad and imperfect bricks, tiles, and materials and work. This charter contains provisions as to the taking of apprentices, keeping order among the craft, powers to have a beadle—a clerk—to recover penalties, to appease controversies, to keep courts. It also contains provisions as to the several oaths to be taken by members of the Company.

A charter of James 1st, dated 20th April 1604, incorporates the members of the Company, gives them perpetual succession, with power to plead, to have a common seal, to choose a master and two wardens, to hold land, make rules and ordinances for the government of the company, to levy fines, to admit and expel members, to govern the freemen, and to punish for bad work and materials. This charter is dated from Gorambury.

A charter of James II., dated 18th February 1685, incorporates the Company, gives perpetual succession, with power to have, purchase, receive, and possess land and goods and chattels, with power to plead, to have a common seal, to have master and warden assistants and clerk; to have a common hall, to hold courts. The charter also contains provisions as to the mode of appointing the master, wardens, assistants, and other officers, also power to make byelaws and to set and recover fines. It also contains provisions as to the binding of apprentices.

C.—There appear to be none.

D.—There are several ordinances which confirm and extend the powers of the Company in the way of searching, impounding and fining, and apprenticing. They are dated as follows:—

1658, July 1st. An ordinance of the Court of Common Council.

1723, January 25th. An ordinance of George I.

E.—There appear to be none.

F.—The Company had its origin in the necessity of providing some authority to which persons connected with the trade of tylers and bricklayers might resort for the better government, as regarded manufacture and work, apprenticeship, meeting of members, and the succour of those in old age and distress. The Company ranks the thirty-seventh in the order of precedence. All the objects for which it was formed (except as regards manufacture and work) are now being carried into effect as appears from other portions of these returns.

G.—Not beyond those contained in the Charters. They are not exhausted.

H.—There is vested in the Company by the charters above mentioned, and by the acts and ordinances also above referred to, the right of exercising certain superintendence over and encouragement of the trades of bricklaying, brickmaking, and tyling. The local limit is London and fifteen miles around. The rights of search and condemnation of goods and of fine are not now exercised by the Company, but the Company continues to encourage and promote the well-being of its trade by means of the apprenticeship system, and also by bringing together men engaged in the trade, and by looking after its poor.

Return I.—A list of the charities, eleemosynary, educational, or otherwise, which are under the management of the Company, stating in each case the name of the founder, the date and nature of the benefaction, its original and its present value, and the purposes to which the funds have been applied for each of the last preceding 10 years.

The charity is called the Tylers and Bricklayers' Almshouses, and was founded in the year 1832, in order to provide for the decayed members of the livery and their widows. Freemen and their widows have since been made eligible. The real estate consists of an acre of freehold land at King Henry's Walk, Ball's Pond Road, Islington, on which have been erected fourteen almshouses, including one used by the Matron and Superintendent. The almshouses were built with funds subscribed by individual members of the court and livery out of their private means, and the Company have invested in the names of trustees the sum of New 3 per cent. annuities mentioned in the sixth column, to provide pensions for the inmates of the almshouses, and has also set apart for the same object the income of a sum of 799*l.* 12*s.* Consolidated Bank Annuities, standing to the Company's credit, with the Paymaster-General of the Court of Chancery			—	—	3750*l.* new 3 per cent. annuities	112*l.* 10*s.* 0*d.*	None	Liverymen and their widows receive a pension of 15*l.* each, and two tons of coals and occasional gratuities. Freemen and their widows receive a pension of 12*l.* each, and two tons of coal and occasional gratuities. There is a female Superintendent and Matron who nurses the pensioners in case of sickness. She is paid out of the Almshouse income, and so are all expenses for rates, taxes, repairs, maintenance of garden, &c.

PART II.—Constitution and Privileges of Membership.

A.

Return A.—Governing body.

1. State the present constitution of the governing body of the Company, whether such constitution is according to the charter, and if not, in what respects such constitution varies therefrom, and when and how such alteration was made.
2. State the qualifications for membership of the governing body of the Company, the time and periods of election, and the qualifications of the voters at elections to the governing body.
3. State the functions of the governing body, and of the different members of the same respectively, and whether the members of the governing body pay any and what fees or fines on admission thereto, and whether they are paid any and what salaries or amounts in respect of their services respectively.
4. State the nature of the business which comes before the governing body of the Company, the method adopted in transacting it, the times at which the governing body meets for business purposes, the way in which the opinions of the members are taken, and whether the resolutions and decisions of the governing body are published, or are otherwise accessible to any or all, and which of, the members of the Company.
5. State whether the members of the governing body are liable to suspension or removal on any, and what grounds, and by what method such suspension or removal is effected.
6. Has the Company any byelaws sanctioned by the courts of law or chancery, or by the courts of aldermen or of common council, or otherwise? State the effect of such byelaws.

1. The governing body consists of a master, an upper warden, a renter warden, and 20 assistants, assisted by a clerk. Such constitution is in accordance with the Company's charter.

2. The master and upper warden are elected annually in August by the court of assistants from their own body. A member of the livery is usually elected every year to serve as renter warden, and remains on the court of assistants after his year of office has expired. Occasionally the number of the court has fallen below what was considered desirable, and then members of the livery have been elected by the court to fill the vacancies caused by deaths.

3. The master, wardens, and court have the management of the Company's affairs and property. The master and wardens each pay a fine of 10*l.* on admission to their offices. Liverymen elected to the court (except as renter warden) pay a fine fixed by the court, on admission to the court. Neither the master, wardens, nor any member of the court, receive any salaries or amounts in respect of their services.

4. The business coming before the court consists of elections to freedom and livery, apprenticing boys to the Company's trade and otherwise assisting that trade, managing the Company's almshouses and charitable funds, managing the Company's estates, and generally the usual business transacted by a city company. The court meets about six times a year, and has a General Purposes committee which transacts any urgent business happening between its meetings. The opinions of the members of the court are taken by show of hands, except in cases of elections, which are by ballot. The resolutions and decisions are not published.

5. The court has a general power to remove and expel any person from the Company, but it is not often acted on. The course is to remove the person's name from the livery list, and to give notice to such person thereof.

6. There appear to be none, except such as are mentioned in Returns A. to H., Part I.

Part II.—B.

Return B.—Admission to membership.

1. State the qualifications for membership of the Company, the several grades of membership of the Company, and whether women are admitted to membership.
2. State the several modes in which the freedom of the Company may be obtained, the circumstances entitling an applicant to admission under each mode respectively, and the fees payable in respect of admission under each mode respectively.
3. (a.) State whether persons exercising any particular trade are required by statute or otherwise to become free of the Company. (b.) Is there any process by which members of such trade can become members of the Company, and is there any process for compelling such persons to procure admission, and are such processes enforced, and to what extent? (c.) Is the freedom of the City of London in any and what way a condition precedent or subsequent to membership? (d.) Are there any members who are not free of the City of London? (e.) Do persons exercising any particular trade commonly become members of the Company? (f.) If so, how many members of such trade are at present members of the Company? (g.) What is the number of the members of the trade (if any), the name of which is borne by the Company, who are members of the Company?
4. Are freemen liable to disfranchisement, and if so, for what reasons, and what is the mode of disfranchisement?
5. Is the livery of the Company limited or unlimited in number? What are the qualifications for election to the livery, who are the electors thereto, and how do the elections thereto take place, and what fees are payable on election? Are liverymen liable to removal from the livery, and for what reasons?

1. The qualifications for freedom are—
   (a) Having been born free (patrimony).
   (b) Having served the usual seven years' apprenticeship to a freeman of the Company (servitude).
   (c) By redemption or purchase.
   Women are admitted to the freedom.
   The fees payable to the Company are—
   (a and b) Patrimony and servitude, 2*l.* 2*s.*
   (c) Redemption, 21*l.*
2. The qualification for livery is freedom.
   The fees payable to the Company amount to 15*l.*
3. (a) No.
   (b) No.
   (c) No, but the freedom of the city is generally taken subsequently.
   (d) It is believed that all the freemen of the Company are also free of the City of London.
   (e) Yes, to a great extent.
   (f) About 40 members of the livery are connected with the building trade; most of the others are descended from persons connected with the trade.
   (g) See last reply.
4. There is no record of any disfranchisement.
5. The livery is unlimited in number. The livery are elected by the court. See above as to the fees. The liverymen are liable to have their names removed from the livery list for non-payment of quarterage and for misbehaviour.

Part II.—C.

Return C.—Number of members.

State (1) the present number of freemen, (2) the present number of the livery, (3) the present number of other members, (4) the number of admissions to the freedom by each mode respectively, and (5) the number of calls to the livery which have respectively taken place during each of the last preceding ten years.

Part II.—D.

Return D.—(1) State the number of apprentices bound at the Company's Hall, or otherwise under the auspices of the Company, during each of the last ten years. (2) State how many have been bound during each of the last ten years to members following the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the Company. (3) In what cases and to what extent have the fees or premiums of such apprentice been paid by the Company?

1. Four apprentices have been bound according to the custom of the city and Company.
Twelve boys have also since 1877 been bound apprentice by the court to persons following the trade of bricklayers (See Part IV., Return M).
2. Of the above four, two were bound to persons following the Company's trade, and the other two to persons following a trade intimately connected with it.
3. The premiums for apprenticing the 12 boys above mentioned were paid by the Company, except in one or two cases where individual members of the court have paid them.

Part II.—E.

Return E.—Profits and privileges.

1. State with fullness what are the advantages, pecuniary or otherwise, incident to the position of a member of the Company in each grade of membership, as (1) a freeman, (2) a liveryman, (3) Master, Warden, or otherwise a member of the Governing Body.
2. State the sums paid on an average annually for the preceding ten years by the Company to the members according to the grades of membership mentioned above, and of what such sums consisted, whether (1) fees, and of what nature, (2) pensions, or (3) other payments, specifying the nature of the same respectively.
3. What circumstances are in practice held to constitute a claim to a pension or donation? State the number of present pensioners and donees respectively, and the amounts paid to them as such respectively. How many pensioners and donees are connected with the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the Company?
4. (1) What is the average standing of a member when he becomes a member of the Governing Body, and (2) what is the average time for which a member continues on the Governing Body?
5. Does the Company carry on any and what trade or manufacture with which its title is directly or indirectly connected? If so, what is the capital and from what sources is it derived, and how are the profits (if any) divided or dealt with?

1. There are no such profits or privileges.
2. None, except as stated in Part I., Return 1, and sums paid from time to time to distressed freemen or their widows or families.
3. Being members of the freedom or livery, or their widows, is generally held to constitute a claim for assistance. See Part I., Return 1.
4. (1) From 15 to 30 years.
(2) About 30 years.
5. The Company carries on no trade, but it identifies itself as far as possible with the building trade, and seeks by apprenticing boys to bricklayers to benefit that trade. A large proportion of the members of the court and livery are connected with the building and brickmaking trades.

PART III.—Officers and Servants.

A., B., and C.

Return A.—A list of the officers of the Company, with a statement of the duties of each, the amount of his salary and emoluments, and whether or not he is a member of the Company.
Return B.—A list of the servants of the Company, with a statement of the duties of each, and of the amounts of their wages and other emoluments.

RETURN C.—A statement as to the mode in which the officers and servants of the Company are respectively appointed.

A.—The master, upper warden, and renter warden, twenty assistants, two auditors, the treasurer of the almshouses, the clerk.

B.—The usual duties of a clerk of a livery company. Salary 100*l.* a year, and fees on admission to the freedom and livery, and on apprenticeship (but not including those mentioned in Return M., Part IV.) as under:

PART IV.—F.

RETURN F.—(1.) The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them what has been the amount of the increase or decrease, from year to year, of the Company's income during the last ten years, and whether there is reason to expect any increase or decrease during the next ten years, together with a statement of the reasons for such expectation.

RETURN F.—(2.) The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them whether there is reason to expect any permanent increase or decrease in value in any of the estates or properties of the Company, and if so, to what extent, together with a statement for the reasons for such expectation.

F. (1.)—The Company's income has been almost stationary for the last 10 years; the only variations being caused by the receipt of fees for admission to the freedom and livery (see Part IV., Return E.)

F. (2.)—Increased rents may be obtained as the existing leases of the Company's estates fall in, but to what extent they will increase the income of the Company it is not possible to say.

PART IV.—G.

RETURN G.

The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them—

1. What is the system of management of the Company's estates and property?
2. In what way, and by whom, the several receipts and payments are taken and made, and under what control?
3. In what way the Company's accounts are audited?
4. Whether the Company's accounts are published, or are accessible to all, or any, and which, of the members of the Company.

1. The estates and property are managed by the court through their renter warden, and clerk.
2. The receipts and payments are taken and made by the renter warden and clerk. Their accounts are audited every year by two auditors appointed by the court. The accounts of the almshouses are kept by the treasurer, and annually audited in like manner.
3. See last reply.
4. The accounts are published every three years, and distributed among the court.

PART IV.—H.

RETURN H.—A detailed statement of the income from all sources of the Company during each of the preceding 10 years, a detailed statement of the Company's expenditure during each of such 10 years, and a detailed statement of the assets and liabilities of the Company at the end of each of the last 10 years.

The Accounts are very similar in each year. A Statement of the Income and Expenditure for the year ending 29th September, 1880, is given below, and may be considered a fair sample of the Income and Expenditure for such year.

PART IV.—M.

GENERAL AND TECHNICAL EDUCATION.

RETURN M.—A statement as to whether the Company does anything to subsidize or encourage education, whether general or technical, and a return of the means (if any) so employed, and of the amount expended on such objects during each of the last preceding ten years.

The Company has within the last few years taken up the subject of technical education, and the court, after consideration, concluded that the best mode in which the Company could promote the welfare of the trade it represents was by encouraging the system of apprenticeship. The court accordingly determined to apprentice two boys each year to the bricklaying trade, and to pay the premium on such apprenticeship. The premiums are 25*l.* each, and the term of apprenticeship seven years. Eleven apprenticeships have been thus carried out since the year 1877, the premiums been paid by the Company, except in one or two cases where individual members of the court have paid them. The apprentices attend the meetingof the court once a year, when their progress and position are enquired into, and the boys have a good plain dinner and a small pecuniary reward if they have behaved themselves during the preceding year.

The court has other apprenticeships in hand besides the eleven above enumerated, and, as its means allow, the Company hopes to further extend its work in this direction.

PART V.—Reform.

Part V.—Reform.

The Commissioners, being bound to report to Her Majesty "what measures (if any) are, in their judgment, "expedient and necessary for improving or altering the constitution of the Companies, or the appro- "priation or administration of the property or revenues thereof," respectfully invite the attention of the officers of the Companies to this part of the Commission.

The Commissioners will be very glad to receive and consider any suggestions respecting this part of the Commission with which the officers of the Companies may do the Commissioners the honour of favouring them.

The Company respectfully submits that no measures are expedient for improving or altering its constitution, or the appropriation or administration of its property or revenues.

The Company takes this opportunity of recording its respectful but firm protest against the right of the Commissioners to call for these returns, as being in contravention of the rights of the Company and of the privileges conferred upon it by its charters.

APPENDIX A.

The Company gave ample information to the Municipal Commissioners appointed in 1834. Their income was then about 600*l.* a year and the Company contained many members connected with the trades the names of which the Company bears.

APPENDIX B.

City of London Livery Companies' Commission,
2, Victoria Street, Westminster, S.W.,
18th July 1882.

Sir,

Referring to the circular sent by the Commissioners to the Worshipful Company of Tylers and Bricklayers on the 15th February last, may I respectfully ask the Court to inform the Commissioners what is the rateable value of the Company's almshouses.

The Commissioners will be much obliged both to the Court and to yourself for this information.

I am, &c.,
(Signed) H. D. Warr,
Secretary.

A. Bird, Esq.,
Clerk to the Tylers and Bricklayers' Company,
6, Bedford Row, W.C.

6, Bedford Row, W.C.,
20th July 1882.

Sir,

I beg to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 18th instant, and to inform you in reply that the Company's almshouses are rated at 59*l.* a year.

I remain, &c.
A. Bird,
Clerk.

H. D. Warr, Esq.,
&c., &c.

THE UPHOLDERS' COMPANY.

The Returns of this Company were made under protest.

PART I.—FOUNDATION AND OBJECT.

A to H.

RETURN A.—A statement of the date, ascertained or probable, of the foundation of the company, and of the circumstances, so far as they can be discovered from its documents of foundation or archives, in which the company had its origin.

RETURN B.—A list of the charters, charters of inspeximus, and other instruments of a similar nature, whether originals or copies, which have been at any time in the possession of the company, together with an abstract of the purport of each, regard being specially had to any evidence which it may contain as to the object of the foundation of the company.

RETURN C.—A list of any trust deeds "founding, regulating, or affecting" the company, with the date of each, the names of the parties thereto, and an abstract of the purport of each.

RETURN D.—A list with dates of any "decrees of court," whether of the Courts of Common Law or of Chancery, or of any acts of the Court of Aldermen or of the Court of Common Council, "regulating or affecting" the Company, with a statement of the effect of each decision.

RETURN E.—A list of any documents, not included in the descriptions in the preceding returns, which "found, regulate, or affect" the company, with dates and an abstract of the effect of each.

RETURN F.—A concise history of the company, from the time of its foundation to the present day, with special reference to the inquiry contained in the commission as to the "objects for which the company "was founded," and "how far those objects are now being carried into effect."

RETURN G.—Has the company a licence in mortmain? When was such licence granted (referring to the document by description)? What is its extent, and to what extent it is now unexhausted?

RETURN H.—Is there vested in the company and how, whether by charter, statute, order of the Court of Aldermen, act of Common Council, or otherwise, any right of exercising superintendence over, or any duty or discretion to encourage in any way, any and what art, trade, or business? State the nature and local limits of such control. In what manner and to what extent is such control now exercised? If such control is not now exercised, state the circumstances under which its exercise has fallen into desuetude.

A.—Company founded between 1460 and 1465. Grant of coat of arms to said company on 11th December 1465, the fifth year of the reign of Edward IV.

B.—A charter given by Charles I., 1626, to empower the company to supervise all work executed by the said craft.

C.—None.

D. E. F. G.—No knowledge.

H.—Obsolete.

PART II.—A.

CONSTITUTION AND PRIVILEGES OF MEMBERSHIP.

PART II.—D.

RETURN D.

(1) State the number of apprentices bound at the Company's Hall, or otherwise under the auspices of the Company, during each of the last ten years. (2) State how many have been bound during each of the last ten years to members following the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the Company. (3) In what cases and to what extent have the fees or premiums of such apprentice been paid by the Company?

Not any.

PART II.—E.

RETURN E.—Profits and privileges.

1. State with fullness what are the advantages, pecuniary or otherwise, incident to the position of a member of the Company in each grade of membership, as (1) a freeman, (2) a liveryman, (3) master, warden, or otherwise a member of the governing body.
2. State the sums paid on an average annually for the preceding ten years by the Company to the members according to the grades of membership mentioned above, and of what such sums consisted, whether (1) fees, and of what nature, (2) pensions, or (3) other payments, specifying the nature of the same respectively.
3. What circumstances are in practice held to constitute a claim to a pension or donation? State the number of present pensioners and donees respectively, and the amounts paid to them as such respectively. How many pensioners and donees are connected with the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the Company?

4. (1) What is the average standing of a member, when he becomes a member of the governing body, and (2) what is the average time for which a member continues on the governing body?
5. Does the Company carry on any and what trade or manufacture with which its title is directly or indirectly connected? If so, what is the capital and from what sources is it derived, and how are the profits (if any) divided or dealt with?

1. Not any, beyond the fee of 20*s.* to those members of the court punctually attending the business meetings.
2. Average of court fees paid for the last 10 years 93*l.* per annum.
3. Donations and gratuities are given by the court at the close of the year according to funds available.
4. No fixed rule. Life.
5. None.

Part IV.—K.

Position in relation to Universities.

Return K.—Has the Company any relations with the Universities, or with any of the colleges in them? State the nature and extent of such relations. Has the Company any scholarships or exhibitions tenable at any of the Universities in its gift? Give a list of such scholarships or exhibitions, with their respective values, and the periods for which they are respectively tenable; and state how the same are awarded, whether the competition is limited to relations of members, or whether persons so related have any preference.

Not any.

Part IV.—L.

Church Patronage.

Return L.

1. Are there any ecclesiastical benefices in the gift of the Company?
2. Give a list of such benefices, stating—
   a. The county where situated.
   b. The name of the parish or place.
   c. The net annual value of such benefice so near as it can be given, together with any other particulars affecting the value present or prospective of such benefice.
3. Has the Company granted during the last 10 years any augmentations of income to the incumbents of such benefice; and, if so, to what extent, and out of what funds? Has the Company during such 10 years built or contributed, and to what extent, to the building of any, and what, churches or chapels, and where situated?

Not any.

Part IV.—M.

General and Technical Education.

Return M.—A statement as to whether the Company does anything to subsidise or encourage education, whether general or technical, and a return of the means (if any) so employed, and of the amount expended on such objects during each of the last preceding 10 years.

No funds for any of these purposes.

APPENDIX A.

The Company gave no information to the Municipal Commissioners appointed in 1834.

APPENDIX B.

406, Camden Road, Holloway, N.,
21st August.

Sir,

In reply to your favor of 18th July, I am directed to state that the trust income of the Company is included in the statement of the Company's income, which the Court have already furnished the Commissioners.

I am, Sir,
Your's obediently,
Geo. Smith.

H. D. Warr, Esq., Secretary,
City of London Livery Companies' Commission.

WAX CHANDLERS' COMPANY.

These returns were made under protest.

PART I.—FOUNDATION AND OBJECT.

RETURNS A TO H BOTH INCLUSIVE.

RETURN A.—A statement of the date, ascertained or probable, of the foundation of the Company, and of the circumstances, so far as they can be discovered from its documents of foundation or archives, in which the Company had its origin.

RETURN B.—A list of the charters, charters of inspeximus, and other instruments of a similar nature, whether originals or copies, which have been at any time in the possession of the Company, together with an abstract of the purport of each, regard being specially had to any evidence which it may contain as to the object of the foundation of the Company.

RETURN C.—A list of any trust deeds "founding, regulating, or affecting" the Company, with the date of each, the names of the parties thereto, and an abstract of the purport of each.

RETURN D.—A list with dates of any "decrees of court," whether of the Courts of Common Law or of Chancery, or of any acts of the Court of Aldermen or of the Court of Common Council, "regulating or affecting" the Company, with a statement of the effect of each decision.

RETURN E.—A list of any other documents, not included in the descriptions in the preceding returns, which "found, regulate, or affect" the Company, with dates and an abstract of the effect of each.

RETURN F.—A concise history of the Company, from the time of its foundation to the present day, with special reference to the inquiry contained in the commission as to "the objects for which the Company was founded," and "how far those objects are now being carried into effect."

RETURN G.—Has the Company a licence in mortmain? When was such licence granted (referring to the document by description)? What is its extent, and to what extent is it now unexhausted?

RETURN H.—Is there vested in the Company and how, whether by charter, statute, order of the Court of Aldermen, act of Common Council, or otherwise, any right of exercising superintendence over, or any duty or discretion to encourage in any way, any and what art, trade, or business? State the nature and local limits of such control. In what manner and to what extent is such control now exercised? If such control is not now exercised, state the circumstances under which its exercise has fallen into desuetude.

A.—There is no documentary evidence in the possession of the Wax Chandlers' Company of an earlier date than 45th Edward III., A.D. 1371, which is a petition to the Court of Aldermen of the City of London for leave to choose searchers for bad wares, and for approval of byelaws then submitted for the regulation of the craft. The prayer of this petition seems to have been acceded to, for Waulter Rede and John Pope were in the same year chosen and sworn to oversee the said craft, and the defaults from time to time found to present to the mayor and aldermen, &c. These documents are set out (page 104) in the Report of the Commissioners on Municipal Corporations in England and Wales dated 1837. That the craft of wax chandlers were associated previous to this date there are no documents to show, although from the petition it would appear that it was, but without power to enforce obedience to its orders.

B.—The following is a list of the charters, &c. granted at various times to the Company.

1. Charter of 1st Richard III., 1483. 2. Grant of arms, 2nd Richard III., 1484. 3. Further grant of arms, 28th Henry VIII., 1536. 4. Exemplification and confirmation of said charter of Richard III. by Philip and Mary, 7th June, 4th and 5th Philip and Mary. 5. Letters Patent of confirmation of said charter by Queen Elizabeth, 2nd Elizabeth, 1560. 6. Ditto. Ditto. King James I., 2nd James I., 1604. 7. Charter of 15th Charles II., 1663 (this is the charter under which the Company acts, a short abstract of which is set out at page 100 of the Report of the Commissioners of 1837). 8. Byelaws pursuant to last-mentioned Charter, and the Statute 19th Henry VII., approved and signed and sealed by the Lord Chancellor, and two Chief Justices of the King's Bench and Common Pleas dated 28th June 1664, referred to at page 100 of the above-mentioned report. 9. Charter of 1st James II., 1685 (this Charter was avoided under the General Statute).

Abstracts or copies of the above documents, or any them, can be furnished to the Commissioners if required, but as they were furnished to the Commissioners upon the former enquiry, the expense thereof must be borne by the present Commissioners.

C.—There are no such deeds as are here referred to.

D.—The only two cases coming under this enquiry are those of Robert Lancashire in 1691, and William Fordham in 1696, in both of which cases the parties had served their apprenticeships to members of the Company, and declined to take up their freedoms, but which in the end they were compelled to do. Full particulars of the proceedings before the Court of Aldermen are set out at pages 107 and 108 of the said Report of the Commissioners on Municipal Corporations in England and Wales.

E.—The Company have no knowledge of any other documents not included in the foregoing returns which found, regulate, or affect the Company.

F.—From the Company's documents it would appear that the Company was founded for the purposes of regulating the trade, and protecting the members thereof, to prevent the sale of adulterated or spurious goods, and for mutual aid in adversity, such aid extending to the widows of the members. It is clear also that there has always been an intention to promote good fellowship and a kindly feeling amongst the members. It is also clear from the very earliest period that it was not necessary that a man should be a member of the craft in order to be a member of the Company, and this is shown from the fact that any child of a freeman (born free) was entitled to the freedom of the Company by patrimony, whatever his or her trade or calling: this, together with the fact that the manufacture of wax candles proper has almost entirely ceased, will account in a great measure for many of the members of the Company, not being or having been for many years members of the actual craft.

G.—The Company by their charter granted by Charles II. (the existing charter) are empowered to hold lands, &c., the statute of mortmain notwithstanding; by the charter of Richard III. they were also empowered to do so to the extent of 5 marks per annum.

H.—The control given by Charter over the trade or business or art or mystery of wax chandlers within the city, and 10 miles of the same, has fallen into disuse, rather for want of sufficient powers to enforce regulations which had been adopted, than from an abandonment on the part of the Company.

RETURN I.—A list of the charities, eleemosynary, educational or otherwise, which are under the management of the Company, stating in each case the name of the founder, the date and nature of the benefaction, its original and its present value as regards both capital and income, and the purposes to which the funds have been applied for each of the last preceding 10 years.

I.—This return is made to the Charity Commissioners annually, who have enquired into all the charities of the Company, and in the case of Kendall's charity (the only one in which it was considered necessary to interfere) a scheme has been settled by the High Court of Justice under which it is now managed.

WAX CHANDLERS' COMPANY—continued.

PART II.—A.

CONSTITUTION AND PRIVILEGES.

RETURN A.—Governing Body.

1. State the present constitution of the Governing Body of the Company, whether such constitution is according to the charter, and if not, in what respects such constitution varies therefrom, and when and how such alteration was made.
2. State the qualifications for membership of the governing body of the Company, the time and periods of election, and the qualifications of the voters at elections to the governing body.
3. State the functions of the governing body, and of the different members of the same respectively, and whether the members of the governing body pay any, and what fees or fines on admission thereto, and whether they are paid any, and what salaries or amounts in respect of their services respectively.
4. State the nature of the business which comes before the governing body of the Company, the method adopted in transacting it, the times at which the governing body meets for business purposes, the way in which the opinions of the members are taken, and whether the resolutions and decisions of the governing body are published, or are otherwise accessible to any or all, and which of, the members of the Company.
5. State whether the members of the governing body are liable to suspension, or removal, on any, and what grounds, and by what method such suspension or removal is effected.
6. Has the Company any byelaws sanctioned by the Courts of Law or Chancery, or by the Courts of Aldermen or of Common Council, or otherwise. State the effect of such byelaws.

1. The governing body of this Company consists of master, two wardens (upper and renter warden) and 20 assistants, who in accordance with Charter form the court.

2. He must be a liveryman. Upon a vacancy occurring in this court, by death or otherwise, such vacancy is filled up by vote of the surviving members. The senior liveryman (not an assistant) being generally elected to fill such vacancy.

3. The master when present presides at all meetings; in his absence the chair is taken by the senior past master present, and he, and the wardens and assistants form the court by whom all the affairs of the Company are regulated and decided.

The assistants on election pay a fine of 2*l.* 10*s.*

The wardens on election (to each grade) pay a like fine of 2*l.* 10*s.*

The master (who must have passed through the two grades of warden) on election pays a fine of 1*l.*

The services of the governing body are gratuitous.

But for many years past it has been the rule to pay to each member of the court attending thereat a small attendance fee in order to ensure punctuality.

4. The regulation of and ultimate decision of all matters affecting the Company, whether connected with their body (court livery or freemen), their charities, or their property. If by method is meant the means whereby a decision is arrived at, it is by consultation, discussion, and vote of the majority, the chairman having a casting vote. The transactions of each court are duly recorded in the court minute book kept for that purpose, and which is accessible to any member of the court, and to any member of the Company, with the sanction of the master, sufficient reason therefore being first shown. The business is transacted at courts held at the hall of the Company, of which there are five regulated by Charters, viz., four quarterly, and held in January, April, July, and October, and one in September, at which the renter wardens' accounts are audited. Special courts and committees are also held when requisite. A finance committee consisting of the master, wardens, and past master meets previous to the five Charter courts. On the first Thursday of August in every second year a court is held pursuant to the Charter for the election of master and wardens, who each hold their office for two years.

5. The byelaws approved 28th June 1664, sec. 33, of which a copy was in the year 1834 furnished to the commissioners then appointed to enquire into the state of the Municipal Corporations of England and Wales, to which Commission the fullest returns were made by this Company, and which return it is submitted gives every information that can be legally required, authorise the suspension of master, wardens, assistants, or livery from office, but no instance has occurred within the last 100 years of the exercise of such authority.

6. Yes, those referred to in the previous answer.

PART II.—B.

CONSTITUTION AND PRIVILEGES OF MEMBERSHIP.

RETURN B.—Admission to membership.

1. State the qualifications for membership of the Company, the several grades of membership of the Company, and whether women are admitted to membership.
2. State the several modes in which the freedom of the Company may be obtained, the circumstances entitling an applicant to admission under each mode respectively, and the fees payable in respect of admission under each mode respectively.
3. State whether persons exercising any particular trade are required by statute or otherwise to become free of the Company. Is there any process by which members of such trade can become members of the Company, and is there any process for compelling such persons to procure admission, and are such processes enforced, and to what extent? Is the freedom of the City of London in any and what way a condition precedent or subsequent to membership? Are there any members who are not free of the City of London? Do persons exercising any particular trade commonly become members of the Company? If so, how many members of such trade are at present members of the Company? What is the number of the members of the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the Company, who are members of the Company?
4. Are freemen liable to disfranchisement, and if so, for what reasons, and what is the mode of disfranchisement?
5. Is the livery of the Company limited or unlimited in number? What are the qualifications for election to the livery, who are the electors thereto, and how do the elections thereto take place, and what fees are payable on election? Are liverymen liable to removal from the livery, and for what reasons?

1, 2, 3. The freedom of the Company is obtained:—

1st. By patrimony of right on production of evidence of the freedom of the parent and of the birth of the applicant subsequently thereto, and to his or her legitimacy, the applicant is not admitted unless 21 years of age.

2nd. By apprenticeship of right on production of the indentures of apprenticeship and examination of the master and apprentice. The apprentice must have been bound, or been turned over to a freeman at the Company's Hall. The apprentice must be 21 years of age previous to admission to the freedom.

3rd. By gift (optional with governing body).

4th. By redemption or purchase (optional with governing body).

5th. Females are entitled to the freedom of the Company, as above.

4. By the 33rd section of the byelaws, members of the Company "may be dismissed from their place and office" (disfranchised) by the court upon sufficient cause shown "viz., on commission of crime or offence, misdemeanour or "fault relating to the art or mystery worthy to be dis- "charged, &c., &c., or on any other reasonable cause in the "judgment of the governing body."

5. The livery is unlimited and may be obtained by a freeman (whenever he may apply to the court for the same), if approved of by the governing body. No one is however admitted to the livery who is not free of the City of London, and produces evidence to that effect. The fees payable are as under.

If by patrimony or servitude: Company, 10*l.*; clerk, 5*s.*; beadle, 2*s.*

By redemption, such sums as the governing body may determine, the admission to the freedom and livery by redemption being entirely optional.

The livery are removable as previously stated.

PART II.—C.

Constitution and Privileges of Membership.

Return C.—Number of members.

State (1) the present number of freemen, (2) the present number of the livery, (3) the present number of other members, (4) the number of admissions to the freedom by each mode respectively, and (5) the number of calls to the livery which have respectively taken place during each of the last preceding ten years.

The present number of freemen is 25.

The present number of livery is 41.

There are no other members at present connected with the Company, honorary or otherwise.

There have been eight admissions to the livery during the last 10 years, but no compulsory calls seem to have been made for many years past.

PART II.—D.

Constitution and Privileges of Membership.

Return D.—(1) State the number of apprentices bound at the Company's Hall, or otherwise under the auspices of the Company during each of the last ten years. (2) State how many have been bound during each of the last ten years to members following the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the Company. (3) In what cases and to what extent have the fees or premiums of such apprentice been paid by the Company?

There have been only four apprentices bound during the last ten years; viz., one in 1877, one in 1878, one in 1879, and one in 1880.

The members to whom such apprentices were bound are not actual followers of the trade of a wax chandler.

The fees or premiums, if any, of such apprentices, were not paid by the Company.

PART II.—E.

Constitution and Privileges of Membership.

Return E.—Profits and privileges.

1. State with fullness what are the advantages, pecuniary or otherwise, incident to the position of a member of the Company in each grade of membership, as (1) a freeman, (2) a liveryman, (3) master, warden, or otherwise a member of the governing body.
2. State the sums paid on an average annually for the preceding ten years by the Company to the members according to the grades of membership mentioned above, and of what such sums consisted, whether (1) fees, and of what nature, (2) pensions, or (3) other payments, specifying the nature of the same respectively.
3. What circumstances are in practice held to constitute a claim to a pension or donation? State the number of present pensioners and donees respectively, and the amounts paid to them as such respectively. How many pensioners and donees are connected with the trade (if any) the name of which is borne by the Company?
4. (1) What is the average standing of a member when he becomes a member of the governing body, and (2) what is the average time for which a member continues on the governing body?
5. Does the Company carry on any and what trade or manufacture with which its title is directly or indirectly connected? If so, what is the capital and from what sources is it derived, and how are the profits (if any) divided or dealt with?

1.—The freemen at the present time have no special benefit (the right of exclusive trading and exemption from tollage having now for some years been abolished) unless they become objects of charity, when they are entitled to participate in the charities of the Company, and in cases of necessity are assisted from the general funds of the Company.

The livery are as such entitled to vote in the election of members of Parliament for the City of London, if resident within 25 miles thereof.

Also to vote in the election of lord mayor, sheriffs of London and Middlesex, and other corporate officers.

And when the funds of the Company permit they are invited to dine with the master, wardens, and court of assistants at their hall or elsewhere about twice a year.

They are also in the same manner as a freeman entitled to participate in the charities of the Company, but there are not in this Company any special charities for liverymen as such.

The livery are also the body from which the court or governing body are elected.

The master, wardens, and governing body, being freemen and liverymen, are entitled to all the preceding privileges, and to a small fee for attending the courts.

Formerly they dined together, about five times a year, but since the institution of the suit The Attorney-General v. Wax Chandlers' Company, their funds having been considerably reduced thereby, these dinners have been reduced to about one a year. They however dine with the livery at the dinners mentioned in answer No. 2.

The master, wardens, and past masters of the Company form a committee for the supervision and direction of the finances of the Company, and each member thereof receives a small fee for attendance at its meetings.

At the audit of the Company's accounts at Michaelmas yearly the sum of 3*l.* is paid to the three auditors for auditing the same.

2.—Irrespective of the charities, full returns of which are annually made to the Charity Commissioners under the Charitable Trusts Acts, the average annual payments for fees at courts and committees have been for the last ten years 181*l.* (being at the rate of 8*l.* per head per annum).

3.—Poverty or misfortune are the only circumstances under which a donation or pension is granted to members of the Company, their widows or children.

When the charity funds of the Company are insufficient to meet the claims upon them, they are supplemented out of the Company's general funds. Donations from the general fund are frequently made to charities of all sorts, which are (their funds permitting) considered by the governing body deserving of aid.

4.—A liveryman becomes a member of the governing body on an average in about 14 years from the day of his admission to the livery. But inasmuch as a liveryman having been once elected a member of the governing body ceases to be so as a rule only at death, and as the number of the governing body is only 23, the time it takes before becoming a member of such body, and of his remaining a member thereof, depends upon the longevity of himself and others on the court.

5.—The Company do not carry on any trade or manufacture whatever.

PART III.

OFFICERS AND SERVANTS.

RETURN A.—A list of the officers of the Company, with a statement of the duties of each, the amount of his salary and emoluments, and whether or not he is a member of the Company.

RETURN B.—A list of the servants of the Company, with a statement of the duties of each, and of the amounts of their wages and other emoluments.

RETURN C.—A statement as to the mode in which the officers and servants of the Company are respectively appointed.

A clerk and a beadle.

A.—The duties of the clerk are to attend all courts, committee, and other meetings of the Company.

To advise the governing body in their affairs and business, to enter, take, and keep the minutes of their proceedings, to keep, enter and register their accounts, and generally to do all things appertaining to the office of a clerk.

The present salary is 120*l.* per annum, and the fees on bindings, freedoms, and livery, which however average but a few shillings per year.

The duties of the beadle are to attend upon the governing body at all their meetings; to issue the summonses convening such meetings; to attend the common hall of the corporation and elections for members of Parliament for the City of London, and further, to do all such things as the governing body or their clerk shall require or direct to be done.

The present salary is 40*l.* per annum, and fees as in the case of the clerk.

B.—The Company have no appointed servants.

The officers are appointed as occasion requires by the governing body.

PART IV.

PROPERTY.

The Company is now possessed of the following freehold properties.

1st. The hall situate in Gresham Street and Gutter Lane in the City of London, in the occupation of the Company and their clerk; the rateable value of which is 417*l.*

It is built on the site of the original hall and premises belonging thereto, and has certainly been in the possession of the Company since the year 1493. It would appear to have been acquired by purchase.

2nd. A house and premises No. 165 in Aldersgate Street, in the City of London, leased for 61 years to trustees of the Young Men's Christian Association, of which lease 19 years are now unexpired, at a rental of 180*l.* per annum.

This property appears to have been in the possession of the Company since 1649, and to have been acquired by purchase.

3rd. A house and premises, No. 23 in Coleman Street, in the City of London, leased for 21 years to Mr. W. H. Banks, of which lease 12 years are now unexpired, at a rental of 275*l.* per annum.

This property appears to have been in the possession of the Company since the year 1543, and was acquired under the will of Robert Brocket dated 22nd September 1530.

4th. Two messuages or tenements, Nos. 196 and 197 in Upper Thames Street, and six cottages in Sugar Loaf Court, all in the parish of Queenhithe in the City of London.

No. 196 is leased for 9¼ years to Mr. J. Macdonald, of which lease nearly 2 years are now unexpired, at a rental of 100*l.* per annum.

No. 197 is leased for 30 years to Messrs. Evans, of which lease nearly 2 years are now unexpired, at a rental of 160*l.* per annum.

The cottages in Sugar Loaf Court are let on a yearly tenancy subject to the terms and conditions of a lease which expired in 1872 to Messrs. Purvis and others at a rental of 52*l.* 10*s.* per annum.

These properties appear to have been in the possession of the Company previous to the year 1591 (when the Company granted a lease thereof), and was acquired under the will of one John Thompson. It is chargeable with certain charities which the Company keep up, and with certain payments for superstitious uses, from which the Company have been by Act of Parliament relieved.

(A return of the charity connected with this property is made annually to the Charity Commissioners.)

5th. A warehouse and premises, No. 20 Old Change, in the City of London, let on a building lease for 80 years to Mr. F. W. N. Lloyd, of which lease 75 years are now unexpired, at a rental of 350*l.* per annum.

This property was acquired by purchase in the year 1790.

PART IV.—Return B.

B 2.—A return of the balance of moneys in the hands of the Company unappropriated in their accounts on the 31st December in each of the last preceding ten years.

B 3.—A return of the estimated value of the plate, pictures, furniture, and other property, at present on the premises of the Company, or in their possession elsewhere.

The stock held by the Company is 750*l.* 12*s.* 11*d.* of which 81*l.* 5*s.* 6*d.* represents a rentcharge formerly issuing from premises in Puddle Dock, pulled down to form the present Queen Victoria Street, City, by authority of the Metropolitan Board of Works, and the interest of which is annually distributed as charity under the will of William Parnell, and duly accounted for in the returns to the Charity Commissioners; the remaining stock 669*l.* 7*s.* 5*d.* is charged with the payment of 6*l.*, Nicholas Frankwell's Charity, and 3*l.* William Caldwell's Charity. These charities are distributed annually and accounted for to the Charity Commissioners.

The Company are trustees of Kendall's Charity, and hold Nos. 17, 18, and 19, Old Change, upon the trusts of the scheme of the High Court of Justice, Chancery Division, for the management and regulation, and the application of the income thereof, dated 14th July 1878, made in the suit of The Attorney-General v. The Wax Chandlers' Company; the returns of which are annually made to the Charity Commissioners.

In giving the above information the Wax Chandlers' Company desire in the most formal manner to state that their readiness so to assist the Commissioners is not to be taken now or hereafter as any admission on their part of any right in the Crown, or any other jurisdiction, to inquire into their private property, or to deal with it in disregard to their rights.

They desire also to record their claim that if any question be made, whether any particular property is subject to any trust, or is the private property of the Company, every such question must be determined only by the courts of law.

APPENDIX A.

The Company gave considerable information to the Municipal Commissioners appointed in 1834. Their real property in London then produced a rental of 668*l.*

APPENDIX B.

City of London Livery Companies' Commission,
2, Victoria Street, Westminster, S.W.,
18th July 1882.

Sir,

Referring to the circular issued by the Commissioners on the 15th February last, may I venture to direct the attention of the Court of the Worshipful Company of Wax Chandlers to the circumstance that they have not favoured the Commissioners with a detailed statement of their income and expenditure for the ten years mentioned in the Commissioners' first circular? The Commissioners respectfully beg the Court to rectify this omission.

I have also to ask what was the trust income of the Company for 1879, and in what proportions did it arise from (1) rents and rentcharges, (2) dividends, (3) charges on the Company's general income?

The Commissioners will be much obliged both to the Court and to yourself for this additional information.

I am, &c.
H. D. Warr,
Secretary.

H. Gregory, Esq.,
Clerk to the Wax Chandlers' Company.

Wax Chandlers' Hall,
London, E.C.,
20th November 1882.

Sir,

In reply to yours of July last, and by order of the Court of the Wax Chandlers' Company, I herewith send you—

1stly. A tabular statement of the yearly income and expenditure of the Company for the years 1869–70 to the years 1879–80. inclusive, with memoranda at foot.

*2ndly. Skeleton details of all accounts of income and expenditure from the years 1871–72 to the years 1879–80. These skeleton details were prepared to assist the auditors, and were used by them in their audit of the yearly accounts. Those for the years 1869–70 and 1870–71 appear to have been lost or destroyed, or they should also have been sent. It is, however, submitted that, with the explanation at foot of the tabular statement explaining the excess under the heads of casual income and casual expenditure for the first of such two years, viz., for 1869–70, and the general nature of the accounts as shown by the skeleton accounts for the subsequent years, sufficient information is given to answer the requirements of the Commissioners.

As to the charities of the Company, a copy of the returns to the Charity Commissioners is also sent, which show the source of such charities, and vouch the accounts of the Company and the payments on behalf of Kendall's and the other charities for the year 1879.

I am, Sir,
Your obedient servant,
Horatio Gregory,
Clerk.

WEAVERS' COMPANY.

PART I.—Foundation and Object.

A. and B.

Return A.—A statement of the date, ascertained or probable, of the foundation of the company, and of the circumstances, so far as they can be discovered from its documents of foundation or archives, in which the company had its origin.

Return B.—A list of the charters, charters of inspeximus, and other instruments of a similar nature, whether originals or copies, which have been at any time in the possession of the company, together with an abstract of the purport of each, regard being specially had to any evidence which it may contain as to the object of the foundation of the company.

A.—By a charter in the possession of the company, under the seal of Henry II., and without date, the Weavers' Company had granted to them "their guild "to be had in London, with all the liberties and "customs which they had in the time of Henry my "Grandfather," &c. From this charter it appears that the company certainly existed in the reign of King Henry I. (1100–1135).

PART II.—Constitution and Privileges of Membership.

Return A.—1 and 6.

1. State the present constitution of the governing body of the company, whether such constitution is according to the charter, and if not, in what respects such constitution varies therefrom, and when and how such alteration was made.

6. Has the company any byelaws sanctioned by the Courts of Law, or by the Courts of Aldermen or of Common Council, or otherwise.

1. The governing body of the Weavers' Company at present consists of 2 bailiffs, 2 wardens, and 18 assistants. This constitution is in accordance with the last charter granted to the company, that of Queen Anne.

6. Yes. The company's existing byelaws were made in manner prescribed by the charter of Queen Anne on 15th March 1737, confirmed on the 20th of the same month, and approved, allowed, and confirmed in accordance with the Act of 19 Henry VII. "For making of Statutes by Corporate Bodies," by Lord Chancellor Hardwicke, Sir Wm. Lee, Lord Chief Justice of the King's Bench, and Sir John Willis, Lord Chief Justice of the Court of Common Pleas, on the 24th March 1737.

Part II.—C.

Return C.—Number of Members.

State (2) the present number of the livery.

APPENDIX A.

THIS Company gave considerable information to the Municipal Commissioners of 1834, but they declined to give information respecting the corporate property or expenditure of the company.

APPENDIX B.

City of London Livery Companies' Commission,
2, Victoria Street, S.W.,
15th February 1882.

SIR,

THE Commissioners desire me to thank, on their behalf, the Court of the Worshipful Company of Weavers for the information which they have supplied to the Commissioners; but, at the same time, to state that that information is not, in their judgment, quite sufficient. I am, therefore, to draw attention to some points in the returns of the Weavers' Company with regard to which the Commissioners must respectfully ask for further information. The points are mentioned in the Schedule hereto, and the Commissioners will be much obliged to the Court if they will let them have the additional particulars as soon as possible.

I am, Sir,
Your obedient servant,
(Signed) H. D. WARR,
Secretary.

The Clerk of the Worshipful Company of Weavers.

SCHEDULE.

The Commissioners respectfully ask for further information with respect to the following points:—

PART II. Circular of August 14th, 1880.
Only three of the Commissioners' interrogatories have been answered by the Court.

PART III. Ditto.
The Court has not stated what are the salaries of the Company's officers and servants.

PART IV. Ditto.
The Court has given the Commissioners no information as to their corporate property, the corporate income, and the corporate expenditure of the Company.

Weavers' Company, Clerk's Office,
70, Basinghall Street,
24th February 1882.

SIR,

I HAVE to-day received your circular of the 15th inst., which I will lay before the Court of my Company at their next meeting.

I am, Sir,
Your obedient servant,
(Signed) CHARLES A. BANNISTER,
Clerk.

The Secretary,
City of London
Livery Companies' Commission,
2, Victoria Street, S.W.

70, Basinghall Street, E.C.,
11th April 1882.

SIR,

As promised by my letter of the 24th February, I brought your circular of the 15th February and its annexed schedule before the Court of my Company at their meeting last week, when the same were carefully considered; and I was instructed to refer to my letter of the 3rd May 1881, accompanying the returns made by the Company, and to express the Court's regret that the reasons expressed in that letter still operate to prevent the Company from departing from their previous decision, and render them unable to furnish additional information with regard to the points to which your letter calls attention.

I am, &c.
(Signed) CHARLES A. BANNISTER,
Clerk to the Weavers' Company.

The Secretary,
City of London
Livery Companies' Commission.
London.

WHEELWRIGHTS' COMPANY.

The Returns of the Company were delivered under protest.

PART I.—Foundation and Object.

A—I.

Return A.—A statement of the date, ascertained or probable, of the foundation of the company, and of the circumstances, so far as they can be discovered from its documents of foundation or archives, in which the company had its origin.

Return B.—A list of the charters, charters of inspeximus, and other instruments of a similar nature, whether originals or copies, which have been at any time in the possession of the company, together with an abstract of the purport of each, regard being specially had to any evidence which it may contain as to the object of the foundation of the company.

Return C.—A list of any trust deeds "founding, regulating, or affecting" the company, with the date of each, the names of the parties thereto, and an abstract of the purport of each.

Return D.—A list with dates of any "decrees of court," whether of the Courts of Common Law or of Chancery, or of any acts of the Courts of Aldermen or of Common Council, "regulating or affecting" the company, with a statement of the effect of each decision.

Return E.—A list of any other documents, not included in the descriptions in the preceding returns, which "found, regulate, or affect" the company, with dates and an abstract of the effect of each.

Return F.—A concise history of the company from the time of its foundation to the present day, with special reference to the inquiry contained in the commission as to "the objects for which the company was founded," and "how far those objects are now being carried into effect."

Return G.—Has the company a licence in mortmain? When was such licence granted (referring to the document by description)? What is its extent, and to what extent is it now unexhausted?

Return H.—Is there vested in the company, and how, whether by charter, statute, order of the Court of Aldermen, act of Common Council, or otherwise, any right of exercising superintendence over or any duty or discretion to encourage in any way any and what art, trade, or business? State the nature and local limits of such control. In what manner and to what extent is such control now exercised? If such control is not now exercised, state the circumstances under which its exercise has fallen into desuetude.

Return I.—A list of the charities, eleemosynary, educational, or otherwise, which are under the management of the company, stating in each case the name of the founder, the date and nature of the benefaction, its original and its present value as regards both capital and income, and the purposes to which the funds have been applied for each of the last preceding 10 years.

A.—The company was founded by a charter granted by King Charles the Second, 3rd February 1670, in compliance with a petition presented by divers wheelwrights, in and near the city of London, praying that, as "certain "foreigners undertake the profession and trade of a "wheelwright, notwithstanding they are ignorant and "unskilful therein, and altogether incapable of making "the works used in and about the said city, whereby much "mischief happeneth to persons in the streets, by falling "of carts and coaches, and great damage to merchants "and others in their goods, as also loss and danger to "gentlemen occasioned by the ignorance and ill work "of the said foreigners, that never served to the said "profession, and other great inconveniences and mis-"demeanours used and practised in the said art and "trade," they might, for the prevention thereof, be incorporated into a body politic.

B.—There has only been one charter, dated 3rd February 1670 (original). The charter, after reciting the prayer quoted above, grants that all persons using the trade of a wheelwright within the city of London and five miles compass thereof shall be one body corporate and politic under the name of the "Master, Wardens, Assistants, and "Commonalty of the Art and Mystery of Wheelwrights "of the City of London," and gives them and their successors power to purchase and hold property, so as the same does not exceed the clear yearly value of 40*l.*, the Statute of Mortmain notwithstanding; also all kinds of goods and chattels, with power to grant or assign such properties; also power to sue or be sued and have a common seal which they may break or alter.

It also gives the master, wardens, and assistants, or any five of them, power, having obtained a warrant from the Lord Chief Justice of the Court of King's Bench, and with the assistance of a constable, to enter the shop or warehouse of any member to search whether the wheels and goods made and sold are of good material and well made, and to seize any not so made and carry them away to be examined and tried; also gives them power to make laws and orders for the good rule and government of the company, and for the punishment and reformation of those making bad works, and provides penalties and punishments, and gives power also to recover the same according to the laws of the kingdom and customs of the city of London, and orders "such fines and amerce-"ments to be and remain to the use of the said society "and their successors, without let or hindrance of us or "our successors, or without the giving or rendering of "any account or other thing to us or our successors in "that behalf."

After naming and appointing a master, two wardens, and 18 assistants, the charter further grants that the master and wardens shall and may annually assemble on the Thursday next following the 29th September, at any place in the city of London, to elect and nominate a master and two wardens for the term of one whole year, but if the master or either of the wardens shall die during their year of office, or be removed therefrom for ill behaviour, they shall and may elect another to hold the said office, and further that when any of the assistants shall die or be removed from office (for ill behaviour) they shall elect one of the said society to be assistant, and further may elect a clerk and beadle and allow them such salaries as they may think fit, and remove them for reasonable and just cause, and elect others in their place.

It is also enacted that no person shall use the trade unless he has served as an apprentice for seven years to a freeman of the company, upon pain of being proceeded against according to the laws and statutes of the realm, and the master and wardens shall, however, have power to admit "such person or persons as they shall from time to "time think fit, and as shall desire to become members "of the said society" (i.e., persons not connected with the trade) "when they have taken the legal oaths."

The charter is to be enrolled in the chamber of London, and it also enacts that justices of the peace and others shall assist the company in making search and in carrying out these letters patent; and lastly it contains a proviso, that "if it shall at any time hereafter be made to appear to us" (i.e., the King), "our heirs or successors, that these our "letters patent of incorporation, or any of the clauses, "powers, or privileges thereby granted are prejudicial or "inconvenient, or not of public use or benefit, then, upon "signification or declaration thereof to be made by us, our "heirs or successors, under our or their signet, sign "manual, or privy seal, these presents, or such and so "many of the said powers and privileges whereof any "such signification or declaration shall be so made, shall "from thenceforth cease, determine, and have no longer "being, anything therein contained to the contrary thereof "notwithstanding."

C.—Nil.

D.—7th December 1773. The court of aldermen granted a livery, upon the allegation that the company contained many substantial citizens. The order imposes certain conditions, viz.: that the livery shall not exceed 100; that no person shall be admitted to the livery without first producing the copy of his city freedom; that the company shall be subject to the several orders of the court respecting the livery companies; that the charter and byelaws of the company shall be enrolled in the city; and also for regulating the translation of liverymen from other companies, and for giving due attendance upon the lord mayor, &c. Fees upon being admitted to the livery, 15*l.*

27th November 1792. The court of aldermen, upon the allegation that the company had upwards of 900 freemen, increased the number of the livery to 150, and ordered the master and wardens to return annually to the town clerk, before 24th December, a list of their livery.

4th November 1817. The court of aldermen further increased the livery so as not to exceed 250. Fees upon admission, 21*l.*

E.—Byelaws, 12th October 1670, 22 Charles II. (original). Signed by Sir Orlando Bridgman, knight and baronet, Lord Keeper of the Great Seal of England, Sir Matthew Hales, Knight, Chief Justice of the Court of King's Bench, and Sir John Vaughan, knight, Chief Justice of the Court of Common Pleas.

Byelaws, 3rd April 1714 (original), allowed and signed by the Lord Chancellor and Chief Justice of the King's Bench and Common Pleas.

For the abstract of the byelaws, see answer, Part II., Return A., No. 6.

F.—The company was founded by charter, 3rd February 1670, upon a petition of certain wheelwrights in and near the city of London (see Part I., Return A.), but no meeting of the court was held until 6th May following. From that time to October 1670, when the byelaws were approved, nothing but formal business was transacted, and no action was taken to control the trade. The charges of obtaining the incorporation seem to have been heavy, and were met by voluntary contributions from members on admission, and at first these were the only funds at the disposal of the company. All persons using the trade were required to prove a seven years' service before admission, and at that time, and for several subsequent years, females were admitted. The first apprentices bound by the company were in September 1670, and in some cases they were bound not only for seven, but even for eight or nine years.

The byelaws, which were approved and signed in October 1670, appointed the times for the court to meet, fixed sums to be paid for quarterage, fines for non-attendance, made several orders as to the manner and quality of the goods to be made by the trade, imposed penalties for taking another man's apprentice, fixed the fees to be paid on admission, and lastly, ordered that all sums raised under the byelaws should be employed "for ever, for the support and maintenance of the said "fellowship, and to the poor and other charitable uses of "this fellowship."

It appears as if some difficulty was experienced in getting in the sums subscribed to the company, and the funds were at this time very low. Prosecutions were frequently ordered both against members in arrear with their fees, and persons carrying on the trade and refusing to join the company; and the expenses of such had sometimes to be met by sums voluntarily subscribed by members of the court, who had also to subscribe sums amongst themselves to pay the interest on sums borrowed. Persons using the trade without having served an apprenticeship were also proceeded against, and compelled to dispose of their goods and cease following the trade.

In 1671, a matter of arbitration between two members was brought before the court, but no similar case seems ever to have again occurred.

Quarterage payable by members was first received in 1672, and has been received up to the present time, although by an order of the court in 1740 journeymen were excused from payment. The collection now is only voluntary, and no action has been taken to compel payment since 1821, although at one time frequent prosecutions, resulting occasionally in imprisonment, took place. In 1841, counsel's opinion was taken as to the powers of the company to compel payment, but no proceedings were taken.

Soon after the passing of the byelaws, several members, including the master and other members of the court of assistants, were fined for offences with reference to the making of wheels and the quality of the materials, and for several years frequent complaints were brought before the court, and fines imposed and sometimes writs taken out to recover the same, but in few cases were the full penalties demanded. Although by the byelaws fines upon admission were fixed, the amount was small (13*s.* 4*d.*), and therefore persons usually paid a sum in addition, but that these sums were purely voluntary is evident, as in some cases persons upon paying their fees refused to pay anything more; some, however, paid 10*l.*, some paid their fees and promised "to be further kind to the company. The usual sum, however, was 5*l.* This was not, however, always paid on admission, but a proportion was paid, and the balance promised by a specified time. Persons made free, but not immediately starting in trade, gave a bond for 5*l.* in consideration of their so doing within the liberty of the charter. This practice was continued as late as 1741.

The first "search" under the charter appears to have been in April 1671. They afterwards seem to have been held once a year till a late date. Two "searches" were generally held, one took the "north side" and the other the "south side" of the City. In the first "searches" a warrant was procured from the Recorder, and occasionally members were found using bad materials, and such were seized and fines imposed. Upon one occasion an action was brought against the "view" for trespass, and the clerk was ordered to appear in defence, but no result of such proceedings is recorded.

In 1671, "for the preservation of amity and brotherly "love in this society," it was ordered that four stewards should annually be appointed to provide a dinner, at their own expense, for the court and their wives, and this order (except that the number was reduced to three) was eventually confirmed by the byelaws in 1714. But before 1680 great difficulty seems to have been experienced in obtaining persons to take upon themselves the office, although a heavy fine was imposed upon refusal to serve, and within a few years of the byelaws having been passed the matter fell into abeyance. As early, however, as 1693 charges were made upon their funds to promote social intercourse and hospitality, and in 1714 the byelaws imposed a heavy fine upon the master and wardens if they did not at their own expense provide a dinner at their inauguration, a custom which has been kept up until the present time.

In 1676 rules were made as to the number of apprentices each member might take, which rules were also confirmed by the new byelaws. By these, amongst other restrictions, members were not allowed to take any apprentices until they had been free five years, but later they were sometimes allowed to do so upon paying a fee to the company. All restrictions as to the number of apprentices were however withdrawn by an order in 1787.

About the same time, as some members of the court "are at great charges for certain matters, and others refuse "to pay," a fine of 50*s.* was imposed upon every member coming upon the court of assistants. An order for a committee court was passed at the same time, which committee was to transact business between the quarterly courts. It has been shown how, in the first place, the company was formed on a strictly trading basis, and also how hospitality and sociability was subsequently engrafted thereon. In 1682, 12 years after its original foundation, the first action of a charitable nature was taken in directing payments to the poor, and since that time up to the present sums have been continually granted to relieve the decayed members and their widows and orphans, which sums have gradually increased in amount. Originally all sums of money received were paid to the renter warden, who also disbursed the same, and his accounts were annually audited in conformity with the byelaws, and as occasionally he had to account for considerable sums he had to find sureties in a bond of 100*l.*, which eventually was increased to 200*l.* All moneys are now received and paid by the clerk, and the accounts are annually audited as above. No bond has been demanded from the renter warden since 1774.

About the close of the century additional payments on the admission of members became less frequent, and in 1695 would appear to have altogether ceased, and as at that time there was no livery the only fines of any consequence were the fines paid by assistants, an office which was evidently in much request, as frequent applications were made to the court to be placed on that body; the fine was therefore raised to 10*l.*, which was afterwards confirmed by the byelaws, and in 1719 further raised to 15*l.*, at which amount it still remains.

For the first few years of the company's existence no investment of funds was made; but the funds having about this time considerably increased, the first investment of the moneys in the hands of the renter warden was made in the year 1699, and for some years following frequently a portion of the balance at the end of the year was invested. About the beginning of the 18th century complaints as to bad goods seem to have been less frequently brought before the court, and about the time of the new byelaws being passed were very few in number. Most of the admissions up to this time seem to have been persons using the trade, but a few meet persons other than of the trade, as desired to become members, were admitted. As a great many journeymen refused to become free an order was passed imposing a fine on any member of the court employing a journeyman who was not free. A suggestion for members of the court of assistants to vote by proxy was negatived. The defaults at this time owing by members of the court were in some cases very heavy, but little attempt was made to reduce them. Defaults were only discontinued about 20 years since. Distinctions seem to have existed in the trade between coach-wheelers and cart-wheelers, and an order was passed that if the master and one warden were coach-wheelers the other warden should be a cart-wheeler, and vice versâ. The auditors were to be elected from an equal number of either.

In 1714 the new byelaws were approved, which, amongst other matters, regulated the number of apprentices to be taken, and imposed fines and penalties with reference to materials used, the size of wheels, and other matters connected with the trade.

In the years immediately following proceedings seem to have been taken to control the trade in these matters:—In 1715 a committee was appointed to view all wheels as often as they pleased; notices were also printed and circulated among the trade as to the proper size of wheels to be made, but by 1724 action in the matter seems to have considerably abated, although fines were imposed and recovered for offences against the byelaws in matters affecting the trade up to 1743, after which time no fines seem to have been imposed, although persons were prosecuted for using the trade without being free as late as 1750.

About this time a journeyman's club was established, and in 1724 it was agreed that no person should be elected an assistant who was one of the said club. About ten years later the journeymen coach wheelwrights combined together to advance their prices and shorten their hours, and a committee was appointed to take "council's" opinion with a view to prosecution. "Council's" opinion was as follows:—

"Act 2nd and 3rd Edw^d. 6th, cap. 15th. It is enacted "that if after the 1st March then next any artificers "workmen or labourers do conspire covenant or promise "together, or make any oaths that they shall not make or "do their works but at a certain price or rate, or shall not "enterprize or take upon them to finish that another hath "begun, or shall do but a certain work in a day, or shall "not work but at certain hours and times, that then every "person so conspiring covenanting swearing or offending "being lawfully convict thereof by witness confession or "otherwise, shall forfeit for the first offence 10*l.* to be "paid in six days after conviction, or else for the same "offence twenty days imprisonment and to have only "bread and water for his sustenance,—For the second "offence 20*l.* to be paid in 6 days, or to stand in the "pillory,—For the third offence 40*l.* to be paid in 6 days, "or to stand in the pillory, and lose one of his ears and "be deemed an infamous person.

"The journeymen coach wheelwrights have formed "themselves into a clubb, and have combined together "to advance their wages and prices of workmanship, and "to shorten their hours.

"To which purport, some days ago, they gave their "several masters notice that they would not any longer "than the remaining part of that week work unless they "would give them one shilling advance for every pair of "hind wheels and one shilling advance for hewing every "hundred of spokes, and shorten their labour two hours "in the day, and the masters refusing to comply with "their unreasonable demands they paying them one guinea "a week, which is as much as possible they can afford, "the journeymen have left off work pursuant to the agree-"ment amongst themselves, to the very great loss of their "several masters whose case is exceeding hard already "paying them what can be afforded and on condition they "were now to advance as desired, have no security but "that some other unreasonable demand may be made the "week following. This being the third time they have "advanced their wages within these sixteen years.—

"Whether the journeymen agreeing unanimously in "giving their masters notice as before, and all leaving "work at one and the same time will be proof sufficient of "their conspiring together to raise their prices and shorten "their labour, or what other proof will be necessary?"

"I conceive if three or four journeymen to one and the "same master, do give their master notice at one and the "same time that they will not continue to work with him "any longer, and if they all insist exactly upon the same "terms before they will return to their labour, that it will "be deemed by any court and jury a reasonable evidence "of their conspiring together for that purpose and I think "it will be sufficient, for this reason because it is hardly "possible in the nature of things to have any other "evidence of it."

"What will be proper for the Ma^rs. to do in this case "What method to punish the journeymen on the above "statute (if not repealed) or any other that is in their "favour."

"I do not think that the clause of the statute of "Edward 6^th. which relates to the conspiracy is repealed, "but if it was a conspiracy of that sort it is an offence at "comon law and is punishable by indictm^t. and there-"fore I think the Ma^rs. would do well to prefer an "indictm^t. ag^t. several of the offenders for this conspiracy "and in all probability their conviction and punishment "will be a means to prevent the like practices for the "future.

"J. STRACEY."
October 1734.

The opinion being favourable, steps were taken to procure evidence, and an indictment was preferred against 42 of them.

The court was then informed that, since a bill of indictment had been found against the 42 journeymen mentioned in the proceedings of the last committee court, they had proposed by their attorney to have but sixpence a pair advance for making every pair of hind wheels, and for to work from five to seven o'clock in the summer, and from six to eight in the winter; which proposal being unsatisfactory to the court, it was ordered that the committee court do proceed in the prosecution against the said journeymen as the law directs.

A few months later, however, the committee proceeding to take into their consideration the affair relating to the combination of the journeymen coach wheelwrights, resolved not to proceed in the prosecution against them at this sessions for London, nor till further order of this committee. The matter seems then to have dropped.

In 1782 one of the wardens informed the court that, on or about Christmas last, the journeymen in the trade made a general application to the masters for advancing the price of wages from fourteen shillings to eighteen shillings per set for making wheels, and the day men to be raised in proportion. On the trade in general refusing to comply, the journeymen, one and all, left work, proceeded to hold meetings, and raised subscriptions for endeavouring to bring the masters to comply with their demands. These proceedings induced the master, Mr. Font, to apply for advice to the bench of justices, who were unanimous in the opinion that such meetings and combinations were illegal, and that the masters might, and indeed ought, to indict them at the sessions; on which Mr. Font, with the assistance of the peace officers, got possession of their subscription book, then preferred a bill of indictment, at Hickes' Hall, against six or eight of the principals, which, by the grand jury, was returned a good bill. In consequence the delinquents were taken into custody and admitted to bail, and, by their counsel, moved to have the trial put off till the next sessions.

The court, after duly considering the matter, came to the following resolutions, viz.:—

"That the present wages is sufficient to enable an industrious workman to provide for himself and family.

"That the profits of the trade will not allow of giving the advanced wages required.

"That the father of the company, having given the advanced wages, has been a means of supporting the above combination, which is, and has been, a detriment to the trade in generall, therefore he has incurred the censure of this court, and the court unanimously censure him accordingly.

"That this court will indemnify the master for all the expenses he is or may be at in suppressing the said combination, and prosecuting the delinquents."

Eventually eight journeymen were tried and convicted.

In 1734 it was first proposed to apply to the court of aldermen to grant the company a livery, but the proposal was at that time negatived. In the same year the fee for admission was raised to 1*l.* 1*s.* for those persons who, not following the trade, desired to become free by redemption. In 1773, the first application was made to the court of aldermen for a grant of livery, which was acceded to,—the number being fixed at 100, and the fee for admission at 15*l.* Several members, including the whole of the court of assistants, immediately took up their livery, and others were summoned to do so. The custom of summoning freemen to take up their livery, however, like other compulsory actions, has fallen into disuse.

The clerk was given power to admit to the livery out of court any freeman of known good character and unblemished reputation. The livery were formerly annually entertained by the court on Lord Mayor's day, and although at different times the custom has been discontinued, they now meet once a year, although not at the same time. Within 12 years of the first grant the full number seems to have been completed, and in 1792 the court of aldermen further increased the grant to a number not to exceed 150. At this time, and for some years previously, most of the admissions were by redemption.

It should be borne in mind that, in addition to the payments made to the company, a stamp duty has been paid to the State by each member admitted, viz.: 3*l.* on each redemption and 1*l.* on each admission by patrimony or servitude, besides stamps on apprentice bindings.

In 1798 the company subscribed the sum of 100*l.* towards the fund raised for the defence of the country against invasion, and, to meet the same annually, agreed during the continuance of the war to discontinue all their social gatherings.

In the year following it was resolved to allow 5*l.* to members for their attendance every court day, but the following year the order was rescinded, and although an attempt was made again in 1812 to revive the motion, it was lost, so that with that one year's exception no fees have ever been paid to members of the court for their attendance from the time of the charter to the present day, but, as already stated, the members of the court have been subjected to fines for late-coming or non-attendance. Another application was made to the court of aldermen for a further addition to the livery in 1803, but does not seem to have been complied with; in 1817, however, the company received a further grant up to 250, and the fines were increased to 21*l.*, at which number and amount it now remains, although for some years past the number on the livery has not much exceeded 100.

In 1826, a committee was appointed to inspect the charter, bye-laws and proceedings of the company, with a view to any alterations being made in the same, but they reported that no alterations were necessary for the good government of the court and company. In 1834, the company was applied to by the Commissioners appointed under the Commission for enquiring into the existing state of the Municipal Corporations of England and Wales, and the fullest information on the subject was given "upon the "conditional understanding, however, that the same was "to be considered as furnished, without prejudice to any "of the rights or privileges now enjoyed or exercised by the "company, and that the same should not be brought into "a precedent on any future occasion."

From that time to the present no circumstance of note has been recorded that calls for any particular notice. Occasionally sums have been given to charities outside the immediate claims of the company; amongst others, in 1877, a sum was granted to the fund then being raised on behalf of the Indian famine, to which was added a liberal donation by the then master.

Recently the effort which had been made to establish a permanent organization for the promotion of general technical education was brought under the notice of the court by the Right Honourable Lord Selborne, and the court, regarding this movement as cognate to the objects for which the company was founded, has voted the sum of 200 guineas towards that object.

G.—The charter gives the master, wardens, assistants and commonalty of the art and mystery of wheelwrights "power to purchase, have, receive and enjoy manors, "messuages, lands, tenements, &c., &c., so as the same "exceeds not the clear yearly value of 40*l.*, the statute of "mortmain or anything therein contained, or any other "Act or statute to the contrary notwithstanding," but the company has never exercised their rights in this respect.

H.—The charter gives the company power to compel persons using the trade of a wheelwright within the city and five miles compass to become free. It also gives them powers of search within the same limits. The bye-laws also impose penalties upon persons using bad materials and making irregular wares. They also regulate the size that wheels are to be made, and regulate the number and manner of the taking of apprentices to be observed by the trade. At first, this control was fully exercised, but it gradually fell into disuse, and was wholly discontinued about 1750, in consequence of the great alterations in the trade and the greater freedom from control which distinguishes the conditions of trade and manufactures in the present day, and from the feeling that such restrictions would fetter and injure rather than promote the advantage either of the trade or the public.

I.—The company possesses no trusts, but the court has always regarded as benefactions for the benefit of the poor the two following sums, viz.: 105*l.* paid by Sir William Leighton, Knight, on his translation to the Company of Fishmongers, and 50*l.* paid by William Leedham, Esq., on his being excused serving the office of master; and have wholly applied the interest arising therefrom for the benefit of the poor, although they have not been kept as a separate account.

PART II.—CONSTITUTION AND PRIVILEGES OF MEMBERSHIP.

RETURN A.—Governing body.

1. State the present constitution of the governing body of the company, whether such constitution is according to the charter, and, if not, in what respect such constitution varies therefrom, and when and how such alteration was made.
2. State the qualifications for membership of the governing body of the company, the times and method of election, and the qualifications of the voters at elections to the governing body.
3. State the functions of the governing body, and of the different members of the same respectively, and whether the members of the governing body pay any and what fees or fines on admission thereto, and whether they are paid any, and what, salaries or amounts in respect of their services respectively.
4. State the nature of the business which comes before the governing body of the company, the method adopted in transacting it, the times at which the governing body meets for business purposes, the way in which the opinions of the members are taken, and whether the resolutions and decisions of the governing body are published, or are otherwise accessible to all or any, and which of, the members of the company.

5. State whether the members of the governing body are liable to suspension, or removal, on any and what grounds, and by what method such suspension or removal is effected.

6. Has the company any bye-laws sanctioned by the courts of law, or chancery, or by the courts of aldermen or of common council, or otherwise? State the effect of such bye-laws.

1. The present governing body, or court of assistants, consists of a master, two wardens, and eighteen assistants, according to charter.

The proper style is "the court of assistants," for the better ordering, ruling and governing of the said company and the members thereof.

2. Any member of the livery who has not become a bankrupt or compounded with his creditors is eligible for membership of the governing body.

This preference given to the livery is not prescribed by any bye-law, but it has been the invariable practice since the grant.

An election to the court of assistants takes place upon a vacancy occurring through the death, retirement, or removal of a member, according to the provisions of the charter. The method adopted to fill up such vacancy is as follows:—The clerk reports the decease of the member or other circumstance attending such vacancy, and the court appoints a day (usually the next following quarterly court) at which the election shall take place, due notice whereof to be inserted in the summons. The court then elect from those members in nomination after they have been duly proposed and seconded. The election takes place either by show of hands or ballot. For the last few years it has been conducted by show of hands, very rarely more than one name having been proposed, although several may have been in nomination. The last election by ballot was in 1851.

3. The functions of the governing body are to attend the several courts, to transact the general business of the company, elect to the livery, elect and swear in the members of the court, officers, &c., to sanction and confirm the proceedings of business transacted by the clerk out of court, hear and determine on applications for pecuniary relief, and to receive and confirm the reports of the auditors of the company's accounts.

The master presides at all meetings of the court, or in his unavoidable absence the senior warden, but the wardens have now few functions apart from the other members.

The master and wardens, together with those assistants who have served the office of master, are annually appointed auditors to examine and audit the company's accounts.

The assistants of the court pay a fine of 15*l.* 3*s.* 6*d.* in admission, (15*l.* of which goes to the company, 2*s.* 6*d.* to the clerk, and 1*s.* to the beadle), and the master and wardens, upon being elected to their respective offices by the requirements of the bye-laws, pay a proportion of a dinner given to the company on their inauguration, which amount varies and has ranged during the last 10 years from 15*l.* to 23*l.* each.

The bye-laws impose a fine of 20*l.* on a member refusing to serve the office of assistant, and 10*l.* on an assistant refusing to serve as master or warden. The last time such fine was demanded was in 1845.

The members of the governing body receive no fees or salary for their services, except the master, who receives annually the sum of 1*l.* 1*s.* at the audit, which is usually placed in the poor's box.

4. The nature of the business which comes before the governing body is to sanction and confirm the admissions to the freedom, the binding of apprentices, and other business transacted by the clerk in their absence, to elect to the livery, to elect and admit to vacancies on the court, to annually elect a clerk, beadle, and auditors, and elect and swear in a master and wardens every year. To periodically distribute the contents of the poor's box and other moneys to the poor of the company, to receive applications for pecuniary relief, and consider which cases are deserving, to consider all questions as to the investment of the company's funds, to consider any motions brought forward by members of the court as to governing and regulating the company, and to transact any other business that may arise from time to time.

The court meet to transact general business every quarter, viz.: in January, April, July, and October, and also meet specially within 14 days of the October court to swear in the new master and wardens, and to receive the report of the auditors. The court, or any special committee duly appointed, is called together at other times to transact special business by order of the master. The auditors meet annually in October.

The opinion of members is taken by show of hands, which may be tested by ballot if demanded.

The decisions and resolutions of the court are not made public, and are only accessible to members outside the court, on proper application made to the governing body.

5. The members of the governing body are by the charter made liable to removal for ill-behaviour. In 1753 the master was discharged, being incompetent to perform the duties of the office, and several members have been discharged for non-attendance, the last case was in 1795. The removal has been effected by a vote of the court, and in no case does their right ever seem to have been questioned.

6. The first bye-laws were confirmed (by Sir Orlando Bridgman, Knight and Baronet, Lord Keeper of the Great Seal of England; Sir Mathew Hales, Knight, Chief Justice King's Bench, and Sir John Vaughan, Knight, Chief Justice Common Pleas) 12th October 1670.

These bye-laws order that:—

The master, wardens, and assistants and their successors, are to take their respective oaths before entering upon the duties of their offices.

The courts are to meet on the second Thursday in every month, or as often as the master and wardens may think fit, at the hall, or some other meeting place in the City of London, and four general or assembly courts are to be held quarterly.

Every freeman admitted by "his own consent" is to pay 1*s.* and every journeyman 6*d.* per quarter "to the use of the said fellowship," every person using the trade within the city, or five miles' compass thereof, is to become free.

Fines are imposed for late-coming or non-attendance at the courts, for not appearing decently apparelled, and for not paying quarterage.

The master and wardens are to dispose of all moneys, plate, &c., coming into their hands, as shall be directed and ordered by the Court of Assistants, and at the end of their term make a just and true account of such to the court. Fines are imposed upon persons refusing to hold the said offices.

Members are to make their wheels good, well, and substantial, and of good, well, and substantial materials, under penalty. None are to set up a shop, unless they have served as apprentice for seven years, under pain of being proceeded against.

No member is to make any dray or coach wheels in any brewer's or coachmaker's shop, under penalty, or to sell wheels before they are properly boxed and shoed.

Any person refusing to serve, if the company is required to furnish His Majesty's train of waggons or artillery, is to pay 5*l.* A member is not to receive another man's apprentice, under penalty.

Fines and forfeitures are to be recovered by action or debt, or levied by distress of the offenders' goods, by warrant of the Court of Assistants, and such sums, when recovered, are "to be holden for this company, "and shall be and continue for ever to the use of "this fellowship, to be employed for the support and "maintenance of the said fellowship, and to the poor "and other charitable uses of the fellowship."

Every freeman, on admission, is to pay 13*s.* 4*d.* to the company, 3*s.* 4*d.* to the clerk, and 1*s.* to the beadle.

The oaths to be taken respectively are then given, and finally it orders that the bye-laws shall be read yearly in April.

The second bye-laws were confirmed and approved by the Lord Chancellor and Chief Justices of the King's Bench and Common Pleas, 3rd April 1714.

These bye-laws order that:—

Quarterly courts are to be called in January, April, July, and October.

The master, wardens, and assistants, at the first quarterly court after the 29th September are to elect a master and wardens for the ensuing year, who are to be sworn in within 14 days of that date. The new master and wardens to provide a dinner on that day. If any refuse office, or to provide a dinner, to pay 10*l.*,

Assistants are to be elected as occasions occur. The number of assistants is not to exceed 18 at one time. They shall, upon admission, pay 10*l.* to the company, 2*s.* 6*d.* to the clerk, and 1*s.* to the beadle. Penalty for refusing office 20*l.*

The wardens' accounts are to be audited within 20 days of new warden being elected, under a penalty of 5*l.* per week.

Three stewards to be elected annually, to provide dinners on Lord Mayor's day and election day. Penalty for refusing to serve, 20*l.*

Members are to pay 1*s.* and journeymen 6*d.* quarterage "towards the support of the company."

The master, wardens, and assistants, may have two apprentices, and freemen who have been free five years, one apprentice. A penalty is imposed upon any member exceeding this number. Penalties are also imposed upon members taking an apprentice, or assigning his apprentice to, or accepting the apprentice of, another without consent of the master or one of the wardens, and also for taking the apprentice of another without the master's consent.

Every member, upon admission, is to pay 13*s.* 4*d.* to the company, 3*s.* 4*d.* to the clerk, and 1*s.* 6*d.* to the beadle.

Wheels are to be made by members only of good and sound materials, and no member is to make any dray or coach wheels in any brewer's, coachmaker's or woodmonger's shop, or to sell wheels before they are properly boxed or shoed (unless it be to some wheelwright to be finished). Penalties are in all these cases imposed.

Persons are to be admitted by redemption upon payment of the usual fees.

The master and wardens, and Court of Assistants, are to have power to remit any fine, and to search and try the wares made by any wheelwright, and where necessary fine them.

Members are not to make wheels above a certain size.

The master, wardens, and assistants may sue for any fines, "and the same when recovered shall be to the "use of the said company."

The oaths to be taken respectively are then given.

PART II.—B.

RETURN B.—Admission to Membership.

1. State the qualifications for membership of the company, the several grades of membership of the company, and whether women are admitted to membership.

2. State the several modes in which the freedom of the company may be obtained, the circumstances entitling the applicant to admission under each mode respectively, and the fees payable in respect of admission under each mode respectively.

3. State whether persons exercising any particular trade are required by statute, or otherwise, to become free from the company. Is there any process by which members of such trade can become members of the company, and is there any process for compelling such persons to procure admission, and are such processes enforced, and to what extent? Is the freedom of the city of London in any and what way a condition precedent or subsequent to membership? Are there any members who are not free of the city of London? Do persons exercising any particular trade commonly become members of the company? If so, how many members of such trade are at present members of the company? What is the number of the members of the trade (if any), the name of which is borne by the company, who are members of the company

4. Are freemen liable to disfranchisement, and if so, for what reasons, and what is the mode of disfranchisement?

5. Is the livery of the company limited or unlimited in number? What are the qualifications for election to the livery, who are the electors thereto, and how do the elections thereto take place, and what fees are payable on election? Are liverymen liable to removal from the livery, and for what reasons?

1. All persons of respectability of character, without necessarily belonging to the trade, are, by the charter, qualified to become members.

The several grades of membership are freemen and liverymen. Unmarried females or widows are qualified to become members.

In the report to the Commissioners in 1837, it is stated that if females are admitted by apprenticeship, "it is required in this company that the master should be a man "milliner. The indenture does not in such a case describe "the trade, but the party taking the apprentice is described "as A.B., citizen and wheelwright, to teach C.D. (the "apprentice) the art which he, A.B., uses. Women cannot take apprentices, but turnovers may be made to "them; and service by turnover to a woman is good "service, whatever the trade may be which she carries on. "A freewoman, by courtesy, may take a turnover as well "as a freewoman in her own right. A freewoman cannot "transmit any right to her children, nor does she confer "any upon her husband."

2. By patrimony, servitude (apprenticeship), and redemption.

(1.) By patrimony.—Any person, being 21 years of age, whose father was free of the company at the time of his birth, is entitled to admission upon proof of the same.

(2.) By servitude.—Any person, being 21 years of age, who has been bound for seven years as an apprentice to a freeman of the company, is entitled to admission on the testimony of his master, or, in his unavoidable absence, by the evidence of some other freeman of London that he has duly served agreeably to the covenants of his indentures.

(3.) By redemption.—Any person of respectability of character, being 21 years of age, desirous of becoming a member of the company, is eligible upon application.

The fees paid are as follows:—

3. The company have by the charter power to compel all persons using the trade of wheelwright within the city and five miles compass thereof to become free, but the company have not, for reasons stated before, for many years enforced this power.

All the freemen of the company are expected to become free of the city, after becoming free of the company, but there are no steps taken either by the company or the city to compel the members to take up such freedom.

A liveryman, however, who has not taken up the freedom of the city is ineligible for the parliamentary franchise.

It is believed that very few freemen of the company are not free of the city, but it would be difficult to say how many.

The company does not consist of persons engaged in any particular trade or business. At present only about four members are wheelwrights by trade.

4. In 1686 several members, being desirous of being discharged from the company, petitioned the attorney-general, who was of opinion that they ought to be discharged, whereupon the court discharged them, but no other instance of disfranchisement has occurred from its constitution to the present time.

5. The livery was originally limited to 100. (Grant of the Court of Aldermen, 1773.) It was increased by a further grant, dated 5th January 1792, to 150, and afterwards, on the 4th November 1817, to 250, which is the present limit.

Any freeman of respectability of character is qualified to take up his livery. A freeman is admitted to the livery upon application to the clerk, who admits, subject to the approval of the court, who alone can elect him. No rule of seniority exists, and the only disqualification is deficiency of respectability. In some cases the livery is taken immediately on the party becoming a freeman. No formal election takes place. No instance of refusal of the livery to applicants has occurred, nor has any instance of removal from the livery been recorded. No compulsory calls have been made since 1800. In 1834 an application was made to the court to return the livery fine, but it was not complied with. The fees payable on election are 20*l.* to the company, 15*s.* to the clerk, and 5*s.* to the beadle.

Part II.—C.

Return C.—Number of Members.

State (1) the present number of freemen, (2) the present number of the livery, (3) the present number of other members, (4) the number of admissions to the freedom by each mode respectively, and (5) the number of calls to the livery which have respectively taken place during each of the last preceding 10 years.

*(1.) The present number of freemen, exclusive of the livery, is about 45.

(2.) The present number of liverymen, 105 (including the master, two wardens, and 18 assistants).

(3.) The present number of other members, nil.

(4 and 5.) Admitted to the freedom and livery during the last 10 years:—

* The present number is taken as at 31st December 1879.

Part II.—D.

Return D.

(1) State the number of apprentices bound at the company's hall or otherwise under the auspices of the company during each of the last 10 years. (2) State how many of such apprentices have been bound to members following the trade, if any, the name of which is borne by the company? (3) Has the company in any and what cases paid the fees or premiums of such apprentices, and what has been the amount, if any, so expended in each of the last 10 years?

(1.) The number of apprentices bound during the last 10 years,—

1870	1	1876	1
1871	0	1877	0
1872	1	1878	1
1873	2	1879	1
1874	1
1875	1		9

(2.) None of the above have been bound to members following the trade of a wheelwright.

(3.) The company has not in any case paid the fees or premiums of the apprentices.

Part II.—E.

Return E.—Profits and Privileges.

1. State with fulness what are the advantages, pecuniary or otherwise, incident to the position of a member of the company in each grade of membership, as (1) a freeman, (2) a liveryman, (3) master, warden, or otherwise a member of the governing body.
2. State the sums paid on an average annually for the preceding 10 years by the company to the members according to the grades of membership mentioned above, and of what such sums consisted, whether (1) fees, and of what nature, (2) pensions, or (3) other payments, specifying the nature of the same respectively.
3. What circumstances are in practice held to constitute a claim to a pension or donation? State the number of present pensioners and donees respectively, and the amounts paid to them as such respectively. How many pensioners and donees respectively are connected with the trade (if any), the name of which is borne by the company.
4. (1) What is the average standing of a member of the company when he is made a member of the governing body, and (2) for what number of years on an average does a member remain on the governing body?

5. Does the company carry on any and what trade or manufacture with which its title is directly or indirectly connected? In such case state out of what funds the capital is raised, the amount of capital, the profits, if any, for each of the last 10 years, and how such profits, if any, have been divided or otherwise dealt with during each of the last 10 years.

1 (1). The only advantages incident to a freeman of this company, beyond those which all other freemen and citizens of London are entitled to enjoy, are the donations granted to their widows and orphans in the case of poverty, also their children are eligible for the freedom by patrimony; they can bind apprentices through the company, and are entitled to rise to the higher grades of the company, and can acquire the franchises.

(2) and (3). Liverymen, if free of the city, are entitled to vote for the Lord Mayor, Sheriffs, Chamberlain, and other city officers, and, if also resident within 25 miles, are entitled to vote for Members of Parliament.

Liverymen and members of the governing body are also considered as entitled to privileges of a social character.

The only fee paid to any member is 1*l.* 1*s.* paid to the master at the audit.

2 (1). The only fee paid to members during the last 10 years is the sum of 1*l.* 1*s.*, paid annually to the master at the audit as previously stated. This is usually placed in the poor's box.

(2). The only pension paid to a member during the last 10 years is one of 10*l.* per annum paid to a liveryman, who was for several years in the court and served the offices of master and wardens, but fell into very reduced circumstances.

(3). Nil.

3. No special circumstance constitutes a claim to a pension or donation, but each case is considered upon its merits. All the pensioners (except the one mentioned above) are widows or daughters of freemen or liverymen, and the amounts granted have been decided either by the position in the company of their husband or father, or by the members dependent on them for support, or by any exceptional circumstances connected with their case.

The pensioners at 31st December, 1879, were as follows:—

One receiving - -	10
„ -	4
Two receiving 2*l.* = -	4
	£35

But since then a scheme has been prepared dividing the recipients into two classes of 10*l.* and 5*l.* each, and fixing the total at 50*l.* per annum.

The following donations have been granted during the last 10 years:—

1871 - - -	5
1872 - -	2
1877 -	2
1878 - -	10
- - - -	2
1879 - -	5

The contents of the poor's box, which is supported by voluntary contributions from the members of the company, is distributed once a year in small sums among the poorer widows or orphans of members.

The average annual amount distributed during the last 10 years has been a little over 6*l.*, divided among (on an average) six recipients.

None of the present pensioners or donees follow the trade of a wheelwright.

4 (1). A liveryman of about six years standing.

(2). About 20 years.

5. No.

PART III.—Officers and Servants.

Return A.—A list of the officers of the company, with a statement of the duties of each, the amount of his salary and other emoluments, and whether or not he is a member of the company.

Return B.—A list of the servants of the company, with a statement of the duties of each, and of the amount of their wages and other emoluments.

Return C.—A statement as to the mode in which the officers and servants of the company are respectively appointed.

A.—The only officer of the company is the clerk, who is appointed in accordance with the charter. His duties are:—

To take directions from the master for summoning the several courts, &c., of the company, and of the business of the same. To give directions to the beadle for making out the summonses for the court.

To attend the several courts, committees, and meetings of the auditors of the company, and to take minutes of proceedings.

To make copies of the said minutes and of business done out of court, for confirmation at the subsequent court.

To receive and pay all moneys on account of the company, to keep accounts of the same, and to submit a detailed statement thereof annually for examination by the auditors.

To keep a book of the several members of the company and of the quarterage due from each, and to bring forward the annual charge of the same.

To make statement of moneys received on account of quarterage from the said book for examination by the auditors.

To prepare a list of master, wardens, court, and livery for printing.

To prepare a list annually of such members of the company as are entitled to vote for Members of Parliament for the City of London, with their places of residence, in conformity with the provisions of the Act, and to furnish three copies of the same to the secondaries. To attend the revising barrister, to verify the same on oath, and to answer any questions, and afford any information required in respect of claims and objections relating to the list of the company.

To admit to the freedom and livery of the company, to bind apprentices, pay quarterly allowances to the poor, to account to the Inspector of Stamps for the amount of duty received on the admission of freemen, to give directions and make arrangements for the several entertainments of the company, and to check and discharge the several bills, and to do all such other acts as may be required in the due discharge of the business of the company, by direction of the court of assistants or the master and wardens.

NOTE.—The beadle is paid no wages, but receives a fee of 10*s.* 6*d.* for every court held, and 6*s.* 6*d.* for every common hall or election he has to attend.

The collector of quarterage.

His duties are—

To collect the quarterage from members of the company.

Wages :—Nil.

Emoluments :—4*s.* in the £ on sum collected. Average of last 10 years, about 3*l.* 16*s.* per annum.

C.—The clerk and beadle are elected by the court of the company in accordance with the charter.

Upon a vacancy occurring, the court proceeds to an election from any candidates making application for the posts.

They are re-elected annually in the month of October.

The collector of the quarterage is nominated by the clerk in accordance with an order of the court, October 1861.

PART IV.

EXTERNAL AND INTERNAL SOURCES OF INCOME, VALUE OF PROPERTY, ADMINISTRATION, AND EXPENDITURE.

A 1 to 14.

RETURN A.—Landed property.

A.—The company possesses no estates or landed property.

PART IV.—B.

RETURN B.—Personal property.

B 1.—A list of moneys invested in Government or other stocks, funds, shares, or securities, showing in each case—

a. The amount of stock, &c.

b. The description of the stock, &c.

c. The sources from whence the stock, &c. arises (i.e., a statement of the manner in which the company became possessed of the moneys invested).

d. The name in which the stock, &c. is standing, whether that of the company or some other person.

e. The account (if any) to which the stock, &c. belongs.

f. The net annual receipts.

B. 2.—A return of the balance of moneys in the hands of the company unappropriated in their accounts on the 31st December in each of the last preceding 10 years.

B 3.—A return of the estimated value of the plate, pictures, furniture, and other property at present on the premises of the company or in their possession elsewhere.

B 1. a.—3,200*l.*

b.—Dominion of Canada 4 per cent. loan, 1874.

c.—This money has been invested from time to time by the company out of the balances in their hands arising out of savings from their income. Their income has arisen mostly from fees paid voluntarily on the admission of members who have at their own request been made free of the company, livery fines, and fines paid upon coming on the court of assistants; also, originally, from fees paid on admission by members of the trade, and from fines imposed under the bye-laws, which also orders that such sums shall be for the good of the fellowship. A portion was also purchased with the sum of 105*l.* paid by Sir William Leighton, Knight, on his translation to the Company of Fishmongers, and 50*l.* paid by W. Leedham, Esq., on his being excused serving the office of master, both of which sums are, by order of the court, appropriated to the poor.

d.—The stock stands in the names of four trustees appointed by the court of the company.

e.—The general fund of the company.

f.—128*l.*, less income tax.

PART IV.—F.

RETURN F.—1. The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them what has been the increase or decrease from year to year of the company's income during the last 10 years; and whether there is reason to expect any and what increase or decrease during the next 10 years, together with a statement of the reasons for such expectation.

RETURN F. 2.—The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them whether there is reason to expect any permanent increase or decrease in value in any of the estates or properties of the company, and if so, to what extent, together with a statement of the reasons for such expectation.

F. 1. In 1875 the sum of 184*l.* 10*s.* was invested in 200*l.* Stock Dominion of Canada 4 per cent. loan, which increased the company's income about 8*l.* per annum, and during 1880 another 200*l.* has been invested in new 3*l.* per cent. consols. The only other increase that has taken place during the last 10 years has been from the larger number of new livery, which has averaged between six and seven per annum during the last 10 years, as against $3\frac{6}{10}$ in the previous 10 years. The company have no reason to expect any considerable permanent increase in their income.

F. 2. Nil.

PART IV.—G.

RETURN G.—The Commissioners will be obliged by your informing them—

1. What is the system of management of the company's estates and property?
2. In what way, and by whom, the several receipts and payments are taken and made, and under what control?
3. In what way the company's accounts are audited?
4. Whether the company's accounts are published, or are accessible to all or any and which of the members of the company?

1. The company has no estates or real property.

2. The receipts and payments are made by the clerk of the company, under the control and orders of the court of assistants.

3. The accounts are audited every year, within 14 days of the election of the new master and wardens, in conformity with the byelaws, by the committee of auditors, which committee is composed of the master, wardens, and all the members of the court of assistants who have passed the chair.

4. The accounts of the company are not published, and are only generally accessible to the members of the court of assistants.

WHEELWRIGHTS' COMPANY—continued.

PART IV.—H.

RETURN H.—A detailed statement of the income from all sources of the company during each of the preceding 10 years, a detailed statement of the company's expenditure during each of such 10 years; and a detailed statements of the assets and liabilities of the company at the end of each of such 10 years.

NOTE.—By an order of the court in 1867 the Government stamp was paid by the company if a person took up his livery as well as his freedom, but the order was repealed in 1879. The Government stamp is now therefore paid by the person admitted in addition to the cost of freedom and livery and officers' fees.

PART IV.—K.

RETURN K.—Position in relation to universities.

Has the company any relation with the universities, or with any of the colleges in them? State the nature and extent of such relations. Has the company any scholarships or exhibitions tenable at any of the universities in its gift? Give a list of such scholarships or exhibitions, with their respective values, and the periods for which they are respectively tenable; and state how the same are awarded, whether the competition is limited to relations of members or whether persons so related have any preference.

Nil.

PART IV.—L.

RETURN L.—Church patronage.

Are there any ecclesiastical benefices in the gift of the company?

Nil.

PART IV.—M.

RETURN M.—General and technical education.

A statement as to whether the company does anything to subsidise or encourage education, whether general and technical, and a return of the means (if any) so employed, and of the amount expended on such objects during each of the last preceding 10 years.

The company was not established for the promotion of education, general or technical, except so far as the system of apprenticeship to the trade of wheelwright was an education, but the court has recently seen fit, out of the funds of the company, to vote a sum of 210*l.* to the City and Guilds of London Institute for the advancement of technical education.

(See Part I., Return F.)

PART V.—REFORM.

PART V.—REFORM.

The Commissioners, being bound to report to Her Majesty "what measures (if any) are, in their "judgment, expedient and necessary for improving or altering the constitution of the companies or the "appropriation or administration of the property or revenues thereof," respectfully invite the attention of the officers of the companies to this part of the commission.

The Commissioners will be very glad to receive and consider any suggestions respecting this part of the commission, with which the officers of the companies may do the Commissioners the honour of favouring them.

The court has not come to any special resolution on this subject, but it believes that the objects of this company, so far as compatible with modern social changes, have been and continue to be carried out. No reform in management is therefore called for. But the court considers that by adopting the principle of co-operation and union a great work in technical education ought to mark the future of the London companies, while the social and other advantages offered to the liverymen, and a wide circle beyond, need not be weakened, still less destroyed.

APPENDIX A.

The company gave full information to the Commissioners of 1834, including abstracts of their accounts for seven years.

WOOLMEN'S COMPANY.

The Returns of the Company were delivered under protest.

PART I.

Foundation and Object.

The date of the foundation of the company was probably about 1300.

By the 27 Ed. III. c. 23., the company had the right of appointing licensemen to wind wools. The company possesses a book of Ordinances allowed and confirmed to the Company of Woolmen of the City of London by the Lord Chancellor of England and the two chief justices of either bench in the year 1587. Sixteen of the ordinances regulate the election of the governing body and the clerk, &c. The company also possesses an order of the Court of Aldermen for granting a livery to the Woolmen's Company, and in the report made by the Committee of Privileges and subsequently approved and confirmed by the said court. The Company of Woolmen or Woolpackers is mentioned as being an ancient company by prescription, and had at various times been acknowledged as such and called upon in conjunction with the other companies to perform suits and services which the protection of the city and the exigencies of the times required (and that if a livery was granted to the company it would be an encouragement to a most valuable and extensive branch of the British trade), and that they were of opinion that they should be created and made a livery company of the city, and that the number of the livery should not exceed forty. The company has existed under various names, such as Woolpackers, Woolwinders, and Woolmen; it was designated by all these titles in a Proclamation of Charles II., but for the last three hundred years it has been known chiefly by the style of the Company of Woolmen.

The right of the company to appoint and license duly qualified persons, having previously examined them, to wind wools, has long ceased to exist, the last person licensed was in the year 1779. By proclamations in the reign of Charles II., Woolcombers were obliged to be licensed by the company.

The master of the Woolmen's Company has the right to nominate to the Court of Assistants of the Merchant Taylors' Company two poor members of the company as pensioners under Vernon's Charity.

The company lost its charter and most of its documents in the Fire of London when the Company's Hall was burnt down.

PART II.

Constitution and Privileges of Membership.

Governing Body.

The Governing Body consists of the master, wardens, and court of assistants, numbering 14 in all. The master and wardens being elected by the court of assistants on the 3rd of May. The master and wardens hold office for two years. The clerk and beadle are chosen as vacancies occur. Members when elected on the court pay a fine of 10*l.* 10*s.*, and those present at a court receive a Guinea each for their attendance. A master pays no fine on being elected, but if he refuses to serve he forfeits 5*l.* The wardens pay no fine on being elected, but if they refuse they forfeit five marks. The duty of the master is to receive the income of the company's property and see to the proper application of its funds. The master (assisted by the wardens) provides the dinners for the members of the court of assistants. He gives the alms to the pensioners at the court held on 16th January yearly, and 10*s.* 6*d.* each in lieu of dinner. The master receives no salary nor do the wardens. Two general courts are held annually, namely, 16th January and 3rd May. Special courts are held as circumstances arise; they are composed of the master, wardens, and assistants. Notice of each meeting is given by summons. The nature of the ordinary business is to elect new masters and wardens, to pay the pensioners, and enquire into the state of the company's property directing investments in stock, &c.

If any extraordinary business claims the attention of the court it is usually set forth in the summons. The opinion of the court is taken by open vote or marks.

Admission to Membership.

There are no qualifications necessary for membership of the company. There are two classes of freemen belonging to the company—those who have, and those who have not the livery. The court of assistants is composed of the master and two wardens and eleven of the liverymen. The two wardens rank next above the court and the master over all.

The Freedom of the Company is obtained by—

Apprentices are not required to be bound to any particular trades. No person is compelled to take up his freedom. No persons carrying on any particular trade are required to become members. The number of liverymen is limited to forty as previously stated. A freeman may come on the livery at any time by permission of the court. There is a fine thereon of twenty pounds and one pound for fees to clerk and beadle. The livery cannot be lost.

Number of Members.

The present number of freemen are 34. Present number of livery are 31 (four of whom have not been heard of for the last 20 years), but only 22 appear on the printed list of voters for the City of London, owing to the other nine being on the list of voters of other companies.

Freemen and liverymen are generally pecuniarily helped by the company in times of distress, and their widows receive a present on their death in cases where it is needed. Members of the court who attend receive one guinea each time. The members of the company who are not on the court are excluded from the conduct of the company's affairs.

A member of the company being a liveryman is elected a member of the court of assistants whenever a vacancy occurs; the time is uncertain, as this depends on death or resignation. The election to the office of warden depends upon the number of previous members of the court who have not served the office.

The senior warden becomes a member in two years from his being elected a warden and the junior warden in about four years. Members elected to the court remain on the court until they resign or die. The company carries on no trade or manufacture connected with its title directly or indirectly.

PART III.

Officers and Servants.

The Clerk.

The duties of the clerk of the company are to attend the court of assistants both general and special and record the proceedings, to make out and enter the master's accounts with the company, to prepare and attest the execution of indenture of apprenticeship, to enter admissions of persons to the freedom of the company, to collect the quarterages, to enter admissions of freedom to the livery of the company, &c. His salary is 12*l.* 12*s.* a year, but an additional sum of 5*l.* 5*s.* is given for the special courts. He is not a member of the company.

The Beadle.

The duty of the beadle is to deliver the summonses convening the courts of assistants in January and May and for other purposes, and to attend at his station on all common halls. His salary and emoluments amount to about 20*l.* per annum. He is a freeman of the company.

The clerk and beadle are both appointed by the master and wardens and court of assistants by open vote as vacancies occur.

PART IV.

External and Internal Sources of Income, Value of Property, Administration, and Expenditure.

Owing to the destruction of the company's hall, charter and papers in the fire of London, the company have no means of showing the source from which their property is derived, but in one thousand eight hundred and twenty-seven there was some small property in Mark Lane which was sold to form part of the present Corn Exchange, and what the company now possess has been accumulated by its savings. For some years no fees were taken by the court, and no dinners given, the money so saved being invested, and is the private property of the company, and is subject to no trust whatever.

The company's accounts have always been made up to 3rd May in each year.

Internal Sources of Income.

Fines paid to the company on admission to freedom have amounted during the last ten years to twelve pounds fifteen shillings.

Fines paid to the company on admission to livery have amounted during the last ten years to two hundred and twenty pounds.

Fines paid to the company by members elected on court have amounted during the last ten years to ninety-four pounds ten shillings.

Receipts for quarterages during the last ten years have amounted to twelve pounds seventeen shillings.

Increase and Decrease in Company's Income.

In the year ending 3rd May, 1871, the company's gross annual income was 303*l.* 4*s.* 1*d.*

In the year ending 3rd May, 1880, the company's gross annual income was 444*l.* 3*s.* 6*d.*

(i.e.) An increase on that of 1871 of 140*l.* 19*s.* 5*d.*

The company's accounts are audited once a year.
